

LIBRARY
OF THE
SAN FRANCISCO THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY
SAN ANSELMO
CALIFORNIA

Digitized by the Internet Archive in 2026

THE BOOK REVIEW DIGEST

FORTY-EIGHTH ANNUAL CUMULATION

MARCH 1952 TO FEBRUARY 1953 INCLUSIVE

EDITED BY MERTICE M. JAMES
AND DOROTHY BROWN

Property of Graduate Theological Union
Return to San Francisco Theological Seminary

NEW YORK
THE H. W. WILSON COMPANY

1953

Published 1953
Printed in the United States of America

Library of Congress Catalog Card No. (6-24490)

RECEIVED
JAN 10 1954
LIBRARY OF CONGRESS
JAN 10 1954

Publications from which Digests of Reviews are made

- Am Anthropol—American Anthropologist. $6. American Anthropological Association, 13 E. 71st St, New York 21
- Am Chem Soc J—Journal of the American Chemical Society. $10. American Chemical Society, 1155 16th St, NW, Washington 6, D.C.
- Am Econ R—American Economic Review. Paul T. Homan, managing ed. $6. American Economic Assn, Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill.
- Am Hist R—American Historical Review. Guy Stanton Ford, managing ed. $5; free to members of the American Historical Assn. Macmillan Co, 60 Fifth Av, New York 11
- Am J Pub Health—American Journal of Public Health and The Nation's Health. C.-E. A. Winslow, ed. $10. American Public Health Assn, 1790 Broadway, New York 19
- Am J Soc—American Journal of Sociology. Herbert Blumer, ed. $6. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago 37
- Am Pol Sci R—American Political Science Review. Taylor Cole, managing ed. $10; free to members. American Political Science Assn, 450-458 Ahnapp St, Menasha, Wis.
- Am Soc R—American Sociological Review. $5 (membership dues including subscription $8) American Sociological Society, 372-374 Broadway, Albany, N.Y.
- Ann Am Acad—Annals of the American Academy of Political and Social Science. Thorsten Sellin, ed. $5; free to members. American Academy of Political and Social Science, 3817 Spruce St, Philadelphia 4
- Atlantic—Atlantic Monthly. $6. Atlantic Monthly Co, 8 Arlington St, Boston 16
- Booklist—Booklist. $5. American Library Assn, 50 E Huron St, Chicago 11
- Bookmark—Bookmark. $1. New York State Library, University of the State of New York press, Albany 1
- Canadian Forum—Canadian Forum. $5. Canadian Forum, Ltd, 16 Huntley St, Toronto 5
- Canadian Hist R—Canadian Historical Review. $3. University of Toronto Press, Toronto 5
- Cath World—Catholic World. John B. Sheerin, ed. $4. Missionary Society of St Paul the Apostle, 411 W 59th St, New York 19
- Chem & Eng N—Chemical and Engineering News. $4. American Chemical Society, 1155 16th St, NW, Washington 6, D.C.
- Chem Eng—Chemical Engineering with Chemical and Metallurgical Engineering. $3. McGraw-Hill Pub. Co, Inc. 330 W. 42d St, New York 36
- Chicago Sunday Tribune—Chicago Sunday Tribune, Chicago, Ill.
- Christian Century—Christian Century. Paul Hutchinson, ed. $6.50. Christian Century Foundation, 407 S Dearborn St, Chicago 5
- Christian Science Monitor (International daily) Christian Science Monitor. $15. Christian Science Publishing Society, 1 Norway St, Boston 15
- Churchman—Churchman. Guy Emery Shieler, ed. $5. The Churchman Company, 425 Fourth Av, New York 16
- Commonweal—Commonweal. Edward S. Skillin, ed. $7. Commonweal Pub. Co, Inc, 386 Fourth Av, New York 16
- Crozer Q—Crozer Quarterly. $2.50. Crozer Theological Seminary, Chester, Pa.
- Current Hist—Current History. D. G. Redmond, ed. $5. Events Pub. Co, Inc, 108-10 Walnut St, Philadelphia 6
- El School J—Elementary School Journal. $4.50. Dept. of Education Publications, University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago 37
- Eng N—Engineering News-Record. $6. McGraw-Hill Publishing Co, Inc, 330 W 42d St, New York 36
- Ethics—Ethics. $6. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago 37
- Foreign Affairs—Foreign Affairs. Hamilton Fish Armstrong, ed. $6. Council on Foreign Relations, Inc, 58 E 68th St, New York 21
- Geog R—Geographical Review. $6. American Geographical Society, Broadway at 156th St, New York 32
- Hibbert J—Hibbert Journal. George Allen & Unwin, Ltd, 40 Museum St, London WC 1 ($3.50. Leroy Phillips, 569 Boylston st, Boston 16)
- Horn Bk—Horn Book. Bertha E. Mahony Miller, ed. $3.50. Horn Book, Inc, 250 Boylston St, Boston 16
- J Geol—Journal of Geology. $7. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago 37
- J Home Econ—Journal of Home Economics. Mary Hawkins, ed. $5. American Home Economics Assn, 1600 Twentieth st, N.W. Washington, D.C. 9
- J Philos—Journal of Philosophy. $5.25. Journal of Philosophy, Inc, 515 W 116th St, New York 27
- J Pol Econ—Journal of Political Economy. Earl J. Hamilton and others, eds. $6. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av Chicago 37
- J Religion—Journal of Religion. $6. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago 37
- Kirkus—Bulletin from Virginia Kirkus' Bookshop Service. Service basis, 38 Bank St, New York
- Library J—Library Journal. Helen E. Wessells, ed. $7. R. R. Bowker Co, 62 W 45th St, New York 36
- Library Q—Library Quarterly. $6. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago 37
- Management R—Management Review. M. J. Doohar, ed. $6. American Management Assn, 330 W 42d St, New York 36
- Manchester Guardian—Manchester Guardian. 91s. Manchester Guardian and Evening News, Ltd, 3 Cross St, Manchester; Guardian Newspapers, Inc, 53 East 51st St, New York 22
- Mod Philol—Modern Philology. $6. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago 37
- Music Lib. Assn. Notes—Music Library Association Notes. Richard S. Hill, ed. $3. Music Library Association, Inc, c/o Music Division, Library of Congress, Washington 25, D.C.
- Nation—Nation. Freda Kirchwey, ed. $7. Nation Associates, Inc, 20 Vesey St, New York 7
- New Eng Q—New England Quarterly. $4. H. Brown, Hubbard Hall, Brunswick, Me.
- New Repub—New Republic. Michael Straight, ed. $6.50. Westbury Publications, Inc, 40 E 49th St, New York 17
- New Statesman & Nation—New Statesman and Nation. 32s 6d New Statesman & Nation pub. co. 10 Great Turnstile, High Holborn, London, WC 1 ($7 International News Co, 131 Varick St, New York 13)
- N Y Herald Tribune Bk R—New York Herald Tribune Book Review. $2.50. N Y Herald Tribune, Inc. Publisher, 230 W 41st St, New York 36
- N Y New Tech Bks—New Technical Books. $1.50 N Y Public Library, Fifth Av & 42d St, New York
- N Y Times—New York Times Book Review. $3. N Y Times Co, Pub, 229 W 43d St, New York 18
- New Yorker—New Yorker. $7. The New Yorker Magazine, Inc, 25 W 43d St, New York 36

- Pacific Affairs—Pacific Affairs, $4. Institute of Pacific Relations, 1 East 54th St, New York 22
- Poetry—Poetry, $5. Modern Poetry Assn, 232 E Erie St, Chicago 11
- Pol Sci Q—Political Science Quarterly. John A Krout, managing ed. $6; free to members. Academy of Political Science, Columbia University, New York 27
- San Francisco Chronicle—San Francisco Chronicle. P. C. Smith, ed. $21. Chronicle Pub Co, 901 Mission St, San Francisco 19
- Sat R—Saturday Review. Norman Cousins, ed. $6. Saturday Review Associates, Inc, 25 W 45th St, New York 36
Formerly Saturday Review of Literature
- School & Society—School and Society. $7. Society for the Advancement of Education, Inc, 15 Amsterdam Av, New York 23
- School Arts—School Arts. $5. The Davis Press, Inc, Worcester 8, Mass.
- School R—School Review. R. W. Tyler and others, eds. $4.50. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago 37
- Social Educ—Social Education. L. P. Todd, ed. $4. National Council for Social Studies, 1201 Sixteenth St, NW, Washington 6, D.C.
- Social Forces—Social Forces. $5. University of North Carolina press, c/o Williams & Wilkins Co, Baltimore 2
- Social Studies—Social Studies. Leonard B. Irwin, ed. $3. McKinley Publishing Co, 809-811 N 19th St, Philadelphia
- Special Libraries—Special Libraries. $7. Special Libraries Assn, 31 East Tenth St, New York 3
- Spec—Spectator. 30s. The Spectator, Ltd, 99 Gower St, London, WC 1 ($7. International News Co, 131 Varick St, New York 13)
- Springf'd Republican—Springfield Republican. $5. Republican pub. co, 32 Cypress St, Springfield, Mass.
- Subscription Bks Bul—Subscription Books Bulletin. $2.50. American Library Assn, 50 E Huron St, Chicago 11
- Survey—Survey. Paul Kellogg, ed. $5. Survey Associates, Inc, 112 E 19th St, New York 3
- Theatre Arts—Theatre Arts. $5. John D. MacArthur, 4800 N. Kenneth, Chicago 30, Ill.
- Time—Time. $6. Time, Inc, 540 N. Michigan Av, Chicago 11
- Times [London] Lit Sup—Times Literary Supplement. 19s 6d. Times Publishing Co. Ltd, Printing House Square, London, E.C. 4; $4.15. The Times (London), North American Office, 640 Fifth Av, New York 19
- U S Quarterly Bk R—United States Quarterly Book Review. Joseph P. Blickensderfer, ed. $3.75. The Rutgers Univ. Press, New Brunswick, N.J.
- Wis Lib Bul—Wisconsin Library Bulletin. $1. Wisconsin Library Bulletin. Madison, Wis.
- Yale R n s—Yale Review. Paul Pickrel, managing ed. $3.50. Yale Review, 143 Elm St, New Haven 7, Conn.

In addition to the above list the Book Review Digest sometimes quotes from Cleveland Open Shelf; Columbia Law Review; Harvard Law Review; Publishers' Weekly; Review of Scientific Instruments; Yale Law Journal; and other bulletins and papers.

Explanations

The descriptive note is separated from critical notices of a book by a dash.
The plus and minus signs preceding the name of the magazine indicate the degree of favor or disfavor of the entire review.

In reference to a magazine, the first number refers to the volume, the next to the page, the letters to a date and the last figure to the number of words in the review.

Beginning with the issue of March 1952, non-fiction titles are classified according to the standard (15th) edition of the Dewey decimal classification. When this number differs (except in length) from that used in the 14th edition, the latter is given in brackets, e.g. Baily, Gilbert and Sullivan book. 782.1 [782.6].

Publishers' Directory will be found at the end of this number.

Book Review Digest

Devoted to the Valuation of Current Literature

Cumulation of Monthly Numbers March 1952—February 1953

AARON, DANIEL, ed. America in crisis: fourteen crucial episodes in American history [by Perry Miller and others]. 363p $4 Knopf

973 U.S.—History 51-13214

"This volume brings together fourteen stimulating, lectures given at Bennington College by historians of high ability on American response to crisis ranging from Jonathan Edwards to the Nazi Soviet pact, including the Yellow Fever epidemic of 1793, Horace Mann, Woodrow Wilson, and the Dust Bowl." Library J

Booklist 49:64 O 15 '52

"Two weaknesses are apparent in this volume. First, altho written clearly and well in the main, some authors assume far too much knowledge on the part of the general reader. Second, some of the episodes should have been more representative of the larger historical movements of which they were a part. But any citizen, by reading a half dozen of these essays to discover how his forefathers responded to important decisions in their time, will profit considerably from the experience." Clarence Ver Steeg

+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 S 21 '52

360w

Kirkus 20:437 J1 15 '52 250w

"In some cases the points have been stretched to meet the demands of the idea of crisis, but, as a whole, they provide penetrating interpretation. The best are C. Vann Woodward's essay on John Brown and Richard Hofstadter's study of American imperialism and the Philippines. Recommended for all libraries." R. S. Taylor

+ Library J 77:1392 S 1 '52 90w

Reviewed by Adrienne Koch

New Repub 127:22 O 13 '52 800w

Reviewed by Oscar Handlin

N Y Times p56 N 9 '52 550w

"It does not hold together as well as might be hoped. . . . Authors approach their subjects from quite different points of view. . . . Nor is there any common standard, although this would perhaps be too much to expect, so far as either original research or fresh interpretation are concerned. The unevenness of the essays detracts from the book's over-all effect." F. R. Dulles

Sat R 35:21 N 15 '52 450w

"An unusually interesting and valuable review of 14 crucial episodes in American history and how they were met by the leaders and public of those eras." R. F. H.

+ Springfield Republican p9D S 28 '52

320w

ABBAS, MEKKI. Sudan question. 222p maps $4.25 Praeger

962.4 Sudan, Egyptian

A52-9820

"This is an important book for two reasons: first, in the next decade the question of the Sudan will assume major proportions, if it hasn't already; secondly, this is the first presentation of the Sudanese themselves in a dispute up to now dominated by the British and the Egyptians. Mr. Abbas, a Moslem Arab, Rhodes scholar, and a director of the Sudan Gezira Board, traces the forlorn history of the Anglo-Egyptian Condominium, describes the problem of the Nile waters, and analyses the sudden emergence of the Sudanese as a force." Library J

"A fine historico-political analysis of the North African sore spot by a writer, well grounded in British university tradition, who returned to his native Sudan as a director of the large Gezira Irrigation plan."

+ Kirkus 20:582 S 1 '52 180w

"Scholarly, well-written, documented, maps; essential for libraries seriously concerned with current affairs." R. S. Taylor

+ Library J 77:1645 O 1 '52 80w

"Mr. Abbas deals amply both with the historical background and with the complex constitutional aspects of the Anglo-Egyptian dispute. He is fair to both parties, and is always readable; which is more than can be said of some constitutional history." Tom Driberg

+ New Statesman & Nation 43:706 Je 14 '52 1050w

"It is refreshing to read a sober, balanced, scholarly discussion of such an emotional issue as the Sudan by someone who is not only expert but who has been involved in the developments. Mekki Abbas shows no bias in favor of the British or the Egyptians, and he has no extremism about the aspirations of his native Sudan. 'The Sudan Question,' from first to last, is not a polemical book. It is a serious, expository work—and that is what the subject calls for." H. L. Matthews

+ N Y Times p16 O 5 '52 450w

"This is a book which can stand entirely on its own merits. It is brief, lucid and scholarly. In the valley of the Nile itself the future of the Sudan is a matter which arouses fierce passions, and Mr. Abbas, as a member of the small Sudanese intelligentsia which will have to play a big part in shaping the destiny of its country, might be expected to betray his own emotions. The temptation to harangue his British audience must have been hard to resist; but he has resisted it. The book was begun as a piece of research, and if the result is a great deal more readable than ninety percent. of B. Litt. theses this is due as much to the author's control over his material as to the topicality of the material itself." Edward Hodgkin

+ Spec 188:864 Je 27 '52 550w

Times [London] Lit Sup p559 Ag 29 '52 850w

ABBING, JOHN PATRICK CARROLL-. See Carroll-Abbing, J. P.

ABBOTT, JANE LUDLOW (DRAKE) (MRS FRANK ABBOTT). The neighbors. 280p $3 Lippincott

52-5095

Life in a small New England town is the background for this novel. Gossip almost spoils several lives, but Debbie Brent, back in town after forty years away from it, manages to prevent further mischief.

Booklist 48:322 Je 1 '52

Kirkus 20:166 Mr 1 '52 120w

"This lesson in living with one's neighbors is one that seems close to the author's heart, and one that, as the theme for this novel, will more than satisfy her loyal following." Andrea Parke

+ N Y Times p22 My 18 '52 230w

"A skilled producer of books for teen-age girls, Miss Abbott has brought over a number of the more innocent plotting tricks from that trade. One of them is to have the characters keep little secrets from each other so that unnecessary complications and misunderstandings keep the characters moving for the required number of pages. It doesn't seem to annoy her large and appreciative audience." E. J. Fitzgerald

Sat R 35:55 Je 7 '52 180w

ABEGG, LILY. Mind of East Asia [tr. by A. J. Crick and E. E. Thomas]. 344p $4.50 Thames 901 Civilization, Oriental. National characteristics 52-12912

"This is an attempt, with the aid of psychological techniques, to characterize the patterns of thinking of East Asian peoples—which, for the purposes of this volume, means the Chinese and Japanese—and to trace their manifestations in such fields as language, cosmological beliefs, religion, social behavior, science, and so on." (Nation) Index.

"There is much in this book that is of high value, but also much that must be read with great caution, especially by the non-specialist. The translation from the German seems to be generally excellent, but it is a pity that many Chinese names have been misspelled, some of them badly and more than once." Derk Bodde

+ Nation 175:410 N 1 '52 1000w

"Dr. Abegg's theories regarding East Asian psychology are neither very new for the student of Eastern thought nor easy reading for those with a more general interest in Asia. Where her book does achieve a great deal of interest for both is in the illustrations of her theories drawn from long and intimate contact with the peoples of China and Japan, particularly the latter, whom she obviously knows well." E. O. Reischauer

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p29 O 26 '52 650w

"Barring [some] exaggerations, the book is invaluable for the wealth of genuine insight it contains." J. C. H. Wu

+ N Y Times p3 D 21 '52 800w

ABEL, CHARLES. Tested money-making ideas for photographers. 280p $3.95 Greenberg

778 [770.69] Photography, Commercial 52-5617

"A collection of articles from The Professional Photographer and The Commercial Photographer, rewritten to give full details of ideas for promotion—getting new customers, reviving the old, increasing the order; short-cuts and cost-saving. Full subject index, with specific as well as grouped references." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 49:7 S 1 '52

Reviewed by Russell Hamm

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 J1 20 '52 50w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross

Library J 77:1406 S 1 '52 30w

"Even most specialists will find something to interest them here, but its particular appeal will be to small-town or neighborhood photographers looking for ways to make economical use of spare time, cut costs and build up business by creating jobs." R. T.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p26 N 9 '52 80w

ABETTI, GIORGIO. History of astronomy; tr. from the Italian Storia dell'astronomia, by Betty Burr Abetti. (Life of science lib) 338p il $6 Schuman

520.9 Astronomy—History 52-13485

A history of astronomy from primeval times to the present, containing anecdotes about many famous astronomers. The author is an Italian authority on solar physics. Index.

Booklist 49:119 D 1 '52

"Quiet and scholarly in its style, this is a commendable survey."

+ Kirkus 20:398 J1 1 '52 220w

"The treatment is comprehensive and scholarly, and constitutes an important addition to specialized and large collections. Small libraries would be better served by a less detailed and more popular presentation of the subject." J. E. Brown

+ Library J 77:1392 S 1 '52 50w

ABRAHAM, GERALD ERNEST HEAL. This modern music. 135p $2.50 Norton

781 Music—Analysis, interpretation, appreciation 52-6726

A revision for American publication of an English publication: This Modern Stuff, published in Great Britain in 1933 and revised in 1939. It explains various modern musical techniques for the puzzled listener. Partial contents: Modern harmony: the relative nature of discord; Modern harmony: new chords and the new attitude to chords; Polytonality, atonality, and the quarter-tone system; Modern melody; Fashions in modern music. Index.

Booklist 48:210 Mr 1 '52

Reviewed by W. L. Caswell

Churchman 166:17 Ap 15 '52 150w

"Aimed at the intelligent layman, but excellent for the student or the older rusty musician. More might have been said on the subjects of rhythm and timbre." C. K. Miller

+ Library J 77:531 Mr 15 '52 70w

"Two characteristics probably account for the continuing demand for this 'fairly 'plaine and easie' introduction to contemporary music': Abraham's ability to state complex matters succinctly and his genial, frequently pungent, wit. If the intelligent listener for whom the book is intended will follow the 'clues' given, he will soon gain understanding—though not necessarily admiration—of polytonal counterpoint et hoc genus omne." Irene Millen

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 9:416 Je '52 180w

"Provides an admirably clear explanation of the extensions of vocabulary and syntax in the music which the general musical public has found incomprehensible." B. H. Haggin

+ Nation 175:239 S 20 '52 500w

"Though written in a coy, patronizing style that is doubtless meant to disarm the antagonistic layman, it contains so much technical jargon that I suspect it would dazzle and confuse anyone who was not fairly literate musically. Within its limitations, however, it seems to be accurate and reliable." R. E.

+ New Repub 127:23 Ag 25 '52 60w

Reviewed by Herbert Weinstock

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 J1 6 '52 260w

"The style is wonderfully affable and unpretentious; it manages, for instance, to deal with that savant's battleground, the twelve-tone system, without for a sentence losing its poise and clarity."

+ New Yorker 28:135 Mr 22 '52 160w

"An able and witty treatise." D. P.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Mr 30 '52 240w

"To the average music lover rather than to the professional musician is this delightful little volume addressed. But I wish musicians, too, would read it. . . . A touch of conversational journalism permeates the whole presentation. Yet when all that one can hold against it has been said, the book still remains one of the most transparently written, most persuasively formulated, and, indeed, most elucidating discourses on modern music." Rudolph Reti
+ — Sat R 35:21 Ap 26 '52 410w

ABRAHAMSEN, DAVID. Who are the guilty? a study of education and crime. 340p $5 Rinehart

364.2 [364.3] Criminal anthropology. Crime and criminals—U.S. 52-7158
"A psychiatrist discusses who is responsible for the enormity of our crime rate—society, the home, the school, the delinquent? The author tells what each can do about it." (School & Society) Bibliography. Index.

"A study of a social problem, of primary value for a professional audience."
Kirkus 20:312 My 15 '52 210w

"Dr. Abrahamson, who is on the staff of the Department of Psychiatry of Columbia University and has also been director of a research project on sex offenders of the New York State Department of Mental Hygiene, presents the results of his research in the treatment of criminals and delinquents in a form intelligible to any interested reader." Margaret Naumburg
+ N Y Times p31 S 14 '52 290w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p19 J1 23 '52 700w
School & Society 76:63 J1 26 '52 20w

ABRAHAMSON, EMANUEL MAURICE, and PEZET, A. W. Body, mind, and sugar. 206p $2.95 Holt

616.3 [616.37] Hypoglycemia 51-13536
"A medical specialist and a scientific writer collaborate on theory and fact concerning the direct relation of 'hyperinsulinism' to allergy, ulcer, rheumatic fever, alcoholism, and neurosis. Low blood-sugar disease was discovered in 1924 by Dr. Harris, and is found far more widespread than its opposite, diabetes (high blood-sugar), because of excessive caffeine consumption in America. Book reveals why many of us feel starved, listless, unambitious. Case examples, and Harris-diet cure." Library J

Kirkus 19:474 Ag 15 '51 110w

"Current reading for doctor and layman." J. M. Scherr

Library J 76:1416 S 15 '51 90w
"The book becomes somewhat speculative in suggesting that low blood sugar is an important factor in alcoholism, allergies and certain other diseases, the causes of which are at present otherwise regarded by the medical profession. Naturally there is always a chance that accepted views require revision. At all events, Abrahamson's book is, in my opinion, a valuable contribution to the vast subject of human nutrition. Furthermore, it is interesting reading." B. S. Cornell
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 Ap 27 '52 270w

ABRUZZI, ADAM. Work measurement; new principles and procedures. 290p $6 Columbia univ. press

658.57 Labor productivity. Efficiency. Industrial 52-2026
A study of work measurement which considers new procedures and criteria, and points out the faults in old procedures. Intended for experienced workers in the field. Bibliography. Index.

"The book is scholarly and is not particularly easy reading. Whether the author's claims that most of the work done in work measurement to date is faulty if not inaccurate and that he presents the only accurate method remains to be seen. To the reviewer at least it does not seem possible that the vast amount of work done in this field can be wasted energy." D. S. Kimball

+ Ann Am Acad 283:206 S '52 320w
"An important addition to the literature on time study." R. R. Hawkins
+ Library J 77:1308 Ag '52 40w
Special Libraries 43:418 D '52 110w
U S Quarterly Bk R 3:307 S '52 140w

ACHESON, DEAN GOODERHAM. Pattern of responsibility; ed. by McGeorge Bundy from the record of Secretary of State Dean Acheson; introd. by Douglas Southall Freeman. 309p $4 Houghton

327.73 U.S.—Foreign policy 51-8864
This answer to the critics of Secretary Acheson's foreign policy is given largely in his own words. It contains selections from his speeches, press conferences, reports to the President, testimony before Congressional committees, etc. with connecting links by the editor. Index.

"I find it hard to see, on the basis of the printed record, how the charge that Acheson is an appeaser of Communism can be regarded as anything but a classic example of what the late George Orwell called 'doublethink.'" C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 189:80 F '52 490w
Booklist 48:113; 154 D 1 '51; Ja 1 '52
Bookmark 11:103 F '52 40w
"This defense of Acheson comes too late with too little." Walter Trohan
— Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Ja 6 '52 650w

Current Hist 22:229 Ap '52 70w
Foreign Affairs 30:499 Ap '52 30w
Kirkus 19:628 O 15 '51 150w

"Recommended for public and educational libraries." H. H. Bernt

+ Library J 76:2111 D 15 '51 130w
"The selections are well chosen, the accompanying commentary is judicious and good-tempered—after reading them, no honest-minded citizen could fail to be convinced that virtually all the charges customarily advanced against Mr. Acheson are groundless. . . . The record has now been put straight: the case should be closed. Yet that is not quite the whole story. . . . This reviewer for one regrets that Mr. Bundy should have felt obliged to direct his book primarily at the mass of Acheson-haters. The criticism, I grant, is eccentric and bears no relation to the realities either of politics or of the publishing business. Yet it is only honest to state that as I read on in Mr. Bundy's book, I became increasingly depressed. It seemed to me that both the author and his protagonist were tending to descend to a commonplace level of argument." H. S. Hughes
+ — Nation 174:88 Ja 26 '52 1100w

Reviewed by J. R. Newman
New Repub 126:17 F 25 '52 2050w

"So dense are the fogs which political and factional partisanship, scurrility, tribal fears and lingering but sincere doubts and confusions over the proper course of policy in this perilous world have generated around this key figure in our affairs that it is a service to restate the public record. . . . The broad picture which emerges is one of a keen, far-sighted and highly cultivated mind, with a high sense of public responsibility. . . . Yet, this book, though often a useful corrective, is something less than a complete answer to the issues with which it deals. This is partly because of its self-imposed limitations. . . . No study, moreover, which deliberately confines itself solely to the official and published statement can hope to shed more than superficial light on the living processes of policy formulation and adjustment." Walter Mills

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 D 30 '51 1600w
"Mr. Bundy has shown industrious thoroughness and fine discrimination in his selections from the prodigious bulk of Acheson's speeches, statements, press conferences and the Congressional hearings in which the harried statesman has been involved." R. E. Sherwood

ACHESON, D. G.—Continued

+ N Y Times p1 D 30 '51 2100w

"Mr. Bundy has done an excellent job of putting these various papers together to form a whole, but he does not claim that his book is a complete statement of our present foreign policy. It does make clear, however, that there is a reasoned and consistent political philosophy back of our dealings with other nations and peoples; it also provides the reader with a first-rate self-portrait of Mr. Acheson as a statesman."

+ New Yorker 27:84 Ja 12 '52 160w

Reviewed by Lindsay Rogers
Sat R 35:14 Ja 19 '52 900w

Reviewed by Donald Derby
Springf'd Republican p10D Ap 6 '52 350w

"The material makes up a very informing and interesting book. It could be fuller—some topics are deliberately omitted, of necessity—and it could be more direct—if Mr. Acheson had written the book or one like it. But Mr. Bundy, who makes it a point to mention his close personal connection with Mr. Acheson and his family, seems to have been not only skillful but very fair and conscientious in his presentations."

+ — U S Quarterly Bk R 8:167 Je '52 230w
Wis Lib Bul 48:29 Ja '52

ACHORN, ERIK, ed. Beaconlights of Western culture; condensed versions of great books and epoch-making public acts that have shaped our spiritual heritage. 3v 420;425;422p ea $5; set $12.50 Beacon press

308 Political science. Social sciences 52-5243

"An anthology of 23 famous books and documents, each with introductory note, mostly humanistic in vein, championing toleration, a spirit of free enquiry, and a liberal democratic way of life. Includes Plato, Voltaire, Tom Paine, Jefferson, Berkeley, Rousseau, Malthus, Darwin, Adam Smith, Thoreau, Veblen, Marx, etc. Fifty per cent not in Chicago Great Books. The sense of each book is skillfully brought out by the elision of words, sentences or sections." Library J

"Mr. Achorn's abridgments seem to me to have been made with skill and discretion." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 69:1321 N 12 '52 220w

"Quite usable for discussion groups, possibly leading to reading of whole book." R. W. Henderson

Library J 77:1803 O 15 '52 80w

"His method may strike some as unusually bold: he has not only truncated the great books for the sake of space but he has also performed a certain amount of surgery on the internal organs, splicing paragraphs, or dividing them, eliminating words and phrases within sentences, and making two sentences out of one. However, there is no indication that the spirit of the original has suffered, even though the guts have been tampered with." David Dempsey

N Y Times p43 O 5 '52 160w

ACKLEY, EDITH (FLACK) (MRS STOW WENGENROTH). Dolls to make for fun and profit; drawings by Telka Ackley. rev ed 126p $3 Lippincott

688.7 [649.55] Dolls 51-13176

"This new edition contains additional illustrations and new material on hats, jackets, and portrait dolls." (Booklist) For first edition see Book Review Digest 1935.

Booklist 48:132 D 1 '51

Reviewed by J. D. Lindquist and S. M. Andrews

Horn Bk 27:424 D '51 60w

"It is particularly recommended for libraries which do not have the first edition." M. B. Snow

+ Library J 76:2010 D 1 '51 50w

ADAM, KARL. One and holy; tr. by Cecily Hastings. 130p $2 Sheed

284 Catholic church—Relations—Lutheran church. Lutheran church—Relations—Catholic church. Church unity 51-7382

"Karl Adam, a Roman Catholic, boldly faces the ultimate question which lurks in the background of most ecumenical discussion, namely, How can a union be attained which will include all Christians—Roman Catholics, all others who call themselves Catholics, and Protestants?" Christian Century

"It is never fair to find fault with phrases taken out of context; but to the type of person who indulges in this sort of sniping, Adam frequently offers a tempting target. Some statements do not harmonize perfectly with others; in the enumerating of Luther's fine points he goes too far; the picture of ecclesiastical corruption seems at times too black—in fact once at least the translator feels called upon to add a balancing consideration in a note. Yet this thought-provoking book really deserves to be classed as a valuable contribution to the cause of Christian reunion." Joseph McSorley

+ — Cath World 174:317 Ja '52 280w

"Notable features of Adam's work are these: first, its completely frank and unapologetic statement of the corruption of the Roman Catholic Church in head and members at the time of the Reformation; second, generous recognition of Luther's deep sincerity and profound piety and even of the essentially Catholic character of his theology; and third, the nobly Christian spirit in which it urges that truth and union can be successfully sought only when love prevails, and that 'nothing but this unity in love can provide the prerequisite foundation for our future unity in faith.'" W. E. Garrison

+ — Christian Century 68:1485 D 19 '51 1050w

Reviewed by D. J. Geaney
Commonweal 55:21 O 12 '51 600w

ADAMIC, LOUIS. Eagle and the roots. 531p $5 Doubleday

949.7 Yugoslavia. Tito, Josip Broz, known as. World war, 1939-1945—Yugoslavia 52-6359

The record of a visit to the author's homeland in 1949, plus a biography of Tito. This is the book upon which the author was engaged when he met his death in September, 1951. It was made ready for the press by his wife and Timothy Seldes. No index.

Booklist 48:335 Je 15 '52

Reviewed by Nicholas Nyaradi
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Je 1 '52 650w

Reviewed by E. S. Pisko
Christian Science Monitor p13 Je 11 '52 380w

"This excessively free recasting of his material and the obvious partisanship in dealing with a complex tragedy make the book utterly undependable in major outlines and in detail. The last half of the book gives an interesting account of Tito's life. Even here the Communist rewriting of history to meet a changed line is obvious." M. A. Fitzsimons

— Commonweal 56:298 Je 27 '52 600w

"An important contribution to understanding a country and a people who hold the key to one vital facet in the future."

+ Kirkus 20:249 Ap 1 '52 320w

"Extremely informative and absorbing, sometimes controversial. A worthy monument to the author whose mysterious death in September, 1951, when this book was just finished, is fresh in our memory." Kurt Schwerin

+ Library J 77:886 My 15 '52 140w

"This is not the cleanly etched, comprehensive record of Tito's break with Moscow for which so many friends of Adamic have been waiting. In fact, the book does not meet the promise of the title. . . Yet the book does contain great chunks of precious material." Mark Gayn

+ — Nation 175:234 S 20 '52 1150w

Reviewed by A. H. Uhl

New Repub 127:21 J1 21 '52 500w

"This is a book about Yugoslavia of today, and about the late Louis Adamic. Alternately brooding and violent, it is effective in its vignettes, its sharp images of things seen and of individuals. It is least effective in its effort to explain the complex unfolding of Yugoslav development since the Cominform expelled Tito's government in June, 1948, and called for a crusade to overthrow it." F. E. Mosely

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Je 1 '52 750w

"Skillfully inserted into the broader survey of Tito's Yugoslavia, the documentation became a book within a book, virtually a full-length biography of Tito himself. Not likely to be seriously outmoded even by the official biography now in progress, this part of the Adamic account should remain an important sourcebook on Tito's early life and emergence for a long time to come." Hal Lehrman

+ N Y Times p7 My 25 '52 1050w

"Mr. Adamic, who was born a Slovene, was a remarkably perceptive and articulate writer on Yugoslavia, and this book if one discounts its forlornness, is one of his most interesting documents about the country. A long section on Tito and his break with the Cominform, in which the author tried to get Tito's complex life story straight once and for all, is the high point of the work. Mr. Adamic's attitude toward the Marshal and his regime was friendly but not uncritical, and his book sounds fair-minded."

+ New Yorker 28:141 My 24 '52 160w

"For one thing, he provides a vigorously written, lively, and enormously colorful report on the country itself. You'll know more about the physical properties of Yugoslavia, the kind of people who inhabit that curiously mixed nation, their daily life and the like, than you have ever known unless you've made it a study. So far so good. Mr. Adamic never wrote more powerfully, nor more vividly. In today's climate, however, you can't just report a country as though it were a piece of geography hanging in a political vacuum. Mr. Adamic's book, therefore, is also political. And here is where the reader will wonder." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 Je 19 '52 700w

"The honesty and rectitude, the dignity and decency, the Socialist intelligence and integrity of Tito and his associates, held the possibility of great and good things for all nations in the future; and in the foreshadowing of this hope lies perhaps the greatest interest and value of this absorbing, exciting, and profoundly moving book." Shaemas O'Sheel

+ Sat R 35:9 Ag 16 '52 750w

"While 'The Eagle and the Roots' adds something to what is already known about Titoism, many questions remain yet unanswered. Though capturing the mood of the Yugoslav leaders and people in 1949, there are definite signs of romantic bewilderment." G. A. Panichas

+ Springf'd Republican p6D J1 27 '52 550w

ADAMS, CEDRIC M. Poor Cedric's almanac; ed. by Angelo Cohn [with forty ill. by Robert Day, and an introd. by Arthur Godfrey and a postscript by Bob Hope]. 351p $3.50 Doubleday

818 52-11109

"Cedric Adams is a newspaper columnist out Minneapolis-St. Paul way. Primarily he is a personality, a natural, as they say, for radio and television, with a large following throughout the Midwest. This book shows why. It is a miscellaneous compilation from his newspaper columns over the years." N Y Times

Bookmark 12:77 Ja '53 20w

"'Poor Cedric's Almanac' can be read enjoyably either in short sips or in one long swig." J. T. McCutcheon

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 D 21 '52 170w

Kirkus 20:532 Ag 15 '52 160w

"None of the wit and subtlety of Don Marquis or F.P.A. here, but comfortable, amusing reading. Totally unnecessary epilogue by Arthur Godfrey and foreword by Bob Hope." E. F. Walbridge

Library J 77:1496 S 15 '52 100w

"As Mr. Adams himself points out, this isn't a book to be read straight through, like a news story or a novel. It's a book for browsing, full of odd information, oblique comments and what he calls helpful hints." Hal Borland

+ N Y Times p42 N 16 '52 400w

"A refreshing and varied miscellany." Robert Halsband

+ Sat R 35:16 D 13 '52 70w

ADAMS, CLIFFORD ROSE. Preparing for marriage; a guide to marital and sexual adjustment. 256p $3.50 Dutton

301.426 [392.5] Marriage 51-11321

"This book is based on the findings of the most recent and authoritative psychological inquiries and answers the many questions everyone asks about love, sex, marriage, and the choosing of a mate and, most important, shows how to make marriage happy and successful." (School & Society) This is a revision of the author's earlier book: How to Pick a Mate (Book Review Digest 1946). Glossary. Bibliography. Index.

"It is written in an interesting style, contains frequent anecdotes and excerpts of case-history material, provides a guide to self-scrutiny, and abounds in 'good advice.'" C. E. Bowerman

+ Am Soc R 17:122 F '52 500w

"The glossary appendixes and index are very complete. They offer excellent help for the lay reader using the book at his own initiative, and it is for this audience that the book appears to be most apt." G. R. Hawkes

+ J Home Econ 44:64 Ja '52 500w

School & Society 74:47 J1 21 '51 40w

ADAMS, FRANKLIN PIERCE, ed. F P A book of quotations; a new collection of famous sayings, reflecting the wisdom and the wit of times past and present and including the virtuous, humorous, and philosophic commentary on life by men and women of every age together with riches from the profound wells of the Bible, proverbs, and anonymity. 914p $5.95 Funk

808.88 Quotations 52-10236

Some 15,000 quotations arranged alphabetically by topic. Indexed by topics and authors.

Booklist 48:334 Je 15 '52

"A new book of quotations is always cause for rejoicing by those who find supreme entertainment browsing among its variety of riches and by those who find it useful in their work. This one, compiled by the versatile FPA, is sure to be welcomed." Ogden Martin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 My 25 '52 60w

"F.P.A. is even catholic enough to include himself—for which the reader will not be sorry. Another advantage of the book is that, being the latest of its kind, it includes many current sayings, with emphasis on Americana."

+ New Yorker 28:142 Je 7 '52 50w

"A new and very useful volume, done by a man known to millions of Americans for his erudition as well as his humor." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 My 25 '52 500w

ADAMS, GEORGE WORTHINGTON. Doctors in blue. 253p il $4 Schuman

973.77 U.S.—History—Civil war—Medical and sanitary affairs 52-7607

Monograph on the medical history of the Union army in the Civil war. Describes the beginnings of ambulance service, and the reorganization of the medical supply system, etc. Index.

ADAMS, G. W.—Continued

"Dr. Adams has admirably compressed much information into 230 pages of text. Everything that is essential is here; but the virtue of compression has its defects. . . . These omissions, however, do not detract from the success of Doctors in Blue. The student of American history will learn that it illuminates a side of war he rarely thinks important. . . . The student of medical history and public health will discover a rewarding study of a period which has been neglected for the more dramatic advances in bacteriology." W. Q. Maxwell
+ Am Hist R 58:140 O '52 600w

Reviewed by George Rosen

Am J Pub Health 42:1331 O '52 330w

Booklist 49:10 S 1 '52

"This is a book to be read by all Civil war enthusiasts who have long delighted in the dramatic charge of cheering men and the strategy and tactics of their officers. It will have a sobering effect and it will fill a gap in their knowledge." Avery Craven

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Mr 30 '52 330w

Kirkus 20:59 Ja 15 '52 140w

"Readable, interesting, and informative. . . . Recommended." J. M. Scherr

+ Library J 77:427 Mr 1 '52 130w

"This is a valuable and much-needed work. It fills a gap in Civil War history and it is done well enough to remain a permanent contribution." Avery Craven

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Mr 23 '52 1250w

"'Doctors in Blue' at once becomes the standard medical history of the Union Army. One might wish for fuller records of the role of Congress and public opinion and a more abundant use of diaries to enliven a sometimes sober style. But these are small faults in an excellent book." J. A. Rawley

+ N Y Times p7 Mr 16 '52 450w

Reviewed by Alfred Kay

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Mr 30 '52 850w

"Dr. (Ph. D.) G. W. Adams has competently filled a part of the gap in medical history with this medical history of the Union army. His book is the first modern comprehensive treatment of the subject. It ought to be welcomed and read by every student of the Civil War." T. H. Williams

+ Sat R 35:39 Mr 22 '52 550w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:151 Je '52 230w

ADAMS, RAMON FREDERICK. Come an' get it; the story of the old cowboy cook; drawings by Nick Eggenhofer. 170p il $3.75 Univ. of Okla. press

978 Cowboys. Cookery. Frontier and pioneer life—West 52-12299

"The rough-mannered prairie chef is now almost as extinct as a dodo but, in his day he figured importantly in the trail drives and round-ups. He was something of a despot in his chuckwagon domain but, nevertheless, earned the respect and liking of the cowhands by his skill with skillet, coffee pot and Dutch oven." Library J

Booklist 49:30 S 15 '52

Bookmark 12:4 O '52 30w

"This brief treatise on the cowboy cook of the old days is an interesting sidelight to Western history." R. H. Dillon

+ Library J 77:1392 S 1 '52 80w

"For many years Mr. Adams has been collecting stories and folklore of the cow country. In 'Come an' Get It' he has drawn from many sources and from reminiscences still fresh in the minds of working cowboys who knew the range cook from experience." Ross Santee

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 D 21 '52 420w

"More than grand reading. It perpetuates the memory of a vanished craftsman and fills a long-existent deficiency in the literature of the open range and of the West." Hoffman Birney

+ N Y Times p10 S 14 '52 400w

Review by W. H. Hutchinson

San Francisco Chronicle p21 N 2 '52 170w

ADELSON, LEONE. All ready for winter; designed and il. by Kathleen Elgin. [22p] $2 McKay

52-13321

A picture storybook for ages four to seven. It asks questions about where the various birds, animals and the small boy will be during the winter, and answers with prose and pictures.

Booklist 49:128 D 1 '52

Reviewed by Marcia Winn

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 N 16 '52 40w

+ Kirkus 20:679 O 15 '52 120w

"Although bits of the story seem a trifle silly, the total effect is one of cozy warmth and comfort. Soft browns and greens carry out the feeling of the approach of winter." M. A. Herr

+ — Library J 77:2074 D 1 '52 50w

"Well-executed gay story." Miriam James
+ N Y Times pt2, p40 N 16 '52 50w

ADLER, IRVING. Secret of light; il. by Ida Weisburd. (Young world bk) 96p $2.25 Int. pubs.

530 Physics—Juvenile literature. Light—Juvenile literature 52-10577

"Simple explanation of the basic principles of light, its properties, and the way it works for man. Covers reflection and refraction, color, wave theory, and invisible light, and explores the mysteries of the atomic theory. Facts on man's use of magnets, prisms, lenses, X-ray tubes, and radio circuits may lead to further investigation by scientific-minded readers." Booklist

Booklist 48:342 Je 15 '52

"Supplementary reading for science students at High School level, this demands an advanced degree of interest or considerable student-teacher cooperation. . . . The author shares his own conception of workable theories with the reader, though his breezy presentation leaves something to be desired. The book is pithy and lively, and those already interested in the subject should find it useful reading. Generous inclusion of vigorous, clear line drawings by Ida Weisburd add to the interest."

+ — Kirkus 20:301 My 15 '52 250w

"Especially good is the explanation of relativity. Good reading for young and old. Especially valuable for junior high school." M. I. Ross

+ Library J 77:1311 Ag '52 80w

ADRIAN, MARY, pseud. See Venn, M. E.

AGAR, HERBERT. Declaration of faith. 237p $3 Houghton

901 Civilization, Occidental. Civilization, Christian 52-5250

"Mr. Agar takes his texts from the modern moralists, Unamuno, Bernanos, Michael Roberts, and Toynbee, and interprets history through them. He is a Christian, but, admitting that society to-day is secularised and that the peoples of other continents are not Christians, plumps for a revival of Natural Law as the concept which men of all creeds can accept and which throughout history has proved to be the sole effective barrier to tyranny and barbarism. Yet he believes that Natural Law can continue as a barrier only if there is sufficient moral unanimity in the world; and fear, nationalism, and centralised Governments armed with modern techniques are destroying this unanimity." (Manchester Guardian) Index.

Booklist 49:10 S 1 '52

Bookmark 12:4 O '52 20w

Reviewed by Paul Kiniry

Cath World 176:236 D '52 220w

Reviewed by W. H. Stringer

Christian Science Monitor p9 S 8 '52
600w

"The book is disturbing, challenging, difficult of comprehension."

+ Kirkus 20:297 My 1 '52 420w

"A very stimulating volume." Joseph Borome
+ Library J 77:1300 Ag '52 80w

"Written with sense and conviction, but [it] remains a tract for the times." Noel Annan

Manchester Guardian p4 Je 3 '52 350w

"To a reviewer accustomed to theological jargon, Mr. Agar's book has a special interest. He uses none of the jargon; his vocabulary is drawn from the ordinary speech of the secular world; but what he says is what religion, at its best, should today be emphasizing. We need Agars as teachers in our theological seminaries." H. E. Fosdick

+ New Repub 127:24 O 6 '52 900w

"This is a mind-stretching and spirit-awakening book. It recalls us to our basic Western belief in man and in a universe that supports the generousities of man to fellow man. Most of the book is devoted to a penetrating and sobering review of our Western civilization. This is the kind of history that most of us did not learn in our school texts. It is history that recalls both our deep sincerities and our broken intentions. It is history that makes us better able to share a guilt that is universal and to aim at a unity that is intrinsic to our human destiny." H. A. Overstreet

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 S 7 '52
950w

Reviewed by Peter Viereck

N Y Times p3 S 7 '52 1150w

"A disturbing, invigorating book."

+ New Yorker 28:146 S 13 '52 140w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p21 O 8 '52
700w

"All this is admirable. World history has rarely been better summarised in so small a compass, and Mr. Agar is perpetually suggestive. But the nearer he gets to contemporary times the more he—surprisingly—inspires misgivings. The West has failures and shortcomings enough, Heaven knows, but Mr. Agar is positively masochistic in his disparagement. He does not, of course, confuse nationality and nationalism in his own mind, but he often writes as though the one were equivalent to the other." Wilson Harris

+ Spec 188:679 My 23 '52 750w

Times [London] Lit Sup p353 My 30 '52
2000w

Wis Lib Bul 48:213 S '52

AGLE, MRS NAN (HAYDEN), and WILSON, ELLEN JANET (CAMERON). Three boys and the remarkable cow; il. by Marian Honigman. 127p $2 Scribner

52-9129

Another story about the triplets Abercrombie, Benjamin, and Christopher of Three Boys and a Lighthouse (Book Review Digest 1951). This time they are worried about an entry in the county fair, and the remarkable cow helps them out just in time. Ages 5 to 8.

Booklist 48:324 Je 1 '52

Bookmark 11:236 Jl '52

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Je 8 '52
120w

"I liked Three Boys and a Lighthouse, published last year, but I enjoyed even more this new story. . . That the remarkable cow turns out to be so very remarkable is a fine surprise for all." J. D. L.

+ Horn BK 28:97 Ap '52 60w

Kirkus 20:257 Ap 15 '52 160w

"Excellent for second and third grades." E. B. Mason

+ Library J 77:907 My 15 '52 60w

"Far-fetched and to our mind not as good as the first one, but it will have its uses as practice reading." L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Je 8
'52 70w

"With humor and suspense the tale builds up to a highly satisfactory climax. . . Convincing detail and simple text add to the appeal of a story which young readers will enjoy even more than they did its predecessor." Eugenia Garson

+ N Y Times p18 Je 29 '52 150w

"The illustrations are funny and expressive and the style has the simplicity and repetition that little children like."

+ Sat R 35:39 Ag 16 '52 60w

Wis Lib Bul 48:174 Jl '52

AHLGREN, GILBERT HAROLD, and others.

Principles of weed control. 368p il $5.50 Wiley
632.58 Weeds. Herbicides Agr51-123

"An indication of the impact of science upon agriculture is found in the fact that most of this book is devoted to weed control by chemicals. Chemicals such as 2, 4-D; 2, 4, 5-T, calcium cyanamide, and other chemicals now in use or that have been tried in practical weed control, are described. Techniques of chemically controlling weeds in various crops or chemically controlling particular weeds are covered. Also, there are discussions of weed control in other situations, as around industrial establishments where dry weeds would constitute a fire hazard." (N Y New Tech Bks) Chapter bibliographies. Index.

"It is written in an understandable language and should be comprehended by students, farmers, farm leaders, herbicide salesmen, agricultural extension people, and vocational agricultural teachers who have some knowledge of agronomy, botany, and chemistry. . . Much of the material in this book may be found scattered throughout the literature but it is convenient for the average student or scientist to have this information assembled in one volume." H. M. Sell

+ Chem & Eng N 30:100 Ja 7 '52 200w

"A competent bringing-together of botanical and chemical information on a rapidly growing science—and market for chemicals."

+ Chem Eng 59:363 F '52 20w

N Y New Tech Bks 36:95 N '51

Sat R 35:21 Ag 2 '52 20w

AHRENDT, WILLIAM ROBERT, and TAPLIN, JOHN FERGUSON. Automatic feedback control. 412p il $7.50 McGraw

620.78 Control equipment

51-7078

"A practical treatment on the engineering level. The theoretical fundamentals are outlined, and mathematical methods of analysis of controlling systems are presented. However, the mathematical aspects are not pursued to the advanced regions, characteristic of many books on the feedback principle. Much attention is paid to practical aspects that would be of concern to engineers designing controls and servomechanisms. Though intended mainly for engineering students, the book should be useful to graduate engineers and others in industry who find themselves in need of an inclusive introductory treatment." N Y New Tech Bks

"An introductory but thorough treatise." R. R. Hawkins

Library J 76:2118 D 15 '51 100w

N Y New Tech Bks 36:82 N '51

AIKEN, CONRAD POTTER. Ushant; an essay. 365p $4.50 Duell; Little

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 52-9071

"Conrad Aiken is now in his sixty-third year. He is the author of more than twenty volumes of verse, more than a half dozen volumes of fiction, both novels and short stories, and of several volumes of criticism. He has received various high public honors, including the Pulitzer Prize and the coveted Chair of Poetry in the Library of Congress. Yet he is among the least known of our most distinguished poets and fiction writers." (N Y Times)

AIKEN, C. P.—Continued

This is his story of his life told in the third person, a person known as D.

"Ushant is a difficult book. But the reader in sympathy with Aiken's intent, and prepared to make a full commitment of his faculties, will find here a penetrating and poetic rendering of 'the precarious gait we call experience.'" C. J. Rolo

Atlantic 190:105 N '52 700w

Booklist 49:65 O 15 '52

"It is an extraordinary, often a startling book. Written almost under compulsion it would seem, and with no deliberate attempt at sensationalism, it is nevertheless a completely candid essay in self-revelation, an exploration of human personality, almost morbidly psychoanalytical and expressed often in imagery of haunting beauty and kaleidoscopic symbolism... This is a book which certainly cannot be recommended to all classes of readers. Some, of course, will read it for its Freudian implications; others will search avidly for half-veiled personalities and adumbrations of scandal; but the Catholic reader especially... will be troubled." B. J. Thompson

+ Cath World 176:238 D '52 250w

"The book is written not in a strict year by year account, but with regard for things in their emotional importance. In an age of increasing aloofness in literature, Mr. Aiken has honored human emotion by making it central in all his writing, and so in this book." Paul Engle

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 O 12 '52 450w

Reviewed by S. M. Fitzgerald

Commonweal 57:143 N 14 '52 1350w

Kirkus 20:529 Ag 15 '52 100w

"Conrad Aiken is a self-impaired Hamlet indeed, and to this extent his book is interesting, being much more like the one we should expect a self-conscious poet to write. But it is a failure." Robert Phelps

— Nation 175:360 O 18 '52 400w

"A second reading confirms my first impression that Ushant is one of the great American autobiographies." Malcolm Cowley

+ New Repub 127:20 O 6 '52 1800w

"Beautifully written, touching but pretentiously difficult experiment in autobiography... The book has been conceived to a mighty purpose; it is not as profound as Mr. Aiken's manner suggests. I can think of no recent work in which so much beauty and lavishness of style, so much literary wit, piety and high intention add up to so little freshness of thought." Alfred Kazin

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 O 12 '52 850w

"Conrad Aiken's autobiography seems to me one of the most profoundly original documents to have come out of the United States in many years, an almost stunning outpouring of prose, an incredibly subtle reconstruction of 'the soul's landscape.'" Mark Schorer

+ N Y Times p4 O 12 '52 950w

New Yorker 28:180 D 13 '52 180w

"Once this book takes hold of you, it can easily dwarf all other books on your horizon for a long time to come." J. V.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 N 30 '52 470w

"A review can only point to the bare themes. It must omit the music. Here is an autobiography whose intention, like that of a poem, is to be no mere record but, rather, a created, living thing; the mutability of life shutting through a racing, tumultuous language, adverbial as a brook... Certainly in its richness of conception and language 'Ushant' is a remarkable achievement; barring always the finest of Aiken's poems, this is his masterpiece." W. T. Scott

+ Sat R 35:26 O 11 '52 700w

Reviewed by J. F. Rooney

Springf'd Republican p11C O 19 '52 250w

Time 60:128 N 10 '52 460w

Reviewed by F. C. Flint

Yale R n s 42:299 winter '53 600w

AIRY, ANNA. Making a start in art. (How to do it ser) 95p pl col pl $5 Studio

741 Drawing—Instruction, Painting 52-7389

"To help the novice make a start, this professional artist places herself in his position and tries to answer those questions which arise as he begins to work. She stresses the importance of Construction, Proportion, Action, and Character and warns that thoughtful observation and untiring application are required of the successful artist. Illustrations include full-color reproductions of water colors by some of the foremost English artists." School Arts

"For the beginner it is often difficult to select the best works [and who is to say what are the best?] but to this reader, who has done some painting and drawing, this work, while honest and well thought out, seems to lack some of the strength and enthusiasm that the beginner needs in large and frequent doses." Gary Sheahan

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ap 27 '52 100w

Kirkus 20:185 Mr 1 '52 150w

School Arts 52:14a S '52 60w

AISTROP, JACK BENTLEY. Fun at the zoo.

[Eng title: Every child's book of zoo favorites]. 190p il $2.75 Roy pubs.

590 Animals

52-303

An anecdotal guidebook for those who like animals and zoos. The author, an English naturalist now living in New York, imagines a very fine modern zoo, and describes its animals, their native habitats, and habits and behavior. No index.

Bookmark 11:134 Mr '52

Reviewed by E. C. Ince

Christian Science Monitor p13 F 21 '52 80w

"Mr. Aistrop's passionate love for animals shines through on every page in a manner most appealing to children."

+ Kirkus 19:662 N 15 '51 210w

"Since there is no index and the animals are grouped in an unexpected fashion, the book's main uses will be for inspiration and enjoyment. Sixteen pages of photographs are grouped together. Would have to be read to children under twelve." N. S. Chasteen

Library J 77:68 Ja 1 '52 80w

"Mr. Aistrop is very able at mingling basic facts with thrilling stories and amusing incidents. It is a book to read both before and after a zoo visit... But his recommendations do not include many books in this field done recently in America. We suspect that he does not disapprove them but does not know them." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ja 6 '52 180w

"Mr. Aistrop's enthusiasm for all forms of animal life is contagious and will very likely spur readers to further investigation, which is one of the functions of a factual book. An index would have been helpful." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p13 D 30 '51 110w

ALBERTINI, LUIGI. Origins of the war of 1914; tr. and ed. by Isabella M. Massey; 3v; v. 1, European relations from the Congress of Berlin to the eve of the Sarajevo murder. 612p maps $9 Oxford

940.31 European war, 1914-1918—Causes

(52-12126)

"During his active life Luigi Albertini won fame as a journalist and politician. He edited Italy's best-informed newspaper, the Corriere della Sera, from 1900 to 1921, entered the Italian Senate in 1914, and served as a delegate to the Washington Conference in 1922. When opposition to Mussolini virtually ended his political career in 1925 he delved into the diplomatic events that led to World War I. His monumental treatise was almost complete when he died in 1941, and a collaborator, Luciano Magrini, supervised its publication in 1942-'43." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

"It would be an unreasonable complaint that this is a work of 'pure' diplomatic history. . . It would even be unreasonable to complain that the book is too long. Who wants to read a history of six hundred pages unless it has some flash and sparkle? It is, however, reasonable to complain that, even accepted as a lengthy work of diplomatic history, it is not good enough. Every historian looks out from his own study window, but he ought to conceal this. As it is, this book would be better entitled 'The Origins of the War of 1914 so far as they concerned Italy.' . . This book is well translated and elegantly printed; both translator and printer could have been better employed." A. J. P. Taylor

— Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 8 '52 500w

"The value of Albertini's master-work lies in its exhaustive detail, its consistency, its objectivity." Geoffrey Bruun

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 S 14 '52 1100w

"The tedium of this book is almost unrelieved by any fresh approach or inspired interpretation. It must not, of course, be left out of account that it was published ten years ago in the original Italian and that most of the sources to which it refers are books published before 1930. . . It may be hoped that the two volumes which are to follow this one, and which deal with the Sarajevo crisis itself, will contribute something more positive to the knowledge of students of this period."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p611 S 19 '52 850w

ALBRAND, MARTHA, pseud. See Loewengard, H. H. F.

ALDANOV, MARK, pseud. See Landau, M. A.

ALDIS, MRS DOROTHY (KEELEY). All together; a child's treasury of verse; il. by Helen D. Jameson [and others]. 192p $3 Putnam

811 Children's poetry 52-9826

Contains selections from previously published volumes, Everything and Anything; Here, There and Everywhere; Hop, Skip and Jump; Before Things Happen; with ten new poems never published in book form.

Booklist 49:76 O 15 '52

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 N 10 '52 30w

"These are poems that the author herself has chosen from her store and they are the ones that have been most loved through the years. The joy of childhood lies within these pages, and the pathos; the magic and the energy." Elizabeth Yates

+ Christian Science Monitor p8 O 16 '52 160w

Commonweal 57:174 N 21 '52 20w

Horn Bk 28:418 D '52 40w

"While not immortal verse like A. A. Milne, they have something of that character, somewhat sugared down, less tart, less humorous. But they have a nice friendly quality that endears them to small listeners, and makes them easy to learn."

+ Kirkus 20:656 O 1 '52 80w

"Recommended specially for the enjoyment of the 4-7-year-olds." H. E. Walker

+ Library J 77:1817 O 15 '52 40w

"Any new tribute to Mrs. Aldis' understanding of small children will seem repetitious. We found that a re-reading in this format brought increased admiration for her special skill." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p3 N 16 '52 140w

"A collection of almost a hundred and fifty ingratiating little verses by a poet whose freshness and innocence have been delighting children for a generation or so."

+ New Yorker 28:202 D 6 '52 60w

"Attractive and delightful volume."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 N 30 '52 130w

ALDRICH, MRS MARY (MCCAQUE). Too many pets; il. by Barbara Cooney. 66p $2 Macmillan

52-8556

The Gay family were always acquiring pets. They had several kinds from angieworms to dogs. Father Gay tried to put his foot down by saying "No more pets," but it did not work; more and more pets came. Finally Father himself brought home—a pair of guinea pigs. Ages 6 to 9.

Reviewed by M. F. Kieran

Atlantic 189:86 Je '52 90w

Booklist 48:284 My 1 '52

Bookmark 11:186 My '52

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 Ap 27 '52 120w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Yates

Christian Science Monitor p10 My 15 '52 70w

Horn Bk 28:98 Ap '52 90w

Kirkus 20:69 F 1 '52 90w

"Good family atmosphere. Third- and fourth-graders can read this for themselves. Younger children will like it if read to them. Recommended." D. M. Blasco

+ Library J 77:725 Ap 15 '52 80w

"This will please young listeners very much. . . The gentle realism of the writing and the family portraits make us feel it all must have truly happened. Miss Cooney's pictures are very engaging." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 My 11 '52 130w

"A delightful series of stories, fresh and funny." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p32 Ap 6 '52 130w

Sat R 35:62 My 10 '52 60w

Springf'd Republican p9D My 25 '52 50w

ALDRIDGE, JOHN WATSON, comp. Critiques and essays on modern fiction, 1920-1951; representing the achievement of modern American and British critics; with a foreword by Mark Schorer. 610p $6 Ronald

808.3 Fiction—Technique. American fiction

—History and criticism. English fiction—

History and criticism 52-6180

"Prof. Aldridge of the University of Vermont's English department has assembled a most useful collection of essays on novelists in general with a full bibliography by R. W. Stallman. No index!" Library J

"Recommended to university and larger public libraries." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 77:717 Ap 15 '52 140w

"As might be expected of an adaptation for the university classroom, the book is a little constricted; and most readers of such critical essays as the ones chosen will not like to think of themselves as being thereby 'exposed' to critical literature. But the editor has managed his double purpose with a great deal of tact." Rudd Fleming

+ New Repub 127:21 Ag 11 '52 850w

Reviewed by G. F. Whicher

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ag 17 '52 140w

"Though one anthology of modern essays resembles the next, Mr. Aldridge has obviously attempted to use some of the fresher texts and has succeeded, within the limitations of the subject-matter, in breaking up the monopolists. . . An eminently successful job, and a volume to have on the shelf in the study." Harvey Breit

+ N Y Times p28 My 18 '52 180w

ALEICHEM, SHOLOM, pseud. See Rabinowitz, S.

ALEXANDER, ROBERT JACKSON. Perón era, 239p $3.50 Columbia univ. press 982 Argentina—Politics and government.
Perón, Juan Domingo 51-13537
For descriptive note see Annual for 1951.

"This is a valuable volume, based upon documentary sources and numerous personal interviews. It was needed. It probably lacks sufficient feeling for the people with whom it deals, and exceptions could be taken to a number of the interpretations. But it succeeds in making its point that two cunning and ambitious demagogues have created in Argentina a totalitarian state which would if unopposed rapidly infect a major part of our hemisphere." J. J. Johnson

+ Am Hist R 57:716 Ap '52 750w

"The reader is left without a grasp of the sweep of history or the broader contexts endowing Peronism with life and meaning. Academicians may feel constrained by their respective disciplines to forego expecting the book to capture the tense human drama and the charged atmosphere of the 'new Argentina.' However, if Alexander's principal purpose is to present us with a carefully and handily organized digest of more recent Argentine events, The Perón Era serves that purpose well." G. I. Blanksten

+ Am Pol Sci R 46:587 Je '52 550w

"The Perón Era's chief value lies in its timeliness; it examines an era still in the making. It is interesting and informative. Unfortunately, the volume includes little documentation and historical background. The book deals more with Perón than with a definitive analysis of the era and of the entire social movement within which Peronismo was able to develop." John Biesanz

+ Am Soc R 17:128 F '52 180w

"Perhaps the chief difficulty with this book is that it seems to aim at no particular group of readers. For the man in the street it seems to lack the flair of the professional journalist. . . Facts are presented simply as facts, with no attempt to emphasize the picturesque. But for the specialist the book has other defects. The story that it presents is already well known to students of Latin American affairs. Moreover, there is an almost complete lack of documentation. . . The weakest part of the book is probably the short and entirely unnecessary 'postscriptum,' which has apparently been added for the purpose of enabling the author to end with a flourish." A. F. MacDonald

— Ann Am Acad 279:243 Ja '52 450w

Current Hist 22:168 Mr '52 200w

Foreign Affairs 30:509 Ap '52 10w

Manchester Guardian p4 Ag 22 '52 300w

"Professor Alexander's book is the first coherent study of these events to appear in this country. He has visited Argentina, and has a wide personal and academic knowledge of Argentine problems. His book is lively, sensible and extremely well arranged." Norman MacKenzie

+ New Statesman & Nation 44:190 Ag 16 '52 390w

New Yorker 27:87 Ja 19 '52 180w

Reviewed by Geoffrey Bruun

Sat R 35:31 F 9 '52 250w

Times [London] Lit Sup p607 S 19 '52 700w

"The most important study of Perón and his system of government yet produced."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:52 Mr '52 260w

ALEXANDER, SIDNEY. Celluloid asylum. 377p $3.50 Bobbs

51-14072

A first novel dealing with movie making in Italy. A young American and his wife on a year's vacation in Italy get involved with a shady company making a film. The money tempts the American, Adam David, and for a time he plays along with the company, until he realizes he is losing both his wife and his ability as a writer.

"Despite a tendency to purple or 'poetic' passages in the sex sequences, it is admirably written. For anyone who has touched motion pictures, even if only by way of fan magazines, it is fascinating reading. Recommended for large cinema and theatre collections and for paid circulation collections." George Fredeley

+ Library J 76:2116 D 15 '51 80w

"Sidney Alexander for a decade has written with lively distinction, unattended by any great fanfare, some short stories, some verse plays and translation, and two or three books of poems. Now at thirty-nine he publishes his first novel, a very good one. . . He manages all this with some melodrama, a good deal of obtrusive symbolism, an admirably objective wisdom." W. T. Scott

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 N 11 '51 550w

"The basic situation could have been amusing, but Alexander preferred to devote himself chiefly to the lofty moral struggle between his writer-hero and a large sum of money. Morals finally win, but the story's amusement value is smothered by the pretensions of both plot and style." W. F. Weaver

N Y Times p10 D 23 '51 130w

San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ja 13 '52 200w

"Mr. Alexander is by no means untalented, and if he lacks a sense of style he substitutes intensity and vividness. Yet his book is dull—although now and then the proceedings become so bizarre as to take on a quality of sensationalism—and often embarrassing in the writing. I think there are some clear reasons for this unfortunate result. Certainly one of them is that Mr. Alexander has nothing to say here that has not been said before, nor does he say it better." Hollis Alpert

Sat R of Lit 34:20 D 15 '51 700w

ALFREY, TURNER, and others. Copolymerization. (High polymers; a series of monographs, v8) 279p il $6.80 Interscience

547.013 [541.7] Polymers and polymerization 51-13733

"A monographic survey of the development and present state of the knowledge of copolymerization, a complex chemical process that is basic to the synthetic rubber and plastics industries. The emphasis is on the scientific foundations, and applications are mentioned only incidentally. The book is addressed to graduate chemists. Bibliographies which include some patent citations are appended to the chapters." N Y New Tech Bks

"In general, what the authors have produced is a comprehensive piece of work covering the basic principles of the copolymerization reaction, written in a clear and readable style, and with adequate introduction to each topic to orient the more general reader. It should not only be a valuable reference book for workers in the field of high polymers, but also easy and rewarding reading for anyone interested in the more general field of organic free radical reactions." Cheves Walling

+ Am Chem Soc J 74:4475 S 5 '52 600w

"This is an especially desirable and useful book for those who are interested in this field." H. L. Fisher

+ Chem & Eng N 30:2334 Je 2 '52 250w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 77:823 My 15 '52 10w

N Y New Tech Bks 37:25 Mr '52

"The book is strongly urged to the attention of the worker in the polymer field and also of the organic and physical chemist specializing in other branches."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:205 Je '52 230w

ALLAN, TED, and GORDON, SYDNEY. The scalpel, the sword; the story of Dr Norman Bethune. 336p $5 Little

B or 92 Bethune, Norman 52-5015

"The title symbolizes two major phases in the career of Dr. Norman Bethune (1890-1939), the Canadian subject of this comprehensive biography. From a medical viewpoint, he was internationally famous for his operative techniques in thoracic surgery; from a social standpoint, he was a romantic idealist who lent his skill to the Spanish Loyalists in 1936 and brought modern medicine and hygiene to the Chinese guerrillas in 1938. Today, Communist China (a quarter of the human race) reveres and memorializes this stormy petrel as 'the foreign saint.'" (Library J) Index.

Booklist 49:30 S 15 '52

"When I consented, over the telephone, to review this book, I did not know what I was letting myself in for. One look shows that it was obviously written to bolster up Communism, and I am hence returning it. . . No, I won't review the book, because I feel I cannot do it fairly." Jacob Markowitz

Canadian Forum 32:185 N '52 220w

"No cold scientist here but a real person and a real story."

+ Kirkus 20:525 Ag 15 '52 240w

"An absorbing study of a restless medical genius sacrificing himself for social justice." J. M. Scherr

+ Library J 77:1392 S 1 '52 80w

Reviewed by Frances Witherspoon

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p24 O 26 '52 500w

"This book makes only fair reading, despite the clear picture of the dedicated doctor which emerges. This is partly because of the highly one-sided, left-wing approach, but more because the material is dated." F. L. Kluckhohn

N Y Times p49 N 30 '52 360w

"This biography is sympathetic to both its hero and his beliefs, but it is no tract and it presents a remarkable man who saw in Fascism and imperialism the basic causes of the diseases he had spent a lifetime treating, as he said, 'on the surface.'"

+ New Yorker 28:117 S 27 '52 230w

"At other times in his short career (he died at forty-nine) this extraordinary man had been called everything from an idealist to a demon. His biography, written with admirable warmth and scientific precision by two fellow Canadians, goes a long way toward explaining the paradox of a man who was at once misunderstood and worshiped." Marguerite Clark

+ Sat R 35:39 N 8 '52 750w

Springfd Republican p35A N 16 '52 100w

ALLEN, ALLYN, pseud. Real book about the Texas rangers; il. by C. L. Hartman. (Real bks. ser) 192p $1.25 Garden City bks.

976.4 Texas rangers—Juvenile literature. Frontier and pioneer life—Texas 52-7608

"A Texas writer looks at the Texas ranger in a large-print, swift-moving book from the 'Real Book' series edited by Helen Hoke. This particular title, aimed at the eight-to-twelve-year-olds, will be sure to win friends, especially in Texas. Ranger history and individual rangers are brought out in the nine chapters." Library J

"Sure to please."

+ Kirkus 19:703 D 15 '51 150w

"Non-fiction with the pace of fiction." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 77:726 Ap 15 '52 50w

Reviewed by M. E. Martignoni

+ N Y Times p18 Je 29 '52 20w

ALLEN, DAVID D. Nature of gambling. 249p $3.50 Coward-McCann

177 [174.6] Gambling 52-11703

"Some serious reflections on what gambling means for society and what can be done about it, reasoned through with severe logic and buttressed with evidence from psychology, anthropology, and history. The author answers in the affirmative his questions about whether gambling is natural, harmful, and capable of being suppressed, before he proceeds to a full-scale history of gambling in the U.S., a review of the arguments against it, and an outline of his strategy to eliminate it." Booklist

Booklist 49:82 N 1 '52

Bookmark 12:51 D '52 20w

Reviewed by L. T. Heron

Chicago Sunday Tribune p26 N 16 '52 130w

Kirkus 20:481 Ag 1 '52 140w

"Whether you agree with him will depend on your own point of view; conservatives will think he goes too far, and radicals, not far enough. But even if you don't accept his general thesis, you will find his book an irresistible storehouse of half-forgotten details of fifty years of American life." Bruce Bliven

+ New Repub 127:20 N 10 '52 700w

"This is not nearly as tough reading as it sounds. Mr. Allen uses little jargon, keeps his line of argument sharp and lawyerlike, as clear as though he were talking to a jury—which, of course he is. How the jury of American public opinion eventually reacts will be the long-range answer to the gambling problem. Mr. Allen's book is at least the opening argument in the trial, and a soundly presented one." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 S 24 '52 650w

ALLEN, EDWARD LAWRENCE. Economics of American manufacturing. 566p il $6.95 Holt

338.4 Industry 52-7011

"This is a study of the basic industries in the United States within five general categories, as follows: basic metals group, basic non-metallic group, metalworking group, textile and leather group, consumer goods group. Each industry is analyzed as to size, ownership, pricing policies, export-import policies, technological development, relations with the government, etc. The text is liberally illustrated with charts and graphs." (Current Hist) Selected bibliography. Index.

Booklist 48:351 Jl 1 '52

Current Hist 23:272 O '52 40w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross

Library J 77:2000 N 15 '52 60w

Management R 41:771 N '52 30w

ALLEN, FLORENCE ELLINWOOD. Treaty as an instrument of legislation. (Kappa delta pi lecture ser) 114p $1.75 Macmillan

341.2 Treaties. International law 52-1404

"In her analysis of the situation as it now exists in its relation to international law, Judge Allen sees confusion in the activities of the United Nations and its agencies as they relate to member states, and discerns a tendency in the agencies to place their mandates above those of the law-making bodies of the countries themselves, thereby interfering in domestic matters which are not properly within their powers. She sees the need for a government of laws, not of men, and points out the necessity for a legal body, e.g. the International Court of Justice, to resolve conflicts between the individual countries and the United Nations." Intro

Reviewed by Quincy Wright

Ann Am Acad 282:134 Jl '52 750w

School & Society 75:237 Ap 12 '52 30w

ALLEN, FREDERICK LEWIS. Big change; America transforms itself: 1900-1950. 308p $3.50 Harper

973.91 U.S.—Economic conditions. U.S.—Social conditions. National characteristics, American 52-8455

"Mr. Allen is of the opinion that there has been a great change in the United States in the 50 years from 1900-1950. He maintains that those critical and those in favor of the American Way of Life speak in clichés of things which no longer exist and proceeds to prove his point. Somewhat in the way of Only Yesterday the author picks up his story in 1900 and develops a picture in full perspective to show the transformation most clearly." (Library J) Index.

ALLEN, F. L.—Continued

Reviewed by Edward Weeks
+ Atlantic 190:86 D '52 800w
Booklist 49:25; 30 S 15 '52

"The Big Change" is an exciting book, one which should make contemporary Americans proud of being a people who, despite internal and external pressures, have emerged, even if reluctantly, as the destined leaders of the world." Fanny Butcher
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 N 2 '52 600w

"It is important for Americans to understand their commitment to sound social change. Mr. Allen writes the history well." E. D. Canham
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 O 30 '52 900w

Kirkus 20:391 J1 1 '52 240w

"Recommended." H. L. Roth
+ Library J 77:1393 S 1 '52 120w

"The Big Change" is completely successful only at the level of high-grade journalism. . . It might seem carping to criticize 'The Big Change' for not being the kind of book that Mr. Allen had not intended to write in the first place. It is worth repeating, therefore, that it is a mellow and thoroughly charming volume which tells the story of the changing American scene with humor and affection." Peter Gay

+ Nation 175:451 N 15 '52 450w

Reviewed by Walter Allen
New Statesman & Nation 44:580 N 15 '52 300w

"A book that is pleasant without being optimistic to the point of lunacy. Some, doubtless, will denounce him as a Pollyanna; but only those who have missed his most important point." G. W. Johnson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 N 2 '52 1100w

"The charm and cogency of Mr. Allen's work depend almost entirely upon the reader's saying to himself on every other page, 'I remember, yes, it was like that.' As long as he stays on the level of the graphic and the recognizable he is a master historical journalist, for on that level he sees what is worthy of note and notes it well. . . However, Mr. Allen tries to do more than see. . . The mark of Mr. Allen's excellence as an observer and writer is that he always maintains the interest of surface detail." C. W. Mills

+ N Y Times p3 N 2 '52 1450w

"The book is more tendentious than his earlier histories, but it takes full advantage of his highly developed talent for dealing with the past as though it were a capricious offspring of the present. . . It is all as entertaining as it is rosy." R. H. Rovere

New Yorker 28:54 Ja 3 '53 370w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p14 O 26 '52 1050w

Reviewed by J. D. Hicks
Sat R 35:11 N 1 '52 1500w

Reviewed by Donald Derby
Springf'd Republican p8C N 9 '52 400w

Reviewed by Carl Bridenbaugh
Yale R n s 42:282 winter '53 550w

ALLEN, IDA COGSWELL (BAILEY) (MRS W. B. CHAPMAN). Solving the high cost of eating; a cookbook to live by. 545p $3.95 Farrar, Straus

641.5 Cookery 52-6979

"Up-to-the-minute 'cookbook to live by,' giving recipes for inexpensive foods with good nutritive value. Index." Bookmark

Booklist 48:291 My 15 '52

Bookmark 11:179 My '52 20w

"Ida Bailey Allen is no Johnny-come-lately in the field of home economics. For 25 years she has been studying and writing about food, and this is her 45th cookbook. 'Solving the High Cost of Eating' is full of excellent nutritional information." Morrison Wood

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 My 18 '52 200w

"For housewives, rather than hostesses, this is a practical and practicable guide." + Kirkus 20:173 Mr 1 '52 140w

Reviewed by K. T. Willis
Library J 77:1201 J1 '52 30w

"That such a program requires more care and more cooking cannot be denied, but there is no doubt that Dr. Allen's method will work if one will make the effort to carry it out. If some of the fun and flair of cooking is missing there is the real satisfaction of saving money, and no one, I wager, will want his money back." Charlotte Turgeon
+ N Y Times p30 My 25 '52 130w

ALLEN, JAMES STEWART. Atomic imperialism; the state, monopoly, and the bomb. 288p $3.25 Int. pubs.

338.27 Atomic bomb. Atomic energy 52-9123

"Briefly stated, the thesis of Atomic Imperialism is that the present atomic energy policy and program of the United States represents the merger of State and monopoly at the highest possible national level. . . and that this corporate state 'serves as the principal base of reaction with a fascist orientation and as the center of war incitement,' marked by the massing of atomic weapons and the threat to use them for the realization of imperialist objectives." (Ann Am Acad) Index.

Am Pol Sci R 46:899 S '52 10w

"It is not necessarily definitive of the nature and substance of this interesting volume that, out of a personal index of over 200 names, he mentions only a few with warm and unqualified approval, among them Andrei A. Gromyko, A. Y. Vishinsky, Josef V. Stalin, and Frédéric Joliot-Curie; but it is unavoidably illuminating." J. M. McCullough

Ann Am Acad 282:123 J1 '52 450w

ALLEN, JOHN HOUGHTON. Southwest; ill. by Paul Laune. 220p $3.50 Lippincott

976.4 [917.64] Frontier and pioneer life—Texas. Texas—Social life and customs 52-5047

"John Houghton Allen writes of the tortuous brush and prickly pear world that lies in the sun north of the Rio Grande between Laredo and the Gulf of Mexico. Sad because the men and the land of today don't measure up to the glories of boyhood memories, the author sees the region as a brutal country, a dead world in which the people have gone sour. . . In his youth around camp fires deep in the brush he heard tales from old men and young adventurers. He has retold the stories—of bold vaqueros, of revolutionaries, of alluring señoritas, of hot blood and honor—in poetic prose that captures and holds the mood and intensity of the border and its pastoral people." N Y Times

Booklist 48:294 My 15 '52

"His nostalgia is obsessive. It is significant that, as he goes on, his chapters deal with tall tales and drunkards' dreams. But with all its high color, lack of continuity, and straining for effect, the book has charm. He has put a ravishing beauty or a cruel killer in almost every chapter. Few of his characters are admirable, but they are generally striking, and their fights, adventures, and sufferings arouse unflinching compassion." Stanley Vestal

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 My 4 '52 190w

Kirkus 20:23 Ja 1 '52 160w

"Full of nostalgia and saturated with bitterness, this is another lament of the passing of the 'good old days,' of latter-day barbarism in the raw cow-country; the question (useless to put to a poet) is, did they really exist? Uneven, melodramatic, poesy but worth a look." R. H. Dillon

+ Library J 77:524 Mr 15 '52 110w

"This is an unequal book, a kind of book that could never be wholly accomplished. Even what some would call unrealities in it express the quivering reality of a man's innermost goings-out to life. And it leaves an echo in the sense." J. F. Doble

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 J1 13 '52 600w

"This is not a routine fare of blood and thunder but a collection of artistically drawn sketches of border Mexicans, with a background of Spanish blood and Spanish music. Allen knows Mexicans and he has drawn their character with revealing clarity. One wonders why such an excellent story-teller waited until his forty-third year to write his first book."

Lewis Nordyke

+ N Y Times p16 My 4 '52 500w

"Mr. Allen is in possession—although perhaps not quite in full possession—of a style that is bitterly poetic, somewhat amateurish, and totally unpredictable; occasionally his book sounds as if it had been written by a cowboy Céline. The author can tell a story very well when he pares away the nonsense, a fact he proves with a tale about a memorable bullfight in Nuevo Laredo."

+ New Yorker 28:141 My 10 '52 140w

"Although his writing tends to be a bit flamboyant now and then, one is tempted to say that writing is what he ought to have been doing all along. For whatever Mr. Allen's style may lack in finish is more than balanced by the vigorous life that pours through his chapters. Here is a man writing about something he knows intimately, and setting it all down as he saw it." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ap 29 '52 800w

Reviewed by J. F. Doble

Yale R n s 41:612 summer '52 280w

ALLEN, MERRITT PARMELEE. Johnny Reb; decorations by Ralph Ray, jr. 250p $2.75 Longmans

52-5635

A realistic story of the Civil war for older boys and girls. The hero is an orphan of Northern parentage who had been living in South Carolina, at the mercy of two scoundrels. At the beginning of the war he joined the cavalry legion led by Wade Hampton and fought with him to the end of the war.

Booklist 48:252 Ap 1 '52

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 Mr 23 '52 160w

"This is more than passing fair historical fiction, with rip-snortin' action, lively dialogue, and inconspicuous but potent historical trimmings."

+ Kirkus 20:2 Ja 1 '52 160w

"Well-written companion book to the author's White Feather." Elizabeth Burr

+ Library J 77:604 Ap 1 '52 80w

"In a vigorous manly historical tale, Mr. Allen brings Civil War days very much alive."

L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 My 11 '52 190w

"A Vermonter himself, Mr. Allen has written his story of South Carolina's Wade Hampton and his Confederate legion with justice and fairness to North and South. Stressing the decency and courage of the soldiers of both sides, he tells a well-paced story of the Brothers' War." Marjorie Burger

+ N Y Times p22 Mr 9 '52 120w

"This story of the Civil War for older boys and girls is lightened by the humor, the lively dialogue, and the skilful characterization that we expect from Merritt Allen."

+ Sat R 35:48 Mr 22 '52 110w

School & Society 75:140 Mr 1 '52 20w

"This is a grimly realistic yet altogether sympathetic story of the Civil War. . . . Contemporary young people will find much food for thought and many situations which parallel today's problems."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:257 S '52 100w

Wis Lib Bul 48:98 Mr '52

ALLINGHAM, MARGERY (MRS P. YOUNGMAN CARTER). Tiger in the smoke. 254p $2.75 Doubleday

52-10048

Mystery story.

Booklist 49:69 O 15 '52

Bookmark 12:10 O '52

"Plus mystery market."

+ Kirkus 20:381 J1 1 '52 160w

"That is the kind of meat that Edgar Wallace thrived on. But Miss Allingham lacks the masculine cut and thrust of the old master."

Ralph Partridge

New Statesman & Nation 44:218 Ag 23 '52 120w

"Miss Allingham is quite expert to have it one way or the other, thriller or novel. But she hasn't been quite clever enough to bring it off in this wise. Still, it's a failure that nearly all of her many admirers will want to meet anyway." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ag 24 '52 280w

"If Tiger in the Smoke is not the finest flower of all the year's garden, it is definitely a flower and not a weed. Indeed, it is a splendid, gaudy, extravagant bloom, guaranteed to please." Phyllis McGinley

+ N Y Times p26 S 7 '52 380w

"It can hardly be said that the book is one of her major achievements."

New Yorker 28:156 O 25 '52 120w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p26 S 14 '52 80w

"The resemblance between Margery Allingham and Charles Dickens, while not to be pushed too far, is becoming increasingly pronounced. Like him, she is unable to create heroes and heroines save in terms of static idealisations, has an infinite capacity for conveying the essence of varied eccentricity in supporting characters, and is absorbed by the macabre possibilities of London, its architecture and its underworld. . . . In The Tiger in the Smoke, as in More Work for The Undertaker, the mystery is of the sort that Dickens delighted to work with and we to read." Marghanita Laski

+ Spec 189:46 J1 4 '52 100w

Spring'd Republican p16C S 14 '52 100w

"Miss Allingham has tried hard to write a really superior thriller, one in which the characters and their motives are as round and deep as those we might hope to find in a serious novel as opposed to an entertainment. She has not succeeded—perhaps because she has tried too hard—but the result, if rather like an unevenly baked cake in which there are too many different kinds of fruit, is at least above the crime fiction average."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p497 Ag 1 '52 200w

ALLIS, MARGUERITE. Now we are free. 307p $3.50 Putnam

52-5264

"Retells a significant chapter in the Connecticut story, the mass migrations to the rich homesteads of the Western Reserve, a movement that began in the decades after the Revolution and threatened, for a time, to empty the towns and farmlands of their population. . . . The novel centers on the doings of six young soldiers who return to their war-pinched homes at the end of the Revolution—and tells how all but one decide to go West and grow up with the land." N Y Times

Booklist 48:214 Mr 1 '52

"Essentially a 'popular' novel, 'Now We Are Free' will appeal to a good many people who are weary of the experimentalist tendencies of much contemporary fiction." Edward Wagenknecht

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 F 3 '52 480w

Reviewed by J. C. Worley

Christian Science Monitor p7 F 28 '52 230w

ALLIS, MARGUERITE—Continued

"While not lacking in romance, we found this more stimulating as history, tackling the matter of the separation of Church and State in a manner most illuminating in the present recrudescence of that ancient problem, as well as graphically relating the hardships of early settlers to the Ohio. . . . An historical yet timely tale." R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 77:48 Ja 1 '52 110w

"Miss Allis presents her story in orderly and thorough fashion. Like an experienced seamstress, she selects her pattern, chooses the material, and finishes her task neatly and without waste. Her style has no velvet richness, no taffeta shimmer, it is just serviceable serge." Lisle Bell
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 F 3 '52 350w

Reviewed by Andrea Parke
N Y Times p23 F 3 '52 320w

"There are some good scenes along the way but the general effect is of earnest good intentions set down in a rather plodding prose."
Sat R 35:17 Mr 8 '52 120w
Springf'd Republican p7D Ap 13 '52 320w

ALLYN, RUBE. Water wagon; through Florida, waterways by scow and outboard motor. 242p il maps $3.50 Farrar, Straus 975.9 [917.59] Boats and boating. Florida.
—Description and travel 52-5794

"Fulfilling a dream conceived during the war, the author had a completely new type of boat built—a sort of piano box affair with all the conveniences of home in condensed form. Propelled by two Evinrudes, it has an overhanging deck which provides space equivalent to that of a 40 foot boat; a built-in trailer cradle makes the vessel maneuverable on land as well as water. This is the record of the 'Best Bet' and her shake-down cruises in and around Florida." Library J

Booklist 48:319 Je 1 '52
Kirkus 20:20 Ja 1 '52 170w

Reviewed by W. K. Harrison
Library J 77:900 My 15 '52 80w

ALMEDINGEN, MARTHA EDITH VON. Late arrival. 368p $4 Westminster press
B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc.

A book of reminiscences, in which the author of Golden Sequence (Book Review Digest 1949) and other novels begins with her arrival in Italy from Russia in 1922. She describes her year with an aristocratic, poverty-stricken aunt, and her later life in England.

Booklist 49:1; 11 S 1 '52

"This is a work of quiet unpretentious literary and psychological beauty and distinction." W. H. Chamberlin
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 O 26 '52 350w

"It is often difficult reading, dragging at times, irritating at others, but—in the main—rewarding, revealing."
+ Kirkus 20:530 Ag 15 '52 340w

"Recommended." H. A. Wooster
+ Library J 77:1645 O 1 '52 60w

"Miss Almedingen has much to distinguish her and set her book apart. Her mind is unusually well furnished, her eyes and ears sharp, the fires of her emotion banked. She has the extra-sensory perceptions of a born writer. She knows how to imprint the scene, the character upon your memory. Above all, she can write of herself without self-justification or self-love and thus reveals, quite unwittingly I believe, her uncommon stature." Virginia Peterson
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 N 9 '52 500w

"Here is that rare thing among first-person stories—a nonegotistic autobiography, written with the craftsmanship of a skilled novelist." Anzia Yezierska
+ N Y Times p34 N 23 '52 500w

"The impact of Rome on a sensitive girl, is handled with great skill, but when Miss Almedingen goes on to tell about her later vicissitudes in London (she became enamored of that city, and established herself as a writer there), she sounds like quite another, and far less perceptive, person. Her ability to communicate the feel of a place is undiminished, but she is unable to discipline her enthusiasm for such relatively familiar types as motherly charladies, dilapidated boarding-house keepers, and tearoom acquaintances."
+ New Yorker 28:154 O 25 '52 130w

ALTER, DINSMORE, and CLEMINSHAW, CLARENCE HIGBEE. Pictorial astronomy. 296p il $4.50 Crowell

520 Astronomy 52-7375

"It begins with a description of the sun, follows with a chapter on the earth, its atmosphere, its seasons, and its basis for reckoning time; and presents in a fascinating manner the known facts about the moon and the tides. Eclipses, planets, comets, meteors, stars, and nebulae are discussed in detail in the book, which is illustrated with charts and reproductions of photographs." (Chicago Sunday Tribune) Index.

Booklist 49:5 S 1 '52

"For those countless persons who have wondered about the vastness of space and the heavenly bodies therein this new volume on astronomy answers virtually all of their questions. It is a book designed for the layman's reading, as it tells the story of the skies in terms that are easily understood." J. A. Menaugh

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 Ag 24 '52 110w

"As members of the staff of the Griffith Observatory, [the authors] have written with the authority of specialists. Yet their style is simple, for the book is aimed at the non-scientific reader. Salient features of the text are set forth in several dozen illustrations and photographic plates. These range from diagrams of the tide raising forces of the moon to photographic portraits of distant nebulae. The book would be valuable for their sake alone." R. C. Cowen

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 21 '52 340w

San Francisco Chronicle p6 N 30 '52 80w

AMBLER, ERIC. Epitaph for a spy; with a footnote by the author. 259p $3 Knopf 51-13217

This story of international intrigue, by the author of A Coffin for Dimitrios, was written in 1938 and published in England at that time, but this is the first American edition.

Booklist 48:322 Je 1 '52

Reviewed by Milton Crane
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Mr 23 '52 440w

+ Kirkus 20:17 Ja 1 '52 110w

"Vadassy himself is excellently realized and the others in various degrees. Once, before the final pull-up, the whole drags a bit. But this is a tale well worth acquaintance. The author's footnote deprecates it as an early work (1938) but readers will recognize it as good Ambler still." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p19 Mr 23 '52 270w

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch
N Y Times p4 Mr 16 '52 900w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p21 Mr 30 '52 100w

"Good." Sergeant Cuff
+ Sat R 35:45 Mr 22 '52 30w
Springf'd Republican p8D My 11 '52 80w

AMBLER, ERIC, and RODDA, CHARLES.
See Reed, E., pseud.

AMERICAN BOY (periodical). American boy adventure stories; selected by Cecile Matschat and Carl Carmer; il. by Norman Guthrie Rudolph. 367p $3.50 Winston

52-5490

Sixteen stories reprinted from American Boy. Partial contents: They kept the flag there, by N. H. Swanson; A message to the Camel corps, by W. H. Miller; The white leopard, by Inglis Fletcher; Jungle brothers, by Kenneth Gilbert; Horses and men, by L. Y. Erkin; Tell it to the Marines, by F. N. Litten; Tarpon! by Vereen Bell; The man on Stormrift mountain, by P. N. Strong.

Booklist 48:383 J1 15 '52

Kirkus 20:282 My 1 '52 130w

"Full of thrills for boys of eleven to about fifteen." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Ag 3 '52 150w

AMERICAN FOLK-LORE SOCIETY. Folklore for children. See Ramsey, E., and Howard, D. M., comps.

AMERICAN INSTITUTE OF ACCOUNTANTS. See Study group on business income. Changing concepts of business income.

AMERICAN LIBRARY ASSOCIATION. American library resources; a bibliographical guide; Robert B. Downs, director; sponsored by the Association board on resources of American libraries [proc]. 428p $7 A.L.A.

016.016 Bibliography—Bibliography. Libraries—U.S. 51-11156

For descriptive note see Annual for 1951.

"Robert B. Downs, Director of the University of Illinois Library, has provided the scholarly work with an invaluable practical bibliography of published accounts of the resources of American libraries. . . It is the hope of this reviewer that Mr. Downs will keep his good work current and that supplements to this excellent comprehensive bibliographical guide to American library resources will be forthcoming. May it also stimulate those libraries and other institutions which have been inactive in publishing accounts of their resources and which are, therefore, not represented to advantage in this work." J. H. Ottemiller

+ Library J 77:517 Mr 15 '52 700w

"Those who know Mr. Downs's earlier books, Resources of Southern Libraries (1938) and Resources of New York City Libraries (1949), might, upon seeing this new and similar title, conclude that it, too, is a descriptive survey and not a bibliography of surveys. . . Yet one can hardly quibble about a misleading title, since, in the final analysis, Mr. Downs's excellent compilation will for some time to come serve its important purpose—that of leading the researcher and his librarian to the special and strong collections in his field of interest. As the American library world becomes drawn more closely together through union catalogs, interlibrary centers, and other forms of inter-institutional co-operation, every facility that contributes to our knowledge of one another's resources becomes increasingly important. In this sense Mr. Downs's new book is a significant addition to our national library structure." R. T. Esterquest

+ Library Q 22:353 O '52 650w

"The result of fifteen years of labor on the part of the compiler and a host of volunteer assistants, this book is without parallel in the field of bibliographical guides to library holdings. . . Of high interest and commendably up to date, this volume will rapidly supersede the older works and should rightfully assume its place in the library as one of the most valuable of the primary finding aids."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:103 Mr '52 250w

AMERICAN POLITICAL SCIENCE ASSOCIATION. Goals for political science; report of the Committee for the advancement of teaching [Marshall E. Dimock, chairman]. 319p $3.50 Sloane

320.7 Political science—Study and teaching 51-5301

"This report on the present state of collegiate instruction in political science, completed in 1950 after more than two years of intensive work, surveys and appraises citizenship education, the teaching of international relations, training for the public service, the political science concentration, integration and cooperation in the social sciences, the beginning course, high school-college relationships, graduate instruction, and ways of improving teaching methods." U S Quarterly Bk R

"Not all proposals may be generally acceptable, but most of the report is sound and progressive. Recommended for large public, school and college libraries." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 76:1335 S 1 '51 200w

"Beyond question, this investigation is the most comprehensive, revealing, and forward looking of any undertaken by the members of the political science profession."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:375 D '51 230w

AMERINE, MAYNARD ANDREW, and JOSLYN, MAYNARD ALEXANDER. Table wines; the technology of their production in California. 397p il $4.50 Univ. of Calif. press

663.2 Wine and wine making 52-198

"An authoritative book on the production of fine and ordinary wines. The authors are closely associated with the wine industry in California, and the book presents good practices in that state. However, much of its content is applicable in any wine-making region. Winery design and equipment, sanitation, specific procedures for various types of wines, wine testing, bacteriological and other troubles in wine making and a wide range of reference data are all covered. There is an extensive bibliography." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 77:722 Ap 15 '52 90w

"Two of the leading enologists of the day have drawn upon their long and varied experience to produce this authoritative treatment of all aspects of the wine industry. . . The format is most pleasant and makes for enhanced intelligibility. The book will undoubtedly be of great use to producers, chemists, and technicians in the wine industry, and to all who are curious concerning present knowledge of wines."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:210 Je '52 200w

AMES, DELANO L. Murder, maestro, please. 251p $2.50 Rinehart

Detective story. 52-5559

Reviewed by E. Fowke

Canadian Forum 32:144 S '52 70w

"Some rather sporadic speculation all along the line, to which Jane and Dagobert lend an air of animation."

Kirkus 20:49 Ja 15 '52 80w

Reviewed by James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Ap 13 '52 120w

"There's even a little more meat than has been evident in the last few Ameses. . . Like the author's other novels, it is wordy and diffuse, but often witty; and this time (Heaven be thanked) Dagobert is merely nebulous rather than offensive." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p25 Ap 13 '52 90w

AMORY, CLEVELAND. Last resorts. 527p il $5 Harper

973 [917.3] Health resorts, watering places, etc. U.S.—Social life and customs 52-8456

"Some genuinely amusing anecdotes alternate with feline chatter about the curious ways of the wealthy and socially sacrosanct frequenters of the most snobbish U.S. resorts. Palm Beach, Hot Springs, Virginia, Narragansett, the Berkshires, Tuxedo, Long Island, Newport, Saratoga, and Palm Springs are all characterized along with the personalities who made them fashionable." (Booklist) Index.

AMORY, CLEVELAND—Continued

Booklist 49:57; 123 O 15 '52; D 1 '52
Bookmark 12:51 D '52 20w

"Mr. Amory has a quick eye for the bizarre, a quick ear for the apt riposte to the nasty thrust, and a pen as sharp as a stiletto. He writes with stinging wit about many people and places that local legend oftener pats with tender hands." Fanny Butcher

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 30 '52
460w

Kirkus 20:591 S 1 '52 160w

"Highly recommended." W. K. Harrison
+ Library J 77:2179 D 15 '52 30w

"Whether you read 'The Last Resorts' for information or pure entertainment, you are likely to find, as I did, that there is a chuckle in every paragraph and a hearty laugh on every page." Lloyd Morris

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 N 9 '52 750w

"Mr. Amory has the great gift of being able to enjoy the daffiness and the grotesqueries of this class of Americans of a generation or two ago—and to do so without manifesting any socially conscious anger. He is something of an aristocrat himself, we are told, and yet he stands aloof from them and gets his laughs along with his readers." John McNulty

+ N Y Times p7 N 9 '52 900w

"A diverting piece of work, but not nearly as well constructed a one as Mr. Amory's 'The Proper Bostonians.'"

New Yorker 28:200 N 22 '52 160w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 N 17 '52
650w

Reviewed by E. W. Pike

Sat R 36:20 Ja 10 '53 320w

"'The Last Resorts' provides many a chuckle along with a wealth of other sparkling reading matter." B. F. K.

+ Springf'd Republican p6D D 28 '52
200w

Time 60:128 N 17 '52 600w

ANDERSON, CLARENCE WILLIAM. Pony for Linda. [52p] il $2 Macmillan

Horses—Legends and stories 51-13998

Linda was given a pony when she was seven and the story and pictures show how she took care of the pony, learned to ride, and finally rode in a horse show.

Booklist 48:148 D 15 '51

Bookmark 11:109 F '52

+ Horn Bk 28:24 F '52 80w

"Tops for the very young jodhpur crowd."

+ Kirkus 19:385 Ag 1 '51 110w

"The pony and the backgrounds are satisfying and appealing. Good read-aloud material. Third-grade vocabulary. . . Recommended for ages 6-8." M. F. Cox

+ Library J 76:2009 D 1 '51 50w

"It is gentle, factual and beautifully done. As usual with Mr. Anderson, the pictures are superb." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 N 11 '51 100w

Sat R 35:37 Ja 12 '52 40w

Wis Lib Bul 48:38 Ja '52

ANDERSON, EDGAR. Plants, man and life. 245p il $4 Little

581.6 Plants. Botany, Economic 52-5870

"The assistant director of the Missouri Botanical Garden informally describes for general reader and scientist his rewarding search in field and laboratory for clues to relationships between the common plants and man. Illustrations. Suggested reading, index." Bookmark

Booklist 48:363 J1 1 '52

Bookmark 11:229 J1 '52 30w

"Much of the book is highly technical; much is utterly delightful; every now and then some practical information slips in which can be immensely helpful to the gardener, and Edgar Anderson's style is always pleasing and persuasive. George Washington Carver would have liked this book. He it was who held a flower in his hand and let it tell its story to him; he it was who said that a weed was just a flower misplaced." Elizabeth Yates

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 J1 3 '52
430w

Kirkus 20:252 Ap 1 '52 180w

"A rambling but fascinating account. . . The book provides an excellent account of how plant biologists, taxonomists and cytologists carry out their research." J. E. Brown

+ Library J 77:1008 Je 1 '52 80w

"This book sorely needs a glossary. The articulate author plunges ahead with 'cytology,' 'taxonomy,' 'polyploid,' 'egg cell,' and so on, not sparing even 'the intelligent public' for whom he says he is writing. Despite sprightly interludes when he lampoons fellow botanists or paints a delightful setting, 'Plants, Man and Life' is for the serious, not the casual reader. Its importance will be not in how many readers it has, but in the force of its philosophy and the stimulus it will give disciples to take new paths toward discovering answers to unsolved questions of botany, horticulture and anthropology." Rutherford Platt

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Je 29 '52
950w

"Mr. Anderson's book is clear, readable and packed with fascinating facts for backyard botanists." J. N. Leonard

+ N Y Times p7 J1 6 '52 600w

"To those thoughtful persons who are interested, in a very real sense, in any one or all three of the subjects indicated in the title, this is a fascinating and provocative book. It is worth reading and studying." C. E. Downie

+ San Francisco Chronicle p9 J1 27 '52
500w

"This is an extraordinarily informative, enlightening, and amusing book. It is, also, an exciting book. Anderson is a sort of plant anthropologist; he is interested in the wanderings of plants, but particularly those which may have been consciously or unconsciously initiated by man. The methods he describes are very like those used by the anthropologist interested in tracing the wanderings of peoples, their mixture, and 'raciation.'" Jack Annandale

+ Sat R 35:16 J1 5 '52 650w

Wis Lib Bul 48:168 J1 '52

"The author of this very stimulating little book discusses the problem in terms that a layman can understand." E. W. Sinnott

+ Yale R ns 42:126 autumn '52 650w

ANDERSON, MRS ETHEL TODD. Summer in their eyes; il. by G. Oliver James. 207p $2.50 Winston

52-5492

When Barbara was sixteen she was invited to spend a summer on her uncle's Colorado ranch, if she could earn her share of the expenses. This story for ages 12 to 16 tells how she did it.

Booklist 48:344 Je 15 '52

"A story, clear and bright as a new whistle."

+ Kirkus 20:192 Mr 15 '52 190w

"An interesting, well-written story." E. E. Frank

+ Library J 77:1081 Je 15 '52 80w

"Despite a rather flat-footed style, and several poorly developed characters, this is a very readable story, which will be of special interest to girls planning to work this summer." Alberta Eiseaman

+ N Y Times p24 My 18 '52 170w

Springf'd Republican p6D J1 27 '52 90w

ANDERSON, JACKSON, and MAY, RONALD W. McCarthy; the man, the senator, the ism. 431p $3.75 Beacon press

B or 92 McCarthy, Joseph Raymond. Communism—U.S. 52-11115

"In this detailed account of the spectacular life of Senator Joseph McCarthy, the authors trace his career from his early days on a Wisconsin chicken farm to his present position as a powerful member of the United States Senate." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by R. R. Brunn
Christian Science Monitor p9 O 22 '52
450w

Kirkus 20:614 S 15 '52 320w

"There is little material here that is new, but the step-by-step recital of McCarthy's attacks on high-ranking American citizens has a powerful and disturbing effect on the reader. So far as this reviewer can determine, the authors have done a careful research job and their detailed analysis of the 'smear' technique of character assassination deserves the attention of all thinking citizens. . . This volume will be highly useful in all public libraries. Recommended." Roger McDonough

+ Library J 77:1803 O 15 '52 120w

"Jack Anderson, who is on Drew Pearson's staff, and Ronald May, a Wisconsin resident with news-writing and political background who quit his job to work on this book, have put together a mass of documentation which makes the case against McCarthy devastating." Willard Shelton

Nation 175:412 N 1 '52 600w

"Anderson and May have done a reporter's job of making an exhaustive, point by point assembly of the facts relevant to most of McCarthy's major lies and to all of the major episodes in his meteoric descent to fame. The result is devastating, and the documentation three times larger than most people who fancy themselves experts on McCarthy believed existed." Alfred Friendly

New Repub 127:20 N 3 '52 650w

"This is the first book to attempt to tell the story of McCarthyism in a detailed, accurate manner. Its authors are two newspaper men who bring to their task a direct acquaintance with McCarthy and his career, as well as the journalist's passion for unearthing all of the facts and letting them tell their own story." R. K. Carr

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 N 2 '52
300w

"The authors' breezy conversational style makes for easy reading, but not necessarily for establishing confidence in the meticulous accuracy of every anecdote. A chronology would have helped, and so would a more carefully thought out plan of organization for the book which, at times gives the impression of being less a biographical sketch than a series of personal and political vignettes. However, there is a great deal of solid factual material about McCarthy's career." J. B. Oakes

+ — N Y Times p12 O 26 '52 600w

"A fairly well-rounded picture, some of it in the subject's own words, emerges."

+ New Yorker 28:191 N 15 '52 140w

"Anderson and May have made a valuable contribution toward exposing McCarthy's cynical indifference to truth. It is unfortunate that their work comes so late in the campaign." W. T. Evjue

+ Sat R 35:17 O 25 '52 1200w

ANDERSON, MARY. Woman at work [her] autobiography as told to Mary N. Winslow. 266p il $3.50 Univ. of Minn. press

B or 92 Woman—Employment 51-14305

An account of the life of the second director of the Woman's Bureau of the U. S. Department of Labor. Her life is traced from her childhood in Sweden, thru her arrival in the United States and her years as a factory worker, to her retirement in 1944 after twenty-five years in her government post. Index.

Reviewed by E. T. Douglas
Am Hist R 58:196 O '52 400w

"Any student who is interested in the role of women in our industrial society will find this book to be required reading." Jack London
+ Am Soc R 17:395 Je '52 190w

Reviewed by H. G. Tyson

Ann Am Acad 280:209 Mr '52 500w

Booklist 48:158 Ja 1 '52

Bookmark 11:129 Mr '52 30w

"This book probably will not make the best seller lists, but it belongs on the shelves of those interested in the history of the 40 hour week and the emancipation of women in industry." Philip Dodd

Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 Ja 27 '52
240w

"This biography should encourage many a working girl and will interest all who want more knowledge of the reforms and the reformers who were responsible for much of the progress in working conditions for women. Recommended for general purchase." D. K. Oko

+ Library J 77:56 Ja 1 '52 150w

Reviewed by Theresa Wolfson

Management R 41:552 Ag '52 950w

"A lively record of a long and useful career."

+ New Repub 126:21 F 4 '52 140w

Reviewed by Mildred Adams

N Y Times p19 Ja 20 '52 600w

"Her book has both documentary and human value." Jane Voiles

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 D 2 '51
70w

"Mary Winslow has helped Miss Anderson write her autobiography, and it is a shame that she could not somehow have gotten more flesh and blood into the book. The wooden character that emerges from 'Woman at Work' cannot be very close to Mary Anderson herself. As a result, her memoir will soon be the dusty property of the student of labor and not of the wide audience which Miss Anderson certainly deserves." Whitney Balliett

Sat R 35:49 Je 14 '52 200w

"This book is a record of an important woman's life. Many young people, and especially high school age girls, will enjoy it and will learn much from reading it." M. R. Brown

+ Social Studies 43:263 O '52 280w

"This autobiography is recommended reading for officers and members of trade unions, for the present generation of working women who are unconsciously enjoying the fruit of her labors, for employers, and for students of industrial human relations. University, public, and union libraries will find it a valuable addition to their shelves." Louise Griffith

+ Survey 88:88 F '52 600w

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 3:1 Mr '52 220w

ANDERSON, POUL. Vault of the ages; jacket design by Paul Orban; endpaper design by Alex Schomburg. 210p $2 Winston

52-8971

"About Carl, a youngster living more than 500 years in the future—a period when civilization, ruined by war, has lapsed into semi-barbarism. Carl helps fight off a savage invading tribe with wisdom relearned from a 20th century time capsule." Chicago Sunday Tribune

Reviewed by Mark Reinsberg

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 N 16 '52
30w

Kirkus 20:561 S 1 '52 40w

"Except for the date, this could be a story of the Dark Ages. Interesting idea, stirring battle scenes, but poor dialogue. Acceptable." B. W. Schein

+ — Library J 77:2079 D 1 '52 50w

"Even those to whom the theme is over-familiar should enjoy this version; for Mr. Anderson's Scandinavian heritage displays itself in a fine saga-like sweep." H. H. Holmes

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 O 26 '52
40w

ANDERSON, POUL—Continued

"Mr. Anderson is somewhat overfond of the exclamation point, but he has written an enthralling story." Villiers Gerson

+ N Y Times p2, p28 N 16 '52 50w

Reviewed by Don Fabun

San Francisco Chronicle p12 N 16 '52 100w

ANDERSON, ROBERT EARLE. Liberia, America's African friend. 305p il maps $5 Univ. of N.C. press

966.6 Liberia 52-9731

A guide to Liberia which is a combination of history, economic study, political analysis, and ethnological treatise. Index.

Booklist 48:317 Je 1 '52

Reviewed by Jay Monaghan

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 J1 6 '52 120w

"Probably [the author] is right in his statement that while there is an abundance of scientific information published about Liberia, much of it is ponderous and out of date. Mr. Anderson, a naval architect, sought to rectify this, and seems to have succeeded. Certainly he has produced a book crammed with information and thoughtful observation." Roland Sawyer

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 My 6 '52 700w

Current Hist 23:126 Ag '52 260w

Foreign Affairs 31:168 O '52 10w

"The author is a man of wide talents... He writes well and concisely, and is able in less than 300 pages to cover much concerning Liberia's people, their past, their present, and what he considers their rather hopeful future... His book is carefully annotated and indexed, and furnishes, in the author's own end paper maps, the best map now available of the country. It throws needed light on what, to many of our minds, is still 'dark' Africa." E. B.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 J1 27 '52 270w

ANDERSON, THORNTON. Brooks Adams, constructive conservative. 250p $3.75 Cornell univ. press

B or 92 Adams, Brooks 51-8760

"Detailed analysis of Adams' writings, addressed chiefly to specialists in late 19th and early 20th-century intellectual history. Emphasizes changes in his views after his Law of Civilization and Decay. The title reflects Adams' own definition of conservatism; his views, by modern standards, vary from socialistic to what might be called proto-fascist." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

"There is not the bold if vulnerable projection of imagination such as Brooks Adams himself was capable of, nor is there such mastery of Adams' ideas and their sources and background that the reader is immediately aware of their value in the history of thought. There is, however, conscientious exegesis. We have Brooks Adams admirably summarized, and sympathetically presented." Henry Wasser

+ Am Hist R 57:1055 J1 52 450w

Reviewed by G. H. Dodge

Am Pol Sci R 46:561 Je '52 470w

"This book is rewarding for the patient reader. It is an intellectual biography, a tracing and capsuling of the thought of Brooks Adams. It is not biographical in the usual sense of the word. However, the reader can find the character of the man, and will make inevitable comparisons with his older brother Henry, who was the greatest influence on the thinking of Brooks." R. R. Brunn

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Ja 15 '52 650w

Reviewed by T. V. Smith

Ethics 62:304 J1 '52 100w

"For college, university, and large public libraries." Dorothy Sinclair

Library J 77:49 Ja 1 '52 140w

Reviewed by D. W. Brogan

Manchester Guardian p4 Ap 1 '52 370w

"Mr. Anderson's much-needed and valuable book, based upon a study of Adams' letters as well as his published writings, affords a lucid summary of the development of his ideas and some discriminating if timorous criticism. As a personal study it fails to realize the possibilities of its subject." Richard Hofstadter

+ Nation 174:184 F 23 '52 1350w

Reviewed by H. S. Commager

N Y Times p3 D 9 '51 1350w

ANDERSON, WILLIAM HARRY. Taxation and the American economy; an economic, legal, and administrative analysis. 598p il $8; to schools $6 Prentice-Hall

336.2 Taxation—U.S. 51-14810

"A textbook for a full-semester course in taxation which will serve also as a usable reference work for the layman." (Library J) Index.

"A very readable text for an elementary course in taxation... A desirable feature from the point of view of the taxpayer who wishes to keep informed is the fairly broad bibliographical coverage, as well as the list of government and private publications relating to tax matters." K. E. Poole

+ Am Econ R 42:447 Je '52 300w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross

Library J 77:53 Ja 1 '52 70w

ANDLER, KENNETH. Stolen spruce; a mystery adventure in the Maine woods; il. by C. L. Hartman. 168p $2.50 Pellegrini & Cudahy

52-8448

Mystery story for ages 12 to 16.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Yates

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 21 '52 110w

Kirkus 20:411 J1 15 '52 120w

"Rugged adventure in a setting of Maine lumber camps. Gives useful information about surveying and lumbering, but mainly interesting for the story." A. M. Wetherell

+ Library J 77:1412 S 1 '52 80w

"A book with the opening sentence 'Tom could pick up things with his toes' is bound to challenge the attention. It is very well written, a superior thriller tale for boys over twelve. The wonderfully fearful illustrations portray all the characters ably, especially at the most direful moments." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Ag 3 '52 140w

"The background of surveying in the Maine woods is well drawn, the dialogue of the Maine characters rings true, and C. L. Hartman's illustrations have a robust quality boys will appreciate." Iris Vinton

+ N Y Times p18 Ag 24 '52 120w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p7 N 16 '52 40w

"It is a fresh, exciting tale, vivid with the atmosphere and background of the northern woods." M. G. Davis

+ Sat R 36:45 Ja 10 '53 160w

ANDREWS, CHARLES HAMILTON. No time for tears; foreword by Eleanor Roosevelt; introd. by Earl Warren. 157p $2 Doubleday

616.9 [616.83] Infantile paralysis 51-14827

A parent writes for other parents about the tragedy of polio, and what happened in his own family when his ten-year-old son was stricken with bulbar polio. He describes the fight waged by the family and the doctors and nurses to save a brave boy, and their success.

Booklist 48:113; 155 D 1 '51; Ja 1 '52

Bookmark 11:103 F '52 30w

Reviewed by V. P. Hass

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ja 13 '52 230w

"The attitude of these parents, who would not allow self-pity or special privilege to further cripple their boy, and of the boy, a wonderful youngster, gives this its emotional impetus as well as inspiration."

+ Kirkus 19:652 N 1 '51 250w

Reviewed by J. M. Scherr

+ Library J 76:2111 D 15 '51 110w

"Mr. Andrews' little book should bring courage to every polio-victim and sound advice to every relative whose hard role it is to watch—and believe—beside stricken child or adult."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 Ja 27 '52 200w

"So close are you brought to the tragedy, so well-told is the desperate fight for survival and insistence on survival by all involved, that the story has a personal message for everyone, healthy and sick." Gertrude Samuels

+ N Y Times p16 D 30 '51 400w

"This is an inspiring little book. Told simply and directly, it conveys, as no amount of technical, psychological jargon possibly could, just what the parents did—and therefore, by implication, exactly what parents or relatives of other polio patients can do." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 D 17 '51 850w

ANGELL, SIR NORMAN. After all. 370p il $4.50 Farrar, Straus

B or 92

52-6139

"At 80, Sir Norman Angell looks back on the long and exciting career devoted to getting the truth in international politics and economics before the public. Admirers of his forty-two other notable books will be interested to learn about the motives, opportunities and activities which made him a writer, journalist, member of Parliament and winner of the Nobel Peace Prize. The interest of the biography addict, however, will probably be confined to the vivid account of Sir Norman's boyhood adventures as a cowboy, prospector and homesteader on the American frontier." Library J

Booklist 48:245 Ap 1 '52

Bookmark 11:153 Ap '52 50w

Reviewed by J. V. McAree

Canadian Forum 32:163 O '52 550w

Reviewed by A. C. Ames

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Mr 16 '52 400w

Reviewed by J. A. May

Christian Science Monitor p7 Jl 24 '52 700w

Foreign Affairs 31:164 O '52 30w

"Written at times with the swift pace of an adventure story, at times with a scholar's studied consideration, this is a valuable piece of reporting."

+ Kirkus 20:106 F 1 '52 240w

Reviewed by E. T. Smith

Library J 77:358 F 15 '52 130w

Reviewed by S. K. Ratcliffe

Nation 174:328 Ap 5 '52 1150w

"It is a great human document, and a document of this our time, a time of trouble and of hope." Hans Kohn

+ New Repub 126:22 Mr 31 '52 470w

"The story of his life is fascinating. He tells the story well, with great charm, modesty, and often humour, and the surface of the story, the many things which he has done—for he is a man of action—and all the famous and not so famous people whom he tells about should interest and amuse many readers." Leonard Woolf

+ New Statesman & Nation 42:712 D 15 '51 650w

"Sir Norman has had a long and varied life close to the centers where our modern Western world is being made. He has contrived in this by no means long book to condense an extraordinary range of experience." Crane Brinton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 Mr 16 '52 1250w

"This is a diverting as well as an illuminating book, and Nobel Prizeman Angell is still the boy who, at 12, in the infirmary of a French school, read Mill 'On Liberty' and was converted. One of the many signs of Sir Norman's courage is that he doesn't think that modern youth is wonderful. He thinks it inferior in enterprise, physical and mental, to his own generation, and if that generation is represented by Norman Angell, he is right." D. W. Brogan

+ N Y Times p3 Mr 9 '52 1100w

"Sir Norman is a reformer who has never lost his sense of humor, and his book is a delightful memoir."

+ New Yorker 28:142 Ap 5 '52 190w

"Though it is fascinating just as a narrative of a significant career, if it makes the reader think about the problem it poses—and perhaps sends him back to read the author's 'Great Illusion' objectively—then it is doubly worth publishing." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Mr 20 '52 1000w

"Norman Angell has written some forty books. They are without exception good books, devoted to real issues and in their aggregate covering well the wide range of serious present-day problems. They are written attractively, carefully and fairly reasoned. Yet there is not one of them, except 'The Great Illusion,' which launched Norman Angellism upon the world, that is so interesting and illuminating as this autobiography, 'After All.'" Alvin Johnson

+ Sat R 35:16 Mr 15 '52 700w

ANGIER, BRADFORD. How to build your home in the woods; il. by Vena Angier. 310p $3.50 Sheridan

728.7 Log cabins

52-13865

"Every step in making cabins, shelters and houses of logs, shingles or boards is described in simple text and illustrated in clear sketches." Springf'd Republican

Booklist 49:120 D 1 '52

Bookmark 12:77 Ja '53 20w

"It's an invaluable book for everyone who would like to live cheaply and simply away from the city." J. F. S.

+ Springf'd Republican p7C N 30 '52 80w

ANGIER, MRS VENA, and ANGIER, BRADFORD. At home in the woods; living the life of Thoreau today. 255p il $3.50 Sheridan

971.1 [917.11] Frontier and pioneer life—British Columbia 51-14540

"A young couple, fed up with city life, and impressed by Walden, set off to a remote spot on the Alaskan Highway, and there demonstrate that 'living the life of Thoreau today' can be successfully accomplished. They lived simply, 'off the land,' but were more successful than Thoreau in selling their manuscripts." Library J

Booklist 48:142 D 15 '51

Bookmark 11:129 Mr '52 20w

"Their book is a veritable handbook for life in the wild. But any lover of the wild will delight in these tangy pages." Walter Harding

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Mr 30 '52 220w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 77:57 Ja 1 '52 50w

Springf'd Republican p8D F 17 '52 350w

"Unreservedly recommended."

+ Wis Lib Bul 48:33 Ja '52

ANGLE, PAUL MCCLELLAND. Bloody Williamson; a chapter in American lawlessness. 299p maps $4 Knopf

331.762233 Williamson county, Illinois, Coal mines and mining 52-6408

"A history of violence in Williamson County, Illinois, from the eighteen-sixties to 1951. Mr. Angle, who singled this community out as a convenient laboratory for his study of American lawlessness, says it differs only in degree from a number of other sections where people have taken the law into their own hands. He stresses the point that he is dealing with a purely American phenomenon—that the feuds, the labor violence that culminated in the Heroin Massacre of 1922, the Ku Klux Klan wars, and the gangster killings that have given Williamson County its unenviable fame have been wholly home-grown affairs." (New Yorker) Index.

ANGLE, P. M.—Continued

Booklist 49:60 O 15 '52

"The book is factual, well documented, and is one book, and perhaps the only one, whose footnotes are as fascinating as the text." Walter Yust

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 S 28 '52 600w

Kirkus 20:438 J1 15 '52 190w

"Recommended." R. P. Bartolini

+ Library J 77:1393 S 1 '52 90w

"An extremely readable and illuminating history of America at its most lawless."

+ Nation 175:364 O 18 '52 90w

"In this book Mr. Angle, a scrupulous historian as his Lincoln works attest, undertakes to set down the facts on a basis of careful research." Tarleton Collier

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 O 19 '52 1100w

"Splendid is the best word I can think of to describe this book on Williamson County, Ill., and its long and turbulent history of violence. The author, a well-known Lincoln historian and director of the Chicago Historical Society, has not only drafted a factual and fair account of the county's bloody history but a readable and gripping one as well." T. C. Link

+ N Y Times p16 N 30 '52 360w

"A shocking story, well told."

+ New Yorker 28:136 O 4 '52 120w

San Francisco Chronicle p25 N 30 '52 480w

"In all his writing, Paul M. Angle has exhibited a rare combination of talents: the sharp eye for detail and the vivid, swiftly-moving narrative style of a first-class newspaper reporter together with the unimpeachable honesty and the scholarly thoroughness of a fine historian. In 'Bloody Williamson,' he has combined these qualities again and has produced a book that few readers will be able to put aside until they have finished it." W. E. Wilson

+ Sat R 35:15 O 18 '52 700w

ANNAN, NOEL GILROY. Leslie Stephen; his thought and character in relation to his time. 342p il $5 Harvard Univ. press

B or 92 Stephen, Sir Leslie A52-9200

"This book is a critical study of Leslie Stephen rather than a biography. It was originally submitted in a shorter form for the Le Bas Prize Essay, but I found that the background of Stephen's times cast such a shadow over the man that he was in danger of partial eclipse; and I therefore added the two biographical chapters and expanded those on his moral experience." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 48:212 Mr 1 '52

Reviewed by A. C. Ames

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Mr 9 '52 410w

Reviewed by Harold Hobson

Christian Science Monitor p5 D 27 '51 60w

"The book is a judicious blending of the scholarly and the more widely aimed. On the scholarly side, there are copious footnotes (well relegated to the rear) and a thorough, knowing, even intricate treatment of the philosophic and religious background of the period. On the other side there may be counted a lively though occasionally undisciplined style, a generous setting of the scene for those uninitiated to the period, and last but not least a clutch of informal photographs." Ruth Chapin

+ Christian Science Monitor p15 Ap 3 '52 460w

"One of the most distinguished biographical studies for some years."

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Ja 8 '52 800w

Reviewed by M. D. Zabel

Nation 174:207 Mr 1 '52 1050w

"Mr. Annan strikes one as exactly the right person to discuss Stephen's ideas and character, and to set them in relation to the major intellectual movements of the nineteenth century. He is entirely at home among the Victorian intellectuals, sensitive to the undertones of their conversations and controversies." J. A. Smith

+ New Statesman & Nation 42:410 O 13 '51 1600w

"Something of Stephen's uncertainty has communicated itself to Mr. Annan. His long interpretative essay is admirable, but it is admirable almost despite itself. . . Yet for all this negativism, Mr. Annan's book is of immense value, and of immense interest, too, especially to the initiated. It is of value because it tells us so much about the English character; it is of interest because it tells us so much about interesting individuals, about the Clapham Sect, about Cambridge and Oxford, about the rationalists, and because it tells all this with such liveliness and penetration and wit." H. S. Commager

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 My 11 '52 1250w

"An uncommonly lucid and entertaining biographical study. Few recent books have given us a more illuminating impression of certain aspects of the Victorian world." Peter Quennell

+ N Y Times p1 F 3 '52 1400w

"The book is not so much a biography as a series of essays in which the author sometimes digresses at length on various phases of British intellectual life. The best chapters are those defining and criticizing the rationalism of Leslie Stephen. The biographical part is less satisfactory."

New Yorker 28:142 My 24 '52 250w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 Ap 6 '52 130w

Reviewed by R. E. Roberts

Sat R 35:21 My 3 '52 1000w

Reviewed by Ronald Lewin

Spec 187:399 S 28 '51 900w

"Mr. Annan has let the many-sided human being emerge for us from the crowded halls and hustings of thought and debate in which he delighted to exercise his powers: the book has high intellectual distinction. The more reason for purging it, in future editions, of a few faults of grammar and punctuation. The writing, too, is uneven: here admirable and accomplished; there falling into pedestrian awkwardness that might have been avoided."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p653 O 19 '51 2350w

"Mr. Annan has rescued from an undeserved neglect one of England's finest and most courageous thinkers. His book is a model for this kind of study." W. C. DeVane

+ Yale R n s 41:618 summer '52 1200w

ANNETT, FRED ANZLEY. Practical industrial electronics. 381p il $5.50 McGraw

621.34 [621.38] Electronics 51-12581

"A book for such readers as plant electricians and operating engineers. Its purpose is to make clear to men without collegiate education in physics, the basic principles of electronic devices and how common industrial electronic devices operate. It should present no difficulties for readers who are accustomed to electrical circuit diagrams and to reading text that makes constant reference to diagrams." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

"A good introduction for electricians and operating personnel. . . Electronic terminology and circuit diagrams are freely used, but there is no mathematics." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 77:1078 Je 15 '52 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 37:21 Mr '52

ANSHEN, RUTH NANDA (MRS RALPH HOWARD BRODSKY), ed. Moral principles of action; man's ethical imperative. (Science of culture ser) 720p $7.50 Harper

170 Ethics

51-11882

"The authors of this book endeavor through their respective intellectual disciplines to portray their convictions on the problems of belief in the ultimacy and uniqueness of the moral conscience and on the issues of relativism, positivism, and evolution." (Pref) Some of the contributors are: R. N. Anshen, Jacques Maritain, F. S. C. Northrop, H. R. Niebuhr, Martin Buber, George Sarton, Albert Schweitzer. Biographical note. Index.

Booklist 49:97 N 15 '52

"Some of the separate articles are invaluable and considerable synthesis has been achieved as a whole. Of great value to the student of ethics and of interest to the layman, but, of course, of limited popular appeal." G. W. Wakefield

+ Library J 77:1008 Je 1 '52 50w

School & Society 76:255 O 18 '52 20w

ANTHONY, ROBERT NEWTON, and DAY, JOHN S. Management controls in industrial research organizations. 537p il $6.75 Harvard Univ. Division of res.

607 Industrial research

52-10956

"In this report Dr. Anthony presents the results of a broad, first-hand study of the problems of administrative control of scientific research activities in American industry. Its four parts include a statement of the problem, the variable factors relating to it, current control practices, and case studies of control techniques in four specific laboratories of different sizes and kinds. Selected operating data for laboratories of different sizes and types of work are presented in an appendix." Publisher's note

"This book will be valuable and enlightening to most industrial executives interested in research." L. B. Hitchcock

+ Chem & Eng N 30:4308 O 13 '52 410w

"This book is a serious effort to describe present practices in research organizations and to show the administrative problems involved. The author states that the book was written primarily for those who manage industrial research, but it should also be of interest to all those who work in this field as it will help explain to them the reasons for the many regulations that they think serve only to slow them up. It may also make them more contented with their lot and less ambitious to become executives." B. K. McKee

+ Chem Eng 59:347 N '52 470w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross

Library J 77:1406 S 1 '52 30w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:307 S '52 210w

APPLEBY, JOHN. Barbary hoard. 218p $2.75 Coward-McCann

52-7311

An adventure tale dealing with the search for buried treasure in North Africa by two mutually hostile groups of Englishmen.

Booklist 48:228 Mr 15 '52

Reviewed by M. C. Scogglin

+ Horn Bk 28:187 Je '52 60w

"A blithe blend of adventure and adversity, and undemanding entertainment." + Kirkus 20:85 F 1 '52 160w

"Very fast action, plausible plot, and good details. Recommended for older boys." + Library J 77:1215 Jl '52 80w

Reviewed by James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Mr 16 '52 160w

"Individuality of prose and novelistic skill enable John Appleby to turn a conventional theme into something fresh and entrancing." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p32 Mr 16 '52 90w

"Just as exciting as Mr. Appleby's first book, 'The Arms of Venus,' and considerably less confused."

New Yorker 28:136 Mr 22 '52 120w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Mr 16 '52 70w

Reviewed by E. J. Fitzgerald

Sat R 35:31 Mr 29 '52 120w

APPLEBY, PAUL HENSON. Morality and administration in democratic government. 261p $4 La. state univ. press

353 Public administration. Political ethics. Corruption (in politics) 52-9734

"This wide-ranging book is centered on the relation of official morality to the nature of administrative organization. It is thus in the sequence of the author's earlier works, Big Democracy (1945) and Policy and Administration (1949) . . . There is, pursuing the argument of the author, a public expectation of a higher moral standard in government than in private organizations. Thus the development of personal friendship as a basis for success in buying and selling is taken for granted in business but is condemned in government. Self-perpetuating hierarchies of management are tolerated in business but would be impossible in government. Nepotism is accepted in private affairs but rejected in the public business." (J Pol Econ) Index.

"The material on the utility and functioning of the hierarchy is a solid achievement. Beyond this, there is much that is debatable." N. D. Grundstein

+ Ann Am Acad 284:172 N '52 280w

"In this pioneering work we ought not to complain if the author seems at times to introduce material that is more closely related to his central interest in the theory of organization than to the present issue of ethical standards. Whatever Appleby writes is characterized by insight, thoughtfulness, and concern for democratic values. It might be argued that in this, the third of an important trilogy, the special objective could have been held more clearly before the reader's view. The diligent reader will nevertheless be richly rewarded in understanding both the nature of morality in government and the nature of organization." L. D. White

+ J Pol Econ 60:358 Ag '52 550w

"It seems perhaps ironically appropriate that this thoughtful and timely book on morality in government should be published by the university of the State where Huey Long gave his own special meaning to morality. . . Businessmen, Government officials, students of political science and any intelligent citizen will find a great deal of stimulating and provocative thinking in this book." I. B.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 My 18 '52 280w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:293 S '52 150w

APTHEKER, HERBERT, ed. Documentary history of the Negro people in the United States; pref. by W. E. B. Du Bois. 942p $7.50; de luxe ed $10 Citadel

301.45 [325.26] Negroes—History—Sources 51-14828

"This very comprehensive account of the Negro in the United States covers the period from colonial times to 1910. The unique thing about the book is that this history of the Negro race is told by Negroes. The volume has been in the making for fifteen years and it contains some half million words, of which over one hundred thousand are commentary by the editor." Churchman

"The documents in this volume, drawn from such sources as books, pamphlets, periodicals, newspapers, official documents, letters, and other manuscripts, have been selected admirably. The introduction, in which the editor defines the scope of the book, and his explanatory comments and notes made in connection with the documents greatly enhance the value of the work. Subject to the well-known limitations of a source-book, the volume seems, in view of its purpose and fulfillment, to admit of little, if any, special criticism. The student and many of the general public should find it exceptionally useful. It is a highly valuable contribution to the literature of its field." A. A. Taylor

APTHEKER, HERBERT—Continued

+ Am Hist R 57:755 Ap '52 350w

"A rich and documentary record of all aspects of the history of an integral group in our democracy." W. F. Sears

+ Churchman 166:16 Mr 1 '52 120w

"This tremendously moving work might better have been titled 'the history of Negro efforts to get equal treatment' for, except in the limited sense, it is no true history of the Negroes in the U.S. . . The editor gives us the present location of each document along with information as to where it was first printed. Well-indexed, it can be used for either reference or general reading. Recommended." M. S. Byam

+ Library J 76:2002 D 1 '51 140w

School & Society 75:285 My 3 '52 20w

ARABIAN NIGHTS ENTERTAINMENTS.

Portable Arabian nights; ed. and with an introd. by Joseph Campbell [John Payne, translator]. 786p $2.50 Viking

892.73 [398.21] Tales, Arabic 52-7413

"The frame-story and the first nine and last 11 Nights are retained in full and the other parts given in synopses." Booklist

Booklist 48:266 Ap 15 '52

"The special merit of this edition is that it follows the full scheme of tales and plots, and achieves condensation by giving some of the stories only in bare outline. It is a unique body of literature—exotic, fantastic, impossible and completely fascinating. I had read most of it before, but I read every one of these 780 pages just for the fun of it." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 69:498 Ap 23 '52 200w

Kirkus 20:43 Ja 15 '52 150w

Reviewed by Robert Phelps

Nation 174:256 Mr 15 '52 600w

ARCINIEGAS, GERMAN. State of Latin America; tr. from the Spanish by Harriet de Onís. 416p $4.50 Knopf

980 Latin America—Politics 51-13220

Observations by a "liberal" South American writer, author of The Caribbean (Book Review Digest 1946) on the status of freedom and democracy in the Latin American countries today. Index.

Booklist 48:294 My 15 '52

Bookmark 12:81 Ja '53

Reviewed by J. F. Rippy

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 My 4 '52 220w

Reviewed by R. M. Hallet

Christian Science Monitor p9 Jl 2 '52 600w

Current Hist 23:64 Jl '52 50w

Foreign Affairs 31:168 O '52 30w

"A definitive survey, politically, of South and Central America and the Caribbean countries by a man who has earned a good reputation in North America as a professor of Latin American studies at Columbia University. . . Throughout the discussions, extremely factual and well planned in themselves, there is a predilection for leftist-socialist political tendencies wherever they appear and it is on these that Mr. Arciniegas seems to pin his hopes. As to communist elements, present Latin American conditions of poverty and revolt should provide fertile ground for development, which, according to the author, has not taken place. It is on such points as this and a certain whimsicality of spot judgment, due perhaps to the author's long absence from his homeland or his attempt to produce a livelier text, that the book may run into argument."

+ — Kirkus 20:148 F 15 '52 260w

"Essential reading for Americans who have too often left the policy of the United States toward Latin America to second rate men. Recommended." M. S. Byam

+ Library J 77:714 Ap 15 '52 140w

"The many books about South America which have appeared on lists for the past decade have been full of efforts to make the southern countries come alive in the northern mind, to rescue them from the amiable and anonymous confusion which used to surround the Balkan countries. . . Arciniegas has succeeded better than some of his predecessors. . . Scholar and diplomat, he has written books on earlier phases of South American history which should be read by anyone whose attention is caught by the present work. We recommend his book about the Germans in South America, and his 'Knight of El Dorado.'" Mildred Adams

+ Nation 175:136 Ag 16 '52 300w

"German Arciniegas, Colombian educator and writer, is not a witness to be ignored. He writes as a Colombian patriot, in anger against those who have betrayed 'the best of the Latin American democracies'; as a Latin American who comprehends as well as any living man the tormented history of the onetime colonies of Spain and Portugal; and as a friend, often critical, of the United States. He is not a neutral in the present fevered contest between dictatorship and freedom, but an eager and able polemicist for the sort of democracy that Colombia represented for many years." Hubert Herring

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ap 27 '52 1900w

"It is heartening to report that it is a book, not a notebook; that it was written, not jotted down; and that the number of trivial factual errors is at a minimum. It is easy to forgive a man for calling Perón's propaganda office the 'secretaría' instead of the 'subsecretaría' of information, when he writes with the authority, the grace and the persuasion of Germán Arciniegas." Milton Bracker

+ N Y Times p6 My 11 '52 1200w

New Yorker 28:145 My 17 '52 180w

San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ag 10 '52 250w

"Within the political restrictions he has imposed upon himself, Arciniegas has written a passionate book, illumined with vast knowledge of Latin America, and containing a mass of important information, but it is not a coherent and balanced story of cultural evolution, and it does not face up fully to the basic social conflicts." Carleton Beals

— + Sat R 35:31 Ag 9 '52 550w

ARD, WILLIAM. The diary. 220p $2.50 Rinehart

52-6985

Detective story.

Reviewed by Edith Fowke

Canadian Forum 32:118 Ag '52 30w

Kirkus 20:17 Ja 1 '52 80w

"This one involves itself in sex and sadism, but it has two advantages over the current seedy crop of hardboiled novels. Mr. Ard has something like a sense of style and he gives his angry private investigator a sense of recognizable righteousness." James Sandoe

N Herald Tribune Bk R p23 Mr 9 '52 110w

"The Diary is a bright and rewarding variant in the semi-tough school." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p24 Mr 9 '52 70w

"The characters take some believing and the plot sounds rather familiar." L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p24 Mr 23 '52 50w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 35:45 Mr 22 '52 40w

ARD, WILLIAM. .38. 251p $2.50 Rinehart

52-8738

Detective story.

"Hard hitting yarn without lull in interest, that refreshingly refrains from prevailing tendency to have hero sleuths sing their own praises." Drexel Drake

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 O 12 '52 110w

Kirkus 20:389 J1 1 '52 60w

Reviewed by James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 S 28 '52 120w

"Once the cute conventionalities are out of the way, Ard settles down to a singularly realistic study of the mechanics and intrigues of gang rule, as convincing and as reminiscent of fact-studies as anything since Wade Miller's 'Devil on Two Sticks.'" Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p26 S 21 '52 40w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p22 O 12 '52 40w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 35:46 O 11 '52 20w

ARDIZZONE, MICHAEL. Mistaken land. 210p $2 British bk. centre

968 South Africa—Politics and government [52-7733]

"A British journalist who recently spent four years in South Africa and is heartsick at what he saw, reports pessimistically on this 'mistaken land.' He believes South Africa is '... on the eve of a whole series of catastrophes, each one greater than the last, culminating perhaps within the lifetime of men and women now in their infancy, with the ruin and final abandonment of a rich and lovely land.'" (San Francisco Chronicle) No index.

Booklist 48:262 Ap 15 '52

Reviewed by Nancy Baker

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Mr 23 '52 130w

"The Mistaken Land' is one of the most sobering books to cross this writer's desk in many months. It is a volume which it is anything but pleasant to read, but which tells a tale that urgently needs telling. For it deals with what many persons, including the author, believe to be the Union of South Africa's rapid rush toward tragedy under the present Boer-controlled government of Prime Minister Daniel F. Malan. . . . While the author may appear somewhat overemotional on some pages and in some conclusions, these latter do not seem, in the main, to run counter to the other evidence and reports we have from that country." J. G. Harrison

Christian Science Monitor p9 Ag 22 '52 450w

Foreign Affairs 30:684 J1 '52 10w

"One recoils against so dark a prospect, yet the writer is obviously an intelligent observer and can appreciate the qualities of men whose policies he detests. It should be read, at least, to see how bad things might become. It makes disaster dreadfully plausible." P. J. M.

Manchester Guardian p4 F 22 '52 200w

Reviewed by R. W. Logan

Nation 175:450 N 15 '52 290w

"If Mr. Ardizzone has a tendency to look wistfully at possibilities for a better South Africa that have long-since passed, it can be excused. He is a Briton leaning toward progress and social justice. He understandably examines every opportunity, even the lost ones, to thwart imminent tragedy in a land he has come to love." R. W. R.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 Mr 23 '52 190w

"The Nationalists will see in this book yet another proof that British writers wilfully misunderstand them. South Africans of British stock, left in two minds by the loss of their old leader and worried and bewildered by the apparent insolubility of the colour problem, will not know what to think. Mr. Ardizzone puts one important side of the case vividly, but, if it is to be seen as a whole and in perspective, then apartheid has to be measured against the probable results of what is being done in Southern Rhodesia and in the British African colonies farther north."

Times [London] Lit Sup p183 Mr 14 '52 600w

ARDREY, ROBERT. Brotherhood of fear. 342p $3 Random house

52-5134

"A haunting and imaginative adventure story with symbolic and satirical overtones. The action takes place in a mythical totalitarian state and is concerned with the pursuit of Bryo, an escaped prisoner, by Konnr of the secret police." Booklist

Booklist 48:185 F 1 '52

Reviewed by Larry Rogers

Canadian Forum 32:47 My '52 150w

Reviewed by Edward Wagenknecht

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Ja 27 '52 370w

Kirkus 19:645 N 1 '51 220w

"Despite some keen insights into the totalitarian mind and a tolerably tense situation, this novel reads like an early draft of what might have been a genuinely unusual and original book."

Nation 174:257 Mr 15 '52 90w

"Mr. Ardrey has written an exciting, readable middle-brow novel, with a thread of hokum running throughout, on a theme that is played out without ever having been played in by anyone that mattered." G. D. Painter

+ New Statesman & Nation 43:441 Ap 12 '52 240w

"Mr. Ardrey has chosen a powerful if familiar theme, and he has obviously worked out the story in his own mind with considerable thought. But in the telling he has reduced and over-simplified it into terms of pure action. Action, of course, is inherent and important to any story of the hunter and the pursued. But it is not all. Mr. Ardrey's book lacks the finer shades of characterization, the subtleties of emotion which make the distinction between an excellent thriller and a really analytical novel." Anne Brooks

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 Ja 27 '52 380w

Reviewed by F. C. Fellowes

N Y Times p24 Ja 27 '52 300w

Reviewed by R. D. Charques

Spec 188:378 Mr 21 '52 120w

ARKELL, REGINALD. Green fingers, and other poems; il. by John Teppich. 118p $2 Harcourt

821 Gardens—Poetry 52-6485

Selections from the author's four books of poems published in England. They are all about gardens and gardening, or the hero of the author's novel Old Herbaceous (Book Review Digest 1951).

Booklist 48:182 F 1 '52

Bookmark 11:103 F '52 20w

"These light, humorous, feathery verses by the author of Old Herbaceous are full of good cheer and a benign philosophy."

+ Kirkus 20:19 Ja 1 '52 50w

Reviewed by G. D. McDonald

+ Library J 77:532 Mr 15 '52 100w

Reviewed by Rolfe Humphries

Nation 174:114 F 2 '52 70w

"Take this book to your next garden club and read it aloud. It will be better than most garden club lectures." W. P. Eaton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 F 3 '52 250w

"It's a merry book, one to be read in winter, when discontent rules, in spring and summer, when hopes run high; in autumn when the real work of the garden is—or ought to be—done. Mr. Teppich's sketches are nicely attuned to the verses." W. B. Hayward

+ N Y Times p10 Ja 27 '52 410w

Reviewed by Lawrence Ferling

San Francisco Chronicle p23 Mr 9 '52 50w

"This is a pleasant bouquet of light verse written for garden lovers." David McCord

+ Sat R 35:40 Mr 15 '52 280w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal

Springfield Republican p8D My 11 '52 70w

ARMSTRONG, THOMAS. Adam Brunskill.
574p $4 Harcourt

52-11348

A story of the lead mines in Yorkshire in the mid-nineteenth century. The action of the story revolves around the hero, Adam Brunskill, and his cousin and chief enemy, Reuben Natrass, his rival in love and work.

Booklist 49:125 D 1 '52

"An absorbing, pleasant narrative, rich in characterization and in native speech."

+ Bookmark 12:82 Ja '53 30w

"Armstrong, known in England as an author who has 'never failed to produce a best seller,' will now win renown in America." M. B. Snyder

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 O 26 '52 380w

"It is a long, sturdy story, packed with exciting events, peopled with many colorful characters, likable or villainous, and told with sympathetic warmth and narrative skill." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 O 19 '52 480w

"Written in the grand tradition of the nineteenth century, this novel is as texture-rich as a good Yorkshire pudding. The author has an excellent narrative sense. The hero and villain are of almost Gargantuan proportions." H. F. West

+ N Y Times p45 O 19 '52 320w

"Mr. Armstrong, who is a very popular novelist in England, makes few demands upon his readers. He is an old-fashioned storyteller, with graphic powers of description and strong, unsubtle sympathies in a novel as hearty as Yorkshire pudding. . . Instead of impersonal and implacable fate, the villain here is flesh and blood and can be vanquished. 'Champion!' Adam Brunskill comments on a far view or a fair turn of events. And champion he is, in all the earthy and unsubtle chapters of this novel." Walter Havighurst

+ Sat R 35:37 N 29 '52 340w

"It is a refreshing, vigorous and vital novel—a powerful novel—about strong-souled and strong-willed people who possess robust humor and earthy reality. 'Adam Brunskill' is well in the tradition of Richard Llewellyn, the early Cronin, and even Thomas Hardy, but the author is no copyist. His first American publication should have a rousing reception among readers sick to death of the anemic emotions exhibited in popular modern novels." L. S. Munn

+ Springf'd Republican p7C N 23 '52 260w

"The economic information is more interesting than the mechanical postures of the unconvincing characters."

Times [London] Lit Sup p357 My 30 '52 50w

ARNAUD, GEORGES, pseud. See Girard, H. G. C. A.

ARNOLD, MATTHEW. Notebooks; ed. by H. F. Lowry [and others]. 656p $10 Oxford
808.8 Quotations 52-8558

"[Consists of] page after page of extracts—from the Bible, Homer, Plato, Dante, Goethe, George Sand, the De Imitatione Christi, et al, and, at the end, seventy-six pages which list the books Arnold hoped to read, year by year, from 1852 to 1888. . . In keeping these commonplace books for thirty-seven years Arnold was practising what he preached in Culture and Anarchy. He was trying to get to know 'the best which has been thought and said in the world'; and by using this knowledge to turn a stream of fresh and free thought upon stock notions and habits." New Repub

"There are as many, if not more, quotations from French, German, Italian, and classical as from English authors. And no translation is provided. Most of the passages from the New Testament, too, are in Greek. But for those with some familiarity with foreign and classical languages and for students of Arnold's life and work and sympathisers with his high seriousness this is an invaluable volume." H. I.A. Fausset

+ Manchester Guardian p4 My 2 '52 300w

"The editors have performed their difficult tasks admirably but telling us how to use their work was not one of them. . . If the layman will be patient, bewilderment may give way to fascination. If he reads carefully he will find many revealing secrets of Arnold's inner life. Between the marching lines of the extracts there is a mind at work." Willard Thorp

+ New Repub 126:18 My 12 '52 1000w

Reviewed by Basil Willey

New Statesman & Nation 44:108 Jl 26 '52 1700w

Reviewed by Huntington Cairns

Poetry 81:196 D '52 2150w

"The religious note is evident and emphasized throughout these notebooks, as is the craftsmanship of good prose and poetry. This will be a great source book for all scholars whose special fields cross the path of Matthew Arnold." C. W. W.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 Jl 13 '52 200w

"This handsomely printed volume is a fine work of industrious, patient, resourceful scholarship. . . Only the most cynical will decry his effort. Only a reader lost in cynicism can fail to be heartened, in proportion to his receptivity and capacity, by 'The Note-Books of Matthew Arnold.'" B. R. Redman

+ Sat R 35:56 Je 14 '52 750w

"A special word of thanks should be accorded to the editors of these Notebooks for the zeal and skill which they have brought to the business of tracing all (or nearly all) Arnold's quotations. . . That it was all worth while they have no doubt. For they have no doubt that here is, if not a great book, a book illustrating greatness in a fashion fresh and moving. The moving quality of the book they may be thought to exaggerate, and Arnoldians will easily forgive them. But the book does illustrate in a fresh fashion Arnold's greatness."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p312 My 9 '52 2500w

ARNOLD, OREN. Savage son. 273p il $4.50
Univ. of N.Mex. press

Montezuma, Carlos—Fiction 51-13912

The somewhat fictionalized life story of Dr Carlos Montezuma, who died in 1923 in an Indian wickiup in the Arizona desert, after a lifetime of struggle to better the conditions of his own people: the Apache Indians.

"Sober, solid and frequently moving book. . . Montezuma's story was worth telling and Mr. Arnold has told it well, bringing to it compassion and dignity." V. P. Hass

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 N 25 '51 260w

Reviewed by E. G. Eastman

Springf'd Republican p21A Mr 23 '52 280w

ARNOLD, OREN. Thunder in the Southwest; echoes from the wild frontier; with drawings by Nick Eggenhofer. 237p $3.75 Univ. of Okla. press

979 Frontier and pioneer life—Southwest 52-4324

"An anthology of 16 true tall tales, all packed with more skulduggery and excitement than any similar number of fiction thrillers." Chicago Sunday Tribune

Booklist 49:102 N 15 '52

"Recommended as topnotch entertainment for anyone who likes his westerns violent." Al Chase

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p22 N 9 '52 60w

"Interesting reading, but a little 'over-popularized' for the real student of the Southwest." R. H. Dillon

+ Library J 77:1645 O 1 '52 90w

Reviewed by W. H. Hutchinson
— San Francisco Chronicle p4 N 30 '52
550w

"The book has been well and truly smacked down in various reviews, as indeed it should be. It is full of non-fact and romanticized nonsense. . . Mr. Arnold covers himself, or evidently feels that he does, in a preface in which he suggests that he has combined fact and folklore and that he has done so to make a good yarn. Unfortunately, even with this prefatory note, readers are going to take his stuff as all truth; people read that way."

J. H. Jackson
— San Francisco Chronicle p19 D 3 '52
700w

ARNOLD, RALPH. Skeletons and cupboards.
182p $2.50 Macmillan

Detective story. 51-14459

Bookmark 11:159 Ap '52
Kirkus 19:543 S 15 '51 60w

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge
New Statesman & Nation 43:740 Je 21
'52 70w

"Mr. Arnold seems not to have been introduced to the rules of evidence and it never occurs to him that the reader might like a clue or two. He does pour in evidence like anything toward the last and produces half a dozen answers before settling on one. Beyond this his own lively revaluations of character in several crucial instances succeed their own active appearance in the tale. Surprisingly, and in spite of this, the tale is diverting, although Mr. Arnold will be easier on reviewers when he makes up his mind whether he's writing wittily of low inclinations in high life or setting forth (wittily) a tale of detection. Easy to take except on technicalities."

James Sandoe
— N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 D 9
'51 230w

"Chief Constable Col. Lionel Chaplin has individuality as a detective; and the whole makes a satisfactory standard British package." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p12 D 16 '51 90w

"Mr. Arnold is adept at softening a denouement without letting you down; his plot may seem slight but works out fairly enough and his mild comedy is in the best British vein."

L. G. Offord
+ — San Francisco Chronicle p20 D 16 '51
70w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff
Sat R of Lit 34:38 D 22 '51 30w

"His tale is not well constructed; the reader is not given clues that lead him fairly to the solution, and the solution itself . . . is not only improbable and un-English and unethical, but, what is far worse, outrages the strict canons of detective fiction." Dilwyn Rees

— Spec 188:724 My 30 '52 90w

Springf'd Republican p6D D 30 '51
70w

ARMY, CLARA MAUDE (BROWN). Effectiveness of the high school program in home economics; a report of a five-year study of twenty Minnesota schools. 319p $4.75 Univ. of Minn. press

640.7 Home economics—Study and teaching
52-9769

"An important report of a comprehensive five-year study in twenty Minnesota schools has just been published by the University of Minnesota Press. Home economics was used as the medium for the investigation, but the design of the study and the implications from some of the findings seem to offer suggestions to educators in many fields." (School R) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Siegfried Mandel
Sat R 25:38 S 13 '52 20w

"The volume, apparently designed chiefly for students, teachers, and consultants, makes a significant and challenging contribution to the literature of a field where extensive and costly research projects are all too rare." Letitia Walsh

+ School R 60:498 N '52 650w

ARROW, KENNETH J. Social choice and individual values. (Cowles commission for research in economics) 99p $2.50 Wiley

301.15 Liberty. Value 51-9755

"This brief monograph constitutes a critical and constructive approach to the logical foundations of social choice. As used here, the concept of social choice is quite general, and is taken to include group political or social decisions attained through voting procedures, economic decisions effected through the operations of the market mechanism, as well as decisions by dictatorships or by convention." U S Quarterly Bk R

"It should be of great interest to social scientists in general, and to ethical and social philosophers as well, for the problem with which this book deals is an important and pervasive one." I. M. Copi

+ Ethics 62:220 Ap '52 1000w

"This is a challenging and disturbing book that demands the attention of everyone concerned with economic policy. Do we have a sufficient consensus to determine specific lines of policy? Or do our policy-makers fall into the error of imputing social preferences that do not actually exist? It would be well for all economists to follow Arrow and pause to reflect on the problems involved in jumping from individual tastes and values to the question of social choice." H. M. Somers

+ J Pol Econ 60:170 Ap '52 450w

U S Quarterly Bk R 7:153 Je '51 210w

ARTHUR, HERBERT, originally HERBERT ARTHUR SHAPPIRO (ARTHUR HERBERT, pseud). Freedom run. 249p $2.50 Rinehart

51-14306

A story of the far West in the 1870s. The hero of the author's earlier novel Bugles in the Night, helps to repel an invasion of California by Russians after our purchase of Alaska.

"A good yarn." Al Chase

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Mr 23 '52
60w

Kirkus 19:590 O 1 '51 50w

— N Y Times p12 D 23 '51 100w

"The Russians are about the only novelty in this fairly routine horse opera. . . The writing in this one is perhaps a little more awkward than usual."

— Sat R 35:32 Ja 26 '52 50w

ASHLEY, ROBERT. Wilkie Collins. (English novelists) 144p $2 Roy pubs.

B or 92 Collins, Wilkie [52-2912]

A brief biography of Wilkie Collins and an analytical study of his works, by an English writer. Index.

Booklist 49:107 N 15 '52

"Mr. Ashley writes rather unwinningly and crams in enough facts for two doctoral dissertations into his hundred and forty pages; nevertheless, his knowledge of and admiration for Collins make one excuse his occasional dullness." H. C. Webster

+ — N Y Times p30 N 9 '52 80w

"A concise, sympathetic and well-balanced introduction to Wilkie Collins; it is only unfortunate that his commendable little book should appear after Mr. Robinson's substantial biography. . . Mr. Ashley's own literary judgement is the more respected because he does not overstate his case." J. R.

+ Spec 188:379 Mr 21 '52 260w

"Mr. Ashley's small book is done with relish and, in its close attention to all that has been written about his subject, shows him in eager pursuit of what is obscure or unknown about Collins. . . As criticism the book is straightforward and conscientious, though it tends to isolate Collins from his literary background, the close and boon companionship with Dickens excepted, and hence misses something of depth."

ASHLEY, ROBERT—Continued

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p282 Ap 25 '52 270w

ASHLEY-MONTAGU, MONTAGUE FRANCIS.
Darwin; competition and cooperation. 148p $2.50 Schuman

575.01 Darwin, Charles Robert. Natural selection. Species, Origin of 52-12610

An examination of the origin of Darwin's ideas, and an analysis of the central concept of Darwinian biology. The author is chairman of the anthropology department at Rutgers. Annotated bibliography. Index.

Booklist 49:41 O 1 '52

"The style is eminently readable, if not polished, the book is brief, pungent, and challenging."

+ Kirkus 20:398 J1 1 '52 150w

"With its selective, annotated bibliography, an essential book for all but the most specialized libraries." Harold Lancour

+ Library J 77:1500 S 15 '52 110w

"Mr. Montagu certainly makes a solid—and rapid—demonstration of his point. He is particularly good at citing authorities on ecology, genetics, physiology, and the like, all of whom agree on the ultimate victory of the cooperative over the competitive factor." E. B. Gar-side

+ N Y Times p61 N 23 '52 370w

Reviewed by E. W. Sinnott

+ Sat R 35:19 S 27 '52 700w

School & Society 76:176 S 13 '52 30w

Springf'd Republican p16C S 14 '52 120w

ASHTON, PEARL FULTON. Everyone can paint fabrics, 163p il $3.95 Studio

745.52 Textile painting 52-7381

Easy to follow instructions on stenciling and freehand painting on fabrics. Includes photographs, stencils and drawings. No index.

Booklist 48:374 J1 15 '52

Bookmark 11:209 Je '52 30w

"The directions for textile painting are extremely clear in this book. Explicit techniques and suggestions for variations are included. The excellent list of supplies and substitute equipment provides a fine reference and preparation source for the craftsman." Mathilda Vandenbergh

+ J Home Econ 44:814 D '52 120w

"Valuable in craft collections." A. S. Plaut

+ Library J 77:1508 S 15 '52 60w

"If you have been tempted to try your hand at painting designs on fabric but do not know just how to begin, this book will give you the necessary information."

+ School Arts 52:12a N '52 80w

ASIMOV, ISAAC. David Starr, space ranger, by Paul French [pseud]. 186p $2.50 Doubleday

52-5220

Science-fiction for older boys and girls.

Bookmark 11:134 Mr '52

Kirkus 19:705 D 15 '51 120w

"Fast-moving, imaginative reading." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p34 F 17 '52 180w

"Juvenile or not [this] is pretty good reading." Don Fabun

+ San Francisco Chronicle p29 F 24 '52 50w

ASIMOV, ISAAC. Foundation and empire. 247p

$2.75 Gnome press

Science-fiction.

Booklist 49:69 O 15 '52

"Too carefully thought out and well written to be labeled simply 'space opera,' these stories are still recommended only with caution to the general reader; they are so elaborately and coldly contrived that they lose sight of humanity." H. H. Holmes

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p34 O 12 '52 120w

"Told with a light touch this struggle could have been very pleasant melodrama. The story, unfortunately, is humorless and heavy-handed, much too much for the endurance of any but the stoutest reader." J. F. McComas

— N Y Times p20 N 23 '52 120w

"Asimov is very good at this sort of thing, but in these two 'Foundation' stories, there is considerably more talk and less action than in his previous psycho-history ones." Don Fabun

San Francisco Chronicle p9 D 21 '52 200w

Reviewed by Fletcher Pratt

Sat R 35:43 O 18 '52 20w

ASQUITH, LADY CYNTHIA MARY EVELYN (CHARTERIS). Remember and be glad. 214p il $3.75 Scribner

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. [52-30755]

This second volume of the author's memories of childhood and youth is devoted chiefly to sketches of the many famous people who visited her mother's hospitable home in Edwardian days—A. J. Balfour, Charles Whibley, Lord Hugh Cecil, Professor Walter Raleigh, Mr and Mrs Sidney Webb, H. G. Wells, etc.

Bookmark 12:51 D '52 20w

Reviewed by Leila Flower

Christian Science Monitor p7 O 2 '52 500w

Kirkus 20:446 J1 15 '52 180w

Manchester Guardian p4 My 9 '52 160w

Reviewed by G. W. Stonier

New Statesman & Nation 43:624 My 24 '52 70w

"There is, it seems to me, no sick nostalgia but a gracious acceptance of change, the basis of new forms of culture. There is little anger at losses, deserved and undeserved, and implicit in the telling, there is an awareness that nature and the arts endure. . . Cynthia Asquith's memoirs have been teased from her by an anonymous friend, and are therefore less addressed to the world at large than to a confidante. There is an air of intimacy and reluctance in them, gentle wit in the writer and good memory for the wit of others." Rhoda Monck

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 S 21 '52 800w

"Her manner of writing, which is rambling, pleasant and nostalgic adapts itself, not without grace, to its material." J. V.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 O 26 '52 240w

"Lady Cynthia has placidly determined to see people and places at their smiling best. The result could be deadly, but it isn't. Although the salt of spite is left out, these reminiscences don't lack seasoning. They are neither insipid nor sentimental." H. T. Moore

+ Sat R 35:29 S 20 '52 550w

"This charming book is not of the highest value as a work of art; it is wayward and random, with many lapses of style; but it certainly is a piece of delightful and exuberant life." C. E. Vulliamy

+ Spec 188:522 Ap 18 '52 450w

"Lady Cynthia has warned us in her preface that it is outside the scope of her ambition to betray herself or others. Not to betray is not to reveal, and we cannot but regret that she deliberately turns her back on the attempt to make a lasting contribution to literature or social history; but we can be grateful for the charming fragments to which we are treated. . . To these purposes her intimate manner and vivid epistolary style are admirably suited."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p315 My 9 '52 550w

ASSIAC, pseud. See Fraenkel, H.

ASSIS, MACHADO DE. See Machado de Assis, J. M.

ASTOUNDING SCIENCE FICTION (periodical). Astounding science fiction anthology; selected and with an introd. by John W. Campbell; stories by: Isaac Asimov [and others]. 585p $3.95 Simon & Schuster

Short stories—Collections 52-8065

"The editor of Astounding Science Fiction magazine has chosen 23 highly imaginative tales and arranged them in chronological order from 1941 to 1951 to show the progress of modern science fiction from space opera to a more mature form of story. For older group." Booklist

Booklist 48:249 Ap 1 '52

Kirkus 20:49 Ja 15 '52 120w

"John Campbell of 'Astounding' is unquestionably the most important editor in the history of science fiction to date. . . But it's extremely hard to see what editorial principles governed the selection of these particular stories. They are not the outstanding highpoints in the magazine's history; any aficionado can point to astonishing omissions." H. H. Holmes
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Ap 27 '52 270w

Reviewed by Fletcher Pratt

N Y Times p19 J1 13 '52 100w

Reviewed by Don Fabun

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Mr 30 '52 200w

"A-1, but for specialists only." Fletcher Pratt
+ Sat R 35:44 My 24 '52 20w

Springf'd Republican p10D Mr 30 '52 230w

ATIAH, EDWARD SELIM. Thin line. 216p $2.50 Harper

52-5414

Psychological novel. The hero is Peter Mason who had strangled his mistress, who was also his best friend's wife, and hoped to get away with it.

Kirkus 20:139 F 15 '52 80w

Reviewed by Paul Bloomfield

Manchester Guardian p4 Ag 24 '51 140w

"Mr. Atiah's breadth of perception warrants admiration. But in spite of his seemingly comprehensive scrutiny of the murderer's thoughts and feelings, the fellow remains at the last oddly impalpable. 'The Thin Line' seems still likely to fascinate you more than it annoys, and it certainly encourages attention for anything else Mr. Atiah may have to say." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 My 18 '52 170w

"An extraordinarily effective first novel." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p19 My 18 '52 170w

"Characters and emotions are extremely well handled, so that the reader suffers along with the protagonist. Realistic but painful." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 My 18 '52 40w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 35:31 Je 28 '52 20w

"The whole business is excellently told—except for two rather self-conscious dialogues between the two sides of the murderer's mind—and shows Mr. Atiah to be both strong and sensitive. His portraits of children are exceptionally good, and Margaret the murderer's wife, is a figure whom any novelist might acknowledge." L. A. G. Strong

+ Spec 187:614 N 9 '51 130w

"The story is well told, with sympathy and spiritual insight, and it haunts the memory after it is finished."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p641 O 12 '51 250w

Wis Lib Bul 48:181 J1 '52

AUBREY-FLETCHER, SIR HENRY LANCELOT, 6th bart (HENRY WADE, pseud). Diplomat's folly. 300p $2.75 Macmillan

52-6595

Detective story.

Reviewed by Drexel Drake

Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 Mr 9 '52 80w

+ Kirkus 19:668 N 15 '51 50w

"To introduce the French Resistance as a plot is like introducing a wood-beetle to furniture; it never fails to eat away the vitals and leave a hollow mockery. Diplomat's Folly is riddled with the pest; and no plugging the holes on the part of the author can save his otherwise excellent carpentry from falling flat." Ralph Partridge

New Statesman & Nation 41:718 Je 23 '51 130w

"Henry Wade has written a good many novels during the fifteen intervening years since his last previous appearance here and one hopes that his new American publishers are reading them to publish next any one of several among them which will represent him as entertainingly and with solid satisfaction." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 F 3 '52 240w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p25 F 10 '52 110w

"Wade's treatment of this problem in professional detection couldn't be bettered; it's straight-forward, knowledgeable and convincingly human." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 F 17 '52 70w

"Satisfactory." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 35:55 F 16 '52 30w

"My enjoyment of Mr. Wade's energetic and convoluted plot was spoiled by the fact that I could take little interest in the characters. I am so constituted as to prefer a loosely written story about characters who interest me to a well-tailored one about dummies. Mr. Wade's are not dummies, but his tailoring seems to me several cuts better than his material." L. A. G. Strong

Spec 185:760 Je 8 '51 190w

AUCHINCLOSS, LOUIS (ANDREW LEE, pseud). Sybil. 284p $3 Houghton

51-8774

Character study of Sybil Rodman, who at twenty-one married a wealthy New Yorker. Sybil was serious and shy and her good natured husband soon tired of her. When her husband came home from World War II and was attracted to another woman, Sybil was able to withstand the scandal without compromising her own integrity.

"This is a civilized novel, neither powerful nor profound, but thoroughly adult, well-written, and with an individuality of its own."

+ Atlantic 189:85 F '52 130w

Reviewed by Richard Sullivan

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ja 20 '52 320w

"It is the failure of the matured Sybil that mars this novel most. After her behavior in that first chapter we expect important things from her. Right up to the last page we feel Mr. Auchincloss hovering, just on the verge of having Sybil do something very significant, something that will make the whole book come vibrantly alive with meaning. Unfortunately, this never comes off. Even so, 'Sybil' is an interesting novel, gracefully handled throughout." Elizabeth McLaughlin

AUCHINCLOSS, LOUIS—Continued

 Christian Science Monitor p14 Ap 3 '52 290w

"An intelligent rather than intense perspective of private lives, acerbic in its social commentary as well."
 + Kirkus 19:644 N 1 '51 160w

"Competent handling of a subordinated plot and skillful narration." H. S. Taylor
 + Library J 77:48 Ja 1 '52 80w

Reviewed by J. D. Scott
 New Statesman & Nation 43:566 My 10 '52 240w

"Sybil is not an exceptional woman in anything but her capacity to be honest with herself. The value of Mr. Auchincloss' novel, likewise, is that he has taken persons and circumstances that cannot be unusual in the circles of which he writes and given them light and shade and definition by the clarity and scrupulousness with which he sees and pictures them." Mary Ross
 + N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ja 6 '52 410w

"A serious, solid, sensitive first novel, much in the manner of Edith Wharton." Nancy Lenkeith

+ N Y Times p5 Ja 6 '52 400w

"Sybil is a girl of colorless charm, whose desire to behave nicely is never distracted by honest impulse and who is possessed of a remarkably strong, though concealed, instinct for keeping herself and her possessions scrupulously intact."

New Yorker 27:82 Ja 12 '52 80w

"It is frankly exasperating not to be able to warm up to Sybil in her role of heroine. The sense of frustration is due in part to a peculiar vague quality that washes out definite impressions. . . Sybil, in spite of her fondness for bars, refuses to emerge as a modern young woman; in the world of Edith Wharton she would be more at home." Josephine Lawrence
 Sat R 35:12 Ja 26 '52 500w

"Mr. Auchincloss may write short stories like an angel, but his performance in this novel is naive and empty." R. D. Charques

— Spec 188:654 My 16 '52 80w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn

Spring'd Republican p12D Mr 16 '52 390w

"As the story of a young woman fed up with a career of idleness, Sybil is both intelligent and persuasive. What makes his story lose effect is a detached air that sometimes turns Sybil and her circle into people talked about rather than seen. For all its urbanity, Sybil winds up as not much more than fashionable gossip, well and truly gossiped."

+ — Time 59:94 Ja 14 '52 170w

Times [London] Lit Sup p325 My 16 '52 290w

Wis Lib Bul 48:93 Mr '52

"In this novel, his first, Mr. Auchincloss shows many faults. His style is rather flat, and at times even clumsy; he has a sharp eye, but seldom describes what he observes with quite enough flair or wit. His heroine, furthermore, is a little too sensitive to ring true, a little too much the faithful recorder of her creator's feelings and ideas. In spite of its limitations, however, Sybil is one of the most promising American novels in a long time." James Yaffe

Yale R n s 41:6 spring '52 460w

AUFRICHT, HANS. Guide to League of nations publications; a bibliographical survey of the work of the League, 1920-1947. 682p $10 Columbia univ. press

016.34112 League of nations—Bibliography 51-14811

"Comprehensive bibliographical material on League publications and listing of major documents of related agencies." (Am Pol Sci R) Index.

Am Pol Sci R 46:266 Mr '52 20w

Current Hist 22:320 My '52 60w

"This useful bibliographical survey is also of value in outlining the scope and development of the League's manifold activities."

+ Foreign Affairs 30:494 Ap '52 20w

"This book will be of immense service to the historian seeking to assess the lessons of the past and to statesmen seeking guidance for the future."

+ School & Society 75:110 F 16 '52 30w

"Probably the most useful general reference tool thus far made available for League of Nations publications, this Guide, although selective in its coverage, is, even so, more comprehensive than previous works of its kind since it lists, besides the documents offered for sale, those otherwise distributed. . . Well indexed, the Guide is a noteworthy contribution toward the bibliographical control of the publications of international organizations."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:218 Je '52 230w

AULAIRE, MRS INGRI (MORTENSON) D', and AULAIRE, EDGAR PARIN D'. Buffalo Bill. [40p] il $2.75 Doubleday

Cody, William Frederick (Buffalo Bill)—Juvenile literature 52-10232

A nursery age version of the story of Buffalo Bill.

Reviewed by M. F. Kieran

Atlantic 190:101 D '52 10w

Booklist 49:128 D 1 '52

Bookmark 12:35 N '52

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 N 16 '52 150w

Commonweal 57:170 N 21 '52 20w

Horn Bk 28:415 D '52 40w

"As with Leif the Lucky it is difficult to put a finger on just why this book is not wholly satisfying. Perhaps because it is too pretty. . . However, it makes an excellent introduction to a popular figure in American folklore."

+ — Kirkus 20:546 S 1 '52 90w

"Recommended." H. E. Walker

+ Library J 77:2074 D 1 '52 60w

"The text is factual, with no talking down, and the many big pictures a pleasant introduction to the old west for this age." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p5 N 16 '52 60w

"In direct and vigorous style, Edgar and Ingri d'Aulaire depict Buffalo Bill's biography with bright sweeping illustrations that convey the breadth of the plains and the primitive drama of the times." M. J.

+ N Y Times pt2, p39 N 16 '52 120w

New Yorker 28:204 D 6 '52 40w

AULEN, GUSTAF, bp. Christus victor; an historical study of the three main types of the idea of atonement; authorized tr. by A. G. Hebert. 163p $2.50 Macmillan

232.3 Atonement A52-9812

"First published in England some years ago [this book by a] doctor and professor of systematic theology at the University of Lund, in Sweden, has just been brought out in an American edition. The book is a history and analysis of the three main branches of the Christian theory of atonement. Dr. Aulen develops his thesis with a presentation of the satisfaction theory held by the Catholic church—that satisfaction for evil must be made to God by man, that man alone could not accomplish it, and so it is done by means of God becoming man in Christ." Spring'd Republican

"[This book] has already had much influence on theological thinking about the atonement, but the appearance of an American edition should revive interest in it. It certainly will among Lutherans, for it not only sounds the praises of the Great Reformer in the highest terms but makes an important contribution to the significant revival of Luther studies in our time. Of more general concern is its radical reconstruction of the history of the doctrine of the atonement." W. E. Garrison + Christian Century 69:341 Mr 19 '52

 1250w
 Spring'd Republican p3D D 23 '51
 350w

AUSTIN, RUTH ERMA, and PARVIS, JEAN-NETTE O. Furnishing your home; ed. by Ivol Spafford [il. by Samuel H. Bryant]. (Homemaker lib) 282p il $3.50 Houghton
 747 House decoration. Furniture 51-14404
 This volume is "written particularly for high-school students, but it may also serve as a guide for others who are interested in furnishing or improving their homes." (Pref) It will also be a help to those who want to decorate their homes on a limited budget. Index.

Booklist 49:7 S 1 '52

"For a long time there has been a real need for a text or reference book on home furnishings, suitable for high school students. . . We may consider ourselves fortunate that the authors of Furnishing Your Home have written it so that the subject matter and its presentation are suitable to the comprehension and the economic level of so many of our high school pupils. The organization is clear and simple; the book is interesting and readable for a young girl; illustrations are good; the headings are in distinct type and spaced so that points are clearly emphasized." M. E. Johnson

+ J Home Econ 44:221 Mr '52 240w

AUSUBEL, HERMAN, and others, eds. Some modern historians of Britain; essays in honor of R. L. Schuyler, by some of his former students at Columbia university. 354p $5 Dryden

942.007 Historians. Schuyler, Robert Livingston. Great Britain—History—Historiography 51-14839

"Brief essays in honor of Professor Schuyler.
 . . Besides providing a good deal of valuable criticism of twenty-one modern historians of Britain, arranged by date of birth from John Lingard, 1771, to Eileen Power, 1889, the authors grapple throughout with fundamental questions of aims, methods, and bias that forever plague the serious student of the past."
 U S Quarterly Bk R

"The essays are full of acute comment and valuable material, and it is not easy to single out any one of them for special mention.
 Among the earlier historians Lingard and Hallam are excellently done. . . In each case the writer seemed to me to have summed up most accurately the men as well as their work.
 Professor Brebner's account of Halévy is admirable; so also is Miss Rex's essay on Firth."
 E. L. Woodward

+ Am Hist R 57:952 Jl '52 800w

"This is a useful and interesting book, although it is not as comprehensive as might be wished and sometimes has an air of uncertainty which lessens its distinction. . . It is not necessary to pick and choose amongst the various essays. They all reach a high degree of competence without, in most cases, attaining to that degree of authority and distinction that makes the reader feel that the last word has been spoken." George Wilson

+ Canadian Hist R 33:180 Je '52 360w

Reviewed by Hans Kohn

N Y Times p28 F 10 '52 340w

"The editors and the publishers are to be congratulated on a bright and erudite volume in honor of a distinguished historian and teacher." John Trueman

+ Sat R 35:31 Ag 16 '52 170w

"An unusual contribution to historiography.
 . . The papers maintain an unusually even and high standard of excellence."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:52 Mr '52 240w

AVERILL, ESTHER HOLDEN. Jenny's adopted brothers; il. by [the author]. 32p
 $1.50 Harper

Cats—Legends and stories

52-7849

Further adventures of the clever little black cat called Jenny Linsky. This time Jennie persuades the Captain to adopt two homeless cats.

Booklist 49:37 S 15 '52

Commonweal 57:170 N 21 '52 10w

+ Horn Bk 28:317 O '52 90w

Reviewed by A. C. Moore

+ Horn Bk 28:393 D '52 90w

Kirkus 20:402 Jl 15 '52 160w

"A story that will delight all 5-10-year-olds, those who know Jenny and those to whom she is a new personality." M. C. Skinner
 + Library J 77:1410 S 1 '52 60w

"If you love cats, the first page of this book will go right to your heart, showing Jenny sitting under a red rose bush in her red scarf.
 A few pages more will prove that this artist is also master of a special sort of prose, very appealing to children under ten, and a delight to read aloud. The many little pictures exactly match it, amusing and naive, yet masterfully cat-like." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 S 14
 '52 200w

"An amusing and appealing story for all humans—small and large." C. E. Van Norman
 + N Y Times p18 Ag 10 '52 110w

New Yorker 28:192 D 6 '52 50w

"The book, like the others of the chronicle, has style and charm."

+ Sat R 35:51 N 15 '52 110w

AXELROD, HERBERT R. Tropical fish as a hobby; a guide to selection, care, and breeding; with chapters on How fish get their names and Aquarium genetics by Myron Gordon, and a chapter on The balanced aquarium myth by James W. Atz. 264p il col il $4 McGraw

590.7 Fishes. Aquariums

51-12554

"This book immediately gets down to practical consideration of the type of aquarium to maintain, the kind of tank to buy, and the necessary accessories. The appendix gives in tabular form the popular and scientific names of over 100 fish as well as essential facts on their care and breeding. More complete information on each type is given in the main part of the book. There is also brief survey of the history of aquaria, and of the now disproved idea that the animals and plants of an aquarium balance each other in their production and consumption of carbon dioxide and oxygen." Library J

Booklist 48:192 F 15 '52

Reviewed by E. M. Cole

Library J 76:1800 N 1 '51 130w

San Francisco Chronicle p24 F 17 '52
 60w

AYME, MARCEL. Second face; tr. from the French by Norman Denny. 182p $2.50
 Harper

52-5416

A sophisticated novel. A Parisian of the bourgeois suddenly discovers he has a new face, which is very attractive to women. His changed condition prompts him to spend all his spare time trying to seduce his own wife.

Booklist 48:281 My 1 '52

Reviewed by Milton Crane

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ap 20 '52
 280w

Kirkus 20:163 Mr 1 '52 200w

Reviewed by E. F. Walbridge

Library J 77:590 Ap 1 '52 90w

"[The book] abounds in vital humour. . .
 There are hints of more serious implications in Raoul's second face, but these are never developed in a story, sage, salty, and funny,

AYME, MARCEL—Continued
which is like an old French fairy-tale brought up to date." H. I. A. Fausset

+ Manchester Guardian p4 N 9 '51 100w

Reviewed by Ruthven Todd
Nation 175:17 J1 5 '52 60w

Reviewed by Wade Donahoe
New Repub 126:22 Ap 28 '52 280w

"Whether you like The Second Face or not depends largely upon whether, while reading it, you can suspend your disbelief in a man's face changing from unattractive middle-age to handsome youth. If you can manage this, there is a lot of entertainment to be had." J. D.
Scott

New Statesman & Nation 42:570 N 17
'51 110w

Reviewed by Ramon Guthrie
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ap 20
'52 380w

"At a time when the prevailing fashion in the serious French novel is philosophic and steeped in bile, Marcel Aymé is a refreshing deviationist, working in an older Gallic tradition. Sharp-eyed, amused and infinitely curious, M. Aymé is the canny observer more interested in life as it is lived than in the hidden 'whys' and problematic 'shoulds' of human behavior. He records the comédie humaine satirically, but with no reformist bent. His underlying loyalty is to the Français moyen."
C. J. Kolo

+ N Y Times p5 Ap 13 '52 600w

"A tiresome, capering book."
— New Yorker 28:141 Ap 26 '52 60w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p14 My 13 '52
500w

"Marcel Ayme is, after Raymond Queneau, the most gifted comic talent writing today in France. His comic force occasionally oversteps the bounds of genteel entertainment and becomes bitter and savagely cruel, especially in his plays. . . . But when he is at his best, close to the folk humor of French country people, never obscene or coarse, refreshingly devoid of philosophical ambitions, Marcel Aymé can be an excellent stylist and a vivid painter of his compatriots, and of universal man along with them. 'The Second Face' is one of his best books." Henri Peyre

+ Sat R 35:31 Ap 19 '52 700w

"Ridiculous, ordinary, but very human, little Cerusier is one of the richest literary creations of the year."

+ Time 59:112 Ap 14 '52 500w

"All this is amusing enough, and is easily imaginable as a play in a Paris theatre. There are, however, moments when the author seems to toy with something rather more serious, which never takes quite successful shape."

Times [London] Lit Sup p673 O 26 '51
340w

AYRES, EUGENE, and SCARLOTT, CHARLES
A. Energy sources, the wealth of the world.
344p il $5 McGraw

621 Power (mechanics) 51-12558

"How much coal and oil are left? What will the world do when they are used up? What about abundant energy from radioactive materials? What are the prospects of the many questions that are discussed expertly in this work?" Library J

Foreign Affairs 31:153 O '52 20w

"A book that has both reading and reference value and that will be useful in both general and technical collections." R. R. Hawkins
+ Library J 77:535 Mr 15 '52 50w

"No clearer survey has yet appeared of the world's energy sources and of future prospects than this study by Ayres and Scarlott. Their impressive array of facts and figures and their sensible judgments are at once a challenge to complacency and a refutation of fashionably dismal prophecies." J. R. Newman
+ New Repub 126:20 Ap 21 '52 370w

N Y New Tech Bks 37:21 Mr '52

"This is an extraordinary book, valuable to fuel technologists and conservationists, yet highly fascinating reading for the informed layman. A classified bibliography of over two hundred titles increases its usefulness to the specialists."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:211 Je '52 260w

B

BABB, LAWRENCE. Elizabethan malady. 206p
$3.50 Mich. state college press

820.9 English literature—History and criticism. Melancholy 51-12219

In this "study of melancholia in English literature from 1580 to 1642" the author has "attempted to define what melancholy meant during the late Renaissance period in both scientific and popular usage, to describe the epidemic of melancholy in England, and to show in what manner it influenced thought and literary expression." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

"Dr. Babb has thrown a new light on the mentality of the age and analysed its expression in literature. His study will prove illuminating to those concerned with the wide range of Elizabethan and Jacobean poetry and drama, famous or obscure. Well-known phrases from Shakespeare and Donne take on a new significance."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p22 Ja 11 '52
1050w

U S Quarterly Bk R 7:349 D '51 250w

BABBITT, HAROLD EATON. Engineering in public health. (Civil engineering ser) 582p il
$8 McGraw

614 Public health. Sanitary engineering
51-12583

"An introductory but thorough text on what used to be called 'sanitary engineering' and is now gradually acquiring a new name, 'public health engineering.' Aspects of community hygiene such as public health administration, epidemiology and communicable diseases, biostatistics, disinfection, food sanitation, water supply, housing, refuse collection, sewage treatment, water pollution, and sanitary engineering in times of disaster are discussed authoritatively and clearly." (Library J) Index.

"The presentation is straightforward and understandable. The book should be a valuable reference volume not only for specialists in environmental sanitation, but also for other members of the public health team, such as the nurse and physician." F. B. Elder

+ Am J Pub Health 42:1600 D '52 310w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 77:1308 Ag '52 60w

N Y New Techs Bks 37:46 My '52

"The treatment of the subjects of the twenty-six chapters is rigidly brief, but accurate. For the engineer in public health, always confronted with a broad spectrum of problem and function, the book should prove more valuable, perhaps, than any other now available. For the specialist, reference to more comprehensive texts remains essential, but he will find here much compact and useful information."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:315 S '52 150w

BABCOCK, HAVILAH. Tales of quails 'n such; decorations by William J. Schaldach. 236p $4 Greenberg

799 Hunting. Fishing 51-14307

Twenty-seven chapters about hunting, dogs, and fishing in the South, with much of the hunting centered on quails.

"Good, enjoyable, but not up to his inimitable My Health is Better in November." R. W.
Henderson

Library J 77:57 Ja 1 '52 40w

Reviewed by Jack Pegues

San Francisco Chronicle p4 N 25 '51
80w

BABER, MARY FRANCES (SAUER) (DAISY F. BABER, pseud). Injun summer; an old cowhand rides the ghost trails; as told by Bill Walker, 223p il $4 Caxton ptrs.

978.8 Walker, William. Frontier and pioneer life—Colorado 52-5212

"Random reminiscences of Bill Walker's life in the West. It ranges the Rockies from Montana to Arizona from the late 1860's to the early Thirties. The emphasis is on Colorado, with the Greeley-Loveland area the epicenter." San Francisco Chronicle

Kirkus 20:294 My 1 '52 120w

"When Bill Walker presents his own fast vanishing philosophy of life, his own reports of the unvarnished aspects of frontier living, Mrs. Baber gets color in her pan. . . Along with this, there are standard stories, the stock shots, of Colorado's legendary characters." W. H. Hutchinson

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p19 S 3 '52 400w

"'Injun Summer' is interesting, light reading when one becomes accustomed to its annoying spatter of exclamation points." J. M. England

+ — Sat R 35:19 Ag 16 '52 260w

BACON, CECIL WALTER. Scratchboard drawing [Eng title: Scraperboard drawing]. (How to do it ser) 96p il $5 Studio

741.2 [741.29] Scratchboard drawing 52-7609

"Scraperboard, or scratchboard, is a white, clay-surfaced card, on which a drawing can be made with indian ink, or any other suitable medium. When the ink is dry, the surface of the drawing can be cut, in any desired manner, with a knife or any sharpened point. This gives a white cut on a black surface, and is the basis of the material and method. Scraperboard is mainly used for making drawings for reproduction by the process line block. . . This book deals almost entirely with scraperboard drawings for reproduction. . . The work of some forty artists in the medium is included." Intro

Booklist 48:266 Ap 15 '52

Kirkus 20:185 Mr 1 '52 160w

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut

Library J 77:1508 S 15 '52 140w

"It is a medium of great variety and sensitivity for the graphic artist, and artist Bacon makes a fascinating presentation." D. A. F.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p26 Ap 6 '52 300w

School Arts 52:19a S '52 60w

BACON, PEGGY. Inward eye. 264p $2.50 Scribner

52-7365

Mystery story.

Booklist 48:230 Mr 15 '52

Bookmark 11:134 Mr '52

+ Kirkus 20:15 Ja 1 '52 120w

"This is a brilliantly successful mixture of melodrama and domesticity and demonstrates at the outset that Peggy Bacon can manage a typewriter as deftly as she manages her observant pencil." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p23 Mr 9 '52 280w

"Miss Bacon has conceived a suspense plot of a chilling cogency which Cornell Woolrich or Charlotte Armstrong may well envy. And she knows how to develop it with relentless plausibility and at the same time to keep her book brightly alive with warmly vivid descriptions of New York and its people, seen at once with the eyes of an artist and a novelist." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p19 Mr 2 '52 180w

"Leisurely and perhaps a little overwritten, but very real as to characters and settings."

+ New Yorker 28:96 Mr 1 '52 130w

"Backgrounds presented through an artist's eyes are the chief asset of a story which becomes increasingly wordy and ends not too convincingly. C plus." L. G. Offord

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p24 Mr 9 '52 70w

"Some strain on logic at outset, thereafter fairly smooth sailing; pleasant tone, but pace nowhere killing." Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 35:57 Mr 1 '52 40w

BADLEY, JOHN HADEN. Form and spirit; a study in religion. 247p $3.25 Beacon press

290 Religion. Religions [51-6474]

"The author maintains that 'religion in its fullest form combines the quest of truth, beauty, and moral good' and presents as proof, through a survey of world religions, the argument that faith has inspired all the best in religion, that various forms of religion may be outmoded as feudalism, but that true spiritual evolution creates new forms of expression in keeping with the times." Library J

Booklist 48:190 F 15 '52

"Badley has written a good, brief survey of the 'childhood of religion' and the major religions of the world. The approach is latitudinarian but not 'sweetness and light'; the style is readable, sound though not exciting. The chapters on worship, God, salvation, immortality, religion and morality are all well done." F. H. Ross

+ Christian Century 69:1127 O 1 '52 350w

Reviewed by E. W. Harris

Churchman 166:17 Mr 1 '52 200w

"Scholarly treatise written with philosophical precision by a learned Englishman. . . Erudite reading for liberal laymen and theological students seeking answers to many perplexing questions about the seeming decay of religious institutions today." R. B. Tubby

+ Library J 77:358 F 15 '52 90w

"Mr. Badley studies in detail the nature, origin and development of religion as faith, worship and conduct and their manifestations in the great world religions. Here he writes with unusual clarity. But when he enunciates the principles of a religion for today, he fears dogmatism to such an extent that he can suggest no new forms, can only give assurance that such forms will be created. The final chapter is hopeful in general, vague in particulars, and distinctly humanistic." G. R. Stephenson

+ — N Y Times p20 Mr 16 '52 200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p377 Je 15 '51 750w

BAER, MARIAN E. Sound, an experiment book; drawings by Jean Martinez. 127p $2.50 Holiday

534 Sound—Juvenile literature 52-10578

Easy experiments in sound for use with elementary school ages. Illustrated with diagrams. Index.

Booklist 48:344 Je 15 '52

"A well-designed book with large type and clear diagrams." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 28:245 Ag '52 110w

"Good class room material with a book that should get used after class hours too."

+ Kirkus 20:259 Ap 15 '52 130w

"Recommended for school libraries, especially, but a good addition to any children's room science collection." E. T. Dobbins

+ Library J 77:1080 Je 15 '52 60w

"A musician, a scientist, an educator, Mrs. Baer is remarkably equipped to write this interesting book. . . Here is a book for the intelligent music teacher in lower grades and for families to enjoy together." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Je 1 '52 170w

Reviewed by B. D. Hurley

N Y Times p16 Ag 17 '52 70w

BAGBY, GEORGE, pseud. See Stein, A. M.

BAGLEY, WILLIAM CHANDLER, and PERDEW, RICHARD MELVILLE. Understanding economics. 535p il $3.28 Macmillan

330 Economics, U.S.—Economic conditions 51-10589

"A book devised to interest high-school pupils in the study of economics through developing a sense of personal participation in economic life. The text is built around a series of economic problems faced by a typical middle-class family. Each chapter closes with a glossary of terms, questions based on the text, and suggested readings; there are graphs, charts, and photographs, all helpful in the exposition, and a carefully prepared index." School & Society

School & Society 73:254 Ap 21 '51 70w

"Textbooks in economics can be quite dull indeed! Presentations are frequently pedantic and the content overly encyclopedic. Understanding Economics is less dull than many books in the field and, more often than not, is positively interesting. Here is an attempt to picture economic life for high-school pupils in human terms within shouting distance of their own experiences. It is a brave attempt—and frequently succeeds." R. B. Edgerton

+ — School R 60:438 O '52 490w

"Criticism of the volume would center about two weaknesses: For secondary school use this volume does little to relate the course of economic events to their proper historical perspective. This lack of integration with the study of history might prove unfortunate in classes with poor background, or with instructors who take a more historical approach. A second criticism, common to all secondary level texts, is the over-simplification of theoretical concepts. . . [But the book] has an abundance of meaningful and clever pictures, diagrams, and sketches that contribute to the students' understanding of the subject matter without being monotonous or repetitious." F. E. Bauer

+ — Social Educ 16:87 F '52 400w

"The writers of this textbook have made an effort to be readable. The length of sentences and paragraphs is kept within bounds. In view of the technical economics vocabulary that must be digested, it is well to limit the remainder to the more common words. Here, occasionally, the book slips. Poor readers will have difficulty with phenomenon, aggregate, deterrent, and catastrophe for which familiar substitutes exist." S. M. Brodsky

+ — Social Studies 43:220 My '52 500w

BAILARD, VIRGINIA, and STRANG, RUTH MAY. Ways to improve your personality; drawings by Jane Oliver. (Whittlesey house publication) 249p $3 McGraw

137 Personality 51-12669

"Two experienced women make a personal approach to high school boys and girls by means of anecdotes about other young people with similar problems at home and at school, and by the introduction of charts for checking abilities, faults, temperament and attitudes." Horn Bk

Booklist 48:69 O 15 '51

"There is understanding but no condescension in the manner of extending advice, and no superficial psychological explanation to mislead the young people. The atmosphere is constructive and encouraging." S. M. A.

+ — Horn Bk 27:423 D '51 70w

"This text has a positive approach to problems common to most teen-agers. The younger adolescent group will find it very interesting and easy to understand. It will be helpful and meaningful to the older adolescent group." Katherine Conley

+ J Home Econ 44:64 Ja '52 200w

Kirkus 19:326 Jl 1 '51 130w

"Appealing presentation should attract even reluctant readers; clever cartoons, excellent print, many sub-heads within chapters, winning captions, attractive red cover, jacket sketches. For all young people's collections, public and school." M. K. Walraven

+ Library J 76:2015 D 1 '51 80w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ja 13 '52 130w

"A valuable addition to any school library and certainly a book which teen-agers will feel speaks directly to them." R. F. Osborne
+ School R 60:56 Ja '52 370w

BAILEY, CAROLYN SHERWIN (MRS EBEN CLAYTON HILL). Candle for your cake; drawings by Margaret Ayer. 248p $2.75 Lip-pincott

920

52-7458

"Twenty-four birthday stories of famous men and women." (Subtitle). Those included are: George Washington Carver; Hugh Lofting; Abraham Lincoln; William Frederic Cody; Howard Pyle; Lillian Wald; Queen Elizabeth II of Great Britain; William Shakespeare; Robert E. Peary; Saint Therése of Lisieux; Helen Keller; George Washington Goethals; Anne Carroll Moore; Beatrix Potter; John Eliot; Orville Wright; Anna Mary Robertson Moses; William Holmes McGuffey; Christopher Columbus; Dwight David Eisenhower; Marie Sklodovska Curie; Mark Twain; Joel Chandler Harris; Clara Barton.

Booklist 49:74 O 15 '52

"Nice for a gift—nice for reading at random."

+ Kirkus 20:456 Ag 1 '52 110w

"Such a book has many uses in schools and libraries. . . Here is a way, so well recognized at New York Central Children's Room by Miss Moore, of doing honor to people, their books and their works, that also honors the young celebrator by inspiring his further interests and ambitions." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 N 2 '52 220w

School & Society 76:159 S 6 '52 20w

BAILEY, JEAN. Cherokee Bill, Oklahoma pacer; il. by Pers Crowell. 190p $2.50 Abingdon-Cokesbury

Horses—Legends and stories 52-11646

Story of a boy and a horse at the time of the Cherokee Strip Run in 1893. For grades 5 to 8.

Booklist 49:37 S 15 '52

Bookmark 12:12 O '52 20w

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 16 '52 90w

Kirkus 20:371 Jl 1 '52 120w

"Since there is no other story based on this unique episode in American history, libraries needing regional material will want to purchase. Plot is dependent on coincidence and trite devices, and there is little character development." A. B. Martin

Library J 77:1411 S 1 '52 80w

"In addition to being an unusual horse story, 'Cherokee Bill' presents an authentic picture of the Old West based on the real experiences of a family." C. E. Van Norman

+ N Y Times pt2, p35 N 16 '52 80w

"A good story with natural convincing characters, this is especially good in background and atmosphere."

+ Sat R 35:46 O 11 '52 60w

BAILEY, STEPHEN KEMP, and SAMUEL, HOWARD D. Congress at work. 502p $5 Holt 328.73 U.S. Congress. Legislation—U.S. 52-7012

A study of the United States congress in the mid-twentieth century, with analyses of such topics as patronage, lobbying, the veto, etc. Illustrated with photographs. Glossary. Index.

Reviewed by Belle Zeller

Ann Am Acad 284:173 N '52 450w

Booklist 48:351 Jl 1 '52

Bookmark 11:205 Je '52 20w

Reviewed by Walter Trohan

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Jl 13 '52 400w

"It is not an editorial book, pleading special reforms. It seeks to explain. It is a thorough handbook and should be useful to anyone who wants to know about Congress as it is. It can be read by sections more effectively than consecutively, depending upon what an inquirer wishes to know. It performs an analytical service only." Roland Sawyer
+ Christian Science Monitor p9 J1 22 '52 550w

"This work is particularly useful in that it leaves the realm of the theoretical and concentrates solely on what actually happened. The book might have been more valuable if it had devoted more attention to why. Nevertheless, an admirable job is done in explaining Congress to the mature layman."

+ Current Hist 23:192 S '52 130w
Foreign Affairs 31:157 O '52 20w

"This is an interesting way to give the average voter some conception of what is involved in the term 'Congress at work.'"

+ Kirkus 20:183 Mr 1 '52 200w

"It will be invaluable in advanced citizenship and government courses and is strongly recommended for public library purchase."

Herbert Cahoon

+ Library J 77:886 My 15 '52 150w

"Two years ago Professor Bailey's Congress Makes A Law traced in detail the evolution of the Employment Act of 1946 in its course through both houses; and at the end of the year the American Political Science Association awarded it first place in its field for 1950. In the work here reviewed he may, in collaboration with his colleague, have rung another bell." W. E. Binkley

New Repub 126:20 Je 16 '52 900w

Reviewed by Lindsay Rogers

N Y Times p9 J1 6 '52 330w

"Concise and urbane, the case studies are surprisingly successful in achieving their purpose. Without delaying over the substantive issues involved, they keep their focus upon how Congressmen behave as individuals and as members of committees and of the legislative body in full session."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:294 S '52 270w

BAILEY, SYDNEY DAWSON. Ceylon. (Hutchinson's university library. British Empire history) 168p $2.25; text ed $1.80 Longmans

954.8 Ceylon—History 52-10348

A short history of Ceylon, which not only records the successive waves of invasions of Ceylon, and the periods of its rule by various nations, but also brings the story up to 1948. A final chapter contains a look at Ceylon's future. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Amabel Williams-Ellis

Spec 189:108 J1 18 '52 750w

"Mr. Bailey's book is rather disappointing. It is scrappy and disconnected and it never quite succeeds in giving a lucid and sustained account of Ceylon's history. It is, of course, an extremely difficult task to compress the history of some centuries into a couple of hundred pages. Yet that is precisely the task which this volume sets out to perform and by that standard it must be judged. It must be confessed that we still await a short history of Ceylon which will be really interesting to the general reader."

Times [London] Lit Sup p359 My 30 '52 400w

BAILEY, SYDNEY DAWSON, ed. Political parties and the party system in Britain; a symposium [by S. B. Chrimmes, and others] [Eng title: British party system]. (Hansard society ser. in parliamentary government) 211p $3.50 Praeger

329.942 Political parties—Great Britain

"Brief first part sketches evolution of parties in England. In second part history, philosophy and principles of three main parties are described. Part three takes up specific problems such as party organization, finances, personnel, etc. Editor, who himself contributes introduction and short, well selected bibliography, has collected in this small volume essays and articles by about twenty authors, mainly writers, professors and politicians." Library J

"The editor of the book has drawn together well-known writers to present a symposium on British party life. He has been very skilful in getting articles that fit a plan, so that there is an evident unity to the volume." W. H. Cooke

+ Ann Am Acad 284:214 N '52 400w

Booklist 48:351 J1 1 '52

Current Hist 23:395 D '52 50w

"Recommended for large public and educational libraries." H. H. Bernt

+ Library J 77:1072 Je 15 '52 130w

"Much of this book covers familiar ground with no particular distinction. But the chapters on 'Party Organisation' by Mr. R. T. McKenzie and on 'The Formulation of Party Policy' by Mr. H. G. Nicholas are important because they reveal how small the difference between the structures of the two main parties really is." H. J. Fairlie

New Statesman & Nation 43:678 Je 7 '52 950w

BAILLIE, EUGENE KENNETH. Homespun crafts. 159p il $3 Bruce pub.

745.5 [680] Handicraft 52-8173

Simple instructions with illustrations and patterns for making over fifty objects. Materials used are leather, wood, metal, felt, glass, etc.

Booklist 48:374 J1 15 '52

"In general, only the simplest tools found in the home are required. The illustrations and patterns are simple and easily understood. The text is clear and concise. The instructions are arranged in simple, easy to follow steps."

+ School Arts 52:19a S '52 90w

BAILY, LESLIE. Gilbert and Sullivan book. 443p il col pl $9 British bk. centre

782.1 [782.6] Gilbert, Sir William Schwenck. Sullivan, Sir Arthur Seymour. Operettas [52-7184]

Comprehensive history of the partnership of Gilbert and Sullivan, their lives, and the operettas they wrote. The book grew out of a series of B.B.C. broadcasts, and has been enlarged by material found in diaries, letters, and notebooks of the two men, and in the papers of Richard D'Oyly Carte. The many illustrations, some in color, are from photographs and sketches by Gilbert. Index.

Booklist 48:210 Mr 1 '52

Reviewed by Seymour Raven

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Mr 23 '52 260w

Reviewed by C. K. Miller

Library J 77:531 Mr 15 '52 70w

"Much of the story has been told in print before, some of it many times. . . Yet Mr. Baily, by a deft synthesis of voluminous sources both published and unpublished, and especially by a skillful and imaginative combination of text with pictorial materials, imparts a fresh and vivid three-dimensional character to the story that never was achieved by the more conventional methods of his predecessors." William Lichtenwanger

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 9:400 Je '52 480w

"Fascinating book."

+ New Statesman & Nation 43:383 Mr 29 '52 350w

"Now that Leslie Baily has written 'The Gilbert and Sullivan Book,' no one need perform this pleasant labor again. Although the general story of the inspired but uneasy theatre partnership is known, Mr. Baily has assembled the pertinent facts in one place and discovered some more that have never been published. . . He has told the whole story admirably." Brooks Atkinson

+ N Y Times p5 Mr 2 '52 1000w

BAILY, LESLIE—Continued

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 F 28 '52
700w

"This is not just another book about Gilbert and Sullivan; it is—and of this there is no possible doubt whatever—the Gilbert and Sullivan book." Newman Levy

+ Sat R 35:18 Mr 29 '52 700w

"I have no hesitation in saying that Mr. Baily's book is easily the most satisfactory account not only of Gilbert and Sullivan as individuals but of the ups and downs of the partnership between the two men in its every aspect. Moreover it presents the reader with many new facts. I never imagined that I knew all about Gilbert, but I did think that I knew all about Sullivan. Well, Mr. Baily has proved me wrong. . . . Mr. Baily's book is so valuable that from my point of view it is regrettable that there is not a more or less technical section summing up the qualities and the defects of Sullivan as a composer of comic opera." Francis Toye

+ Spec 188:267 F 29 '52 400w

"The Gilbert and Sullivan Book should find an eager public, if not a wide one at $9. Yet, for the price, Author Leslie Baily has given full measure: his is both the liveliest and the most complete account ever rendered of the great collaborators, their private lives and public works."

+ Time 59:98 Mr 3 '52 1400w

"The scrap-book method gives an immediate air of actuality, but does not make an altogether satisfactory book of reference. For example, The Gilbert and Sullivan Book, though it tells its tale efficiently, and gives a fair idea of the characters of the main persons involved, does not supply such a piece of information (which one might well expect it to contain) as the original casts of all the operas. A few original programmes are reproduced—but nothing like that complete series which would have been both interesting and useful for reference. The result is a book pleasant for anyone to possess—but for nobody essential. It suffers, also, from a rather too selective index."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p136 F 22 '52
550w

BAINBRIDGE, JOHN. Biography of an idea; the story of mutual fire and casualty insurance. 381p il $4 Doubleday

368 Insurance, Casualty. Insurance, Fire
52-5748

History of mutual fire and casualty insurance from the Great Fire of London to present-day American insurance firms. Describes rise of workmen's compensation; automobile, and other forms of insurance developed from the mutual idea. Index.

"John Bainbridge has taken the facts and figures of [this] subject and with a masterly use of words has welded a story which will be fascinating to those working in such a business field and interesting to most who want to know something about its operation." H. C. Kenney

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Ag 29 '52
370w

Kirkus 20:113 F 1 '52 180w

Management R 41:407 Je '52 40w

"The impression given by John Bainbridge's interesting and fact-filled book is that there is no more fascinating subject than the story of mutual fire and casualty insurance. And Mr. Bainbridge, a talented man in the field of arranging ideas, history, statistics and critical judgment into a smooth and readable whole, comes as close as is technically possible to proving his point." Stanley Levey

+ N Y Times p28 Ap 20 '52 360w

"This is a book no insurance company employee can afford to be without. It is also recommended for general reading because of the wealth of interest it maintains in its unfolding of the history of the business from the time of the great fire of London to the present day." B. F. K.

+ Springfield'd Republican p5C Jl 13 '52
120w

BAINTON, ROLAND HERBERT. Reformation of the sixteenth century. 276p il $3.75 Beacon press

270.6 Reformation

52-5244

An interpretative history of the Protestant Reformation. The author is Titus Street professor of ecclesiastical history at Yale. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by J. W. Nixon

+ Ann Am Acad 283:217 S '52 400w

Booklist 48:370 Jl 15 '52

"The author of 'Church of Our Fathers' and 'Here I Stand: A Life of Martin Luther' has done it again. He has produced a book in which easy sentences and charming old wood cuts mask the scholarship and insights of a first rank church historian." L. T. Heron

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Jl 13 '52
50w

"Bainton's Reformation meets a need that has long been felt. It is based on thorough scholarship, animated by a vigorous faith, and written so that any intelligent layman can read it with understanding." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 69:724 Je 18 '52 270w

Reviewed by F. J. Moore

Churchman 166:18 O 15 '52 230w

Reviewed by E. L. Allen

Hibbert J 51:86 O '52 50w

"Well written, directing the reader's interest to the main points to be considered relating to the Reformation, to the root beginnings of various of the Protestant sects. Woodcuts as illustrations add to its appeal."

+ Kirkus 20:344 Je 15 '52 200w

BAKER, MRS BLANCH (MERRITT). Theatre and allied arts. 536p $10 Wilson, H.W.

016.792 Theater—Bibliography. Drama—Bibliography
52-6756

"A guide to books dealing with the history, criticism, and technic of the drama and theatre and related arts and crafts." (Subtitle) This guide is divided into three main parts: (1) Drama, Theatre, and Actors; (2) Stagecraft and Allied Arts of the Theatre; (3) Miscellaneous Reference Material. Each part contains geographical or subject divisions, which in turn are broken down into smaller sections. Main entries in each section are arranged alphabetically by author. Each entry lists author, title, place of publication, publisher, date, paging, and illustrations. Brief references, labeled, Additional Material, are appended to most sections. Indexes.

Booklist 48:266 Ap 15 '52

Bookmark 12:37 N '52 10w

"Here is the basic theatre collection in essence, a guide to purchase as well as a valuable student aid. Recommended for university and large public libraries." George Freedley

+ Library J 77:721 Ap 15 '52 30w

"Although the volume has been compiled from the point of view of a librarian, it will be the first basic reference bibliography even for the specialist."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:338 S '52 220w

BAKER, CARLOS HEARD. Hemingway; the writer as artist. 322p $4.50 Princeton univ. press

813 Hemingway, Ernest

52-8759

"Begins with the young Hemingway, the veteran of the Italian fighting who returned to Chicago in 1919 and entered upon his literary apprenticeship. As the title indicates, the subject of the book is Hemingway, the writer as artist, rather than the man as writer, and one looks in vain for any biographical discussion that is not immediately related to the study of a literary work. . . . The critical examination and illumination of each of Hemingway's works is Baker's chief concern; between the chapters devoted to the novels, short stories, and nonfiction appear essays in interpretation of Hemingway's philosophy." Chicago Sunday Tribune

Booklist 49:63 O 15 '52
Bookmark 12:29 N '52 30w

"Prof. Baker of Princeton university has written the first full scale critical study of Ernest Hemingway's work. It is a thoughtful, intelligent book, informed by a profound admiration for its subject, and only infrequently betraying the enthusiasm of the committed partisan." Milton Crane

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 O 12 '52 270w

"Baker has written a useful, illuminating book. His great virtue as a critic is that despite his warm devotion to the subject he does not fall back on rhapsodic gusto as a substitute for thought and analysis. The cards are all on the table." P. F. Quinn

+ Commonweal 57:73 O 24 '52 950w

"A scholarly and challenging approach, which offers much that is controversial and provocative."

+ Kirkus 20:582 S 1 '52 240w

"This is not only the finest account of Hemingway and his work to date, but it is also a model of what a critical book on a contemporary writer can be. . . Mr. Baker's book will be a necessity in all college libraries and in most public libraries as well." Herbert Cahoon

+ Library J 77:1645 O 1 '52 120w

"This is an admirable study of a modern writer, comparable to Harry Levin's James Joyce, John Berryman's Stephen Crane and Mizener's Fitzgerald. Any one who has labored in the field of contemporary biographical criticism will realize the toil, patience, and responsibility that Mr. Baker brought to his appointed task." George Mayberry

+ New Repub 127:21 O 13 '52 1100w

Reviewed by Milton Rugoff

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 N 23 '52 1050w

"At bottom, I am afraid, this is a pedantic book. Mr. Baker—who is Professor of English at Princeton—seems to admire Hemingway's work more than he likes it. Aside from Hemingway himself, the writer most frequently quoted is Henry James, and Mr. Baker is happiest when he can get Hemingway safely tucked under James' wing. As great craftsmen, of course, the two men have much in common, but one does not get closest to the heart of Hemingway by way of Henry James." Granville Hicks

N Y Times p4 O 12 '52 1200w

Reviewed by Herbert Ruhm

San Francisco Chronicle p9 O 19 '52 550w

"A fine, sensible book, and when you think of all the possibilities for going astray about Hemingway's work and of all the irrelevant things it would be easy to write about his personality, you feel, I think, very grateful to Professor Baker for having written the kind of book he has." Arthur Mizener

+ Sat R 35:25 O 18 '52 550w

BAKER, CHARLOTTE (MRS ROGER MONTGOMERY). Kinnery camp; a story of the Oregon woods; story and pictures. 215p $2.50 McKay

51-13403

The adventures of two boys in an Oregon logging camp, where their mother is cook. Their uncle, who owns the camp, says a logging camp is no place for boys, but these particular boys prove him wrong. For grades four to seven.

Booklist 48:148 D 15 '51

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin
Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 F 24 '52 180w

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '51

"It seems to me not just another Western but a book that will live." J. D. Lindquist and S. M. Andrews

+ Horn Bk 27:326 S '51 60w

Kirkus 19:616 O 15 '51 150w

"The combination of the author's feeling for the Oregon forests and the incidents taken from her husband's boyhood experiences result in a warm and appealing story for boys and girls of 10-12." M. A. Herr

+ Library J 76:2011 D 1 '51 80w

"For younger boys, around twelve, life in a lumber camp in Oregon is presented with humor and realism." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 F 10 '52 50w

"Mrs. Baker has used her own knowledge of Oregon as well as her husband's stories of his boyhood, to excellent purpose." Marjorie Fischer

+ N Y Times p26 Ja 6 '52 120w

BAKER, CHARLOTTE (MRS ROGER MONTGOMERY). Sunrise Island. 158p il $2.75 McKay

52-8373

The background is the northwestern coast of America, before the white men came. It is the story of Young Slave and Eagle, the son of the chieftain. At the end of their adventure the slave has been discovered to be a chief himself.

Booklist 48:303 My 15 '52

"A fine story, not of 'blood and thunder'—though there is plenty of excitement—but of an aspect of the Indian's life that tells of his deep religious feeling, his skill in crafts, and his courage." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 28:102 Ap '52 100w

Kirkus 20:225 Ap 1 '52 180w

Reviewed by M. A. Herr

Library J 77:800 My 1 '52 80w

"Boys of ten to twelve have a rare treat ahead in this exciting, easy-reading book, intelligently planned and illustrated." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 My 18 '52 180w

"Mrs. Baker has constructed her story skillfully, using the rather slender store of facts which have been discovered about the tribes of the Pacific Northwest. The action develops from one tense moment to another until a last satisfying climax is reached." Iris Vinton

+ N Y Times p18 Je 15 '52 160w

BAKER, MARGARET JOYCE. Benbow and the Angels; decorations by Dorothy Lake Gregory. 211p $2.50 Longmans

52-5636

"Benbow, the hero of 'Four Farthings and a Thimble,' meets in this story four children who are living with the rector of a church in a little village in England. Busy, practical, and as full of ideas as ever, he helps them solve their problems." (Sat R) For ages ten to fourteen.

Booklist 49:18 S 1 '52

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 O 19 '52 140w

Horn Bk 28:409 D '52 100w

Kirkus 20:340 Je 15 '52 110w

"Recommended for ages 9-12." D. M. Blasco
+ Library J 77:1411 S 1 '52 70w

"There is too much very English detail for most ten to twelve-year-old Americans, plus a good sturdy bit of Church of England religion. However, for this perverse reviewer, the whole thing was delightful. Amongst so much that is 'easy,' how pleasant to find writing almost too literate." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 O 12 '52 220w

"The plot is frankly exaggerated. 'Real life,' says Benbow in a discouraged moment, 'is never like stories.' But Miss Baker redeems her narrative from melodrama by deft characterizations, humor and a sensitivity to the moods of childhood." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p26 O 12 '52 180w

BAKER, M. J.—Continued

"The story," has good points, but it moves rather slowly."

Sat R 35:39 Ag 16 '52 50w

School & Society 76:112 Ag 16 '52 30w

BAKER, MARGARET JOYCE. Family that grew and grew; il. by Nora S. Unwin. (Whitlsey house publication) 121p $2.25 McGraw 51-13603

Miss Basingstoke was a lonely old lady living in a little town in England. The purchase of a dog started things, and gradually she acquired a toy shop, an adopted son, and finally a husband. For ages 8 to 12.

Booklist 48:324 Je 1 '52

Reviewed by Ruth Wales

Christian Science Monitor p10 My 15 '52 40w

"In the genre of pleasant English village fiction, this has warmth of affection, amusing incidents, and the appeal of a war orphan who, from being 'shrunk and old,' gains happiness and security with Miss Basingstoke. Children will find the business of running a toy shop fun and they will like the real Currant children from the bakery who are devoted to Miss Basingstoke and her shop." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 28:173 Je '52 120w

Kirkus 20:126 F 15 '52 110w

"Both boys and girls from 8-10 will be sure to enjoy these wholesome people. Recommended." D. M. Blasco

+ Library J 77:908 My 15 '52 70w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p24 My 11 '52 40w

"Whether they are fantasy or everyday stories, all Miss Baker's books have a disarming make-believe quality about them. Even the everyday stories are romantic to the point of improbability, but they are also well-written, warm and humorous. Only the sternest of young realists could complain that things don't often happen like this. No one really expects them to." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p22 My 11 '52 130w

"This is a pleasant little tale for younger boys and girls."

+ Sat R 35:39 Ag 16 '52 40w

BAKER, MRS NINA (BROWN). Boy for a man's job. 179p il $1.50 Winston 52-5484

Fictionized account of the founding of St Louis for ages 9 to 14. It is the story of a fourteen-year-old boy from New Orleans who with the aid of his half Indian friend and his stepfather took part in the project.

Booklist 48:363 Jl 1 '52

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Ag 3 '52 30w

Kirkus 20:261 Ap 15 '52 170w

"Recommended." R. O. Bostwick

+ Library J 77:1080 Je 15 '52 80w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 My 11 '52 40w

"A very readable story." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p26 Je 8 '52 30w

Reviewed by Eleanor Breed

San Francisco Chronicle p3 N 16 '52 70w

Sat R 35:45 O 11 '52 30w

BAKER, MRS NINA (BROWN). Cyclone in calico; the story of Mary Ann Bickerdyke. 278p $3.50 Little

B or 92 Bickerdyke, Mrs Mary Ann (Ball) 52-5019

A biography of the Civil war nurse, Mary Ann Bickerdyke, who was the first field hospital nurse in American military history. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 48:227 Mr 15 '52

Bookmark 11:205 Je '52 30w

"Nina Brown Baker is an historian of no mean ability. She has laboriously ferreted out her material from books, letters, manuscripts, newspapers, and scrapbooks. She is absorbed with her subject and all major personalities are warmly presented. Of Mrs. Bickerdyke, she says, 'In her own time she was oversentimentalized, and then forgotten. I think we owe her something better.' With 'Cyclone in Calico' the debt is paid." K. Smith

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Mr 30 '52 330w

"Told in a style that incorporates the good, solid, down-to-earth language of the day, Nina Brown Baker's biography presents a fair picture of the social and political factors of the times as well as a swiftly moving account of Mother Bickerdyke's life."

+ Kirkus 20:26 Ja 1 '52 210w

"Mrs. Baker's highly readable biography, which has the earmarks of unobtrusive scholarship, gives a remarkably interesting picture of a personality, a period and many of the leading figures and events of the campaign in the West." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 My 4 '52 500w

Reviewed by Giraud Chester

N Y Times p4 Je 29 '52 400w

San Francisco Chronicle p30 Ap 20 '52 390w

Reviewed by Marguerite Clark

Sat R 35:16 My 24 '52 750w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:113 Je '52 220w

Wis Lib Bul 48:171 Jl '52

BAKER, MRS NINA (BROWN). Story of Abraham Lincoln; il. by Warren Baumgartner. 176p $1.50 Grosset

B or 92 Lincoln, Abraham—Juvenile literature 52-11073

Biography of Abraham Lincoln for grades 4 to 6. Includes many of the well-known Lincoln anecdotes. Covers the whole period of his life.

"The pictures by Warren Baumgartner have a good deal of spirit, with good likenesses." Helen Boyd

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p17 N 16 '52 40w

"An interesting, simply written, sympathetic biography. . . Recommended." L. E. Cathon

+ Library J 77:2075 D 1 '52 30w

BAKER, MRS NINA (BROWN). Story of Christopher Columbus; il. by David Hendrickson. 179p $1.50 Grosset

B or 92 Columbus, Christopher—Juvenile literature 52-11066

A biography of Christopher Columbus for grades 4 to 7. "It deals primarily with Columbus as a youth desiring to become a sea captain, his adventures as a young man leaving home to make his fortune, and, finally, his attempt to find a new route to the Far East." (Library J)

Christian Century 69:1258 O 29 '52 20w

Reviewed by E. C. Alexander

Library J 77:1906 N 1 '52 40w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles

+ San Francisco Chronicle p8 N 16 '52 60w

BAKER, RACHEL (MININBERG). Sigmund Freud. 201p $2.75 Messner

B or 92 Freud, Sigmund 52-13547

Authoritative biography of Sigmund Freud which may be used with high school classes. A Freud glossary. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 49:127 D 1 '52

"A calm, sensitive tribute and biography needed to make Freud as he was, human and understandable to younger readers."

+ Kirkus 20:608 S 15 '52 180w

"Narrated in a sympathetic, straightforward, readable style." E. H. Speer

+ Library J 77:2079 D 1 '52 40w

"However well done, such a book would be, to my mind, of doubtful value to any under college age. . . For adults, it is an easy introduction, and to them the glossary is valuable." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p11 N 16 '52 50w

"The author of 'First Woman Doctor' has written with insight and sensitivity the biography of one of the important figures of the twentieth century—Sigmund Freud." E. D. Hurley

+ N Y Times pt2, p20 N 16 '52 200w

BAKEWELL, PAUL. What are we using for money. 306p $4 Van Nostrand

332.4 Money—U.S. 52-11169

"Essentially a plea for a retreat from a managed currency, based on a historical tracing of the critical steps in development of our monetary policy, plus the argument that the Supreme Court in 1872 made an error of fact in stating that the Act of 1834 had reduced the value of the gold dollar, since there was in fact no gold dollar at that time; that that error has been persistently followed, up to and including the Gold Clause cases in 1935. A plea is made for reversal by the Court, or by the people through constitutional amendment." (Library J) Index.

"The sympathy of this reviewer is with the author in his demand for a truly sound currency. There appears faint chance, however, that enough people will be won over to a crusading belief that a gold-coin standard is vital to the maintenance of the existing free social order. It is, nevertheless, something for the managed-currency theorists to think about." George Ericson

Christian Science Monitor p9 O 29 '52 500w

"Popularly written despite its legal framework." J. E. Cross

Library J 77:1659 O 1 '52 50w

BAKST, AARON. Mathematics, its magic and mastery. 2d ed 790p il $6 Van Nostrand

793.7 [793.74] Mathematical recreations. Mathematics 52-5739

"Several misprints and errors in the first edition [Book Review Digest 1941] have been corrected, some numerical data have been adjusted to bring the book up to date, and more problems with answers have been added at the ends of chapters. Basic mathematical ideas are explained for the interested layman and illustrated with applications in everyday life." Booklist

Booklist 48:266 Ap 15 '52

"A popular exposition of mathematics in which some moderately complex mathematics is made reasonably clear by applying it to situations within the realm of common experience. There is a leavening of mathematical puzzles and recreations." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 77:722 Ap 15 '52 80w

School & Society 75:140 Mr 1 '52 20w

BALCH, GLENN. Squaw Boy; il. by Paul Valentino. 180p $2.50 Crowell

52-7041

A winter spent with an Indian boy in a cabin in the mountain country of Idaho makes a man out of Reed Chesington, city-bred and at first a "sissey."

"A well written, suspenseful character builder, and a good dose of Montana-Idaho country."

+ Kirkus 20:73 F 1 '52 110w

"Well-written, convincing story with the struggle of man against nature as its background and a boy's struggle with himself as the main theme. Not preachy." Claire Nolte

+ Library J 77:912 My 15 '52 80w

"Although the outdoors atmosphere is well done and the story is suspenseful, it is unconvincing. The boy's character is the only one which rings true; others are artificial and forced. Not recommended." Marian Herr

+ Library J 77:912 My 15 '52 80w

"Mr. Balch again gives us the life of the wilderness in fine detail and creates characters that will appeal to boys of about eleven to thirteen." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ap 27 '52 240w

"A meaningful and exciting story with overtones of mystery." Iris Vinton

+ N Y Times p22 Ap 13 '52 110w

BALDASS, LUDWIG. Jan Van Eyck. complete ed 297p 86il 170pl $15 Phaidon

759.9493 Eyck, Jan van. Eyck, Hubert van. Painting, Flemish 52-9471

"Ludwig Baldass, tracing the precursors of the brothers Van Eyck, describes the stylistic characteristics of Broederlam, the Limbourg brothers, and Robert Campin. He discusses in great detail the little known lives of Hubert and Jan Van Eyck and their joint efforts in the execution of the Ghent altarpiece. Each of Jan's works is then discussed in terms of the development of his style, its authentication, and problems encountered in attribution. Jan's significance lies in his understanding of the color possibilities of the new oil medium." (Sat R) Copiously illustrated in color and in black and white. Index.

Booklist 49:34 S 15 '52

"Dr Ludwig Baldass has excluded Hubert from the title-page and has reserved an enthusiasm for his brother. But art historians should be interested in facts, and it is a fact that those best qualified to judge find far more delight in the rapt poetry of Hubert's 'Three Maries' than in all the technical triumphs of Jan's 'Virgin and Child with Canon Van der Paele'—a dull picture except for the tremendous portrait of the old man. Apart from this bias, and the heavy, lumbering prose, which, tiresome though it is, is not so bad as it has been in other recent translations from German art historians, there is much to be grateful for in this thorough and detailed account of all the paintings which seem in any way connected with the two brothers. The illustrations are admirable." Stephen Bone

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Je 10 '52 300w

Reviewed by Benedict Nicolson

+ New Statesman & Nation 44:111 J1 26 '52 850w

"The Phaidon Press, to which all art lovers are indebted, is to be congratulated on the fidelity of these illustrations, which do perfect justice to the impeccable naturalism of the brothers. In his valuable preface and in his exhaustive notes Ludwig Baldass analyzes the artistic character of Hubert and Jan, relates their art to that of its precursors, Melchior Broederlam and Robert Campin, and accounts for its influence on such of their followers as Van der Weyden and Petrus Christus." Stuart Preston

+ N Y Times p7 J1 27 '52 400w

"The style, unfortunately, is almost doggedly pedestrian, but the wealth of illustrations more than makes up for this. In spite of the stiffness of presentation, the author's analysis of the share each brother had in the creation of such joint masterpieces as the great Ghent Altarpiece takes on a kind of fascination, even for the layman, through the very minuteness of the documentation involved."

+ New Yorker 28:184 D 13 '52 140w

"The author, former director of the Kunstgalerie in Vienna and a widely respected art critic, has written a fine critical evaluation of the Van Eyck brothers, Jan and Hubert. . . While this reviewer cannot agree with Mr. Baldass' thesis that 'Jan Van Eyck's work was a decisive turning point in the long and not always straight line of development that starts with Giotto and ends with the great Impressionists of the late Nineteenth century,' nonetheless the book fully documents the life

BALDASS, LUDWIG—Continued
and times of one of the greatest early Flemish painters and, can as such be recommended unreservedly." V. J. Papanek

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p21 My 18 '52
200w

Reviewed by Ralph Wickiser
Sat R 35:43 Je 7 '52 800w

"Thanks to the progress of photography a wealth of detail has now been made accessible.
Although many of the plates in Dr. Baldass's book are already known, the author should be congratulated for devoting so much attention to early miniatures, to the works of Van Eyck's contemporaries, and to other pictures, beside the 'Lamb,' signed by the Master or attributed to him. As for the text, there are two questions which will provoke discussion. The first concerns the origins, the link between Van Eyck paintings and the miniatures of the illustrators of the 'Books of Hours' commissioned between 1400 and 1420 by such patrons of the arts as the Duke of Burgundy, the Duke of Berry and the King of France. . .
The second question is the burning question of authorship. Is Jan Van Eyck the author of the 'Lamb' and of the other pictures attributed to the school, or should we still maintain, in the light of modern evidence, that Hubert and Jan share the honours of having produced the masterpiece?" Emile Cammaerts

Spec 188:754 Je 6 '52 800w

Times [London] Lit Sup p356 My 30 '52
1050w

BALDRY, HAROLD CAPARNE, Greek literature for the modern reader. 321p $3.75 Cambridge

880 Greek literature [A52-9346]

An explanation of the great writers of ancient Greece for modern readers. There is an introductory chapter on historical background. Index.

"The book is written in a plain style that is seldom lively and occasionally rather pedestrian; sometimes, too, it does not set out its facts as neatly as one would wish; but on the whole the writing is adequate and clear. The professor has, I think, devoted a trifle too much space to origins; but otherwise his information, in its range and emphasis, is excellently suited to its purpose of assisting the uninstructed Greek enthusiast." Eric Forbes-Boyd

+ — Christian Science Monitor p7 J1 17 '52
600w

Manchester Guardian p4 Ja 22 '52 240w

"Professor Baldry is sincere, sensible, and unprejudiced. He believes in his subject: his prose is flat but clear; and he does not feel obliged to find excuse for pagan writers because they were indifferent to Christian virtues.
His facts are carefully arranged, his points are properly made, and both, as far as they go, are accurate—though I suspect that he overesti-mates the part played by Socratic thought in the Platonic dialogues." Simon Raven

+ — New Statesman & Nation 43:473 Ap 19
'52 420w

Reviewed by G. F. Whicher

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 J1 6 '52
70w

"Altogether a fine introduction, it is more elementary and less erudite than Professor Moses Hadas's 'History of Greek Literature' published two years ago."

+ Sat R 35:59 Je 14 '52 270w

"The present work is clearly the product of a well-informed and enthusiastic mind, but it is doubtful whether it is calculated to attract the general reader."

Times [London] Lit Sup p282 Ap 25 '52
650w

BALDWIN, BATES, pseud. Tide of empire.
309p $3.50 Holt

52-11040

Historical novel, featuring the experiences of a young South Carolinian in 1800 and later.

Among the historical characters are Jerome
Bonaparte and his wife, Elizabeth Patterson, Napoleon, Jefferson and Madison.

"A worn retread of the formula historical novel."

— Kirkus 20:612 S 15 '52 120w

"A period piece and perfect grade B Hollywood production." R. S. Taylor

Library J 77:1894 N 1 '52 50w

"One suspects from time to time, that the author has taken almost as many liberties with some of the historical details of the period as he has with the lushly seductive figures of his story. If this be true, then it's all in the interest of good clean fun." Henry Cavendish

N Y Times p49 D 7 '52 280w

BALDWIN, ERNEST HUBERT FRANCIS.
Dynamic aspects of biochemistry. 2d ed 543p
$5 Cambridge

574.19 Biological chemistry 52-10733

"Introductory book in which the main emphasis is on the chemical aspects of biochemistry. Although written for use as a textbook in courses where 'biochemistry is taught as an independent scientific discipline without the usual emphasis on clinical problems,' it is eminently suitable for reading by chemists and other scientists familiar with chemical technology who, though not specialists in biochemistry, want some knowledge of the field.
The treatment is nonmathematical, but there are plenty of structural diagrams of organic substances. The first edition appeared in 1947 [Book Review Digest 1948]. There are more than 180 additional pages in this edition, and, of course, much added information." N Y New Tech Bks

"This second edition of a deservedly popular book has much the same pattern and size of the first edition, but the text has been thoroughly revised. The book is designed for a second course and accordingly is specialized in that the emphasis is on enzymology. . . As a brief compendium of information in a limited field the book deserves a place in the library of every budding biochemist; otherwise it is pedagogically poor, superficial in much of its theory, and uninspiring." W. M. Clark

Chem & Eng N 30:3655 S 1 '52 240w
N Y New Tech Bks 37:50 J1 '52

BALDWIN, FAITH. Juniper tree. 303p $3
Rinehart

52-8736

Dave Barton takes to drink because he can not get over the death of his son. Drink does not help, nor does psychiatry. Finally he goes alone to a remote camp in the Adirondacks, and here at last he finds the solace that he needs.

Booklist 49:89 N 1 '52

"The impact and universal appeal of this novel make it Faith Baldwin's finest work and a very important book in its own right." Olive Carruthers

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 O 5 '52
300w

Kirkus 20:425 J1 15 '52 110w

"Never precisely frivolous, Faith Baldwin has been evidencing more serious intentions in her later novels. In addition to straightening out the emotional tangles of her characters she seems to be trying to get across some inspirational message. . . But Miss Baldwin's readers will, I am sure, be glad to know that once again everything works out happily."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 O 19 '52
170w

Reviewed by A. F. Wolfe

N Y Times p31 S 21 '52 130w

Sat R 35:37 O 11 '52 120w

Springf'd Republican p9C N 2 '52 60w

BALDWIN, LELAND DEWITT. Stream of American history. 2v il maps ea $6 Am bk; trade ed set $16 Smith, Richard, R.

973 U.S.—History 52-3456

A survey of American history from the time of Columbus to the Korean war. The author is professor of history at the University of Pittsburgh.

"Informed, graphic, and remarkably well balanced commentary. It is difficult to see how any single author, willing to be definite, express critical attitudes, and pose pertinent questions, could produce a more impartial or forthright study." R. J. Graf

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 S 14 '52 400w

Kirkus 20:481 Ag 1 '52 160w

"Recommended for public, high school and college libraries." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 77:1394 S 1 '52 150w

"A new book on American history (even if it runs to almost 2000 pages and costs $16) is certainly to be welcomed and widely read and studied if it is extremely well done. This happens to be the case with this eighth book by Dr. Baldwin, who has done a tremendous amount of study and thinking in the present work." I. B.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 O 12 '52 550w

School & Society 75:285, 76:63 My 3 '52; J1 26 '52 ea 20w

BALDWIN, RAYMOND EARL. Let's go into politics. 179p $2.75 Macmillan

329 Politics, Practical. U.S.—Politics and government—20th century 52-1610

"In the course of a career that has taken him from town office through the Connecticut Legislature, the Governorship and the United States Senate to a seat on the highest appellate court in his state, Raymond E. Baldwin has acquired a fund of political wisdom which he imparts, mellowly and unpretentiously, in this little volume. It is not an autobiography but rather a treatise on practical politics developed from experience and illustrated by episodes that came under the author's direct observation." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

"Although this book is truly a success story, it is nevertheless written with a candor that admits mistakes, and with a spirit of fairness toward supporters and opponents alike. All this adds to its effectiveness as a document aiming to stimulate the recruiting of citizens into the ranks of active politicians." B. A. Arneson

+ Ann Am Acad 283:192 S '52 700w

Booklist 48:311 Je 1 '52

Bookmark 11:229 J1 '52 20w

"Mr. Baldwin goes thoroughly and enthusiastically, but not very critically into his essays on different levels of government, and how these became interwoven in his own career. He accepts the present system without any apparent reservations; and on that basis writes a book full of buoyancy and optimism about American democracy and how a career therein can be one of service and inspiration. Obviously Mr. Baldwin enjoyed his years of public life and was enriched by them." Roland Sawyer

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Je 9 '52 360w

Reviewed by Bradford Young

Churchman 166:18 O 15 '52 130w

"A well-balanced, human and warm discussion of American politics today on all its levels."

+ Current Hist 22:379 Je '52 100w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Horn Bk 28:342 O '52 30w

Kirkus 20:149 F 15 '52 150w

"A high-minded and able public servant, Justice Baldwin is well equipped to present a clear and not unattractive picture of American politics."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 My 4 '52 270w

"Judge Baldwin's ecce homo is a refreshing and charming combination of manual and memoir, suggestive although shallow, never more instructive than when retailing clichés." Eliot Janeway

+ N Y Times p13 My 11 '52 550w

"It is refreshing in its surface candor, and has an unassuming tone that is disarming in a man who served three terms as governor, was then elected to the United States Senate, and now sits as an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of Errors, his state's highest court. . . . Yet 'Let's Go Into Politics' is curiously disappointing. This is because Judge Baldwin seems to tell everything and yet tells nothing, or hardly anything, of real moment to a person seriously considering a political career or seriously concerned with the recent political history of Connecticut." W. D. Patterson

+ Sat R 35:13 J1 19 '52 650w

Reviewed by Donald Derby

Spring'd Republican p9C Je 8 '52 210w

BALL, ZACHARY, pseud. See Masters, K. R.

BALLARD, COLIN ROBERT. Military genius of Abraham Lincoln; an essay; with a preface by Fletcher Pratt; photographs from the Meserve collection. 246p il maps $5 World pub.

973.7 U.S.—History—Civil war. Lincon, Abraham 52-5180

"A reprint of the original text, [first published in England in 1926] a study chiefly of the eastern campaigns of the Civil War, by an English author. The preface is new." (Booklist) Index.

Reviewed by K. P. Williams

+ Am Hist R 57:992 J1 '52 450w

Booklist 48:231 Mr 15 '52

"For many years it was the fashion for writers on the Civil war to belittle Lincoln's handling of his field commanders. . . . The results, most writers held, were always unfortunate, and sometimes disastrous. Thirty years ago a British military historian, Brig. Gen. Colin R. Ballard, fled a vigorous dissent in a book entitled 'The Military Genius of Abraham Lincoln.' Altho it went out of print quickly, and has long been hard to obtain, it had a profound influence on Lincoln biography. To have it readily available, in an American edition, is a real advantage." P. M. Angle

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Mr 9 '52 350w

Reviewed by Herbert Cahoon

Library J 77:528 Mr 15 '52 130w

"In the United States, General Ballard's essay has long been recognized as a not so minor masterpiece and has gained admission to the select company of essential Lincoln books. More than this, from its yeasty content a formidable literature has risen. It continues to rise. It is this classic aura that renders the long delay in an American edition altogether curious and inexplicable. That it has come at last is occasion for gratitude. Other studies have extended the theme; it is conceivable that it will one day be superseded; but it is and will remain the progenitor, and as such will always have an honored place." D. C. Mearns

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Mr 16 '52 1500w

New Yorker 28:94 Mr 1 '52 200w

"General Ballard has written a convincing book and an interesting one, as Fletcher Pratt agrees in his preface, and the fact that the author is not an American military man should not prejudice any potential readers." Keith Kent

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 Mr 9 '52 300w

"Superb little book." Peter Ritner

+ Sat R 35:18 My 24 '52 400w

BALLARD, HELEN MABRY. To the tune of murder. 219p $2.50 Mill

52-5786

Detective story.

Bookmark 12:10 O '52

Kirkus 20:17 Ja 1 '52 60w

"Earnest, implausible and highly penetrable mystery." James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Ap 13 '52 130w

"The mystery plot is weak, and there's a tendency to draw the characters sharply black or white. But the sympathetic study of inbred small-town aristocracy is first rate, and there's rewarding novelty in District Attorney James Stewart Hampton V. who finds that detection forces his belated maturing as a man."

Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p35 Ap 6 '52 80w

"This newcomer's style is pleasant and easy. C plus." L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p22 Ap 6 '52 70w

"Placid but pleasant." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 35:47 My 3 '52 30w

Springf'd Republican p10C My 4 '52 70w

BALLINGER, WILLIAM S. Darkening door. 180p $2.50 Harper

52-5418

Mystery story.

Kirkus 20:138 F 15 '52 80w

"The book's jacket calls it a novel of suspense. It would appear to be neither a novel nor suspenseful." James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Ap 27 '52 50w

"A little heavy-handed and unfocused; there is no central protagonist or story-line. But the realistic detail is so exceedingly well observed, the characters so microscopically projected that the whole is oddly fascinating—and completely unrelated to Ballinger's early ersatz-toughies."

Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p19 My 18 '52 60w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ap 27 '52 50w

"Parade of events has Dreiserish relentlessness and impact, starkly earnest story; characters realistic and uniformly unpleasant."

Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 35:47 My 24 '52 30w

Springf'd Republican p10D Je 22 '52 50w

Wis Lib Bul 48:181 J1 '52

BALLOU, ROBERT OLESON, ed. Living Bible. See Bible. Whole. Selections

BALSAN, CONSUELO (VANDERBILT). The glitter and the gold. 336p il $4 Harper

B or 92

52-5419

The former Duchess of Marlborough, born Consuelo Vanderbilt, has written this story of her life. Altho she begins with her unhappy childhood, she stresses the years from 1895, when at the age of eighteen she followed her mother's commands and married into the English aristocracy. She closes her story with year 1940. Index.

Booklist 49:65 O 15 '52

Bookmark 12:4 O '52 40w

"The last chapter is, it seems to me, the one which no reader will forget, whatever quips or phrases of description he or she may quote from its other pages. For in that chapter there is a kind of suspense of emotion that fills every sentence the way a cloud can seem heavy with rain just before it bursts. It ends not only the book but, ironically, a fabulous era, and the reader senses he has seen its gold as well as its glitter." Fanny Butcher

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 S 21 '52 550w

"Mrs. Balsan's story is so naturally poignant with episodes and people that have made and are still making history, that even if she had not written it with so practiced a hand . . . this book would still be absorbing reading and documentary evidence as well." H. A. Cornelius

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 S 25 '52 400w

Kirkus 20:434 J1 15 '52 220w

"Mrs. Balsan, once the Duchess of Marlborough, has a simple revealing style, far from distinguished, and her book will attract many readers—not all snobs. . . Collections will not be greatly enhanced with the book but it has more than meets the eye and is suggested for general purchase." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 77:1496 S 15 '52 100w

"It makes a fascinating story, and Consuelo Vanderbilt Balsan has told it excellently. . . [She] gives us plenty of illustrious gossip that never gets out of hand; indeed, one could even wish for less restraint at times." James Hilton

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 S 14 '52 1000w

Reviewed by Wayne Andrews

+ N Y Times p7 S 21 '52 750w

"These memoirs by Consuelo Vanderbilt are on a higher level of distinction than those of the ordinary social or public figure who mistakenly believes that his superficial impressions will be interesting to others."

+ New Yorker 28:177 O 18 '52 300w

San Francisco Chronicle p26 N 9 '52 450w

"As a picture of a period, these memoirs miss the mark—they are far too personal for that. They concern themselves with the modes and the manners of a vanished past, and they are gently charming." E. W. Pike

+ Sat R 35:12 S 27 '52 700w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn

Springf'd Republican p35A N 16 '52 380w

BALZ, ALBERT GEORGE ADAM. Cartesian studies. 328p $4.50 Columbia univ. press

194 Descartes, Rene

51-12903

"For the most part these essays have to do not with Descartes' own exposition of his doctrines concerning the nature of man, but with the development they received at the hands of his contemporaries and successors, both friendly and hostile. In particular, Dr. Balz is interested in indicating the influence of Descartes' dualistic theory of mind and body upon subsequent thinking, not only in philosophy, but also in psychology and physics." U S Quarterly Bk R

"Professor Balz has performed a valuable service in contributing extensive accounts of the more important of these Cartesians to the philosophical journals during the past twenty years, and in now combining them in the first book upon the subject to appear in the English language. . . This is a scholarly and therefore a technical book. It is not easy reading."

W. K. Wright

+ Crozer Q 29:232 Ap '52 360w

"In Cartesian Studies the author effectively whets our appetite for his promised forthcoming assessment of their source and inspiration—Descartes himself." Peter Stubbs

+ Hibbert J 50:413 J1 '52 1100w

"The author's skillful explorations of some of the 'collateral byways' as well as of the highway of Cartesianism are a welcome addition to the literature of French philosophy in English." H. A. Larrabee

+ J Philos 49:54 Ja 17 '52 480w

School & Society 74:383 D 15 '51 20w

Times [London] Lit Sup p333 My 16 '52 330w

"Dr. Balz has succeeded in presenting a vivid and lively picture of the conflicts and problems which played so large a part in the intellectual history of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, and in showing the implications and consequences of this speculation for contemporary science."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:361 D '51 230w

BANCROFT, MARY. Upside down in the magnolia tree; with il. by Paul Galdone. 280p $3.75 Little

52-5520

"Combining fiction with autobiography, these are pleasantly evocative sketches of tomboy Kathy's restricted childhood in her snobbish Grandmother's Cambridge home at the turn of the century and of her special friendship with the Irish coachman and choreman." Bookmark

Booklist 48:297 My 15 '52

Bookmark 11:184 My '52 30w

Reviewed by Marge Lyon

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 My 18 '52 230w

Reviewed by Ruth Chapin

Christian Science Monitor p11 My 8 '52 320w

Kirkus 20:137 F 15 '52 160w

"Mrs. Bancroft tells Kathy's story in a seemingly artless and unpretentious fashion. It is only after one has closed the book and savored its contents in memory that one realizes that not only has she brought a group of people to life but the era in which they lived, as well." R. C. Feld

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 My 4 '52 500w

"In Kathy and Nolan, the author has created two characters who add charm and freshness to her story." Andrea Parke

+ N Y Times p25 Ap 27 '52 190w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal

Springf'd Republican p7D My 18 '52 160w

Wis Lib Bul 48:172 J1 '52

BANKHEAD, TALLULAH. Tallulah, my autobiography. 335p il $3.95 Harper

B or 92 Actors and actresses—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 52-7278 Autobiography of the ebullient actress in which "she sets down the facts of her life, good, bad and indifferent, pauses briefly to speak out her mind, goes on with her life, pauses again to name a spade, goes on, pauses to name an enemy." (N Y Times) Index.

"The book is not as memorable as Miss Bankhead's 'God-awful laugh.' But it's lively entertainment—witty, pugnacious, and uninhibited in every department." Charles Rolo

Atlantic 190:92 O '52 420w

Booklist 49:66 O 15 '52

Bookmark 12:29 N '52 20w

"Tallulah's story is that of a great artist, written in a sophisticated, conceited, incredibly brash manner—she frankly admires her own beauty and genius. But that's Tallulah, dahlings, and it's the funniest, frankest autobiography to appear within this reviewer's memory." R. L. Blakesley

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 S 28 '52 600w

Kirkus 20:480 Ag 1 '52 250w

"Highly readable, it will be in enormous demand. Recommended for wide purchase for circulation and naturally for theatre collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 77:2006 N 15 '52 50w

Manchester Guardian p4 O 7 '52 120w

Reviewed by Theodore Hoffman

New Repub 127:30 N 17 '52 260w

Reviewed by Arthur Marshall

New Statesman & Nation 44:520 N 1 '52 270w

"You ought to find all of it fascinating." John Crosby

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 S 28 '52 1400w

"It is a fine performance Tallulah gives, explaining Tallulah. A citation to Richard Maney, 'for conduct above and beyond the call of duty,' suggests a collaboration in which the party of the second part may have grayed his hair digging out patches of libel.

Tallulah pretty much knows whom she doesn't like, and says so without footnotes." Lewis Nichols

+ N Y Times p6 S 28 '52 750w

"Loaded with anecdotes, tough talk, straightforward views about the theater and its ills plus an over-indulgence in quips and feather-weight gossip. It will not cause a revolution anywhere; the worst it will do is to deflate a few egos that probably are overly inflated anyhow, and contribute to the gossip literature which seems to move out of the bookstalls as fast as anything else written today." William Hogan

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 O 5 '52 900w

"'Tallulah,' for all its entertainment value, does have some shortcomings as a memoir. In life, as in her acting, she has not the capacity to verbalize or analyze her experience. This is no guided tour of the works. Her writing about her stage career is a pallid recital of parts played and notices received. . . . This book is called 'Tallulah,' not 'Inside Tallulah,' but even lacking these hoped-for insights, the book stands cubits above what we have had from three or four other first ladies of the theatre." Lee Rogow

+ Sat R 35:11 S 27 '52 950w

"Her book is as loud as a barrage, and its paragraphs chatter like machine guns, but sometimes there is a lull when the fog of war clears and the real Miss Bankhead can be seen, sitting a little forlornly, but game still, among the debris. She has been true to herself in her fashion." I. H.

+ Spec 189:484 O 10 '52 230w

"It is an entertaining book, garrulous, and disorganized, but honest within its limits." Joseph Carroll

+ Theatre Arts 36:8 N '52 950w

"An autobiography whose dash and sparkle may easily cause it to be regarded as a masterpiece of impudence (which it is) and nothing more. . . . Any attempt to bestow upon her book a succès de scandale must be offset by some attempt to win recognition for it as the confessions of an actress whom our modern theatre stunted of opportunity."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p658 O 10 '52 650w

BANKS, MURRAY. How to live with yourself. 241p $3 Prentice-Hall

150.13 Psychology, Applied 51-7173

"Popular concern with personality adjustment has called forth numerous self-help books on the subject, addressed to various types of readers. In this case the ideas are sound and clearly presented, but the readers' reaction to the brand of humor which the author employs as sugar-coating would determine its effectiveness; some would be amused, and equally as many alienated." Booklist

Booklist 48:138 D 15 '51

Kirkus 19:372 J1 15 '51 100w

Reviewed by Lucy Freeman

N Y Times p16 N 25 '51 220w

BANKSON, BUDD. I should live so long. 287p $3.50 Lippincott

940.548 Soldiers—Entertainment. World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, American 52-8788

"Budd Bankson was connected with Army Special Services during World War II and looks back with great zest to those days when he and his colleagues were producing entertainment for troops in England, Africa and Europe." San Francisco Chronicle

"Gene Fowler, the great American writer of humor and biography, calls Bankson a 'great humorist.' In time, when he learns to trim his own 'id' somewhat more than somewhat, Bankson may earn this accolade. For the time being, at least, despite the tendency of the author to write all the best lines for himself, Bankson should be content to have written a fairly hilarious tale which should make good reading for almost any GI." J. H. Thompson

BANKSON, BUDD—Continued

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 N 23 '52 220w

Kirkus 20:537 Ag 15 '52 130w

"One of the best accounts of entertainment for military personnel in World War II, and the funniest. Recommended for theatre and war collections as well as for paid circulation." George Freedley

+ Library J 77:2178 D 15 '52 20w

"A delightful book." Herbert Mitgang

+ N Y Times p4 N 9 '52 280w

"Bankson describes his experiences for laughs in a fairly funny, if fairly juvenile, remembrance of things past." W. H.

San Francisco Chronicle p19 N 16 '52 40w

BARBASH, JACK, and BARBASH, KATE.

Unions and telephones; the story of the Communications workers of America. 246p $2.50 Harper

331.881 Communications workers of America 52-8460

"This volume will be welcomed by many who have suffered from telephone strikes or who have been puzzled by the difficulties between the telephone companies and their employees. The story, admittedly a very complicated one, has unfortunately not been simplified nor dramatized by the author. He gives a full account of the growth of the C.W.A. and its predecessors as well as of the intra-union and the inter-union problems with which it is even today confronted." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by V. D. Bornet

Ann Am Acad 284:195 N '52 430w

"Based on facts and figures it presents a fairly impartial view that will enlighten union members and outsiders interested in union strategy. The author draws upon a wide experience in the field of labor." D. K. Oko

+ Library J 77:1407 S 1 '52 110w

Management R 41:771 N '52 100w

"The story of the Communications Workers of America (CIO) is very well told here by Mr. Barbash, a Washington consulting economist. He states his sympathy for the union, is extremely fair in treating internal conflicts and conflicts with management and other unions, and presents all viewpoints factually." I. B.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p28 Ag 17 '52 120w

BARBER, OLIVE. Lady and the lumberjack; introd. by Stewart H. Holbrook. 250p $3 Crowell

B or 92 Lumberman 52-7855

A school teacher from the middle west on vacation in the state of Washington met and married a lumberjack. The book is her account of this seemingly mismatching which turned out happily.

"Thoroughly human, unpretentious and likeable."

+ Kirkus 20:434 Jl 15 '52 120w

"A straightforward, humorous autobiography. Recommended for small public library purchase." F. A. Boyle

+ Library J 77:1393 S 1 '52 70w

"The contradictions in her own mind are reflected in Mrs. Barber's book. In telling of loggers and logging, she sometimes makes the life seem repellent and at other times exciting. The loggers sometimes appear genuine and lusty, and sometimes merely vulgar and tedious. At no time does she make the actual procedure of logging really clear. . . Mrs. Barber has some interesting material, but her writing is not skillful enough to create the special atmosphere of a logging camp."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 S 21 '52 300w

"Mrs. Barber has written a fine, warm, rowdy book about all of it." Jane Cobb

+ N Y Times p14 O 26 '52 330w

"Stewart Holbrook, who induced Mrs. Barber to write the book, notes in his foreword that nothing has been said before about the wife's view of lumbering. Mrs. Barber's vivid account of this lusty and dangerous life won't send many readers out to marry into the lumber business, but it's entertaining reading just the same." Pamela Taylor

+ Sat R 35:31 S 20 '52 250w

BARBOUR, JAMES MURRAY. Tuning and temperament; a historical survey. 228p il $4 Mich. state college press

781.1 Tuning. Musical temperament

"This book deals fundamentally with the manifold forms of pure and tempered intonation as they were being worked out through the centuries in the Western world, but contains also a few occasional references to some of the similar constructions among Oriental peoples. It exposes step by step all the important theoretical speculations from the Greek antiquity to the present day, and winds up with a verification of the most workable systems, developed from the 16th century on, against the coeval musical practices. . . The book is furnished with several descriptive illustrations, a handy glossary and index, a list of superparticular intervals, and an ample bibliography." Music Lib Assn Notes

"Mr. Barbour deserves a good deal of credit for bringing together, in a compact and orderly fashion, a wealth of up-to-date information on a technical subject that has not always been too clear, in all its details, even to specialists in this field. The work will be particularly appreciated when one considers the fact that a sizable amount of the important source material, indispensable in this kind of research, is available only in the original Greek and Latin. . . It is a bit regrettable that, while bestowing so much attention upon the intonation of the diatonic and chromatic scales, Mr. Barbour left out practically all discussion pertaining to the pentatonic stage of musical development." Joseph Yasser

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 9:285 Mr '52 1050w

"To criticize Mr. Barbour's book I can only list the author's self-imposed limitations. He does not evaluate the influence of temperament on music between the Bachs and Schubert. He offers few esthetic conclusions about the effect of temperament on the writing or performance of music, except as this may be deduced from mathematical ratios. He does not relate the tuning to the playing of instruments, to the theory of 'good' and 'bad' notes, to the use of embellishment and rhythmic alteration as means of intensifying or avoiding particular intervals, or to the theory of Affections. Within these limits his material is complete and detailed. It raises—and avoids—questions which musicologists habitually ignore. For amateurs of musical literature it opens a new chapter in experience." Peter Yates

Sat R of Lit 34:30 D 15 '51 550w

"By virtue of his mathematical, musical, and scholarly powers, Dr. Barbour has rendered the future study of this subject far easier than it would otherwise have been. Aside from a few somewhat elliptical analyses, the book should be accessible to students with an elementary acquaintance with the subject."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:129 Je '52 240w

BARCIA CARBALLIDO Y ZUNIGA, ANDRES GONZALEZ DE. Chronological history of the continent of Florida, until the year 1722; tr [under the auspices of the St Augustine hist. soc] with an introd. by Anthony Kerrigan; introduced with a foreword by Herbert E. Bolton. ltd ed 426p $15 Univ. of Fla. press

975.9 Florida—History

"A year-by-year account of happenings in Florida from 1512 to 1722. By Florida Barcia understood the whole American continent north of the settled portions of Mexico. In consequence, he gives us in brief form not only the Spanish but the whole story of Dutch, French, and English efforts from the gulf of Mexico to Canada." Am Hist R

"The present translation will be more valuable to laymen because the Spanish point of view pervades the whole work. . . The brown paper and binding, while excellent and pleasant, do not necessarily represent the aging of a book from eighteenth-century Spain, which produced such superb rag paper that unless long exposed to weather and light it remains fine and white to this day. Mr. Kerrigan's translation is excellent and straightforward." J. T. Lanning

+ Am Hist R 57:780 Ap '52 380w

"The translation by Anthony Kerrigan preserves the delightful flavor of the original account, a curious blend of truth, naivete and legend. . . Book lovers and historians alike should scramble for this treasure while it is still available." R. H. D.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 N 11 '51 450w

"His book contains descriptions of plant and animal life, of herbs and magic, of hopes and of disillusionment, but the dullness of severe chronological arrangement deprives it of the fascinating quality of a Hakluyt. The translator does his utmost to liven unlively material, the typographers have worked their somewhat tiresome best to recreate the feeling of an eighteenth-century book, and the whole is for some reason brought together with rather devastating coyness by editors and translators."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p123 F 15 '52 220w

BARD, MARY. Forty odd. 253p $3.50 Lippincott

B or 92 Middle age 52-5089

The author of The Doctor Wears Three Faces (Book Review Digest 1949) describes her fortieth birthday with its problems and tells what she did during the following year to combat the onset of old age.

Booklist 48:291 My 15 '52

"Only when you close the book do you realize Mary Bard has borrowed an old trick from her doctor husband and given us a lot of good advice heavily coated with literary sugar. To us, it tastes good!" Marge Lyon

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 My 11 '52 240w

Kirkus 20:146 F 15 '52 160w

"Underneath the hilarity of her struggles is common sense and sincerity which will touch a responsive chord among all women with a similar problem. And they will agree with Mary Bard that age is a number—not a disease." E. P. Nichols

+ Library J 77:786 My 1 '52 80w

"Miss Bard has taken the occasion to spell out some of the misapprehensions and misconceptions about middle-age for women, and she has done it amusingly. Her book is not going to be much help to women who have genuine problems, but their more fortunate sisters will enjoy reading it." Anne Brooks

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 J1 13 '52 360w

"I am afraid not all 'forty-odd' women are as lucky as Mary Bard. Her charming book—besides being entertaining—prompts serious discussion of a most serious American problem: the woman over 40, her health, her happiness, her dignity and prestige." Martin Gumpert

+ N Y Times p14 J1 27 '52 290w

"Taken as incidental sketches rather than as guides to combat the ills of the menopause, some of Miss Bard's pieces are lively and amusing. Miss Bard has tried to bring the common sense angle to her problem but in her case there just doesn't seem to be any problem." J. V.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p27 My 4 '52 240w

"For Mary Bard's bubbling humor, and for her genuine simplicity, the women who are 4-F 'fat, forty, foolish, forlorn'—all will say 'Happy Birthday, Mary, and many, many more of them!'" B. S. Turpin

+ Sat R 35:31 My 31 '52 450w

BARE, ARNOLD EDWIN. Maui's summer; pictures by the author. [47p] $2.50 Houghton

52-8683

Picture-story book about a small Hawaiian boy's summer and the friends he made with a family from the United States mainland.

Booklist 48:363 J1 1 '52

Bookmark 11:186 My '52

"A valuable addition to the picture-geography collection." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 28:98 Ap '52 80w

"It's nice to have a book about Hawaii, especially one as well done as this. Assembling, very pleasingly, about all there is to combine of life in beautiful surroundings, adventure, the spirit of a far away place, the unexpected satisfaction of a very strong wish, the story will leave youngsters at once happy and eager for more."

+ Kirkus 20:123 F 15 '52 160w

"Recommended for ages 4-9." Sonja Wennerblad

+ Library J 77:798 My 1 '52 70w

"Mr. Bare uses fine, bold designs. His well-chosen colors are well printed. The art work will make an impression on children whether or not they are interested in Hawaii."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 My 18 '52 200w

"Mr. Bare's prose conveys the simple facts of the story and of Hawaii but little of the feeling and luxuriance of the pictures. These are as exciting in design and color as in his previous illustrative work. Unfortunately, some of them have a disconcerting way of running together at the center seam. This is especially confusing because many others are really double-spreads." Miriam James

+ N Y Times p32 Ap 27 '52 150w

Sat R 35:34 J1 19 '52 120w

BARER, SHLOMO. Magic carpet. 243p il $3.50 Harper

325.5694 [296] Jews—Migration. Jews in Yemen 52-9546

"Mainly in diary form, this is the stirring account of the improvised airlift, 'Operation Magic Carpet,' which transported 30,000 deeply religious Jews from far-off Yemen, Arabia, to modern Israel in 1949. Map, photographs." (Bookmark) No index.

Booklist 49:98 N 15 '52

Bookmark 12:29 N '52 20w

Kirkus 20:532 Ag 15 '52 130w

Reviewed by Marie Syrkin

Nation 175:558 D 13 '52 30w

"Barer's book, though diffuse at points, presents a vivid picture of these people at the great moment of their lives. It is especially graphic in its description of the camp at time of crisis, with newcomers pouring in by the thousands and the personnel almost dropping in exhaustion." Gerold Frank

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p21 N 16 '52 550w

"As a chronicle of individual experiences, it adds little to the newspaper accounts published at the time of the exodus. As history, it is woefully short on perspective. The book is largely a compound of surface impressions, anecdotes and second-hand reports on the travelers' difficulties, loosely jotted in diary form and strung between summaries of biblical and modern history of the Yemenite Jews." Gertrude Samuels

N Y Times p18 O 19 '52 450w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal

Springfd Republican p6D D 28 '52 350w

BARGER, EDGAR LEE, and others. Tractors and their power units. 496p il $6.50 Wiley

629.22 Tractors 51-13003

"A treatise written from the engineering viewpoint. It applies particularly to farm tractors, but much of the material is applicable also to larger machines such as are used in construction. The scope is not limited to major aspects as named in the chapter titles, but includes also discussions of such points as tractor stability. The book is intended for students enrolled in agricultural engineering colleges, but it contains material of value to anyone concerned with the selection or design of tractors. Lists of references to related literature are included." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

BARGER, E. L.—Continued

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 77:827 My 15 '52 10w

"Primarily a textbook for students of agricultural engineering, the book will be useful to many others interested in tractors. The reader will need an understanding of basic physics and college algebra." R. R. Hawkins

Library J 77:1078 Je 15 '52 40w
N Y New Tech Bks 37:29 Mr '52

BARKER, SIR ERNEST. Principles of social and political theory. 284p $5 Oxford

320 Political science [51-14829]

"Barker's most recent publication, Principles of Social and Political Theory, may be considered the theoretical foundation of his Reflections. In his Reflections, he was concerned with the principles, difficulties and reform of parliamentary democracy, and with the alternatives to democracy, namely, Soviet Communism, Italian Fascism, and German National Socialism. His Principles of Social and Political Theory furnishes the underpinning for his conception of democratic government. Barker distinguishes clearly between the state and society, and is at his best in showing that although they are obviously connected, their purposes and their activities are essentially different." Am Pol Sci R

"Political scientists in America, as well as in England, will welcome Ernest Barker's most recent volume, Principles of Social and Political Theory, for it is the author's most comprehensive statement of his own political theory. Although he has shown his hand on many points before, nowhere else has he argued his basic position as intensively, and as systematically as he has done here." B. E. Lippincott
+ Am Pol Sci R 46:555 Je '52 1050w

"It is a strong and learned and beautifully balanced book, and it is a book true to a great tradition." W. J. M. Mackenzie

+ Manchester Guardian p4 N 23 '51 300w

"All of us who heard the lectures will not only welcome this more permanent and extended version of them, which enables others to share in their riches; we can also marvel that the original dehydration was never apparent. The present plumping out has resulted in neither distention nor dilution, and the argument remains close-packed and tightly reasoned. Here, indeed, is the very pith of political philosophy." David Thomson

+ Spec 187:859 D 21 '51 550w

"A wise and inspiring, as well as learned and instructive book."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p117 F 15 '52 3000w

BARKER, ILSE EVA LOUISE (GROSS)
(KATHRINE TALBOT, pseud). Fire in the sun. 247p $3 Putnam

52-6150

"Veronica Demeade, the heroine, is one of a select group of English poets and artists. She looks very like her brother, Everett, the admired poet. . . Robert Avery, a young painter, falls in love with Veronica and [they] plan to marry. Then Robert meets Everett, falls in love with him, and abandons Veronica." N Y Times

Booklist 48:197 F 15 '52

Reviewed by Richard Sullivan

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Ap 27 '52 340w

Kirkus 19:664 N 15 '51 120w

"The plot is so slight as to be negligible and the attempt to introduce an element of mystery and suspense is unsuccessful. The sketches of the individuals in the group are fairly well done. As this is a first novel there is a possibility that the author may do better work later on." E. S. Brown

Library J 76:2112 D 15 '51 110w

"A superior work in the current class of precious fiction. . . Miss Talbot writes with a poetic gift for words and with considerable technical skill; but the characters in her little drama—and the drama itself—lack human dimension. In this neo-Wasteland there is no remembrance of any faith at all; attitudes of envy and self-idolatry are supreme." Robert Reynolds

+ N Y Times p20 Ja 20 '52 360w

"If her climax seems somewhat too melodramatic, it is the author's only failure. Extraordinary taste and delicacy enable her to handle without offense a subject which is still uncomfortable and distressing to most readers; the emotional and spiritual agony are there, but declared with such economy and sincerity that the inherent tragedy of the situation may be accepted without conscious interpretation of the Freudian symbols which crowd the pages." Pamela Taylor

+ Sat R 35:11 Ja 26 '52 450w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn

Springf'd Republican p21A Mr 23 '52 30w

BARKER, SHIRLEY. A land and a people; a book of poems. 78p $2.75 Crown

811

52-5683

Poems about people and places, chiefly in the author's native New England.

Booklist 48:334 Je 15 '52

"Strength, simplicity and humor mark these rhythmic poems."

+ Bookmark 11:205 Je '52 20w

"In these poems Miss Barker reveals the same gift for terse and vivid characterization and economy of phrase that she has shown in her novels." Gerald McDonald

+ Library J 77:1205 Jl '52 140w

Reviewed by Lawrence Ferling

San Francisco Chronicle p8 Jl 6 '52 140w

"Blessed is the poet with roots in a tradition, and Shirley Barker is at her best in ballads and narratives of her New England people. She has a natural storyteller's gift with an aptness for colorful dialogue and a skilful sense of material organization." A. M. Sullivan

+ Sat R 35:29 S 6 '52 240w

Reviewed by William Beauchamp

Springf'd Republican p26A S 21 '52 120w

BARKINS, MRS EVELYN (WERNER). Are these our doctors? 192p $2.50 Fell 610 Physicians

52-13287

A doctor's wife discusses the relationship between doctor and patient. Part of her book is given over to a condemnation of magazine publicity which gives too much credit to the "miracle drugs" and their effects. No index.

Booklist 49:83 N 1 '52

"With her undeniable talents, one cannot help wishing that Mrs. Barkins had observed a little more closely and written a bit more fully about a profession whose cultural and idealistic roots go so deeply into human life." F. G. Slaughter

N Y Times p61 N 9 '52 320w

"Mrs. Barkins' main points are ones the public needs to know. Most doctors will not admit, she says, that doctors knock each other. Some will, however, and those men know what damage is being done to the doctor-patient relationship by this." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 O 27 '52 500w

BARLOW, FRED. Mental prodigies. 256p $4.75
Philosophical lib.

151.1 Genius [52-2941]

"An enquiry into the faculties of arithmetical, chess and musical prodigies, famous memorizers, precocious children and the like, with numerous examples of 'lightning' calculations and mental magic." (Subtitle) Bibliography. Index.

"Delightful book." Denys Parsons
+ Hibbert J 50:310 Ap '52 700w

"Main criticism: British viewpoint occasionally not appropriate; price rather 'steep' for small size; discussions too 'skimpy.' However, recommended as a pioneer work in an interesting, unexplored field." J. M. Scherr
— + Library J 77:1803 O 15 '52 100w

BARNARD, ELLSWORTH. Edwin Arlington Robinson, a critical study. 318p $4.75 Macmillan

811 Robinson, Edwin Arlington 52-7104

"The form and content of Robinson's poetry, without biographical addenda, is treated to detailed, critical study. The author considers poetics, barriers to understanding, words and music, organic form, characters, virtues and values, showing how, when and why these appear in Robinson's work. Many poems come under close scrutiny in more than one chapter, and almost all of those most difficult to interpret are eventually elucidated. Other Robinsonian critics have had to write without benefit of quotation, but Barnard has the blessing of the copyright owner." Library J

Booklist 48:210 Mr 1 '52

Reviewed by Carlyle King
Canadian Forum 32:119 Ag '52 200w

Reviewed by Katherine Brégy
Cath World 175:319 Jl '52 50w

"Writing such as this is by its own nature limited in appeal. Yet within the small cluster of its potential readers this study will surely provide excellent illumination." Richard Sullivan

Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 Je 29 '52
240w

"In a brilliant chapter on Robinson's characters, the author recreates the somber-toned world of the poet, a world in which men and women act according to their intrinsic natures, a world where few find happiness, though they realize a freedom of choice, a glimpse of the light. This emphasis on a neglected phase of Robinson's work is perhaps a signal contribution of the critic, and makes this a valuable analysis not only for students of Robinson, but for students of the explicatory method of criticism. All in all, however, a defined market."

+ Kirkus 19:721 D 15 '51 180w

"Barnard's is a full-sized work, clear and simple in exposition, but most appropriate for the special student of E. A. R." G. D. McDonald

+ Library J 77:358 F 15 '52 140w

"Mr. Barnard's study shows that he has read Robinson's poetry with commendable thoroughness. The book is not a definitive study, nor does Mr. Barnard claim that it is; to the sober student of Robinson, the book serves as a clearing house for current opinion of Robinson's poetry in classrooms and at well-worn seats in college libraries. . . Yet in reading this book one has the conviction that Mr. Barnard, though he has read Robinson, has not read many other poets, and the clue to this is that he links Robinson's name to Shelley's, which is, to say the least, a curious point of reference." Horace Gregory

+ — N Y Times p18 F 10 '52 750w

"Mr. Barnard's work raises some pertinent issues and clears away some misconceptions; in particular he avoids the emphasis on the poet's life that tends to show Robinson as a martyr. He has covered the ground of extant Robinson criticism; he makes as good a case as can be made for the long narrative poems, and most of all he does not plague the reader with theories. Yet a serious, informed, purposeful book like this should come out better; despite all the very real virtues we can be grateful for, the book follows the tradition of Robinson studies and has little to say about the nature of the poetry or about the quality and scope of Robinson's gift." L. O. Cox

+ — Poetry 81:187 D '52 1100w

"Mr. Barnard's vast chapter on what Robinson had to say will not be revelatory to those intimate with Robinson's poetry and will, I fear, prove too exhaustive to serve as introduction. One admires the thoroughness but regrets an over-persistence. . . Still, there is much to Mr. Barnard's credit. The thoroughness is real in every sense." W. T. Scott

+ — Sat R 35:13 Mr 15 '52 800w

Time 59:100 F 11 '52 950w

"Especially helpful to the student is Dr. Barnard's detailed analysis of Robinson's poetics, style, and form, and a preliminary to the treatment of the poet's philosophical and religious ideas, the 'verities' and 'values' of the final chapters. In general, the study attempts to correct the idea that Robinson was a pessimistic, gloomy, fatalistic poet. Certainly Dr. Barnard has fulfilled what he believes to be the primary function of the critic, to be intelligible; an outstanding quality of the book is its author's unpretentious attitude and avoidance of the academic lingo of many modern critics."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:131 Je '52 200w

BARNES, JOSEPH. Willkie; the events he was part of, the ideas he fought for. 405p $5 Simon & Schuster

B or 92 Willkie, Wendell Lewis 52-13324

A full length biography of the Republican candidate for the presidency in 1940. Written by the former foreign editor of the Herald Tribune, an intimate friend and the companion of Willkie on his trip that resulted in the book One World, this biography stresses Willkie's political ideals and his political career.

Booklist 49:103 N 15 '52

Bookmark 12:77 Ja '53 10w

Kirkus 20:486 Ag 1 '52 220w

"A fine book on a picturesque personality." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 77:1393 S 1 '52 120w

Reviewed by H. H. Wilson
Nation 175:431 N 8 '52 1100w

"Mr. Barnes has a remarkable ability to dissipate the confusion surrounding complex actions and to untangle strands that emotion and the passage of time have badly snarled. I have seen no short analysis of the fight over TVA that is so good or anywhere near so clear. He deals justly with people about whom it is hard for anyone to be detached, even now. . . But the greatest excellence of the book is that it communicates the vigor and dynamic vitality of the man and expertly sets forth the ways in which the man and his time were one. Finishing it, one feels the same shock, the same regret, the same rebellious protest against the loss of great and growing possibilities that one felt when Willkie died." Bernard De Voto

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 O 12 '52
1800w

Reviewed by Allan Nevins
N Y Times p3 O 12 '52 1100w

"Is, of its kind, an uncommonly sound and satisfying biography. . . Barnes is a professional journalist, he is almost academic in his conventions and his reticences. He was a close friend of Willkie and in a sense an apostle, but he has chosen to write pretty much as he might have written if Willkie had died a century ago and he had merely done his research in libraries. Nevertheless, he writes with unflinching lucidity, sympathy, and intelligence." R. H. Rovere

+ New Yorker 28:50 Ja 3 '53 1600w

"This is a thoughtful and affectionate book about a big man who might have been a great man had he lived." J. M. Minifie

+ Sat R 35:18 N 15 '52 490w

BARNOUW, ADRIAAN JACOB. Pageant of Netherlands history. 370p $4.50 Longmans
949.2 Netherlands—History 52-5637

This history of the Netherlands from the earliest beginnings to the present gives a picture of the people themselves, and traces the development of their political and cultural mores. The author was born in Amsterdam, educated in Leyden, has taught at Columbia University. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 48:199; 234 F 15 '52; Mr 15 '52
Bookmark 11:179 My '52 30w

Reviewed by E. C. Ince
Christian Science Monitor p9 My 15 '52
150w

Current Hist 22:377 Je '52 80w

Reviewed by A. C. Moore
Horn Bk 28:233 Ag '52 300w

"Not a quickly, but a serious approach to a somewhat difficult phase of European history, and tops in its field, vividly styled, energetic in presentation, rewarding the study."
+ Kirkus 20:5 Ja 1 '52 250w

"Recommended for public and college libraries. Fairly comprehensive list of suggestions for further reading." F. E. Hirsch
+ Library J 77:427 Mr 1 '52 150w

"Before his retirement in 1947 Adriaan Jacob Barnouw was, for a quarter of a century, Queen Wilhelmina Professor of the History, Language and Literature of the Netherlands at Columbia University. His serenity, scholarship, and grace of style never appeared to greater advantage than in this short history of the Netherlands. . . In a work of interpretation so rewarding to read, so crowded with references to the scenery, canals, cities, gardens, homes, occupations and pastimes dear to Hollanders, one cannot but regret the absence of a few typical Dutch paintings. There is need also for a few maps." Geoffrey Bruun
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ag 31 '52 500w

"A brilliantly written and well balanced attempt to present to the American reader the spirit of the people of the Low Countries." Hans Kohn

+ N Y Times p14 Ap 6 '52 450w
San Francisco Chronicle p10 Jl 6 '52
80w

"In this intimate, heartwarming introduction to the people of the Netherlands, Professor Barnouw offers American readers a chance to discover the charm of the Low Countries under the happiest auspices. If his mode of presentation had to be described in two words, those words would be clarity and charity." Geoffrey Bruun

+ Sat R 35:52 Ap 19 '52 160w
School & Society 75:141 Mr 1 '52 20w
Springf'd Republican p9D My 25 '52
100w

"Discriminating in its interpretations, yet expressed in a simple and picturesque style, this fine essay will be appreciated by the general reader and by the professional historian, too, as an intelligent distillation of the best in Dutch civilization."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:151 Je '52 220w

BARNES, GLENN M. Murder is a gamble. 223p $2 Phoenix
Detective story.

"Brightly written yarn of action effectively tempered to avoid melodramatic excesses." Drexel Drake

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p18 F 17 '52
100w

"Barnes is a new name among mystery writers, but the story he has Marks tell is smooth enough to have been set down by an older hand. It is flimsy in plot and perfunctory in conclusion, but its steadily and alertly sardonic manner makes it rather agreeable anyway."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 F 17 '52
80w

"Solution-troubles are so marked in Murder is a Gamble as to ruin an otherwise readable book." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p12 F 3 '52 50w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p20 F 10 '52
60w

BARNUM, JAY HYDE. New fire engine; pictures by [the author]. 47p $2 Morrow

52-5068

A new fire engine runs into trouble three times in succession, but finally on its fourth trip out it has a spectacular success and later is invited to lead the parade. For very young readers.

"Feelings of joy and sorrow are attributed to the otherwise non-personalized engine; the pictures have a superabundance of action and expression, but it is acceptable to fill the need for easy, non-school-reader books."

Bookmark 11:161 Ap '52 70w

Horn Bk 28:98 Ap '52 50w

Kirkus 20:1 Ja 1 '52 90w

"First- and second-graders will enter wholeheartedly into the unhappy experiences of Fire Engine Number 3. . . Suspense is well sustained. Excellent for reading aloud. Children below third-grade level will find it difficult because of the unusual words not in their reading vocabulary. Large, clear type. Illustrations are full of action." N. S. Zipp

+ Library J 77:539 Mr 15 '52 70w

"The many pictures are good, the style is lively, the type large primer size. Younger boys will like it." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Mr 23 '52 80w

"This is a lively story with amusing pictures and a constant supply of well-balanced excitement. A wonderful vocabulary selection adds much to its appeal. The younger child will enjoy having the story read aloud and the slightly older child will want to read the nice, large, primary-type words to himself." A. L. Seekamp

+ N Y Times p22 Mr 9 '52 140w

Springf'd Republican p10D Mr 30 '52
60w

BARON, ALEXANDER, pseud. See Bernstein, A.

BARON, SALO WITTMAYER. Social and religious history of the Jews; v 1-2, Ancient times. 2d ed rev & enl 415;493p $12.50 Columbia univ. press

296 Jews—History. Jews—Political and social conditions. Jews—Religion (52-404)

"In 1937 Professor Baron issued the first edition of this work in three volumes [Book Review Digest 1937]. The present edition is no mere revision, but is to all intents and purposes a new work. These two volumes, subtitled Ancient Times, deal with the social and religious history of the Jews from the Old Testament period to the conclusion of the Talmudic period, ca. 500 A.D. Five more volumes are planned, two treating the medieval period and two the modern period, with a final volume containing a complete annotated bibliography and cumulative index. The publishers expect the entire set to be available by 1955." U S Quarterly Bk R

"The work is documented by a wealth of references, showing a mastery by the author of the enormous literature in the field. It is also highly readable, which is no mean achievement for a work of this type, and represents scholarship at its best." Samuel Koenig

+ Am Soc R 17:656 O '52 400w

"The more than two hundred pages of notes are rich in bibliographic citations and critical comment. Baron's work, which is leveled at scholars, is based upon an almost encyclopedic accumulation of information and on an examination of all relevant secondary sources. It is a pity that this massive work, the fullest and most up-to-date general study in English on the cultural history of the ancient Jews, has not ventured beyond the outdated canons of interpretation of exotic cultures still found among otherwise excellent historians." Melville Jacobs

+ Ann Am Acad 281:237 My '52 600w

Reviewed by M. A. Shulvass
J Religion 32:290 O '52 280w

"A valuable item for the reference shelf."
J. M. Scherr

+ Library J 77:434 Mr 1 '52 200w

"This history is written in a brilliant manner with a remarkable depth and breadth of learning, and is refreshingly free from the lachrymose or Wailing Wall conception of writing Jewish history." I. B.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p32 F 24 '52 220w

"Dr. Baron's 200-odd pages of notes are a guide to the latest and best scholarship in his field; but, as he makes clear, the best of scholars are still in the dark regarding many minor and some major facts of Jewish history." B. R. Redman

+ Sat R 35:29 My 24 '52 320w

"One may take these volumes not only as the work of a historian of recognized ability, but also as the author's estimate of the abiding values in historic Judaism. All the volumes will be of interest to the general student of Judaism, and these two present ones to the 'Bible-centered' reader."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:139 Je '52 230w

BARR, ALFRED HAMILTON. Matisse; his art and his public. 591p il $12.50; pa $7.50 Mus. of modern art

759.4 Matisse, Henri 52-291

A monograph on Henri Matisse, which covers his life, his art, and the public's reaction to this art. Copiously illustrated. Bibliography; index to bibliography, and general index.

"This splendidly produced volume is the most comprehensive book to date about Matisse. . . Admirers of Matisse owe Mr. Barr warm congratulations for this scholarly, imaginative, and exciting compilation."

+ Atlantic 189:83 My '52 180w

Booklist 48:227 Mr 15 '52

Reviewed by Edward Barry
Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Mr 2 '52 370w

Reviewed by Dorothy Adlow
Christian Science Monitor p15 Mr 27 '52 190w

"It is possible to argue about the nature of Matisse's religious art but not of its existence. In this connection, a recent study of Matisse by Alfred Barr is invaluable." Serge Hughes

+ Commonweal 56:120 My 9 '52 1500w

Reviewed by Stephen Bone
Manchester Guardian p4 Mr 11 '52 270w

"This book is, I believe, one of the finest monographs ever written about a living artist. . . Mr. Barr's taste seems amazingly sure. There is little or no dilution of quality in the nearly 500 plates he has included in his monograph. Moreover, their arrangement is so lucid that a fine account of the painter's evolution can be gained from their pages alone. . . Mr. Barr's prose is lean and tidy; it never strains for vividness or shock or polish. But somehow its effect is piercing and memorable." J. T. Soby

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 D 16 '51 1150w

"This is the best book on a living artist known to this reviewer. It illuminates fully the elder of the two greatest painters the twentieth century has produced. The author, director of the collections of the Museum of Modern art utilizes a rare combination of the soundest objective methods of art scholarship, usually reserved for the old masters, and the enthusiastic interpretation generally to be found only in the panegyrics of an artist by a fiery friend." Alfred Frankfurter

+ N Y Times p7 D 16 '51 1200w

"The illustrations, though clear and distinct enough, are not all of the very first order, but they make up for this by their completeness; there are literally hundreds of them, not only covering all phases of his work but also including a number of documentary photographs of the artist and his surroundings."

+ New Yorker 27:79 F 2 '52 190w

"This book's achievement lies in being at once an exhaustive document and an interesting tale. . . There probably can never be a more detailed book than this of Matisse and his art." Robert Goldwater

+ Sat R 35:41 F 2 '52 700w

"A model of meticulous scholarship, historical insight, artistic sensitivity, and graphic presentation, this is indeed a monumental work."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:127 Je '52 250w

BARR, STRINGFELLOW. Citizens of the world; preface by William O. Douglas. 235p $3 Doubleday

338.91 World politics. Economic conditions 52-11013

An expansion of the author's pamphlet Let's Join the Human Race, published in 1950. "Mr. Barr believes that: the appalling conditions of poverty and disease throughout most of the world invite communism unless the peoples of the backward countries can win their double-revolution for food and justice. . . He suggests an International Development Authority responsible to a world body, possibly associated with the U. N., patterned after the TVA." (Library J)

Booklist 49:98 N 15 '52

"One could wish that this brief and digestible volume were read by every member of the Congress and by every policy maker in the state department, and were the guide book of the future to the next secretary of state." A. W. Swan

+ Christian Century 69:1409 D 3 '52 550w

"Dr. Barr's proposals may or may not be fully adequate; but they are presented with a vigor which summons every honest American and certainly every Christian to think about where are we going?" E. L. Parsons

Churchman 166:9 D 15 '52 800w

Kirkus 20:587 S 1 '52 150w

"An inspiring book, urgently recommended." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 77:1646 O 1 '52 150w

Reviewed by Albert Guerard
Nation 175:526 D 6 '52 320w

"Dr. Barr outlines the plan with sweet reasonableness, but this is not an age of reason. His quiet voice may be drowned by the lunatic roar of the war-now adherents. If that happens, we are all of us lost. Nevertheless, Dr. Barr has written his book with a belligerent optimism which is comforting and infectious this gloomy mid-November. Citizens of the World is certainly the most arguable book of this year; it is also an urgently important one." Merle Miller

+ New Repub 127:19 D 1 '52 950w

"Stringfellow Barr is an angry man, and since he is also a witty man his wrath has given rise to a book so diverting that certain passages remind you of Mencken in his heyday. Of course they are actually poles apart; Barr is a utopian, while Mencken is anything but that. Yet they are alike in that each swings a wicked shillelagh, and neither is a respecter of skulls." G. W. Johnson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 N 16 '52 900w

"Few present the facts and challenge of inequality so well as he. Few argue the case with more eloquence. When it comes to remedies, it seems to this reviewer that Mr. Barr plunges pretty far off the deep end. But the big thing is that his arguments help to awaken and arouse us." E. D. Canham

+ N Y Times p5 N 16 '52 650w

Reviewed by Alexander Meiklejohn
San Francisco Chronicle p17 N 9 '52 1050w

BARR, STRINGFELLOW—Continued

"Every person, no matter what his political outlook might be, should read this book. All will not agree with Barr's thesis. But I believe that all will benefit from exposure to the fresh viewpoint which he presents."
Harrison Brown
+ Sat R 35:11 D 13 '52 1000w

BARRAULT, JEAN LOUIS. Reflections on the theatre; tr. from the French by Barbara Wall. 180p il $4.50 Macmillan

B or 92 Actors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. [51-8629]

"With the death of Louis Jouvet, Jean-Louis Barrault has become the leading actor-director-manager of the French stage. This means that for many Barrault is one of the leading figures of the world theatre. The book explains his ideas and narrates his career." N Y Times

"The best parts of the book are the reminiscences of early days as a student and a young actor. The later pages are of a pretentiousness that makes the book hardly readable." G. F. Manchester Guardian p4 N 20 '51 150w

Reviewed by Harold Clurman

N Y Times p4 F 10 '52 600w

"The forty-one-year-old Barrault, who is best known to American audiences for his portrayal of the pantomimist, Baptiste, in the French film 'Children of Paradise,' is one of contemporary Paris's leading actors. The story of his life in the theatre could have furnished an engrossing and human picture of the French theatrical scene. Somehow it never fully achieves this potentiality." H. H.

Sat R 35:24 F 9 '52 250w

"The book, if read at a sitting, can invigorate. Though the translation may not always help us, the drawings—by such people as Bérard, Pierre Cabane and Maclés—most certainly do."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p674 O 26 '51 550w

BARRIE, JANE, pseud. See Savage, M.

BARRY, HENRY M. I'll be seeing you. 239p $3 Knopf

B or 92 Blind 51-11979

A blind veteran, wounded in World War II, describes his difficult climb back to health and a better security than he had known before the war. His reactions when he first discovered he was blind, his hospital experiences in England and America, his course during his rehabilitation, and his job are all discussed.

Booklist 48:274 My 1 '52

Bookmark 11:183 My '52 10w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Yates

Christian Science Monitor p9 Ap 26 '52 500w

"A straightforward narrative, which does not minimize—or dramatize—the many barriers to be overridden, the low spots of isolation and humiliation, the occasional embarrassing to infuriating encounters with those who are more fortunate but less sensitive, this has a direct simplicity and appeal."

+ Kirkus 20:148 F 15 '52 160w

Library J 77:2188 D 15 '52 30w

"Barry's is a story of a reintegrated personality, of faith reborn out of black despair. It attests the resilience of the human spirit." Frances Witherspoon

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p27 My 11 '52 550w

"You'll miss an intense and heart-warming experience if you fail to read in Mr. Barry's own words the new things he has seen since he was blinded by shellfire on the German front... Mr. Barry's scenes are vividly created; his prose is economical and moving; his humor is real because it stems from high courage." Baynard Kendrick

+ N Y Times p10 Ap 20 '52 450w

"A remarkable piece of work, both for the insight it gives the reader into the special problems of the suddenly blinded veteran and in the genuine, heartening, sensible optimism its author exhibits." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ap 24 '52 550w

"How, from his first fumbling beginnings, Henry Barry learned to get about without help is a magnificent human document. But how he overcame his soul's torment and loneliness to achieve independence of spirit and a new set of life values has all the psychological drama of a modern 'Pilgrim's Progress.'" A. F. Wolfe

+ Sat R 35:17 My 17 '52 260w

BARRY, JOSEPH A. Left Bank, Right Bank: Paris and Parisians. 267p $3 Norton

914.436 Paris—Social life and customs 51-13977

For descriptive note see Annual for 1951.

Booklist 48:169 Ja 15 '52

"A lively and perceptive discourse on Paris." J. H. Thompson

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ja 27 '52 270w

"Mr. Barry's learning fits him well. It is genuine, inobtrusive and keeps good company with his wit. His interview with Isidore Isou, the high priest of Lettrisme, the new cult to supersede all cults, is as maliciously amusing as his interview with the aged Colette is sympathetic. Perhaps the most important chapters for an understanding of contemporary France, with of course Paris as the hub, are the three political ones." Francis Russell

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 F 21 '52 380w

"Good reporting is rare these days. Mr. Barry, chief of the Paris bureau of the Sunday New York Times, is in the vintage George Augustus Sala tradition. His book is a witty, piping hot introduction to contemporary Paris and Parisians, covering most of the obvious ground and a good many etceteras."

+ New Statesman & Nation 43:506 Ap 26 '52 330w

"Curiously enough, it is the personal rather than the professional reactions that are more striking. When Mr. Barry is writing about the Ile St. Louis or the caveau called La Rose Rouge, when he is chucking at the clowns at the Cirque Madrano or bargaining at the Flea Market, he happily conjures up on paper the Paris that less fortunate people can only cherish in memories. But when he abandons such pleasant reminiscences for Sunday-magazine accounts of why Picasso is a Communist or how de Gaulle expects to get into power, the magic vanishes." Herbert Kupferberg

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 F 17 '52 190w

Springf'd Republican p9D My 25 '52 330w

BARTH, THOMAS FREDRIK WEIBY. Theoretical petrology; a textbook on the origin and the evolution of rocks. 387p il maps $6.50 Wiley

552 Rocks 52-5200

"A fresh treatment that embodies much recently gained knowledge in geophysics, geochemistry and radioactivity. The main viewpoint is that of physical chemistry. In one portion of the book, the formation of specific families of minerals such as the feldspars is discussed in the light of the phase rule and equilibria diagrams." (Library J) Index.

"The book is essential in all collections on mineralogy and petrology." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 77:722 Ap 15 '52 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 37:27 Mr '52

BARTLETT, PHYLLIS BROOKS. Poems in process. 267p $4 Oxford

808.1 Poetry. Creation (literary, artistic, etc.) 51-5278

For descriptive note see Annual for 1951.

"There is much of fascinating interest, both human and literary, in the well-documented information she provides. For the craftsman and the sensitive reader there is, too, as she claims, much of value to be learned from it." H. P.A. Fausset

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Ja 25 '52 230w

Reviewed by W. V. O'Connor
Poetry 79:295 F '52 1300w

"Wisely, Miss Bartlett avoids the subject of inspiration, which few poets themselves are able to explain satisfactorily, concentrating on the stages of composition and revision. Her approach to the problem is particularly good in that the relation between composition and revision is analyzed in terms of the part played by the poet's friends and critics, circumstances surrounding the composition, drastic changes of mind, public demands, and artistic needs for reshaping and clarifying material. . . In addition to the survey-reference value of the book there is sound commentary, especially on characteristics of the English Romantic, Victorian, and the modern period." Siegfried Mandel

+ Sat R 35:39 Mr 15 '52 250w

"A human and pleasantly written book. No doubt many readers will be familiar with the detailed revisions and re-hatchings of one or more of the poets in question—there are few of any account who are left out—but to gather so many together was the result of a happy inspiration." Bonamy Dobrée

+ Spec 188:214 F 15 '52 600w

"A comprehensive study of the creative process in poetry, this book is scrupulously logical in organization, rich in illustrations from most of the major and many of the minor poets who have written in English, all the way from Chaucer to T. S. Eliot."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:20 Mr '52 250w

BARTLETT, ROBERT MERRILL. They dare to believe. 158p $2 Assn. press

920 Reformers 52-13173

Brief biographical sketches of seventeen famous men and women of today. Ralph Bunche is the only American included. Those included are: Reinhold Von Thadden-Trieglaff, C. H. Malik, K. C. Han, B. R. Ambedkar, E. J. Berggrav, Kiyoshi Tanimoto, A. J. Toynbee, Yellapragada SubbaRow, R. J. Bunche, Y. C. J. Yen, R. S. Cripps, Hachiro Yuasa, Madeleine Barot, F. K. O. Dibelius, V. L. Pandit, Raphael Lemkin, V. R. H. de la Torre.

Reviewed by Clarence Seidenspinner

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 O 26 '52 210w

Springf'd Republican p8C N 9 '52 200w

BARTOK, BELA. Serbo-Croatian folk songs; texts and transcriptions of seventy-five folk songs from the Milman Parry collection; and, a Morphology of Serbo-Croatian folk melodies, by Béla Bartók and Albert B. Lord; with a foreword by George Herzog. 431p $8.50 Columbia univ. press

784.4 Folk songs, Serbo-Croatian 51-12670

"Representing the fruits of Béla Bartók's last scholarly activity, this book is devoted to the so-called 'women's songs' of Yugoslavia, which are lyrics and ballads as distinguished from the heroic epics or 'men's songs.' The first and major part of the volume consists of transcriptions into musical notation of seventy-five melodies selected from the collection of phonograph recordings made by Milman Parry in Yugoslavia prior to World War II. . . Preceding the transcriptions is a detailed study of the morphology of the songs. . . The task of editing the texts of the songs was entrusted to Albert B. Lord, who accompanied Professor Parry on his trips to Yugoslavia. Printed in Part II of the volume, these texts are reproduced in both the original language and English translation." U S Quarterly Bk R

"A model of rigorous scholarship in a field where such has been at a premium." C. K. Miller

+ Library J 76:1808 N 1 '51 90w

"This book is the fruit of Bartók's musically barren first years in America. It is a masterpiece of scholarship, comparable with his earlier works on Hungarian and Rumanian folk-music, but after studying the elaborate musical morphology which forms the bulk of it one may perhaps wonder what purpose it serves."

Manchester Guardian p4 My 23 '52 300w

"A few misunderstandings crop up in the book. . . Nevertheless, the scientific method applied by Béla Bartók in connection with the music of these 75 songs is so impressive that this book must be considered an absolute necessity for everyone remotely connected with folk music. For this reason, and also for the sake of the English translations of the song texts, the book must likewise be strongly recommended to libraries." Yury Arbatsky

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 9:288 Mr '52 650w

"Anything from the pen of Béla Bartók commands the greatest respect. This book deals with what might seem to be a narrow subject of interest only to specialists, but it raises issues that should attract the attention of musicologists, ethnologists and sociologists. It is in sum an important book."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p94 F 1 '52 700w

"A work of high scholarship, the book is a fitting memorial to a great musician."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:397 D '51 200w

BARTOW, EDITH MERWIN. News and these United States. 292p il $5 Funk

071 Newspapers—History 52-10315

"Covers the story of American journalism from 1633 to the present day. The book has reproductions of early day woodcuts, famous mastheads, and examples of printed pages. It notes the important milestones such as gradual improvements in presses, roads and express riders, railroads and the telegraf, and finally the quick communications, mass printing and distribution of today. . . The pioneer papers of every section of the United States are mentioned." (Chicago Sunday Tribune) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 48:350 J1 1 '52

"The volume will be interesting to those in the newspaper business and to students of American history as well." Gilbert Twiss

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 S 14 '52 160w

"The reader who is unacquainted with the field will find here much that is interesting and important. If some paragraphs and sections seem heavily loaded, other parts are distinctly readable; and the volume, illustrated by line-cuts, is attractive." F. L. Mott

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p26 N 16 '52 380w

BARUCH, DOROTHY (WALTER) (MRS HYMAN MILLER). One little boy; medical collaboration by Hyman Miller. (Julian Press bk) 242p $3.50 Messner

618.9 [618.92] Child study. Psychotherapy 52-7068

"With the medical collaboration of her physician-husband (Dr. Hyman Miller), the author, a prominent child psychologist, presents a book-length case history of a little boy, Kenneth, who underwent standard psychotherapy for his unhappiness. The therapy necessitated re-education of his parents, also unhappy within themselves." Library J

Booklist 48:223 Mr 15 '52

"As the author of 'New Ways in Discipline' and 'Parents can be People,' Dorothy Baruch already has a reputation as one of the outstanding contributors toward better understanding of children. Her new book should add immeasurably to her reputation and deserves wide and thoughtful reading." D. W. Fiske

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Mr 23 '52 390w

"The book should be recommended to doctors, to psychotherapists, and those using their techniques, and to a wide, though selective audience that would find its skillful projection of a professional point of view to a lay public of constructive value in better understanding of the place modern therapy can take in helping those in need. A dangerous subject in any other than highly trained hands, this book helps chart the way, provide a measuring stick."

BARUCH, D. W.—Continued

+ Kirkus 20:63 Ja 15 '52 320w

"This elementary book is of high value to untrained parents and readers for discovering that adults have repressed childhood memories and that children are basically alike in their unspoken thoughts... Recommended." J. M. Scherr

+ Library J 77:427 Mr 1 '52 130w

Reviewed by Lorine Pruette

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Ap 20 '52 600w

"Here is a book for those who have the courage to look deep into their own hearts. It is the story of every adult, who, like Kenneth, may be unhappy because he knows not what he fights and so, in a sense, gives up the fight, as Kenneth started to do. Because of the wisdom of his mother, he got the chance early in life to learn to do battle more courageously. Here, too, is what a therapist should be—warm, kindly, firm." Lucy Freeman

+ N Y Times p10 Mr 23 '52 450w

Reviewed by W. H. Baker

San Francisco Chronicle p9 J1 6 '52 650w

"This story should be of help to all parents, but particularly to those whose children are in trouble with themselves or with the world. It should answer many questions about psychotherapy and take away the mystery and resultant fear about treatment for children, for 'getting help from a clinic or therapist is a friendly process, not a terrifying ordeal.'" G. M. Abbate

+ Sat R 35:21 My 31 '52 800w

Springf'd Republican p6D J1 27 '52 100w

"A beautifully told story." L. E. Woodward

+ Survey 88:181 Ap '52 380w

"This apparent over-simplification may result from a striving for condensation and readability, and it does not seriously detract from the value of what is an unusually good and moving record. One Little Boy will be appreciated not only by professional workers, but also by many parents who seek enlightenment in furthering as best they can the growth and welfare of their children."

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:176 Je '52 220w

Wis Lib Bul 48:85 Mr '52

BASLOE, FRANK J. I grew up with basketball; twenty years of barnstorming with cage greats of yesterday [written] in collaboration with D. Gordon Rohman. 210p il $3 Greenberg

796.32 Basket ball

51-14925

Autobiography of the manager of the "Globe-trotters", a famous basketball team some forty years ago. Contains material on the early history of basketball. No index.

Reviewed by Robert Cromie

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 F 17 '52 140w

"A highly interesting autobiography... Recommended." E. W. Henderson

+ Library J 77:440 Mr 1 '52 40w

BASSECHES, NIKOLAUS. Stalin; tr. from the German by E. W. Dickes. 404p $4.50 Dutton
B or 92 Stalin, Iosif. Russia—History—Revolution, 1917 52-10440

"A domestic history of Soviet Russia with special emphasis on Stalin's role and personality. The gradual emergence of Stalin from the original group of revolutionaries is mainly explained by the fact that he was the only man of the masses, not an 'intellectual,' nor a university educated man, nor aristocrat. In this well-written book, Basseches, who displays remarkable insight into Russian mentality, makes no startlingly new discoveries but weaves in many new details and presents a picture of Soviet Russia often differing greatly from the prevailing views." Library J

"The book is of uneven quality. The author seems to attach more credence to the official versions of soviet political trials than the probabilities warrant... However, the book is the work of an inquiring mind, backed by a knowledge of the Russian language and of soviet theory and practice. It is definitely one of the more solid newspaper men's stories of Stalin and his realm." W. H. Chamberlin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 N 2 '52 300w

"The book is neither really 'dangerous' nor quite 'judicious.' But neither can it be classified as a biography that adds much to our knowledge of Stalin and the Soviet Union. In not a single essential point does it go beyond the three excellent Stalin biographies by Isaac Deutscher, Bertram de Wolfe, and Louis Fischer; and in many respects it lags far behind them. Still, there is no mistaking the author's intimate familiarity with the Soviet Union and its people." E. S. Pisko

Christian Science Monitor p9 N 1 '52 500w

"Will make excellent comparative reading with the more trenchant and less optimistic book of Louis Fischer, The Life and Death of Stalin."

+ Kirkus 20:543 Ag 15 '52 210w

"Of lasting value. Recommended." H. H. Bernt

+ Library J 77:1399 S 1 '52 110w

"Mr Basseches was for a very long time a Moscow correspondent; what he has to say about the social changes in Russia between the revolution and his final departure in 1937 is not without interest, and his attempt to relate Stalin's rise to these changes is not without ingenuity. But he seems to have no particular desire to distinguish between established truth and mere legend." Max Beloff

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Ap 25 '52 200w

"In a real sense Mr. Basseches' new book, 'Stalin,' suffers from the fact that his opportunities for direct observation of Soviet developments ended in 1937. His book (nominally a biography, it is actually the story of Russia under Communist rule) is strongest when it summarizes the reconstruction and the party struggles of the years he knew at first hand. It is weakest when he attempts to analyze current Soviet policies." P. E. Mosely

+ N Y Times p20 N 2 '52 750w

"The writing style is simple and direct, and the translation from the German, by E. W. Dickes, is quite readable. But any generally favorable judgment of this book must be tempered by recognition of Mr. Basseches's sloppiness in his factual material and an expression of amazement at some of his most important conclusions. Contrary to this author, Stalin did not write the 'Short History of the Communist Party'; that myth is a post-war Soviet invention. Other similar examples might be cited." Harry Schwartz

Sat R 35:41 N 29 '52 500w

"This is a rather slipshod book, undocumented and with a lack of coherent thinking which greatly reduces its value as a serious work. From it all there emerges a shadowy figure, slightly larger than life, lonely and rather misunderstood, assailed sometimes by 'twinges of conscience' and forced 'by the destiny of his success simply to become a Russian statesman.' There are a few Englishmen who have had the opportunity to form a much more positive impression—of a small, grey man, with an astonishingly acute mind, and a winning manner which can turn in a flash, when he is crossed, to a coarse and ungovernable viciousness." Richard Chancellor

Spec 183:722 My 30 '52 600w

"Mr. Basseches' judgments, whether one agrees with them or not, are clearly his own and fit into no prescribed pattern. His book has substantial merits as well as conspicuous defects. It does not compete with Mr. Deutscher's factual and scholarly biography published two years ago. It rarely gives a date, and its minor inaccuracies are legion. But its impressionistic and rather happy-go-lucky method of presentation conceals a good deal of acute and discerning analysis."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p295 My 2 '52
1050w

BAST, HERBERT. Making upholstered furniture. 162p il $4 Bruce pub.

684.1 Upholstery. Furniture 52-268

"A simple, generously illustrated book that should remove the mystery from upholstered furniture. Frames, tools and materials are covered in the first fifteen pages. The remainder of the book consists of detailed directions for twenty-three projects. Some of these are as simple as a dressing table bench, but more complicated articles such as three-cushion sofas and barrel chairs are included. For each project, dimensioned drawings of the frames are furnished and there are a number of reproductions of photographs—sometimes as many as fifteen—showing various operations in upholstering the piece. Although the book is undoubtedly intended for use in organized vocational classes, it is quite suitable for the self-instruction of persons who wish to make upholstered furniture at home." N Y New Tech Bks

Booklist 48:192 F 15 '52

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 77:535 Mr 15 '52 50w
N Y New Tech Bks 37:6 Ja '52

BATE, HENRY MACLEAR. Report from Formosa. 290p il $3.50 Dutton

951.24 [952.9] Formosa. Eastern question (Far East) 52-5316

"Formosa has natural advantages which make it of prime political, economic, and military importance. A British journalist visited this 'Taiwan Province of China' in 1951 to investigate its general conditions, Chiang's use of its advantages, and his hopes of returning to the Mainland. . . Mr. Bate raises many pertinent questions and offers answers, on the basis of his visit, to some of them." (Library J) Chronological outline. Index.

Booklist 48:357 J1 1 '52

Reviewed by Kenneth Colegrove
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Je 15 '52
700w

"Mr. Bate's book on Formosa is particularly welcome at this time because of the dearth of journalistic effort on that subject. As an added dividend to the reader, the author takes the usual swing from Formosa to the Philippines, Macao, and Hong Kong, where he makes a quick but careful survey of conditions." Gordon Walker

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Je 21 '52
500w

"An excellent, needed work, characteristic of the best of British journalism."

+ Kirkus 20:115 F 1 '52 160w

"Seemingly unbiased reporting." H. P. Linton

Library J 77:587 Ap 1 '52 120w

Reviewed by Dorothy Woodman
New Statesman & Nation 43:470 Ap 19 '52 600w

Reviewed by Ralph Chapman

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Je 22 '52 700w

"Americans will find H. Maclear Bate's book unusual fare. Its material is fresh, for one thing, because it presents Formosa and its significance in the Far East maelstrom through non-American eyes. . . Mr. Bate speaks from convictions of his own, formed out of a personal knowledge of China, where he was born, and of the Chinese, whom he has studied, lived with and written about for British newspapers. His message, moreover, is one of hope." R. A. Smith

+ N Y Times p12 Je 8 '52 380w

New Yorker 28:140 Je 7 '52 200w

"One can find things to quibble over, of course—the fact that he spells the name of the Hong Kong airport correctly in one chapter and later completely misspells it three times; the fact that one chapter heading is 'Problems of Kai-shek and Tse-tung,' which is like saying the problems of Winston and Harry. But here is an objective and interesting book on an area of critical importance, and as such should get a hearing, or rather a reading." A. K.

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p22 J1 20 '52
330w

"Reading 'Report From Formosa' will help no one to come up with a solution of any of these puzzles. But the book itself is a vast help to an understanding of the great issues at stake—issues which had best be thoroughly understood by the American public before our government finally takes up the task of trying to evolve some safe and equitable solution." Hallett Abend

Sat R 35:35 J1 12 '52 850w

"Mr. Bate's anxiety and haste to lead us to his conclusion may excuse the occasional ungrammatical sentence, the minor historical inaccuracies, the mis-spelling of names like Kwangtung, Chiang Ching-kuo, Li Tsung-jen. These do not help his brief, yet, after all, he is dealing with a subject of pressing interest, and his material, if not hot, is still warm. But nothing can excuse the major inaccuracies. . . Mr. Bate enjoyed unusual privileges on Formosa. But because he uses his information as he wants, and not as it demands, he has written a confusing, unimportant book on an important subject." Peter Townsend

— Spec 188:488 Ap 11 '52 750w

"Like so many English writers, Mr. Bate has a happy knack for phraseology, so that his book is easy reading and entertaining throughout, as well as being highly informative on a subject which is of prime importance to America at the present time." H. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p6D Ag 10 '52
420w

"The author, although he comes from a family with a long Chinese background, and is no fonder of the present Peking régime than might be expected, has no particular axe of his own to grind; he sets himself to dig out the truth, and afterwards to write about it with few frills and small regard for the susceptibilities of partisans on one side or the other."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p346 My 23 '52 470w

Wis Lib Bul 48:172 J1 '52

BATEMAN, ALAN MARA. Formation of mineral deposits. 371p il maps $5.50 Wiley

553.1 Ore deposits 51-13033

"This book summarizes fundamental information concerning the many and highly varied processes that form minerals and rocks, describes geologic environments of ore deposits, and discusses critically the world distribution of mineral commodities." Chem & Eng N

Booklist 48:67 O 15 '51

"Dr. Bateman has attempted, and in part succeeded, to avoid the too-technical jargon of the professional geologist in his effort to produce a book suitable for the interested non-geologist or elementary student of economic geology. A glossary of some 250 technical terms is particularly helpful in directing the reader to those pages in the text where the terms are principally used." W. T. Pecora

+ Chem & Eng N 29:5288 D 10 '51 180w
N Y New Tech Bks 36:37 N '51

BATES, BARBARA, pseud. Real book about pets; il. by Mary Snedeker. 192p $1.25 Garden City bks.

636 Pets 52-7610

"Guide to the selection, housing, feeding, care, and training of a wide variety of pets, from dogs, cats, and rabbits to chameleons, budgerigars, monkeys, bugs, and insects. There are chapters on taming wild birds and animals and on animal hobbies and careers. Grades 4-8." Booklist

BATES, BARBARA—Continued

Booklist 48:236 Mr 15 '52

Kirkus 19:704 D 15 '51 100w

"Recommended for all children's collections, because it is attractive and useful as well as inexpensive." Augusta Baker

+ Library J 77:602 Ap 1 '52 80w

Reviewed by M. E. Martignoni

N Y Times p18 Je 29 '52 30w

BATES, HARRY (ANTHONY GILMORE, pseud). Space Hawk; the greatest of interplanetary adventurers. 274p $2.75 Greenberg

52-6108

Science-fiction novel.

"The book is recommended to historians as evidence of precisely how bad some of the early 'classics' are. I haven't had so much fun since the last exploit of the insidious Dr. Fu Manchu, or possibly even since Cleek of the Forty Faces." H. H. Holmes

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Je 29 '52 90w

"This tale of interplanetary pirates, of men crazed on extraterrestrial drugs, and of a hero whose draw can be compared only to Wild Bill Hickok's, will please such addicts—and prove to be anathema to the growing number of more serious science-fiction fans. Strictly for the naïve in heart." S. V. Gerson

N Y Times p15 Ag 10 '52 100w

Reviewed by Don Fabun

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ag 3 '52 200w

BATES, HERBERT ERNEST. Colonel Julian, and other stories. (Atlantic Monthly press bk) 240p $3 Little

52-5505

Contents: The little farm; Colonel Julian; Time expired; The lighthouse; Joe Johnson; The park; Sugar for the horse; The flag; No more the nightingales; The Bedfordshire clang-er; A girl called Peter; The major of Hussars; Mrs. Vincent; A Christmas song; The frontier.

Booklist 48:281 My 1 '52

Bookmark 11:184 My '52 20w

"These 15 pieces, all distinct artistic achievements, justify previous comparisons of Bates' work to Chekhov's. They are also remarkably readable and, indeed, engrossing." Warren Beck

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ap 27 '52 400w

Kirkus 20:93 F 1 '52 170w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Jenkins

Manchester Guardian p4 Je 29 '51 180w

Reviewed by Ruthven Todd

Nation 175:18 Jl 5 '52 160w

"The only stories in this lot that recall Mr. Bates's better form are 'The Lighthouse,' despite its heavy phallic symbolism, and 'The Colonel of Hussars,' a tale of matrimonial woe beside the Lake of Thun." John Richardson

+ New Statesman & Nation 42:80 Jl 21 '51 270w

"Bates' thematic range may not be great, but he probes deep in a vital emotional salient. His evocation of scene, particularly the English countryside is heady, and his narrative pace is deliberate and sure, a slow fuse, often exploding only after the last sentence has passed. Short-story anthologists will plunder this little book for years to come." Milton Rugoff

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Ap 27 '52 800w

"This distinguished collection of fifteen short stories by the British author of 'Fair Stood the Wind for France' and 'The Purple Plain' invites favorable comparison with the best of A. E. Coppard or Elizabeth Bowen or V. S. Pritchett. Indeed, these stories make the work of many of H. E. Bates' contemporaries in England or here in America appear, in comparison, either amateurish or pretentious." William Peden

+ N Y Times p6 Ap 6 '52 600w

New Yorker 28:142 My 17 '52 70w

"Although there are two inferior stories, 'Sugar for the Horse' and 'Time Expired,' this is an excellent collection, far more worth reading than most of Mr. Bates's own or of most other writers' novels. By a style that is spare and vivid, through plots that are usually both inevitable and arresting, Mr. Bates deepens our understanding of people we should know more about." Dunham Curtis

+ Sat R 35:23 My 24 '52 500w

"Begin at the beginning, go on till you come to the end; then stop," should surely be the motto of all story-tellers. Mr. H. E. Bates, an admirable writer of short stories, would be a better one if he adopted it. He begins at the beginning all right—or at least at a beginning which serves its purpose as a mumbled word will serve as an introduction—but he does not go on till the end. He stops, tantalizingly, at some late stage in his narrative, and most of his clever, concise stories seem to die away, unfinished, three-quarters of the way through." Barbara Worsley-Gough

+ Spec 187:43 Jl 6 '51 110w

"Whatever their mood, most of Bates's stories are swept and refreshed by the winds of the English countryside. In this traditional landscape move people who are neither heroic nor eccentric; Bates is one of those writers whose talent, and it is a fine one, lies in the human usual."

+ Time 59:120 Ap 21 '52 400w

Times [London] Lit Sup p401 Je 29 '51 480w

BATES, MARSTON. Where winter never comes; a study of man and nature in the tropics. 310p il maps $3.50 Scribner

572.9 [573.4] Man—Influence of environment. Tropics 52-6464

A discussion, by a naturalist who has lived in the tropics and studied them intensively, of the life and culture of men in hot climates.

"Though nontechnical and informal the book is accurate and well-balanced, not overloaded with details, but filled with sound and sensible ideas and coming to valid conclusions on tropical people, tropical culture, occidental civilization in the tropics, climate, clothes, disease, food, forest, seas, government, and current problems." R. S. Platt

+ Ann Am Acad 282:182 Jl '52 550w

Booklist 48:192 F 15 '52

Bookmark 11:153 Ap '52 40w

"I feel as tho I've explored a new land and have found a new source of hope and inspiration in this troubled world." W. M. Krogman

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 F 17 '52 650w

Reviewed by R. M. Hallitt

Christian Science Monitor p9 Ag 27 '52 150w

"This is a 'study of man and nature in the tropics,' so successful and charming in style and manner, and so interesting and thought-provoking in content, that the limits of the book are the only cause of regret. The limits of the book are deceptively broad, too. Mr. Bates' writing is a triumph of the casual and conversational, so that the really sweeping scope of the information and ideas and questions deftly put in a reader's head is concealed by humane and genial art." Philip Burnham

+ Commonweal 55:547 Mr 7 '52 1400w

"The book contains a useful bibliography and a chapter-by-chapter discussion of the chief sources. It provides the sort of orientation that stimulates independent thought in students and contributes to the development of scientific judgment." Edward Weyer

+ Geog R 42:663 O '52 800w

"Worthwhile study."

+ Kirkus 20:21 Ja 1 '52 150w

"The author is at his best in chapters on tropical nature, forests, and seas. Written in an informal style, the book is designed for reading rather than reference." E. M. Cole
+ Library J 77:208 F 1 '52 120w

"The present book is a delightful and important symptom (and part) of the current major effort to reevaluate our former stereotyped concepts of the tropics. It is written in large part as an expression of a personal philosophy by a man who knows the tropics, who is a trained scientific observer, who is not afraid to use the first person singular in expressing his own point of view, who writes easily, smoothly and extremely well." E. P. Hanson
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 F 17 '52 1600w

"Despite all the sound material it contains, the book does not quite come off. Mr. Bates has written a good natural history of tropical man but it lacks the structure which the problem he deals with demands. As a result, his story is frequently two-dimensional. . . It is to be hoped that Mr. Bates will write another, less casual book about the area he knows and loves so well. Meanwhile this volume in its own way provides some of the most interesting, reliable and readable material on the tropics to appear in many years." William Vogt
+ N Y Times p6 F 17 '52 800w

New Yorker 28:146 Ap 19 '52 160w

"Marston Bates [is] a biologist who stands high in his profession, yet is able to write for the general reader with a clarity and vividness not surpassed even by Miss Carson herself. Perhaps Miss Carson's prose is finer; she writes, sometimes almost like a first-rate poet. But Dr. Bates' talent for lively description, for pointed humor, and particularly for conveying a wealth of scientific fact in laymen's language, is as good as Miss Carson's. And his subject is, at least to my mind, quite as enthralling." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 F 20 '52 700w

"Dr. Bates has spent half his life living and working as a research scientist in the tropics. He has studied and thought a great deal about them, and he has for a long time been much concerned about the lack of understanding which most people in the Western world have about the tropics. In this sparkling book he sets out the facts, and a more informative and cerebrally palatable book on the tropics would be hard to imagine." Ashley Montagu
+ Sat R 35:17 F 23 '52 500w

BAUER, RAYMOND AUGUSTINE. New man in Soviet psychology. (Russian research center studies) 229p $4 Harvard univ. press
150 Psychology 52-5385

"For the purpose of creating a better understanding of the Soviet Union, the Russian Research Center, supported by the Carnegie Foundation, now issues another study (the seventh) on Russian institutions and behavior. . . The study manages to cover several Soviet aspects: history of the science of psychology; patterns of social change; changing conceptions of human nature; ideology and action; relationship of psychology to society; and, adaptation of Western psychology." (Library J) Index.

"Bauer's book lucidly and authentically presents the development of Soviet psychology since the Revolution. No serious students of psychology can afford to ignore it. It should serve him at once as important information and as warning of the fate of science in a society where social and political considerations outweigh search for truth and knowledge." Hubert Bonner
+ Am Soc R 17:799 D '52 200w

"The book should be a must for everyone interested in the broader aspects of social and political psychology. Further it is lucidly written and well documented not only from the literature but from the author's own field observations." J. F. Brown
+ Ann Am Acad 283:222 S '52 550w

Reviewed by E. S. Pisko
Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 25 '52 600w

"The rarity of a book of this type should commend it to an educated group interested in modern Soviet psychology." J. M. Scherr
+ Library J 77:786 My 1 '52 130w

"This book deserves to be widely read by all students of the Soviet Union for its careful scholarship and objective presentation of evidence." E. J. Simmons
+ New Repub 126:20 Je 23 '52 950w

Reviewed by Albert Ward
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 J1 6 '52 650w

"I read this book carefully, and I was unable to find such catchwords as 'totalitarian,' 'dictatorship,' 'autocracy,' written and pronounced with that self-righteous venom which is so in vogue today. . . Mr. Bauer has done full justice to this picture, and the reader will learn a great deal about Soviet mentality in general and the vicissitudes of Marxism-Leninism-Stalinism in various dresses styled by Trotsky, cut and dried by Bukharin, dry-cleaned and brushed by Lenin, and finally fashioned by Stalin. . . Because this is a good book, one wishes that errors in the psychological, neologistic jargon had not been overlooked by the editors." Gregory Zilboorg
+ N Y Times p6 My 18 '52 650w

"The same superficial continuity of labels and formulas and the same reversals in meaning characterize the history of ideas and theories. It is his awareness of this complex process which gives Mr. Bauer's [book] its unique value and saves him from the pitfalls that trip most historians of ideas when they try to write on the Soviet Union and use its own pronouncements as their chief documentation." B. D. Wolfe
+ Sat R 35:23 Je 14 '52 1700w

School & Society 75:399 Je 21 '52 20w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:304 S '52 240w

BAUGHMAN, HAROLD EUGENE. Aviation dictionary and reference guide [3d ed] rev. by Ernest J. Gentle and Charles Edward Chapel. 653p $7.50 Aero pubs.

629.103 [629.1303] Aeronautics—Encyclopedias and dictionaries 51-14462

"Earlier editions of this useful reference book are already on the shelves of most public libraries. In the present edition, new terms and new definitions of older terms are collected in a new 76-page section at the end of the original dictionary section. Altogether the dictionary section accounts for more than half of the total pages. Construction and engineering terms are included along with terms related to flying. Design and construction are now emphasized in the 'Reference Guide' section. Civil air regulations, air traffic rules, and other official and semi-official material pertaining to flying that was published in the second edition has been dropped, hence the substantial decrease in the number of pages." Library J

Booklist 48:198 F 15 '52

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 76:1937 N 15 '51 130w

N Y New Tech Bks 37:37 My '52

BAUMOL, WILLIAM J. Economic dynamics, an introduction; with a contribution by Ralph Turvey. 262p $5 Macmillan

330.1 Economics 51-11724

"The volume is split into two halves. The first half consists of a series of essays on the theories of the classical school, of Marx and Schumpeter, Harrod's model of economic growth, Hicks' Value and Capital, Lange's Price Flexibility and Employment, and on the cobweb theorem and stability of equilibrium—each of which is taken to be an example of dynamic analysis or of analysis of the non-stationary economy. The second half of the volume contains, after a chapter on certain Scandinavian views on period analysis (contributed by Ralph Turvey), a brief elementary course on the mathematics of difference and differential equations." (Am Econ R) Bibliography. Index.

BAUMOL, W. J.—Continued

"The two halves of the book are essentially separable works, each showing promise, but each incomplete. The first half will be most useful as an aid to the understanding of the theories it describes, perhaps chiefly for students having difficulty with the originals; the second half will be more generally useful as an excellent short course for economists in difference and differential equations." Jack Hirshleifer

+ Am Econ R 42:148 Mr '52 850w

"A number of recent developments in economic theory are expounded with accuracy, clarity, and simplicity in this concise and highly readable book." James Tobin

+ J Pol Econ 60:437 O '52 600w

BAX, ROGER, pseud. See Winterton, P.

BAXTER, WALTER. Look down in mercy.
308p $3.50 Putnam

52-5265

Chronicles the life of Tony Kent, an officer and company commander in Burma, Malaya, and India, during the war. Starting out as a decent young officer, the brutalizing effects of the war overwhelm him. "By the end of the book, a matter of months later, Kent has betrayed his own men to the enemy, abandoned a wounded man in order to save himself, and—waiving some minor charges—committed rape, sodomy, murder and suicide." (New Statesman & Nation)

"The scenes of brutality and lust are described with photographic immediacy, and although there are moments of narrative and descriptive power, it is a compromised power. The book is not to be recommended." Riley Hughes

— Cath World 175:153 My '52 250w

"Baxter writes well—more than that (with the impact of the book still fresh, the simple statement seems wildly inadequate) he writes with artistry and authority. He knows what he is building and he lays his bricks one on another with patient skill and finesse. In his case it seems unnecessary to say the usual things about a promising first novel. It is hard to imagine how this book would have gained in craftsmanship even if its author had a library of work behind him." John Cogley

+ Commonweal 55:620 Mr 28 '52 490w

"A knowing record of battle action, and an understanding portrayal of deviation and deterioration."

Kirkus 20:88 F 1 '52 220w

Reviewed by Paul Bloomfield

Manchester Guardian p4 N 16 '51 180w

"Look Down in Mercy is my choice for the most memorable first novel of 1951. . . In a book which freely presents atrocious brutality the relationship between Kent and his batman is treated with a compassionate objectivity which is perhaps even more remarkable than its stamp of truth. The reader is not called upon either to blame or to absolve, but to register the fact that what Kent has done is to himself disgusting and incomprehensible. . . A remarkable work, Look Down in Mercy is not at all a promising novel. Mr. Baxter's style might best be described as 'not inadequate.' It lacks the special and indescribable flavour of a unique personality, which, more certainly than content, marks the debut of a professional novelist of high quality." J. D. Scott

+ New Statesman & Nation 42:678 D 8 '51 550w

"Mr. Baxter's writing is intensely sincere, though the understatement seems inappropriate to the exciting campaign in Burma. But this isn't a shooting story; the tropical climate turns minds inward here so that the first cause, battle, dims in importance to satiety.

As the title suggests, the author asks the reader to be open-minded and sympathetic to his sensitive captain, who is delicately handled and convincing." Herbert Mitgang
+ N Y Times p16 Ap 13 '52 160w

"A remarkably acute study of disintegration under pressure, and an unusually effective piece of realistic writing about what war can do to people. The affair with the nurse is part of the stereotype situation that one can count on in the average war novel, but it breaks away from convention, by being truthful about the circumstances." Anthony West

New Yorker 28:136 Ap 5 '52 900w

Reviewed by Siegfried Mandel

Sat R 35:33 Ap 26 '52 450w

"A first novel which also resembles literature. . . Mr. Baxter is a writer of considerable power. The brutality of some of his scenes in illustration of the confusion of the initial retreat from Rangoon I found scarcely bearable. He is coldly, crushingly unsentimental about every aspect of soldiering, especially for the other ranks. But too much of the disgust and darkness of the novel seemed to some synthetic." R. D. Charques

+ Spec 187:748 N 30 '51 100w

"What could easily be cheap and tawdry is actually a stirring book about a very unhappy person." U. K. Alpert

+ Spring'd Republican p10C My 4 '52 160w

"An uncommonly good first novel."

+ Time 59:108 Mr 17 '52 320w

"In this remarkable first novel Mr. Baxter does a great deal more than show promise; if there is any justice in the world he has arrived."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p745 N 23 '51 500w

Reviewed by James Yaffe

Yale R n s 41:8 summer '52 350w

BAYM, MAX ISAAC. French education of Henry Adams. 358p $5 Columbia univ. press
B or 92 Adams, Henry. French literature
51-11489

For descriptive note see Annual for 1951.

"This book is a notable contribution to the increasing literature about Henry Adams. . . This reviewer, whose recollections of Henry Adams in Paris are still vivid, believes that Dr. Baym has constructed an important part of the foundation-work on which any complete study of Adams' intellectual genius must be based." W. G. Leland

+ Am Hist R 57:704 Ap '52 650w

"Animated by a scholarly zeal for pursuing his researches farther than they lead, Mr. Baym lapses into the occupational pitfall of those who explore the vaguely defined border provinces of comparative literature: he fails to distinguish between debts and parallels." Harry Levin

New Eng Q 24:542 D '51 1450w

Times [London] Lit Sup p831 D 28 '51 1000w

BAYNES, DOROTHY JULIA (DORMER CRESTON, pseud). Youthful Queen Victoria; a discursive narrative. 428p il $5 Putnam
B or 92 Victoria, queen of Great Britain
52-9830

Character study of Victoria from babyhood to the marriage with Prince Albert in February, 1839, when the young Queen was twenty. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 49:155 Ja 1 '53

"To devoted readers of biography, 'The Young Queen Victoria' may well prove irresistible." Fanny Butcher

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 O 12 '52 360w

Reviewed by Leila Flower

Christian Science Monitor p9 O 16 '52 600w

"The Youthful Queen Victoria would have been a much better book if the style had been less gushing. In itself it is most interesting; Miss Creston has drawn satisfactorily on the memoirs of the time, though for Victoria herself she cannot, unfortunately, go beyond the published letters and journals."

+ — Manchester Guardian p4 F 22 '52 300w

"The Queen's early life is extremely well documented, and Miss Creston has little to add from unpublished sources; but she embroiders history with a critical commentary in a partisan spirit. . . Occasionally Miss Creston's vivid imagination and loyalty to the throne mislead her."

+ — New Statesman & Nation 43:355 Mr 22 '52 220w

Reviewed by Robert Pearsall

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p24 N 23 '52 400w

"It is a merit of Miss. Dormer Creston's book that it does emphasize one quality that rendered the Queen truly exceptional and which has hitherto been somewhat overlooked—her extraordinary consistency. . . If 'The Youthful Queen Victoria' does succeed in revealing to us the full-blooded, affectionate, but frequently ruthless personality which lay behind the girlish charm of the young queen of legend, this is not achieved by any great economy of means. Miss Creston belongs to the all-seeing-eye school of historical writers. . . and this has caused her to write a book which, although almost always readable, is just twice too long." Osbert Lancaster

N Y Times p7 O 26 '52 650w

"A well-written biography that suffers from the author's reluctance to let the facts speak for themselves."

+ — New Yorker 28:133 N 1 '52 150w

"Those who share Miss Creston's point of view, or do not too strongly dissent from it, will find her 'Youthful Queen Victoria' a literate and informative addition to the royal legend." George Dangerfield

+ Sat R 35:20 O 25 '52 900w

"The skilled composition of [the] picture is perhaps what will strike the reader most. A wide range of contemporary diarists and memoir-writers are laid under contribution; a good story is never rejected; and the result is at once lively reading and a carefully pondered and extremely convincing build-up of the central figure." W. D. Handcock

+ Spec 188:337 Mr 14 '52 800w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal

Springf'd Republican p13C D 14 '52 200w

"No one could fail to admire the skill with which the author has set about her task. Many have wandered over the same ground before her but, like some practised beachcomber, she sees possibilities of value in objects which the more obvious minded have rejected. She spins out her tale and fills a full book with the 21 years which divide the Queen's birth from her marriage. This in itself—especially as she holds the interest of her readers—is a fine achievement."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p126 F 15 '52 850w

BAZIN, HERVE. Head against the wall; tr. by W. J. Strachan. 255p $3.95 Prentice-Hall 52-8595

The tragic story of the unstable son of a French provincial magistrate. He begins his career of misdeeds by burglarizing his own home. To avoid disgrace the family commits him to an insane asylum. This chronicle of his escapes and recaptures ends when he is a middle aged cripple with a daughter already becoming queer at the age of seven.

Kirkus 20:303 My 15 '52 190w

"Depressing, but informative and potentially cinematic." J. M. Scherr

+ Library J 77:1011 Je 1 '52 130w

"There is a kind of camaraderie in this account of a young delinquent, put in a French mental hospital under observation, who remains a borderline case until, after escapes and more crime, he becomes a settled asylum inmate." H.L.A. Fausset

+ — Manchester Guardian p4 Ja 18 '52 100w

"A sad story, dispassionately told." J. D. Scott

+ New Statesman & Nation 43:104 Ja 20 '52 70w

"M. Bazin is neither so naive nor so unwise as to minimize the problem of how to deal fairly with the insane and how to handle the state institutions set up for their care, nor does he neglect to point out that there have been changes for the better in recent years. But the fact remains that when poor people are committed their destination is Inferno, and it is against this concealed and appalling injustice that M. Bazin now strikes, with his new novel, a shattering blow." Virgilia Peterson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Je 8 '52 700w

"M. Bazin has an impressive talent for creating background and atmosphere. I cannot vouch, from first-hand experience, for his picture of the inside of French asylums; but as a fictional picture, it is marvelously graphic and terribly convincing." C. J. Rolo

+ N Y Times p15 J1 20 '52 310w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p15 J1 8 '52 600w

Reviewed by Henri Peyre

Sat R 35:22 Je 21 '52 550w

Reviewed by J. F. Rooney

Springf'd Republican p6D J1 27 '52 100w

Time 60:82 J1 7 '52 370w

"M. Bazin has no hope of betterment for the human race; life is like that, and we may as well laugh at it. The result is very funny indeed, and all the more entertaining because of the unfamiliar institutions it describes. . . This very funny book is excellently translated."

Times [London] Lit Sup p73 Ja 25 '52 210w

BEACH, EDWARD LATIMER. Submarine! 301p $3.50 Holt

940.5451 Trigger (submarine). World war, 1939-1945—Naval operations—Submarine. World war, 1939-1945—Pacific ocean 52-6623

"The true story of USS Trigger, of those who sailed her against the enemy, and of her life and death in the Pacific. Interwoven with the story of Trigger are tales of other battle-hardened submarines, and of the officers and enlisted men who fought them against the Japanese." Publisher's note

"Humor runs through this narrative. . . The one thing that does not come through is the claustrophobia, the panic which must have been felt with despair, as when the old Wolf, unable to make herself known, was going down under the depth charges of an American destroyer escort." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic 190:80 Ag '52 500w

Booklist 48:336 Je 15 '52

Bookmark 11:229 J1 '52 30w

Reviewed by Robert Nicholas

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Je 15 '52 450w

Reviewed by Gordon Walker

Christian Science Monitor p7 Je 19 '52 460w

Foreign Affairs 31:155 O '52 10w

"A whale of a good naval account."

+ Kirkus 20:183 Mr 1 '52 170w

"Recommended." H. L. Roth

+ Library J 77:886 My 15 '52 110w

Reviewed by M. D. Read

Library J 77:1524 S 15 '52 40w

"Each attack is told in clear, precise language, orders are repeated in Navy style until the landsman reader becomes so thoroughly introduced to the mysteries of range finding and ship handling that he is part of the crew. It is pleasant, indeed, to learn from the biographical material on the jacket that Comdr. Beach is still in submarines and is now commanding officer of a new U.S.S. Trigger." Alfred Stanford

BEACH, E. L.—Continued

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Je 22 '52 470w

"Because Commander Beach has assembled this book in large part from previously published individual stories, there is lacking any explanatory material that might make such fantastic branches of warfare more comprehensible. However, for those who want to read of sea war in its most harrowing phase, this book fills the bill. . . Here are authenticity, maddening suspense, portraits of men enduring mental and physical agony." Austin Stevens

+ N Y Times p8 Je 8 '52 650w

"Commander Beach's descriptions of a submarine on the hunt and going in for the kill are graphic and chilling, but they are written at such a sustained high pitch that they get monotonous. It is a good book, nevertheless, and the first one to be written about undersea fighting in World War II by a man who lined up enemy ships through the periscope and gave the command 'Fire!'"

+ — New Yorker 28:119 S 6 '52 140w

"There is only one serious fault to find with Commander Beach's initial literary effort. He has a distressing tendency to switch from past to present tense in the middle of a sequence. Otherwise, he has produced a creditable piece of craftsmanship and a richly rewarding evening's entertainment." Vance Johnson

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p17 Je 15 '52 490w

Reviewed by Fletcher Pratt

+ Sat R 35:19 Je 28 '52 350w

Time 59:112 Je 9 '52 700w

"The book has less to offer the historian than to the general reader, but it belongs on the shelves of the naval historian, if only to give him an insight into what goes on in a submarine while it is in action."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:281 S '52 160w
Wis Lib Bul 48:172 J1 '52

BEAN, WALTON. Boss Ruef's San Francisco: the story of the Union labor party, big business, and the graft prosecution. 345p il $5 Univ. of Calif. press

352.0794 San Francisco—Politics and government. Ruef, Abraham. Corruption (in politics) 52-7946

"A sober explication of the corruptions of the fabulous Boss Abe Ruef, who ruled San Francisco at the turn of the century. . . Dr. Bean shows here how Ruef, starting as a local Republican leader of moderate influence, managed, during the course of a bizarre political career, to build an empire of graft in San Francisco through his control of the Union Labor Party, his domination of the offices of city government, and his manipulation of rapacious enterprises." (U S Quarterly Bk R) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Harold Zink

Am Hist R 58:145 O '52 440w

"Professor Bean writes with relish of his subject, and with imagination. The result is a very readable book and one that will stand up well under scrutiny." W. W. Crouch

+ Ann Am Acad 282:137 J1 '52 600w

"This is good history, well researched and organized." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p14 Ap 13 '52 750w

Sat R 35:39 O 18 '52 180w

"Because of this subject, it is perhaps unfortunate that this competently written and commendably unsensational history has been published without full documentation. A documented manuscript copy of the work is on deposit in the Bancroft Library."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:152 Je '52 300w

BEARD, JAMES ANDREWS, and WATT, ALEXANDER. Paris cuisine; drawings by Vladimir Bobri. 272p $5 Little

641.5 Cookery, French. Paris—Restaurants, lunch rooms, etc. 52-5508

The authors visited some 60 Paris restaurants and from each of these they managed to get a recipe or two. On returning to this country Mr. Beard transcribed the recipes to American practices. The arrangement is by restaurant, and addresses are given.

Booklist 49:6 S 1 '52

Reviewed by Morrison Wood

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 J1 13 '52 90w

"An admirable companion for journey pleasure, preparation and return, or for the earnest gourmet anywhere."

+ Kirkus 20:251 Ap 1 '52 180w

"There are not too many recipes here—nor are they always difficult but there is an atmosphere of authenticity about the whole thing that makes it stand at the top. . . A guide book as well as recipe book, and a fine gift book for the traveler to Paris." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 77:1201 J1 '52 90w

"Reading the book with a map of Paris at hand brings back more memories than all the guide books and travel folders put together. The volume is, in fact, a gastronomical guide book, not only of Paris but indirectly of provincial and colonial France." Charlotte Turgeon

+ N Y Times p10 Je 29 '52 400w

"A very reliable, if uncommonly pompous, guide to Parisian restaurants (though most of the eating places listed must surely be known to any American traveller even moderately up on such matters)."

+ — New Yorker 28:88 Ag 23 '52 160w

"Altogether this is a book that the good cook who is willing to take pains will want to have on the shelf for special occasions. I'd suggest, moreover, that you stop at your bookstore and look it over. It's a very handsomely done piece of work, with drawings in a henna color by Vladimir Bobri." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Je 1 '52 300w

BEASLEY, NORMAN. The cross and the crown; the history of Christian Science. 664p $6 Duell; Little

289.5 Eddy, Mary Baker. Christian Science 52-9086

"The author recounts the development of Christian Science from its discovery in 1866 to modern times. He records the accomplishments of the Discoverer and Founder, Mary Baker Eddy, and the conflict of her teachings with prevailing convictions." Christian Science Monitor

Booklist 49:97 N 15 '52

Reviewed by L. T. Heron

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 23 '52 80w

"Mr. Beasley is not a Christian Scientist, nor has he any connection with the Church of Christ, Scientist. He has researched independent sources, both hostile and friendly, and interviewed many Christian Scientists including some in official positions. He sets forth independent conclusions. He views the Christian Science Movement with detachment but understanding. He writes with realism and respect. There is not an emotional line in the book." DeWitt John

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 O 16 '52 1100w

"This will not only be treasured possession for Christian Scientists, but will be an indispensable source book for church historians."

+ Kirkus 20:630 S 15 '52 190w

"A detailed, sympathetic history of the public career of Mary Baker Eddy. . . For the uninitiated this makes heavy going." F. A. Boyle

+ Library J 77:1804 O 15 '52 70w

Reviewed by W. L. Sperry
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p46 D 7 '52
400w

"The terms of the book are entirely self-contained. That is to say, external influences, whether of Transcendentalism or of Phineas Quimby, are summarily dismissed; as for any analogies, precedents or parallels in the panoply of Christian history, there is no acknowledgment or indeed any seeming awareness. One is bound to say that for confirmed believers such a method may be satisfactory; for others, for those most ready to admire or most eager to understand, this peculiarly sensational and spasmodic story leaves them less instructed than before. It leaves them dazedly wondering what in sober fact actually happened." Perry Miller

N Y Times p38 O 19 '52 400w

BEATTIE, MRS CAROL. For goodness' sake.
242p $2.95 Prentice-Hall

B or 92 Clergymen's wives 52-8805

When she was quite young the author decided she would marry a minister because he would be at home more than a professional man. In time she married an Episcopal rector, and this is an account of the life and excitement of the rectory.

Booklist 48:279 My 1 '52

Kirkus 20:104 F 1 '52 170w

"A minister's life dull? This book explains how it can be exciting." S. M. Neal

Spring'd Republican p19A Je 1 '52
160w

BEAZLEY, SIR JOHN DAVIDSON. Development of Attic black-figure. 127p 49pl $6.50
Univ. of Calif. press

738.3 Vases, Greek 51-61810

This volume contains "the lectures Oxford's Professor Beazley recently delivered at the University of California on the Black-Figure period of Greek vases. . . At the outset Professor Beazley outlines the preceding periods of Greek pottery from the earliest times, then in the succeeding seven chapters settles down to a detailed consideration of the various Black-Figure vases." (Sat R)

"A beautiful volume. . . Those familiar with classical culture, and anxious to know more about it, will welcome this learned, affectionate—though very specialized—study." M. S.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p11 Ja 20 '52
100w

Reviewed by L. R. Sander

+ Sat R 35:46 F 2 '52 160w

"The present book should appeal to a wider public than the archaeologist and the classical scholar. It is beautifully written by a unique expert and beautifully produced."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p308 My 9
'52 400w

BECHTEL, EDWIN DE TURCK. Freedom of the press and L'Association mensuelle; Philpon versus Louis-Philippe. il $12.50
Grolier club

741.5 Caricatures and cartoons. Philpon, Charles. Association mensuelle lithographique, Paris. Liberty of the press
52-1641

"Political caricature reached one of its high points in the France of Louis Philippe. Mr. E. DeT. Bechtel's admirable reproductions of Philpon's subscription series of twenty-four lithographs, the 'Association Mensuelle Lithographique,' is a good cross-section of this work. It has five caricatures by Daumier, including four of his very best, the Ventre Legislatif, the Rue Transnonain, the Liberty of the Press and Enfoncé LaFayette. . . Attrappe, Mon Vieux! as well as work of Grandville, Desperret and Travies not elsewhere so conveniently available. Mr. Bechtel has provided an introduction summarizing this particular phase of the eternal struggle for liberty of the press and careful explanations of each caricature." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

"This little book will have quite as much interest for the political and intellectual historian as for the art collector." Crane Brinton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Ag 31
'52 420w

"Unfortunately, the reproductions are poor. A lithographic process has been used peculiarly unsuited to lithographs and tolerable only for illustrations in line. The half-tones disappear, the lights become brighter, the darks blacker and more opaque. Daumier's delicate gradations of tone are destroyed; this is especially painful in Rue Transnonain, where the bedclothes and the principal figure seem to be under a spotlight."

Times [London] Lit Sup p375 Je 6 '52
750w

BECKER, MRS MAY (LAMBERTON). Presenting Miss Jane Austen; il. by Edward Price. 204p $3 Dodd

B or 92 Austen, Jane—Juvenile literature
52-1617

A biography of Jane Austen, recording the whole course of her life with much picturesque background included. For age fifteen and older. Bibliography. No index.

"What a lovely book this is! In text, in treatment, and in illustrations it is far, far above the run of the mill." M. F. Kieran

+ Atlantic 189:87 Je '52 50w

Booklist 48:282 My 1 '52

Bookmark 11:186 My '52

"This delightful biography, written with a devotee's loving and contagious enthusiasm, will not only make young readers eternally grateful for being so charmingly 'presented' to its leading lady, but will set them reading her novels at once." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Je 1 '52
220w

"This is a sunny uncomplicated account, a satisfactory introduction to the person, touching only lightly the artist or her art." Ruth Chapin

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 Ap 24
'52 200w

Reviewed by E. C. Ince

Christian Science Monitor p9 My 15 '52
140w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Horn Bk 28:188 Je '52 50w

"The distinction of her book, that which sets it apart from biographies written for young people, lies in the simple fact that the author never forgets that she is presenting Jane Austen herself, her family, their life, the places they lived in, Jane's novels, their characters, and as much as is known of how they were written. She relies upon recorded evidence. All is clear and in order in the mind of the author, and she brings her rare associative memory and discriminating taste to a revealing picture of an elusive and delightful personality. . . For an aspiring writer of any age, Mrs. Becker's book is one to cherish and re-read, for its authenticity and its admirable construction." A. C. Moore

+ Horn Bk 28:234 Ag '52 260w

"It offers delightful fare for our more literate young people, for Mrs. Becker succeeds in conveying her knowledge and appreciation of the author's background and literary contribution and her contagious enthusiasm for the novels—as well as hints on the joys of reading in general." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 28:242 Ag '52 110w

"A thorough and loving treatment by an avowed Janite. . . Lively passages presenting Jane's youthful love of dramatics, dancing, and clothes will interest many, but long quotations, references, and analyses will lack meaning for an unfortunately large number of young adults." Virginia Haviland

+ Library J 77:800 My 1 '52 110w

BECKER, M. L.—Continued

"You are given here a refreshing renewal of belief in the pleasures of reading, and the reasons for reading not only these charming old novels, but any other good fiction. For Mrs. Becker, through her love of Jane Austen, shows us what it is to care deeply for all good writing. Such a book as this is not just for 'older girls' but for the many adults who know its subject or who are still waiting to know her." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 My 11 '52 320w

"Mrs. Becker knows Jane's land and era; she knows all the twists and curves of Jane's letters and novels. She introduces an elegant charming girl in her social setting; she also shows exactly how this young lady took the materials of her place and era to fashion in her stories people who will live forever. Through it all glints a refreshing humor." M. C. Scoggin

+ N Y Times p30 Ap 20 '52 200w

New Yorker 28:206 D 6 '52 30w

"It will probably be read by young people as a story as well as an authentic biography of a remarkable novelist."

+ Sat R 35:28 Je 28 '52 140w

"Mrs. Becker knows the value of surprise—the unforeseen stroke upon the curious reader. She gives just enough—the flick of laughter that invites to pleasure instead of whipping it up."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p434 Jl 4 '52 500w

"Mrs. Becker provides a delightfully written introduction for any reader over the age of fourteen, and offers much that is wise about books and people, even beyond the scope of her subject."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:258 S '52 80w

BECKMAN, JOAN. Rowleys of Robin road; il. by Mabel Jones Woodbury. (Whittlesey house publication) 208p $2.50 McGraw

52-6009

The four Rowleys were orphans. Eileen, the oldest was twenty and when it came to dividing the family up, they decided to stay together and try living in an old house out in the country some distance from Seattle. The story chiefly concerns the youngest girl Connie and her discovery of an old mine, but the other members of the family all play their parts in making a home and a life together.

Reviewed by M. F. Kieran

Atlantic 189:86 Je '52 20w

Booklist 48:324 Je 1 '52

Reviewed by E. C. Ince

Christian Science Monitor p9 My 15 '52 70w

Kirkus 20:72 F 1 '52 160w

Reviewed by V. A. Russell

Library J 77:908 My 15 '52 80w

"It is not an outstanding story nor a very probable one. Yet the neighborhood atmosphere is healthy, and there is a happy moral in Connie's decision not to work the quarry she gets instead of a gold mine." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 My 4 '52 140w

"In spite of certain implausibilities, the author has contrived an absorbing yarn for youngsters who like to have a share in what goes on." S. C. Gross

+ N Y Times p30 My 4 '52 170w

BEEBE, LUCIUS MORRIS, and CLEGG, CHARLES M. Hear the train blow; a pictorial epic of America in the railroad age; with ten original drawings by E. S. Ham-mack and 860 illustrations. 407p $12.75 Dut-ton

385.1 Railroads—U.S.

52-8254

"Of the 870 illustrations in this volume, a large proportion are either contemporary photographs or drawings based upon them."

"Hear the Train Blow" is a kind of pictorial miscellany of American railroading from its beginnings to the present, with excursions into the forms of transportation it displaced and other more and less related aspects of the American past." San Francisco Chronicle

"An unrivaled panorama of the development of the railroads—and of America." R. L. Blakesley

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 O 19 '52 350w

Kirkus 20:487 Ag 1 '52 180w

"It is unfortunate that more specific sources for the illustrations have not been provided. Highly recommended." Herbert Cahoon

+ Library J 77:1901 N 1 '52 110w

"[The authors] have not only hit on a fresh and original approach but one that brings the whole pageant of American railroads before the eyes of present-day readers with a completeness and éclat that could hardly have been accomplished in any other way." Oscar Lewis

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 S 28 '52 750w

"The authors, whose previous books include 'Cable Car Carnival' and 'Mixed Train Daily,' know well how to touch the nostalgic stops, but one could wish that they would write a less flippant, forced style. Their material is good enough to speak for itself." Horace Reynolds

+ N Y Times p33 S 28 '52 450w

Reviewed by Ruth Teiser

San Francisco Chronicle p19 S 28 '52 350w

BEELER, NELSON FREDERICK, and BRANLEY, FRANKLYN MANSFIELD. Experiments in chemistry; il. by A. W. Revell. 152p $2.50 Crowell

540.7 Chemistry—Experiments 52-8642

"Twenty-five easy-to-do, at-home experiments intended to show the budding chemist how many of the world's useful products are made. Each experiment includes a list of materials needed and specific directions for carrying out each experiment." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 49:92 N 1 '52

"A drawback is the lack of explanations of techniques needed for experiments like wiring a salt bath for electrolysis, but the inquisitive, if he doesn't know how already, can easily get help. Fine for junior highschool supplementary reading. Clear diagrams."

+ Kirkus 20:660 O 1 '52 110w

"Recommended." M. I. Ross

+ Library J 77:1826 O 15 '52 80w

BEETHOVEN, LUDWIG VAN. Letters, journals and conversations; ed. tr. and introduced by Michael Hamburger. 282p il $3.75 Pantheon bks.

B or 92 Musicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 52-6867

Collection of newly translated letters and excerpts from the journals of Ludwig van Beethoven; with some conversations added. Chronology. Index.

Booklist 49:30 S 15 '52

Reviewed by K. G. Roy

Christian Science Monitor p5 Jl 31 '52 320w

Reviewed by C. K. Miller

Library J 77:720 Ap 15 '52 120w

"None of its material is newly discovered, but it is well chosen and the English translation is superior to previous efforts. Although it follows the original German text and is 'as literal as possible,' it does not sound like a translation and makes good reading, often better than the original. However, there is a sense of Beethoven's inner feelings in his erratic writing that cannot be translated." Herman Reich-enbach

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 9:417 Je '52 250w

"The translations are faithful but are put into a pleasant English style. They tend to have more charm than grandeur, and (for me at least) have a great deal more humanity than the familiar, stuffy readings. Good contributions to the Beethoven literature are rare. This seems to be the one." Robert Evett

+ New Repub 126:22 Mr 31 '52 180w

"There is not an 'objective' picture of Beethoven in Mr. Hamburger's charming book. What is in it will be of most interest to those who have already read Bekker, Rolland, Specht or Thayer and who therefore have minds already furnished with ideas against which to interpret these documents. The present book makes good reading, and whoever comes to it will have begun an intensely enjoyable acquaintance with one of the most complex and fascinating men in the history of European civilization." Herbert Weinstock

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Ag 17 '52 270w

Reviewed by H. E. Jacob
N Y Times p14 J1 13 '52 200w

"Mr. Hamburger has here put together a portrait of Beethoven that has the fascination of a documentary film."

+ New Yorker 28:146 My 17 '52 130w

"Beethoven, writing, speaking, or seen at first hand, stands forth clearly enough for all his complexities and contradictions. . . This unwitting self-portrait is fairly complete, and the neat and compact compilation of the book contains it." J. N. Burk

+ Sat R 35:32 Ap 26 '52 430w

"Mr. Michael Hamburger has performed a service of considerable value. Almost all the essential autobiographical and documentary material about Beethoven is gathered handily into this book; and even our hypothetical inattentive reader can hardly get through it without enriching his understanding of Beethoven's mind and music, in the context of his age and environment." Wilfrid Mellers

+ Spec 188:92 Ja 18 '52 330w
Time 59:76 Mr 10 '52 750w

BEGBIE, JOAN. Freelance, the pony; il. by Frank Grey. 205p $2.50 Dodd

Horses—Legends and stories 52-9255

The story of an English girl and her horse. The setting is the New Forest. For ages 11 to 14.

"Little girls whose deepest wish is to ride and train or to own a horse will find this a just-right book, so strong in appeal that English background and expressions are no drawback." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 28:409 D '52 160w

"Quite well written, and the author passes on her knowledge of horses in a pleasing manner. . . Recommended." Sonja Wennerblad
+ Library J 77:1080 Je 15 '52 60w

"Instruction, fox-hunting rules and horsey terms are woven into the fabric of the story. Young readers avid for another 'Black Beauty' will like 'Freelance' and will not mind its stuffy 'class' viewpoint and the excessively British vocabulary." S. C. Gross

+ — N Y Times p14 Ag 3 '52 120w

"It is a story that will probably appeal to boys as well as to girls in spite of having a girl as the leading character."

+ Sat R 35:66 N 15 '52 90w

BEHRENS, CARL FREDRICK. Commercial bank activities in urban mortgage financing. 131p $2.50 Nat. bur. of economic res.

332.32 Banks and banking—U.S. Mortgages

"This volume, the fifth of the National Bureau studies in urban mortgage financing, deals with the experience of commercial banks in the period 1920-1947. It presents a concentrated body of primary data, based largely on a sample survey of 170 commercial banks conducted in 1946-47." Am Econ R

"Possibly the most important contribution of the study is its presentation of statistics of bank experience with respect to contract modifications, foreclosure rates, disposal of foreclosed properties, and loss rates. . . The text space could have been used to greater advantage to explain and appraise rather than to describe the statistics. At the same time, the student of housing or construction financing should find that the main body of data presented in this volume fills some gaps in the materials available for study and interpretation." A. P. Ruderman

+ Am Econ R 42:640 S '52 750w

"This is a work for the specialist in real estate financing. In its proper place among the other studies in the field which the National Bureau has sponsored, it must be considered a thoroughly worth-while contribution." D. C. Melnicoff

+ Ann Am Acad 283:205 S '52 440w

"This monograph will be of great value to students analyzing urban real estate mortgages or the investments of commercial banks." Homer Hoyt

+ J Pol Econ 60:444 O '52 450w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:269 S '52 240w

BEHRMAN, SAMUEL NATHANIEL. Duveen; il. by Saul Steinberg. 302p $3.50 Random house

B or 92 Duveen, Joseph Duveen, 1st baron 52-5137

Biography of Joseph Duveen, Lord Millbank, the famous art dealer, whose spectacular career ended in 1939. Appeared as a six-part profile in the New Yorker. No index.

"A stylishly composed and vastly entertaining book." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 189:82 Ap '52 500w

Booklist 48:221; 246 Mr 15 '52; Ap 1 '52

Bookmark 11:153 Ap '52 30w

Canadian Forum 32:140 S '52 490w

Reviewed by F. A. Sweet

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Mr 23 '52 350w

Reviewed by Thomas Donlon

Christian Science Monitor p15 Mr 27 '52 550w

"Behrman's laconic wit . . . is never cruel, although the temptation is great, and he can write with beautifully simple understanding of the loneliness and fearlessness that great wealth must often bring to its owners. . . It's an engaging story, superbly told." P. V. Farrell

+ Commonweal 55:642 Ap 4 '52 420w

"A dashing, sparkling and loving epitaph to an era and one of its most fabulous figures."

+ Kirkus 20:50 Ja 15 '52 320w

"To art librarians the chapter on Bernard Berenson will be of special interest. When people preparing club papers weary of writing of the Medici and patron princes, a review of this life of Joseph Duveen might be a pleasant project." A. S. Plaut

+ Library J 77:795 My 1 '52 130w

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut

Library J 77:1508 S 15 '52 140w

"This entertaining book is a lively, shrewd, and understanding record of the career of Joseph Duveen, the most remarkable collector and salesman the world of art has ever seen." Lawrence Haward

+ Manchester Guardian p4 J1 1 '52 800w

"Although the text has the implacable pace and impersonal slant of other New Yorker profiles, with the authorship effectively submerged, one may still speculate about Behrman's intentions. Is he playing 'the most spectacular art dealer of all time' dead-pan or straight? He has managed to embalm an age with a collection of anecdotes, an age which lost a prime force when Duveen died thirteen years ago. He is largely content to let the picture he has drawn speak for itself." S. L. Faison

Nation 174:305 Mr 29 '52 550w

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge

New Statesman & Nation 43:776 Je 28 '52 1000w

"It is a witty book. . . It is also a glamorous book." Harold Clurman

+ New Repub 126:21 Ap 14 '52 470w

BEHRMAN, S. N.—Continued

Reviewed by Alistair Cooke
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Mr 30
'52 1300w

"Seldom has there been a book so misleading or so false. Because of its hilarious humor and its infectious quality of letting the reader in on 'the real lowdown of the art world,' it will be widely read and immensely popular. . . . Let not the unwary accept the text as gospel. He will find it rewarding enough for the laughs. . . . The artistic chronicles of this epoch must yet be written by someone with a sense of the accomplishment of the art trade as a whole. The present book is at best a curtain raiser, a rather ineffective spotlight on a career which glowed for so many reasons never here disclosed." F. H. Taylor

N Y Times p5 Mr 23 '52 1000w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p16 Mr 27 '52
700w

"The odd, snobbish, devious-minded little tradesman in beauty managed, in the end, to make it possible for the American people to see a large share of the world's most beautiful art without having to go abroad." Mr. Behrman's book provides a fascinating account of how he did it." Lloyd Morris
+ Sat R 35:14 Mr 22 '52 1000w

Reviewed by Lillian Browne
Spec 189:72 Jl 11 '52 600w
Spring'd Republican p10D Mr 30 '52
130w

Times [London] Lit Sup p576 S 5 '52
1900w

BEHRMAN, SAMUEL NATHANIEL. Jane; a comedy. 195p il $2.50 Random house 812 52-8279

Drama based on a short story by W. Somerset Maugham. The situation develops around the metamorphosis of a dowdy middle-aged widow from Liverpool into the charming Jane, toast of London society.

Booklist 48:316 Je 1 '52

"A sparkling comedy of manners, with entertaining repartee."
+ Kirkus 20:247 Ap 1 '52 30w

Reviewed by George Freedley
Library J 77:1208 Jl '52 20w

"It's not a very plausible story, or very original. But Behrman tells it with the high comedy polish of which he is a master, and it employs as a leading character no less a person than Maugham himself, so thinly disguised that the dullest could not mistake." W. P. Eaton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p29 My 11
'52 60w

Reviewed by William Hogan
San Francisco Chronicle p19 Je 22 '52
40w

BEIM, JERROLD. Beach boy; il. by Lillian Freedgood. 206p $2.50 Harcourt 52-6457

"Tale of two families who rented a house at the beach for the summer, and David's experiences getting used to being in a larger group, and being more on his own than usual." Bookmark

Bookmark 11:161 Ap '52 40w

Reviewed by Ruth Wales
Christian Science Monitor p10 My 15
'52 100w

Kirkus 20:70 F 1 '52 170w

"Not this author's best, but a good story of two boys going on eleven and their families. . . . Boys and girls of 8-11 will enjoy this story of swimming, crabbing, and the boardwalk." M. C. Skinner

+ Library J 77:539 Mr 15 '52 80w

"Mildly suggested is the value of David's learning to get along with different kinds of people, but there is no strongly developed theme or character. Any boy might duplicate David's experiences, which score more for reality than for story satisfaction. The pictures add little appeal." Irene Smith

N Y Times p26 Mr 2 '52 150w
Spring'd Republican p4D F 24 '52
80w

BEIM, JERROLD. Country garage; pictures by Louis Darling. 48p $2 Morrow 52-5065

Story of a small boy who is allowed to help around the service garage and filling station owned by his uncles. Once Seth is even left in charge and has a chance to prove that he can do something worthwhile in an emergency.

Booklist 48:200 F 15 '52

Bookmark 11:161 Ap '52 40w

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 My 18 '52
110w

"A good yarn that has a wish fulfillment angle for the small boy who learns all about cars at an incredibly early age."
+ Kirkus 20:69 F 1 '52 80w

"Set in large type, this makes an excellent book for beginning readers who are able to master it for themselves. Recommended." Christine Gilbert

+ Library J 77:364 F 15 '52 70w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Mr 23
'52 130w

"This satisfactory story is printed in large type with fine illustrations, many in color, which show types of tools and the functions of a filling station. It is bound to delight little boys." Phyllis Fenner

+ N Y Times p32 Ap 6 '52 120w

BEIM, JERROLD. Kid brother; il. by Tracy Sugarman. 46p $2 Morrow
52-5926

An easy reading story about the relationship between an older and a younger brother.

Bookmark 11:236 Jl '52

Kirkus 20:339 Je 15 '52 120w

"Recommended." N. L. Rathbun
+ Library J 77:1817 O 15 '52 60w

"The pictures are very good, the boys being drawn with rare fidelity and expressiveness." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 S 14
'52 60w

"The incident by which Frankie wins grudging approval from Buzz seems hardly adequate to work this transformation, but otherwise Mr. Beim's story is entertaining and true to life. There are lively illustrations by Tracy Sugarman." Marjorie Burger

+ N Y Times pt2, p38 N 16 '52 110w

"The two boys are natural, well-drawn characters, but there is very little action to the story."

Sat R 35:38 Ag 16 '52 20w

Spring'd Republican p8C N 9 '52 40w

BEIM, MRS LORRAINE (LEVEY), and BEIM, JERROLD. Sunshine and shadow. 182p $2.50 Harcourt 52-6910

Sequel to Triumph Clear (Book Review Digest 1946). In this book Marsh Evans is still hampered by her bout with polio, but learns to adjust her life to her condition. For older girls.

Booklist 49:72 O 15 '52

Bookmark 12:13 O '52 20w

"A heartwarming sequel to Triumph Clear."
+ Kirkus 20:603 S 15 '52 130w

"Lorraine and Jerrold Beim, in a sequel to Triumph Clear, again meet the needs of the young reader who wants a book which deals with a physical handicap."

+ Library J 77:1754 O 15 '52 50w

Reviewed by C. J. Roth
Library J 77:2079 D 1 '52 60w

BEKESSY, JEAN. See Habe, H., pseud.

BELL, BERNARD IDDINGS. Crowd culture; an examination of the American way of life. 159p $2 Harper

973 [917.3] U.S.—Civilization. Education—U.S. U.S.—Religion 52-8461

"An examination of the celebrated American way of life and the no less celebrated American Common Man, the contemplation of which and of whom gives the author, Canon of the Cathedral of Saints Peter and Paul, in Chicago, very little to rejoice in. He thinks that Americans, far from being the nation of individualists they like to think they are, have become dangerously conformist, and that they are conforming to the lowest common denominators in our culture." (New Yorker) Index.

Booklist 49:103 N 15 '52

"Dr. Bell thinks about as highly of the 'American way of life' as Edna Ferber does of the Texas way of life. The descriptions are arrived at by much the same methods in both cases—that is, by selecting for emphasis everything that is wrong and leaving out of the picture everything that is right. . . . Heaven forbid that any serious-minded person should try to brush aside the damaging facts about our manners and morals. The question, however, is not whether the generalized indictment of American culture can be illustrated by actual data (as of course it can), but whether it is true as a generalization (as I think it is not). Even so, it is wiser to profit by criticism than to set up defenses on the ground that it is too sweeping. This is especially true when the critic is as firmly grounded in right principles as Dr. Bell is, and when he writes as well as Dr. Bell does," W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 69:1380 N 26 '52 260w

"Dr. Bell always is provocative and, while it can be argued that he overlooks many of the positive aspects of the American society, his sharp attacks are needed in a time when there is pressure to conform and to approve of American life as just right because it is American." R. R. Brunn

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 O 30 '52 280w

Reviewed by F. E. Ellis

Churchman 166:15 D 1 '52 220w

"Canon Bell will make many of his readers mad. His writing is barbed, but stimulating as readers of his earlier books and magazine articles will know."

Kirkus 20:762 D 15 '52 190w

"Some recommendations impractical, e.g., church schools supported by public funds; categorical observations make book banal; description of 'elite' is infantile. No blueprint for action-type reader, but recommended, of course." Karl Brown

Library J 77:1834 O 15 '52 50w

Reviewed by Paul Dinkins

New Repub 127:21 D 1 '52 280w

Reviewed by H. A. Overstreet

N Y Times p26 N 16 '52 320w

New Yorker 28:173 N 8 '52 160w

BELL, CLIVE, ed. French impressionists; in full colour; with an introduction 18p 50 col pl $4.95 Phaidon

759.4 Paintings, French [52-9472]

"Clive Bell provides the introduction to this nicely printed quarto with representative full-page reproductions." Bookmark

Bookmark 11:180 My '52 10w

"An introductory essay by that old master of critical interpretation, Clive Bell, which is so brilliantly allusive, apt, witty, and urbane that by itself it makes the book worth while. The fifty illustrations, all in full color, are extremely well reproduced, and have been selected with a nice eye for bringing out the various artists' stylistic qualities."

+ New Yorker 28:180 O 18 '52 50w

"While the book makes no attempt at thorough documentation as does John Rewald's 'History of Impressionism,' the excellent plates and the brief but well-written introduction by Clive Bell make it a fine basic work on the subject." V. J. Papanek

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 My 18 '52 110w

BELL, KENSIL. Jersey rebel. 248p $2.50 Dodd 51-13073

Jeff Lundy at fourteen was too young to fight in the Revolution, but he took over the responsibility of the family so father could go to war. But he could act as messenger for the patriots, and took a spying trip into Philadelphia. For older boys.

Booklist 48:146 D 15 '51

Reviewed by Elizabeth Burr

+ Library J 76:2015 D 1 '51 80w

"This is good historical fiction that will appeal to high-school readers."

+ Wis Lib Bul 47:260 N '51

BELL, MARGARET ELIZABETH. Kit Carson, mountain man; il. by Harry Daugherty. 71p $2 Morrow

B or 92 Carson, Christopher—Juvenile literature 52-5927

An account of the life of Kit Carson from his first trip as a herder at the age of sixteen, thru the later phases of his life as trapper, guide, and Indian fighter. For grades 5-7.

Booklist 49:18 S 1 '52

Bookmark 12:12 O '52 10w

Horn Bk 28:416 D '52 60w

"Tersely written accounts of Indian wars and desert crossings and occasional digressions into Carson's own thoughts make this a refreshing and arresting biography."

+ Kirkus 20:339 Je 15 '52 150w

"The narrative of the painful march to the Far West is excellent, and the many dramatic pencil sketches complement the text. Recommended for school and public libraries." H. M. Brogan

+ Library J 77:1520 S 15 '52 50w

"A stirring portrait of a great trapper who helped to make our history." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 S 28 '52 90w

"Kit Carson was a fast man with the beaver traps and the Apaches but Miss Bell's book does not amuse the adult who reads it aloud. With the children it is another thing. They love it." Jane Cobb

+ N Y Times pt2, p32 N 16 '52 80w

"It is a very attractive book—as appealing as Miss Eaton's George Washington, which set a high standard in both text and illustration." M. G. Davis

+ Sat R 35:46 S 20 '52 90w

Wis Lib Bul 48:218 S '52

BELL, RONALD PERCY. Acids and bases; their quantitative behavior. 90p il $1.50 Wiley

547.2 [547.7] Bases (chemistry). Acids 52-11138

"A short but informative survey of the current knowledge of acid-base phenomena. Generally speaking it is written in terms of the definitions proposed in 1923 by J. M. Bronsted and T. M. Lowry which are stated as follows: 'An acid is a species having a tendency to lose a proton and a base is a species having a tendency to add on a proton.' The somewhat different definition advanced by G. N. Lewis is discussed briefly and incidentally in the final chapter. The book will be useful to advanced students of chemistry and professional chemists who want a quick view of modern theory." N Y New Tech Bks

"Splendid little book." J. C. Bailar

+ Chem & Eng N 30:3762 S 8 '52 120w

BELL, R. P.—Continued

"Dr. Bell of Oxford University well known for his publications on acid-base catalysis has done a fine job of reviewing, reporting, and clarifying so that this reviewer recommends the booklet as 'bargain of the month.'" F. C. Nachod

+ Chem Eng 59:347 N '52 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 37:49 J1 '52

BELL, THELMA HARRINGTON (MRS CORYDON BELL). Yaller-eye; il. by Corydon Bell. 87p $2 Viking

51-13508

Story of a little Carolina mountain boy, Randy, and his beloved cat called Yaller-Eye. For grades three to four.

"The spirit of neighborliness and kindness to people and to animals shines thru this simple tale and should endear it to young readers. Pictures and text perfectly complement each other." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 Ja 13 '52 150w

"Readers who remember Mountain Boy, the Bells' first book about Randy, will be glad to know that this one is at least as good and maybe better." J. D. Lindquist and S. M. Andrews

+ Horn Bk 27:326 S '51 80w

+ Kirkus 19:437 Ag 15 '51 110w

"It will take a third- or fourth-grader to read this. Refreshing." A. B. McCreary

+ Library J 76:1942 N 15 '51 90w

"Although the story presents friendly rural folk and a beautiful country background it is not as convincing as the author's earlier book, 'Mountain Boy.'" Phyllis Fenner

N Y Times p28 Ja 13 '52 90w

Wis Lib Bul 47:258 N '51

BELLAIRS, GEORGE. Death in dark glasses. 249p $2.50 Macmillan

52-3449

Detective story.

"Mr. Bellairs takes a particular delight in filling his tales prodigally with vividly observed bit players and they team here making his busy pages even livelier. His tone is generally wry and his view of natural surroundings on the whole warmer than his view of the human species. The consequence of all of this at its best is pungent amusement. And this seems to be Bellairs at his best." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Ag 31 '52 160w

"A plot as bald and a cast as flat as in 'Death in Dark Glasses' leave you with no focus of interest and only a sense of a great number of words ineptly combined." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p19 Ag 24 '52 80w

"Pretty good detection, character work not as relentlessly comic as usual, and Bellairs' hearty style for those who like it." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ag 31 '52 70w

"Diffuse but pleasant." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 35:35 Ag 30 '52 40w

"For a straightforward piece of detective work in the finest British tradition, George Bellairs' Inspector Littlejohn can always be relied upon to measure up to the most exacting demands of the discriminating whodunit fan. In the latest opus the author gives his readers full measure." D. F. M.

+ Springfield Republican p16C S 14 '52 70w

BELLAMY, FRANCIS RUFUS. Private life of George Washington. 409p $5 Crowell

B or 92 Washington, George 51-13923

For descriptive note see Annual for 1951.

"Altogether, it seems to me, Mr. Bellamy has written a 'popular' rather than a 'private' life of Washington, as informal in style as it is in the treatment of historical material." J. J. Smertenko

Am Hist R 57:980 J1 '52 700w

"Based largely on the biography by Rupert Hughes, which has been carried only to 1781, Mr. Bellamy's work is glaringly inadequate for the part of Washington's life after that year. The book has little interest or value to scholars. Nor can it be recommended to lay readers. Mr. Bellamy did not have the sort of mastery of the material that might have enabled him to make intelligible to the uninitiated the many complex episodes of Washington's life." C. P. Nettels

Ann Am Acad 279:191 Ja '52 450w

"If Mr. Bellamy does not lead prying eyes far into Washington's home life, he amply rewards us with his discerning account of the unformed nation, lacking all precedents and tradition to work upon, which was able to depend instead upon the impregnable faith and stability of one great citizen." Henry Sowerby

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 F 21 '52 650w

"Mr. Bellamy writes with so pleasant a mixture of shrewdness and sentiment, and with such winning friendliness toward both his subject and his readers, as to make criticism sound ungracious, but this latest attempt to disclose the 'real Washington' beneath the trappings of war and state is seriously deficient in historical and literary craftsmanship." George Genzmer

+ Nation 174:14 Ja 5 '52 70w

"Mr. Bellamy's volume is another attempt to show Washington as a human being, and as such it succeeds rather well. The author has not brought forth a scholarly work but he has studied his subject and he includes many letters of George Washington to bolster his interpretations." R. H. Dillon

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ja 13 '52 270w

Reviewed by Merrill Jensen

Yale R ns 41:450 spring '52 320w

BELLOC, HILAIRE. Anthology of his prose and verse; selected by W. N. Roughhead. 283p il $3.50 Lippincott

328

"This Anthology attempts, within the obvious limits of space, a representative selection of Mr. Belloc's prose and verse. Its purpose is to introduce his work to a new generation of readers and to give his admirers an excuse, if such were needed, for reading some of it again. The selections from his prose have been printed chronologically. . . The selections from his verse may appear to have been scattered at random throughout this book; but, in fact, [the compiler has] tried to place them appropriately, so that they fit the mood of the prose which they adorn." Intro

"Maurice Baring once observed of Belloc's prose that the chords to his lyre are 'wit, irony, vividness, gusto and above all vision.' These 283 pages of his prose and poetry bear that out. Especially the selections from his historical works, which occupy many chapters, have the indefinable quality of genius. Some of the poetry is of the same order though much of the trivial rhymes, famous a generation or two ago, seem on re-reading to have no lasting value."

+ Cath World 175:159 My '52 170w

"Mr. Roughhead has done his work well. Rightly, he has omitted extracts from The Servile State and the political satires. One may quarrel with individual items of his choice, regret the absence of some of one's favourite essays and comic poems. But Mr. Belloc has been as prolific as any writer of our time, and from the standpoint of sheer craftsmanship he has probably kept a higher standard than any other. All told, it would be difficult to make a better introduction to his works than this." Walter Allen

+ New Statesman & Nation 41:456 Ap 21 '51 800w

Reviewed by J. T. Winterich

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 D 21 '52 50w

Reviewed by B. R. Redman
Sat R 35:24 Ap 5 '52 500w

Reviewed by Derek Hudson
Spec 185:348 Mr 16 '51 1650w
Time 58:63 D 24 '51 1150w

Times [London] Lit Sup p262 Ap 27 '51
1000w

BELLOT, HUGH HALE. American history and American historians; a review of recent contributions to the interpretation of the history of the United States. 336p maps $4 Univ. of Okla. press

973.07 U.S.—History. Historiography. Historians 52-12131

"A study of the more important trends of our historical development and a survey of American historical writing from 1890 to 1940. Mr. Belloc regards this period as a nationalist phase which is now drawing to a close, but which has a profound effect on American historiography." (Current Hist) The author is the only Englishman holding a chair of American history in Great Britain.

Current Hist 23:271 O '52 30w

"Only major weakness of volume is scant treatment of biographical material. Otherwise, this is goldmine of information and critical guidance in a field of paramount importance to American libraries. Excellent, very extensive bibliographic notes; several historical maps. Recommended for college, historical research, and larger public libraries." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 77:1658 O 1 '52 120w

School & Society 76:239 O 11 '52 20w

Times [London] Lit Sup p550 Ag 22 '52
950w

BELOT, RAYMOND DE. Struggle for the Mediterranean, 1939-1945; tr. by James A. Field, jr. 287p maps $4 Princeton Univ. press

940.545 World war, 1939-1945—Naval operations. World war, 1939-1945—Aerial operations. World war, 1939-1945—Mediterranean sea 51-12459

For descriptive note see Annual for 1951.

"While this small volume, first published in France under the title La guerre aéronavale en Méditerranée, 1939-1945, is not intended to be a detailed or definitive account of all military operations in the area, it is a brilliant analysis of these operations with major emphasis on the naval struggle. Admiral de Belot knows the Mediterranean and appreciates its importance. He has used French accounts and most of the published works in English and Italian to produce an important book. The translator and the publisher are to be congratulated for making this work available to more readers." W. C. Askew

+ Am Hist R 57:402 Ja '52 750w

Foreign Affairs 30:333 Ja '52 10w

"This is military history with a grand sweep, from one strategic decision to another, while the actual campaigns reduce themselves almost to incidents along the way. As such, Admiral de Belot's unfolding of the Mediterranean war is quite unlike other books on the same subject. Except insofar as Mussolini or Hitler were led into mistaken judgments of strategy, personality plays no part in the story. . . This is a book for intellectuals—and admirals." P. R. Levin

+ Sat R 35:40 Ag 23 '52 340w

"The strength and limitations of sea power in the Second World War were peculiarly evident in the Mediterranean theatre, and the inactivity to which the fortunes of war condemned him afforded the French Admiral de Belot all the informed objectivity of a ringside seat. His 'Struggle for the Mediterranean, 1939-1945' provides a thoughtful summary of the war's course there, underlining both the interaction of the separate arms in that theatre and the implications of the Mediterranean for the war as a whole." T. C. Mendenhall

+ Yale R n s 41:453 spring '52 700w

BELTING, NATALIA MAREE. Moon is a crystal ball: unfamiliar legends of the stars; il. by Anne Marie Jauss. 150p $2.50 Bobbs

291 Stars. Mythology 52-5814

Stories from many lands about the sun, moon, and stars. Some of them were told by the Indians before the white men landed in America. For ages six to eight.

Booklist 48:303 My 15 '52

"These unfamiliar legends are retold in simple text, good for slow readers. The book looks advanced but can be read by a good second-grader. . . Recommended." E. J. Bowland

+ Library J 77:726 Ap 15 '52 80w

"It is a fine book to add to your astronomy shelf, and perhaps as good a beginners' star book as any factual one. . . The style is delightful, proving that this author knew well how to please the six children of her dedication, or perhaps learned from them. The pictures are also excellent." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 My 11 '52 300w

"The stories are short, often dramatic and well told. Interesting as folklore they will also be stimulating as imaginative related material when a child approaches astronomy. The pictorial diagrams helpfully interpret the constellation images." Irene Smith

+ N Y Times p24 My 18 '52 150w

New Yorker 28:202 D 6 '52 30w

BEMELMANS, LUDWIG. Happy place; il. by the author. 58p $2.50 Little

Rabbits—Legends and stories 52-8338

The adventures of a marked-down Easter rabbit, after he was turned out to fend for himself in Central Park.

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p22 N 23 '52
80w

Kirkus 20:499 Ag 15 '52 130w

"Recommended especially for reading aloud." E. T. Dobbins

+ Library J 77:1661 O 1 '52 40w

"A light-hearted extravaganza. Like most of Mr. Bemelmans' nonsense tales it is put together with scant regard for logic but with abundant originality and humor." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p32 S 21 '52 160w

Sat R 35:66 N 15 '52 190w

Time 60:106 D 8 '52 160w

BEMELMANS, LUDWIG. How to travel incognito; il. by the author. 244p $3 Little 817 52-5507

An amusing account of a summer in Paris and points south spent by the author, masquerading as The Prince of Bavaria, in company with the one and only Comte de St. Cucuface.

Booklist 48:257; 278 Ap 15 '52; My 1 '52

Reviewed by Paul Engle

Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 My 18 '52
320w

Kirkus 19:235 My 1 '51 180w

Manchester Guardian p4 Je 6 '52 180w

Reviewed by Frank Hauser

New Statesman & Nation 43:740 Je 21 '52 300w

Reviewed by Gouverneur Paulding

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 My 25 '52 650w

"The smooth consistency of the bitter-sweet mixture, the quality of an unstrained prose, the persuasive personality of its intelligence, the sophistication of the naive drawings, all make this another Bemelmans book and so recommended purchase for adults, their children and possibly their children's children." J. A. Barry

+ N Y Times p5 My 4 '52 750w

BEMELMANS, LUDWIG—Continued

"It all amounts to a heady draught of Château Bemelmans '52—maybe not the very best year for that vineyard, but Bemelmans just the same."

New Yorker 28:137 My 10 '52 170w

"The Bemelmans enthusiast won't bother to taste and try; he'll get the book instantly, regretting only that it couldn't go on for twice its length." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ap 30 '52 450w

"This is great fun if you're a Bemelmans man, a great bore if you're not, and spasmodically pretty entertaining if you're not one way or the other. The cover is Bemelmans in color, and there are scads of black-and-white loose-jointed Bemelmans sketches scattered about." H. S.

Sat R 35:49 S 13 '52 180w

"It is the fantasy, with its occasional anecdotes inserted in the true picaresque tradition that is the chief content of this book. It is saved from becoming monotonous or irritating, as such things often are, by Mr. Bemelmans' real gift as a writer for the telling economic phrase." Robert Kee

+ Spec 189:32 J1 4 '52 550w

+ Springfield Republican p19A Je 1 '52 130w

Time 59:106 Je 16 '52 500w

"This is just the book to take with you on a tedious journey. No concentration is required to enjoy it to the full, the dozen chapters turn it into a series of short stories which may be taken at disparate intervals, and the mere visual monotony of the printed page is relieved by the author's own illustrations, which have a charm of their own. Those who enjoy the Bemelmans mixture of wit and nonsense will not be disappointed with his latest effort."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p418 Je 27 '52 460w

BENDER, AVERAM BURTON. March of empire; frontier defense in the Southwest, 1848-1860. 323p il $5 Univ. of Kansas press

979 Southwest—History 52-10553

An account of the southwestern frontier in the years 1848 to 1860. It describes the defenses set up; the Indian wars; and the trappers, traders, and settlers of the region. Bibliography. Index.

"Lively and scholarly account of the southwest frontier defense prior to the Civil war. . . The bibliography is one of the best on the west." John Randolph

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ag 31 '52 60w

"It is an original contribution to American history and its chapters on the California Indian wars should be of interest to local readers." A. K.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ag 10 '52 110w

BENDER, JAMES FREDERICK. Make your business letters make friends. 250p $3.50 McGraw

651.7 Commercial correspondence 51-13604

"Practical advice on how to make commercial correspondence friendly, brief and courteous, stressing the sales value of building good human relations in all business contacts. Quizzes and check lists on correct usage. Index." Bookmark

Booklist 48:276 My 1 '52

Bookmark 11:179 My '52 40w

Kirkus 20:206 Mr 15 '52 120w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross

Library J 77:895 My 15 '52 80w

+ Management R 41:560 Ag '52 60w

BENDER, JAMES FREDERICK, comp. NBC handbook of pronunciation; comp. for the National broadcasting co; foreword by Pat Kelly. 2d ed 372p $4.50 Crowell

421.5 English language—Pronunciation 51-2056

"According to the Preface, 15,285 words are listed. The first edition numbered about 12,000. Around 2000 words listed in the first edition have been dropped, either because they are no longer in the news or because they are considered too simple. The additions are primarily scientific terms, the names of prominent people in this country and abroad, and news-worthy place names. 'Although the second edition includes more American place names than the first edition, it has relatively few of them.'—Preface. Words in the pronunciation list are arranged in alphabetical order. Despite the complex nature of many of them, there are no cross references from variant spellings nor from alternative forms of entry. . . . Because the book is designed for the busy announcer who may have no time to study the merits of alternative pronunciations, only one pronunciation is given." (Subscription Bks Bul) For first edition see Book Review Digest 1943, under National broadcasting company.

Booklist 47:295 Ap 15 '51

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '51

"Recommended as a useful addition to the shelf of ready guides to current speech." H. W. Hart

+ Library J 76:109 Ja 15 '51 140w

"Apart from its intended use by radio broadcasters, the second edition of the NBC Handbook of Pronunciation will be helpful to most public speakers, to teachers, and to students who require a quick solution to the pronunciation problems posed by current affairs, provided that the 'General American' standard is satisfactory to them. The work's most serious limitation is imposed by the one-pronunciation policy, the calculated omission of alternative pronunciation where the pedantic or foreign pronunciation varies from American vernacular, or where more than one perfectly acceptable American pronunciation exists. Its value lies especially in its inclusion of many timely names and words for which the reader might be required to search in scattered sources. The NBC Handbook of Pronunciation is recommended for large public libraries, for college libraries, and for individuals."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 22:72 O '51 1050w

BENDICK, MRS JEANNE. First book of airplanes; il. by [the author]. 69p $1.75 Watts, F.

629.1 Airplanes—Juvenile literature 52-10579

"Replaces Tatham's First flying book [Book Review Digest 1944] and is similar in format and treatment to other books in the series. Explains how planes fly, how a pilot is trained, mentions some aviation history, and describes different types of commercial and military planes and flying jobs. Ages 6-9." Booklist

Booklist 48:344 Je 15 '52

"Beginners of any age will readily absorb the clearly presented information in this brief study of airplanes." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 28:248 Ag '52 100w

Kirkus 20:191 Mr 15 '52 80w

"This little book gives more information about aviation than many a larger volume. . . . Suitable for any age from eight up." E. T. Dobbins

+ Library J 77:1212 J1 '52 90w

"Trust Miss Bendick to give us an excellent and a really 'first' book for younger boys." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk pt2, p30 N 16 '52 50w

BENET, LAURA. Coleridge, poet of wild enchantment. 216p il $3 Dodd

B or 92 Coleridge, Samuel Taylor 52-9956
 "This straightforward biography leaves the reader thoroughly acquainted with the rash, sad poet whose genius burned so fitfully. Coleridge's friendship with the Lambs and Wordsworths, his two loves: Mary Evans and Sarah Hutchinson, his struggle with opiates, his warring nature which allowed him to absent himself from his children in spite of his love for them, all this is told, neither glossing over nor justifying his actions." (Library J) Bibliography.

Booklist 49:16 S 1 '52

"Recommended as an introduction to Coleridge." F. W. Butler

+ Library J 77:1311 Ag '52 40w

"This is a biography of Coleridge so thoughtful and mature that it might well be published as an adult book."

+ Sat R 35:71 N 15 '52 70w

BENET, SULA. Song, dance and customs of peasant Poland. 247p il $3.50 Roy pubs.

943.8 [914.38] Peasantry—Poland. Poland—Social life and customs [52-1358]

"In this new study of Poland's peasant, Sula Benet, Polish-born instructor in Anthropology at Hunter College, evokes for us the peasant's traditional conformities and contrarities, his closely integrated village communities, his regional dress, speech and routine." N Y Times

"Brief sketch that it is, still her book is a sound ethnological narrative. It is more; it is a sensitive exposition of the ethos and eidos of a virile and gifted people." E. W. Count

+ Am Anthropol 54:542 J1 '52 420w

"A fascinating study, of interest to students of anthropology and sociology."

+ Kirkus 19:507 S 1 '51 120w

"It really has 'flavour and colour' in its portrayal of the season cycle and the home circle. Special value of the intercultural study is obvious, since the preface is written by Margaret Mead and the dedication is made to Ruth Benedict." J. M. Scherr

+ Library J 76:1704 O 15 '51 100w

"With this frankly limited little study of one social class of Poland Sula Benet has given us an insight into the tenacity, self-discipline and indomitable pride within the Polish soul. Most important of all is the fact that this book preserves a record of a life which, unless the Soviet yoke is lifted, will disappear for good." Virgilia Peterson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Ja 27 '52 390w

Reviewed by L. L. Jarecka

N Y Times p40 D 9 '51 220w

BENITEZ, FERNANDO. In the footsteps of Cortes [il. by Alberto Beltran]. 256p $3.75 Pantheon bks.

972.02 Cortés, Hernando. Mexico—Description and travel. Mexico—History 52-7394

A Mexican newspaperman here retraces the route taken by Hernando Cortes from Veracruz to Tenochtitlan, which last is now Mexico City. Preliminary chapters discuss the pre-Columbian discoveries. No index.

Reviewed by John Randolph

Chicago Sunday Tribune p17 O 26 '52 60w

Kirkus 20:670 O 1 '52 160w

"There will always be readers avid for fresh retelling of the story of Hernando Cortes. . . Now a deft Mexican writer, Fernando Benitez, adds his penetrating interpretation." Hubert Herring

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 O 26 '52 700w

"Mr. Benitez writes as a Mexican deeply in love with his country and its people, and blessed with an understanding of them, and his book is often very moving as well as colorful. The organization of the narrative is sometimes confusing, as Mr. Benitez detours to link ancient events to modern settings, but on the whole it is a rewarding volume." R. F. H.

 + Spring'd Republican p11D O 26 '52 100w

BENJAMIN, NORA (GOTTHEIL) (MRS LAWRENCE SCHLESINGER KUBIE). Joel; a novel of young America. 207p $2.50 Harper 52-7881

Novel for teen-agers. "In 1775 young Joel Davidov fled to the British colony of Connecticut to escape persecution in Poland. . . Unjustly jailed by the British, he got a taste of tyranny and escaped to fight with Glover, Arnold and Putnam, to hear Nathan Hale and read Tom Paine, to live through the bitter winter at Valley Forge." (N Y Times)

Booklist 49:109 N 15 '52

Chicago Sunday Tribune p20 N 16 '52 180w

Commonweal 57:171 N 21 '52 30w

"I do not remember that we have ever before had a young people's story of the American Revolution from the point of view of a Jewish boy. It is an interesting approach. . . His love for a Gentile girl and the problems they met when they wished to marry are well handled and give the book added interest." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 28:330 O '52 80w

Kirkus 20:562 S 1 '52 190w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Burr

Library J 78:69 Ja 1 '53 130w

"This is a sincere, refreshing story for thoughtful teen-agers, and in particular for those who have an interest in the peoples who helped make America." M. C. Scoggin

+ N Y Times p54 N 23 '52 170w

"This story of the American Revolution is an unusual one in that the hero is a Polish Jew, deeply religious, a student who aspires to become a rabbi. . . This is an exceptionally thoughtful book." M. G. Davis

+ Sat R 36:44 Ja 10 '53 250w

BENN, A. E. Management dictionary; standardization of definitions and concepts of the terminology in the field of personnel management. 381p $7.50 Exposition

658.03 Employment management—Dictionaries. Industrial management—Dictionaries 51-11831

"This lexicon contains more than 4000 references of common usage in job analysis, industrial psychology, cost accounting, production and manufacturing, organization and administration. It includes standard words, old words in new meanings, slang words and coined words and colloquialisms that have come into accepted usage in recent years. It establishes basic definitions and terms, synonyms, antonyms, formulas and formula symbols, and refers to major publications in the field. The author is librarian at the Public Relations Research Library of the Ford Motor Company, Detroit." Special Libraries

"Definitions are, on the whole, brief and clear, and non-encyclopedic. . . Synonyms and antonyms are frequently given. No bibliographical references or list of authorities." J. E. Cross

+ Library J 77:1406 S 1 '52 50w

Special Libraries 43:272 S '52 70w

BENNETT, ALVA HERSCHEL, and others. Phase microscopy; principles and applications. 320p il $7.50 Wiley

578 Microscopy and microscopy 51-13924

"Phase microscopy, which takes advantage of differential diffraction of light rays, is probably the most important development in microscopy in recent years. The technique makes it possible to study transparent and semi-transparent objects that are difficult to examine by ordinary microscopic methods. This work is a technical treatise on principles and techniques. It is addressed primarily to scientists who are making extensive use of the phase microscope. Several chapters deal with applications in biology, medicine, and industry. There is a long bibliography." Library J

BENNETT, A. H.—Continued

Reviewed by C. W. Mason
Am Chem Soc J 74:1365 Mr 5 '52 270w

Reviewed by E. K. Kline
Am J Pub Health 42:739 Je '52 180w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 76:2118 D 15 '51 90w

N Y New Tech Bks 36:90 N '51

"Phase Microscopy, prepared by research staff members of a principal manufacturer of phase microscopes, has clearly been written for beginners as well as for those accomplished in the science. It is proper that the first work in a field should be so, and in this instance the purposes have been reasonably well achieved."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:97 Mr '52 200w

BENNETT, HENRY STANLEY. English books and readers, 1475 to 1557. 336p $7 Cambridge 655.4 Book industries and trade [52-12000]

"Being a study in the history of the book trade from Caxton to the incorporation of the Stationers' company." (Subtitle) The author is Reader in English in the University of Cambridge, and Fellow and Librarian of Emmanuel college. Appendixes list the publications of Wynkyn de Worde, 1492-1535; and translations into English printed between 1475-1560. Bibliography. Index.

"A very good book for library school classes, or students of printing who may note some errors." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 77:2160 D 15 '52 180w

"It is of much importance not only for the history of English books but for that of literature. Many easy generalisations about contemporary illiteracy must be revised in its light. The output of school books in the period is particularly striking."

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Jl 14 '52 80w
Sat R 36:41 Ja 10 '53 160w

"Mr. Bennett has brought a clear head and an infinite capacity for taking pains to the sifting and orderly presentation of his evidence, which he has distilled into 238 closely reasoned pages. The result is not easy reading, but it will be a standard reference-book; a lucidly arranged collection of passages illustrating literacy, the regulation of the book trade, and the aims and methods of authors, translators and printers. Future research will perhaps fill in details and throw light on certain aspects of book-production on which Mr. Bennett has been able to produce no evidence, e.g., trade terms or edition-binding, but his main judgments are not likely to be reversed."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p524 Ag 8 '52 900w

BENNETT, MARGOT. Widow of Bath. 189p $2.50 Doubleday

Detective story.

52-5238

Kirkus 20:15 Ja 1 '52 70w

"An unusual and striking book." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Mr 16 '52 150w

"In essence this is the solid British puzzle, an admirably involved structure of alien-smuggling and private motives culminating in an intricately alibed murder. But the highly individual writing makes it a novel of much broader appeal. It is ironic, witty, at times cryptically elusive, at times sharply penetrating—and at all times cryptically Bennett, more serious in tone than her earlier novels and even more outstanding than most whodunits." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p32 Mr 16 '52 140w

"The author has an animated style, and her book, while not making too much sense, probably has enough momentum to please admirers of simple violence."

New Yorker 28:123 Mr 15 '52 120w

"Under the light touch of the story-telling lies a strong sense of evil and tragedy that makes this one notable. B plus." L. G. Offord
+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Mr 2 '52 90w

"Highly mannered yarn, with some fun, some good dialogue, but too little construction; over-whimsied in spots." Sergeant Cuff
+ Sat R 35:45 Mr 22 '52 40w

Reviewed by Esther Howard
Spec 189:48 Jl 4 '52 30w

"The book opens brilliantly, the characters interest and a number of fascinating moral issues raise themselves. Everything promises a remarkable novel. Then, and it is impossible for the literary critic not to regret it, murder and the requirements of the genre of detective fiction turn it all into a routine job. Not quite a routine job, however, for Miss Bennett has talents which are well above the ordinary."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p309 My 9 '52 210w

BENNETT, PAUL A., ed. Books and printing; a treasury for typophiles. 432p il $7.50 World pub.

655 Books

52-612

"Gathers together articles, poems, excerpts, and essays by the foremost practitioners of the art of bookmaking, both English and American. There are more than forty contributions in the book, ranging from observations on the story of the alphabet to the pleasures and duties of the amateur printer. In most cases, the contributions are reprinted in their entirety, and only to the articles by Robert Josephy, Will Ransom, and Arthur Rushmore has a postscript been added. The whole is neatly tied together by Mr. Bennett's introduction, and by his concluding observations on the typefaces for books." Publishers' Weekly

Booklist 48:224 Mr 15 '52

"A volume of some four hundred pages of sheer delight." Karl Kup

+ Publishers' Weekly 161:732 F 2 '52 800w

"Anyone, whether in the field or out of it, who has any urge to know what lies behind the making of a book, or about the art of printing in general, will find this his kind of reading. Doubtless those in the trade will be the chief buyers. But I shouldn't be surprised if plenty of laymen, too, will discover that this beautifully done volume has something to tell them that they want to hear." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ja 22 '52 750w

BENSON, BENJAMIN. Lily in her coffin. 216p $2.50 Mill

Detective story.

52-9698

"Well oiled yarn of concealed skulduggery and persistent detecting." Drexel Drake
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p18 S 14 '52 70w

"Keeps going, but that's about all." Kirkus 20:388 Jl 1 '52 60w

"Paris, hitherto a pretty dependable investigator, accepts allegations as evidence too easily, but the middle section of the tale has excitement, balanced by the sawdust prose which is particularly egregious in the opening passages, and the flatness of the finale." James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 S 28 '52 110w

"The politicians are drawn from life; the routine police work is detailedly solid and effective. Yet the novel as a whole, though short, is rather slow and heavy." Anthony Boucher
+ N Y Times p26 S 21 '52 120w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p22 S 28 '52
50w

"Plus mark." Sergeant Cuff
+ Sat R 35:26 S 27 '52 20w

BENSON, BENJAMIN. Stamped for murder; a Wade Paris mystery. 224p $2.50 Mill

Detective story.

52-5059

Bookmark 11:134 Mr '52

"Not a collector's item, but adequately circuitous."

Kirkus 19:688 D 1 '51 60w

"Benson's third novel is probably his best thus far and Paris is an admirable if palely-represented cop. And there are no pretentious passages in this narrative which settles carefully to business and sees it through briskly and economically."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 F 17 '52 90w

"Paris' character is further developed as he performs a professionally competent job on the charred corpse of a rare-stamp dealer; but the case and the characters seem somewhat cold and unexciting, and Benson captures little of the color and interest of the philatelic background."

+ N Y Times p25 F 10 '52 70w

"The plot is not too strong, but Paris's combination of toughness and decency is as attractive as ever, and he's fine on protecting the innocent and managing a hardboiled heirless."

L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p20 F 10 '52
100w

"Rather plodding piece." Sergeant Cuff
Sat R 35:55 F 16 '52 30w

BENTHAM, JEREMY. Handbook of political fallacies; revised, edited, and with a preface by Harold A. Larrabee. 269p $4.75 Johns Hopkins press

328 Political science 52-12783

"In the century and a quarter since the book's first publication in English there have been radical changes in the issues that agitate the public mind and in the style of political debate, but the same types of fallacious argument are still in vogue. . . . A substantial part of Mr. Larrabee's present contribution, in addition to an extended and informative preface and introduction, is a sufficiently bold revision to make the book easily readable. Bentham might not like this tampering with his style, but it is a boon to the reader and, so far as I can observe, it involves no distortion of the author's ideas." Christian Century

"What a pity this was not published earlier in the political season! As a guide to the detection and avoidance of hokum in campaign speeches, it is an immortal classic. . . . The obscurity of Jeremy Bentham's literary style, except for occasional lapses into almost crystalline brilliance, contrasts painfully with the clarity of his thinking." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 69:1257 O 29 '52
950w

Reviewed by W. E. Binkley
New Repub 127:19 N 3 '52 1200w

Reviewed by J. T. Winterich
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p22 N 9 '52
80w

BENTLEY, ERIC RUSSELL, ed. From the modern repertoire; series two. 511p $6 Univ. of Denver press

808.82 Dramas—Collections 52-12329

"An anthology of significant modern dramas, European and American, translated by experts, and chosen for literary and experimental rather than commercial merit. Only two have been published in the U.S. before; the notes are mainly by the authors and translators. Contents: Jest, satire, irony, by Christian Grabbe; Easy money, by Alexander Ostrovsky; The epidemic, by Octave Mirbeau; The Marquis of Keith, by Frank Wedekind; Him, by E. E. Cummings; Venus and Adonis, by André Obey; Electra, by Jean Giraudoux; The king and the duke, by Francis Fergusson; The dark tower, by Louis MacNeice; Galileo, by Bertolt Brecht." (Booklist) For first series see Book Review Digest 1949.

Booklist 49:63 O 15 '52

"Recommended for large drama and theatre collections." George Freedley
+ Library J 77:206 N 15 '52 90w

"This collection provides, if not a new theatre, at least a room with a view of it." Frank Jones

New Repub 127:21 N 24 '52 950w

BENTLEY, PHYLLIS ELEANOR. Panorama; tales of the West Riding. 287p $2.50 Macmillan

[52-21711]

These seven short stories or novels are all about the West Riding of Yorkshire. They span in time from 1592 to 1946. They begin "with a quarrel between two families engaged in the cloth trade and end with an equally fatal drama of Government controls and black marketers." (Manchester Guardian)

Booklist 48:228 Mr 15 '52

Bookmark 11:210 Je '52 20w

"'Panorama' is exactly what it is called, a panorama in fiction form of 350 years in the West Riding of Yorkshire. American readers may find it unfamiliar in material, but they cannot fail to admire Miss Bentley's quiet skill." Fanny Butcher

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Mr 30 '52
550w

"Some of the tales are drawn from local records, notably the romance in which the Italian dramatist Alfieri plays so dashing a part. But this is an exotic eighteenth century exception. The other stories reflect the social and industrial changes which affected one North-country neighbourhood. Perhaps the best of them is a chronicle of the Civil War. There is nothing experimental in Miss Bentley's method, but she has a homely grasp of character and is a natural narrator." H. T.A. Fausset

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Ja 18 '52
150w

"Whether one prefers the turbulence of the past or other qualities whose long history persists into our times, these tales offer entertainment in themselves and insight into a land and people to which much of the world is kin. The wide range of the book extends still further the distinguished interpretation Miss Bentley has built up of a part of England she has made her own." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Ap 13 '52 330w

"In her modest way Miss Bentley makes sure to get her points across. She may be a regional writer, but make no mistake about it, she is no provincial." John Barkham

+ N Y Times p4 Mr 23 '52 450w

Reviewed by E. J. Fitzgerald
Sat R 35:64 Ap 12 '52 160w

Reviewed by Marghanita Laski
+ Spec 188:88 Ja 18 '52 290w

"As in much that purports to be taken for historical fiction, the dialogue in Miss Bentley's stories is not without unconscious humour. In every other respect, however, the stories sadly lack wit and originality. The superficial characteristics of West Riding life, its cloth merchants, tradesmen and bourgeoisie, may be accurately enough represented in these tales spanning nearly 400 years, but they are unimpressively written and superficial in theme."

Times [London] Lit Sup p89 F 1 '52
90w

BENTON, THOMAS HART. Artist in America [foreword by Clarence R. Decker]. new & rev ed 324p 79pl $3.95 Twayne

B or 92 Artists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. U.S.—Social conditions 52-6288

"Brings up to date the author's activities and opinions since the first edition in 1937 [Book Review Digest 1937]. Thirteen illustrations are added. The foreword is by Clarence R. Decker, President of the University of Kansas City." Booklist

Booklist 48:299 My 15 '52

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison
Christian Century 69:370 Mr 26 '52
200w

Reviewed by G. F. Whicher
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Je 22
'52 50w

BERDIAEV, NIKOLAI ALEKSANDROVICH. The beginning and the end; tr. from the Russian by R. M. French. 256p $3.50 Harper
110 Metaphysics. Eschatology 52-10486

A kind of spiritual biography of the author in which he traces the development of his own thought. No index.

Reviewed by W. P. Lemon

Christian Century 69:1286 N 5 '52 700w

"One must be much more balanced in trying to evaluate Berdyaev than he was in evaluating other philosophers. Perhaps in some things we have not yet reached his insight. Perhaps in others we are limited by our occidental Christian background in understanding this Russian, originally of the Orthodox Church. But all such allowances having been made, it remains that there is a good measure of error here. It also remains that there are here some truths purely contemplated, brilliantly communicated." J. V. Mullaney Commonwealth 56:539 S 5 '52 750w

Manchester Guardian p5 My 5 '52 500w

"For two-thirds of the way, The Beginning and the End is middling-bad Berdyaev. For one thing, it is too summary. For another, there are too many false starts—at any rate, too many starts. . . The air brightens on page 154. . . The pages in which he now elaborates the view that 'creative activity' may really be creative are the best in Berdyaev's book." Rayner Heppenstall

— New Statesman & Nation 43:682 Je 7 '52 500w

Reviewed by John Dillenberger

N Y Times p47 N 23 '52 340w

"From the purely philosophical standpoint the would-be systematic character of the book only accentuates Berdyaev's weaknesses. . . But, of course, exact philosophical definition and analysis are not what the reader looks for in a book by Berdyaev. His theme is, as ever, a Christian and theological one. If anything significant is going to be said about the end of man and the end of history, it must be in a theological context, for it is only in a theological context that any adequate information could be available. From this standpoint The Beginning and the End does indeed sum up what Berdyaev said in many places and in many ways before."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p409 Je 20 '52 550w

Wis Lib Bul 48:211 S '52

BERELSON, BERNARD REUBEN. Content analysis in communication research. 220p $3.50 Free press

808 Communication and traffic 51-13785

"A technical discussion of the uses, problems, and procedures employed in content analysis of written communication, with respect to its function as a technique of communication research. Surveys the applications of content analysis to date, particularly in the social sciences and humanities, notes the major types and categories of analysis, reviews its more important uses, and discusses the nature of qualitative analysis, units and categories of analysis, and such technical matters as sampling, reliability, presentation, and modes of inference." Booklist

"Modern content analysis, in the sense of systematic and quantitative examination of a mass of symbolic material, is so new an addition to the research techniques of the social scientist that until the present time it has not itself been completely treated in systematic fashion in any one book. The literature contains a variety of specialized technical discussions as well as reports of completed analyses. Berelson has now put between covers a careful inventory of both types of document and a discussion of the problems and procedures involved in applying the technique. His book will be welcomed, therefore, both by the initiated and by all those who desire to learn something about the tool. It is a thoughtful, informed, and well-balanced treatment of the whole area." D. B. Truman

+ Am Pol Sci R 46:869 S '52 480w

"With the publication of this book, The Free Press adds another significant item to its growing series of important social science works. Berelson's survey of content analysis procedures is an indispensable handbook for anyone working in the field. It is also a clear and comprehensive survey for social scientists whose interest in content analysis is ancillary. . . There is one criticism the reviewer would like to make of this otherwise excellent book. The book minimizes the problem of validity, and correspondingly, hardly mentions the implications for content analysis of modern communication theory." I. D. Pool

+ Am Soc R 17:515 Ag '52 1000w

"Bernard Berelson has very ably covered the field and performed a valuable service not only for all of us in communication research, but also for social science; for political scientists, historians, and literary analysts might well engage in many kinds of content analysis in translating their craft from impressionistic accounts to social science." William Albig

+ Ann Am Acad 283:197 S '52 450w

Booklist 48:274 My 1 '52

"Content analysis can serve the researcher in communication materials in many ways, and a knowledge of its uses should be especially important to librarians and students of librarianship. For library schools, with their growing emphasis upon research and their assumption of the responsibility for teaching research method, the volume is required reading." Lester Asheim

+ Library Q 22:356 O '52 650w

BERENBLUM, ISAAC. Man against cancer; the story of cancer research. 182p il $3 Johns Hopkins press

616.99 Cancer 52-13023

"In nontechnical language, this account of cancer research by a scientist who has long specialized in the field is intended to help the layman understand what cancer is, how it is diagnosed, and how it is treated, as well as what progress has been made toward conquering it. A glossary of terms is included. Based upon a previous work by the same author, Science versus cancer, published in England in 1946." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 49:83 N 1 '52

Bookmark 12:53 D '52 20w

Kirkus 20:493 Ag 1 '52 170w

"Dr. Berenblum's book is a revision of an earlier popular text. The revision has the merit of compressing into fewer than 200 pages about all that a reader with a good education would like to learn of the progress that has been made in cancer research after millions have been spent in five decades by the greatest laboratories in the world." Waldemar Kaempfert

N Y Times p6 O 26 '52 110w

Spring'd Republican p9D S 28 '52
140w

BERENSON, BERNHARD. Rumor and reflection. 461p $6 Simon and Schuster

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 52-13219

Consists of entries made by the author in his diary from New Year's 1941 to 1945, during part of which time he had to flee from his home of many years in Florence, to escape the Nazis. Index.

"Berenson's journal admits us to the company of a restless, alert, enormously civilized mind. And it is written with an informal elegance which makes the going extremely pleasant." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 190:108 N '52 450w

Booklist 49:103 N '52

Reviewed by F. E. Faverty

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 O 19 '52 350w

"'Rumor and Reflection' is a book that can well be placed beside Amiel's Journal on the library table; a book to be read with deep satisfaction in reflective moments." Thomas Donlon

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 O 9 '52 650w

Kirkus 20:399 J1 1 '52 200w

"This book was Mr. Berenson's bedside book for four years. It should be one of the best bedside books for many more years." Sylvia Sprigge

+ Manchester Guardian p4 J1 29 '52 900w

Reviewed by S. L. Falsion

Nation 175:384 O 25 '52 750w

"The most valuable sections of the book are likely to be those concerned with the war-time situation in Northern Italy; future historians may well find this collection of rumors of considerable interest. And there are also some shrewd observations on the volatile Italian national character, which Berenson knows from some fifty years of loving observation." Joseph Frank

+ New Repub 127:25 O 20 '52 1200w

"This book is interesting on at least two counts. First it is further documentation of the quality, color and edge of Mr. Berenson's mind. Secondly it is a glimpse of the period of four years of World War II in Italy as observed by a singularly seasoned and reflective civilian resident." Irwin Edman

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 O 5 '52 900w

"Like 'Sketch for a Self-Portrait,' also published since the war, 'Rumor and Reflection' is an apologia for a rich and abundant life in which he has been unable to conceal his love of art and his anxiety for the collections and monuments of Italy to which he has given all his waking hours." F. H. Taylor

+ N Y Times p1 S 28 '52 1250w

Reviewed by R. H. Hagan

San Francisco Chronicle p15 O 26 '52 490w

"'Rumor and Reflection' is an informal book. It offers a fascinating insight into the working of the mind of a favorite of the gods who has made an incomparably better use than most of the gods' favors." Robert Pick

+ Sat R 35:26 N 22 '52 360w

"Mr. Berenson is above all a highly civilized writer, in the best sense. He is never angry and seldom frivolous (though at times he is highly amusing), and his enormous erudition, though evident in every paragraph he writes, remains usually implicit rather than explicit." Jocelyn Brooke

+ Spec 189:72 J1 11 '52 700w

"Rumor and Reflection now proves that the sufferings of the war, far from bringing a little asymmetry to the classical proportions of its author's mind, provided the opportunity for the triumph of that disciplined mind over all circumstances. Book does not show a great enhancement or deepening of the spirit, only a superbly regulated and precise mind using its leisure to play freely over all human achievement."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p448 J1 11 '52 900w

BERGENGRUEN, WERNER. Matter of conscience; tr from the German by Norman Cameron. 312p $3 Thames

52-8997

"A tale set in a City State of Renaissance Italy. It recounts the grim test of his people made by a dictator, an enlightened superman, whose rise to power is not set forth. Herr Bergengruen would seem to be more interested in earnest ethical debate than in historical accuracy." Manchester Guardian

Reviewed by Riley Hughes

Cath World 175:312 J1 '52 350w

"When one has registered disappointment with this novel and underscored its defects, something still remains to be said for Werner Bergengruen and the impression he leaves of a large, free and humane spirit. In a time of casual despair and gratuitous affirmation, he exhibits a kind of dignity and wisdom which are never easily bought: dignity and wisdom which make this novel—whatever its literary insufficiency—truly consequential. Even in so faltering an execution, one can detect, however remotely, the noble design." Richard Hayes

+ Commonweal 56:101 My 2 '52 550w

Kirkus 20:134 F 15 '52 190w

"A singular combination of the crime thriller with the rhetorical themes of man's imperfection and love's multiform nature. In a heavily competent plot the characters tend to become puppets of the author's intense zeal for justice. A few grotesques provide the dark side of comic relief." H. I. A. Fausset

Manchester Guardian p4 Mr 14 '52 100w

"Herr Bergengruen's narrative is weak; disquisitions—on youth, self-deception, the innumerable forms of love and the struggle between conscience and authority—are superb. If the rest of this novel was equal to these passages, this would be a great book, rather than a brilliant and profoundly moving one." John Raymond

+ New Statesman & Nation 43:593 My 17 '52 240w

"Mr. Bergengruen has chosen an absorbing, if not properly novelistic technique of letting us share his insight into the terrible ambiguity of the human spirit." Frederic Morton

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ap 27 '52 600w

"My one fear about 'A Matter of Conscience' is that it will quietly pass unnoticed because it does not fit any of the contemporary stereotypes.

Mr. Bergengruen writes with the sober restraint of an eighteenth-century French novelist. His main interest is not with exciting adventures but with what goes on inside that tormented entity, the human soul. Yet here again he parts company with most contemporary novelists. He refuses to reduce individuality to a succession of psychological states. His characters, for all their moods and subtle self-deception, have a central core of reality which can and sometimes does recall them to a sense of moral freedom and responsibility." Chad Walsh

N Y Times p4 Ap 20 '52 550w

New Yorker 28:134 My 24 '52 140w

"A taut tale, almost unbearably packed with suspense. . . This fine book might well be called a novel about the unpardonable sin—the sin Man commits when he 'strives to raise himself above the human and be like God.' If it is that, and it is fair to say it is, then it is also peculiarly a novel for our times." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 Ag 14 '52 750w

"This historical novel is a slow, tense story of a murder committed in a small Renaissance town, with time and leisure for long discussions on questions of jurisprudence and morality and sovereignty; a detective story with deep and disturbing metaphysical implications. It is the work of a master writer, one of the most impressive to have come from a modern German novelist." Serge Hughes

+ Sat R 35:22 Je 7 '52 500w

"I submit that this novel is a piece of pretentiousness—untidy, wrong in its taste, wrong

BERGENGRUEN, WERNER—Continued
in its humour—and an example of the exuberant folly of blurb-writers." Kate O'Brien

— Spec 188:556 Ap 25 '52 600w

Time 59:116 My 12 '52 550w

"The book may be read as an exciting tale of detection, very good in that kind; but as a study of the problems that face any Government attempting to keep order among the fallen children of Eve it is a penetrating allegory, worthy of profound attention."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p217 Mr 28 '52 240w

EERGER, ELMER. Partisan history of Judaism; foreword by Paul Hutchinson. 142p $3 Devin-Adair

296 Jews—History. Jews—Religion 51-14830

"A rabbi of the Reform wing of Judaism, Elmer Berger is also executive director of the American Council for Judaism, the non-Zionist organization of American Jewry. In this brief book he states the case of the non-Zionist Jew clearly and with an emphasis which he admits is polemical. Through the instrument of modern scholasticism he separates the history of his people from what he regards as nationalistic folklore, and transplants it to what he considers realistic probability." N Y Times

"Whatever the book's worth may be for the purposes of advocates of the anti-Zionist cause who need historical support for their stand, it is an interesting psychological document. It evidences the kind and intensity of feeling, as well as the rationalizations, that characterize many Jewish liberals in their opposition to their Zionist coreligionists. There may be regret that Berger is not better versed in dynamic social psychology, because he could have then penned a more effective polemic." Melville Jacobs

Ann Am Acad 283:235 S '52 450w

"Admittedly partisan in his viewpoint, Rabbi Berger is also persuasive and never dull in his writing." Seymour Korman

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p17 Mr 16 '52 280w

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 69:313 Mr 12 '52 170w

"On the whole, the book is a vigorous polemic. As such, it deserves to be read and discussed widely, so that a solution of the question presented may be enhanced on the level which the gravity of the problem merits." S. M. Blinken

Churchman 166:16 Ap 15 '52 200w

Reviewed by Thomas Sugrue

+ N Y Times p6 Ja 27 '52 1000w

"A 'partisan' history of Judaism, whether written by an anti-Zionist or a Zionist, may be a debater's brief, but it cannot be read as history." M. R. Konvitz

Sat R 35:36 Ap 12 '52 500w

BERGER, MORROE. Equality by statute; legal controls over group discrimination; with a foreword by Robert M. MacIver. 238p $3.25 Columbia univ. press

323.41 Civil rights. U.S.—Race question 52-10646

"For the first time, in this country, the question of what law can and cannot do, should and should not attempt to do, toward the reduction or abolition of intergroup discrimination has become a matter of practical importance. . . State after state, responsive to the movement, has been passing laws to give it further impetus. . . What is the impact of these new laws? How far have they succeeded? How far can they be expected to succeed? In this book Morroe Berger reviews the evidences. He offers a conspectus of the judicial and legal components of a movement that, in ways many of our people hardly dream of, is of primary significance for the well-being of this country and for its place in world history." (Condensed from Foreword) List of cases. Index.

"The book constitutes a significant analysis but does not offer, and does not pretend to offer, the final word on the subject." C. B. Swisher

+ Ann Am Acad 284:181 N '52 460w

Booklist 48:351 Jl 1 '52

Reviewed by James O'Gara
Commonweal 56:590 S 19 '52 430w

"Although written in rather dry style book may be in demand in libraries with interest in minority problems." H. H. Bernt
Library J 77:1304 Ag '52 80w

"By far the most valuable portions of the book are those dealing with the pioneering New York State Commission Against Discrimination, set up in the Ives-Quinn bill sponsored by Governor Dewey." C. W. W.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p26 S 14 '52 280w

Sat R 35:33 D 27 '52 140w

School & Society 75:399 Je 21 '52 10w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:294 S '52 210w

BERNADOTTE AF WISBORG, FOLKE, greve.

To Jerusalem; tr. from the Swedish by Joan Bulman. 280p $4.50 British bk. centre

956.94 Palestine—Politics and government [A52-2131]

"Count Bernadotte dictated a running chronicle of his ill-fated expedition to Palestine to mediate on behalf of the United Nations in the Jewish-Arab war. He carried the story to Sept. 9, 1948, a week before he was assassinated. His chief of staff, who saw the murder, winds up the account." Chicago Sunday Tribune

"This strictly documentary book totals 280 pages, important as a statement by a great and able martyr to peace." L. T. Heron

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 S 28 '52 50w

"'To Jerusalem' contains the record of events, impressions, hopes, and disappointments which Bernadotte dictated day by day to his secretary. They are the words of an honorable, upright, and peace-seeking man, who undertook a difficult and essentially thankless job in the hope of further serving mankind. They are a fitting epilogue to a long career of public-spirited activity." J. G. Harrison

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 S 16 '52 480w

Reviewed by A. H. Uhl

New Repub 127:20 N 24 '52 380w

"Dictated without literary artifice in airplanes and hotel rooms, the memoirs of the assassinated United Nations Mediator are chiefly notable for what they reveal of the robust Bernadotte mind, method and personality." Hal Lehrman

+ N Y Times p16 O 5 '52 480w

San Francisco Chronicle p28 N 9 '52 110w

BERNAYS, EDWARD L. Public relations. 374p

$5 Univ. of Okla. press

301.152 [301.154] Publicity 51-1707

"An introduction to the profession of public relations by one of its most influential practitioners. His approach is historical with no attempt made to describe the mechanics involved, but the basic principles are so clearly explained that they may be readily applied to particular cases. The first section traces development of this social science from earliest times through 'the public be damned' era to the present 'the public be informed' philosophy. The second part describes the author's notable promotional campaigns and includes chapters on related topics such as attitude poll taking." Library J

Reviewed by H. L. Childs

Ann Am Acad 283:198 S '52 300w

Booklist 48:290 My 15 '52

Bookmark 11:205 Je '52 40w

"In a sense, Mr. Bernays' book is a sociological study. It is equally a manual of practical advice and philosophy for management, labor, professions, schools—every group to which it is important to do the right thing and get along with the neighbors." L. T. Heron

Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 My 25 '52 90w

"Essential for all libraries." E. T. Smith
+ Library J 77:791 My 1 '52 130w

"Mr. Bernays' volume is admittedly not a definitive work or an example of scholarship in the field. It is, however, an interesting compilation of his views and an analysis of some of the public-relations problems which he has tackled with success." E. K. Moss

+ Management R 41:706 O '52 900w

"'Public Relations' as a book has one unhappy weakness. Its first part, apparently written with this book in mind, is a carefully knit history of public relations. The second part is a collection of miscellaneous articles and lectures, not always well related to each other in the first part. One value of the second part, however, is its exposition of the value of public relations to education, philanthropy, and government. In spite of its structural weakness, however, 'Public Relations' is an excellent description of what sound public relations practice is and what it could be." C. B. Larrabee

+ — Sat R 35:15 Ag 30 '52 900w

BERNHEIMER, RICHARD. Wild men in the middle ages; a study in art, sentiment, and demonology. 224p il $4 Harvard univ. press

398.21 [398.4] Wild men. Middle ages
52-5024

A scholarly study of a recurring figure in medieval art, literature, mythology and folklore, the "wild man", a creature "naked and covered with hair, a curious compound of human and animal traits."

Reviewed by Dorothy Sinclair

Library J 77:887 My 15 '52 130w

"Mr. Bernheimer's book is complete, many-faceted and thorough, with sources running from Spencer to the Arab philosophers, from Isaiah to the June 18, 1938, issue of The New Yorker. . . Only when it comes to origins does it fail to probe deeply." T. C. Chubb

+ — N Y Times p12 My 11 '52 400w

"This is an excellent book. It is learned, instructive, entertaining, and well-written." K. M. Setton

+ Sat R 35:12 Ag 16 '52 650w

"The work is certain to be of interest to a variety of readers because of the many subjects—art, literature, folklore, primitive myth and ritual—to name only the more important, on which it impinges."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:243 S '52 220w

BERNSTEIN, ALEC (ALEXANDER BARON, pseud). With hope, farewell. 256p $3 Washburn

[52-44813]

Pictures life in London's East End before and after World war II. The hero is the son of Jewish parents, born in England, who was a fighter pilot in the war, and his life is traced from childhood to the time when his wife lost her first baby. Altho Mark had become a person of gloom, his wife's courage and a doctor's advice held a gleam of hope.

"Well written and sturdy story-telling, but lacks human, heroic qualities inherent in theme. No stereotyped characters and men vivid; women not so successful. Continuity marred by episodic structure." Karl Brown

+ — Library J 77:1900 N 1 '52 50w

Reviewed by Paul Bloomfield

Manchester Guardian p4 Ap 18 '52 60w

"Warming, entertaining, full of unquestionable reality; but it rarely succeeds in suggesting more than it says." G. D. Painter

+ — New Statesman & Nation 43:532 My 3 '52 250w

"The climax is dramatically charged and admirably eloquent, illuminating a universal faith in terms both meaningful and realistic. Perhaps it may not appear much of a recommendation to ask a reader to peruse almost three-fourths of a book before reaching its raison d'être. But in this case it's more than worth it." R. D. Loomis

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p23 N 16 '52 410w

"All this is rather surprising, coming from a writer of such genuine accomplishment as Mr. Baron. There are moments when he uses his prose with the feeling and finesse he displayed in his first book. But these moments are few and hardly worth waiting for." John Barkham

N Y Times p5 O 5 '52 450w

"The book ends on a note of good-fellowship and reassurance that is not at all convincing, since nothing in the story has prepared us for it; the author seems persuaded that all he has to do to make things better is to say that they will be better."

New Yorker 28:177 O 18 '52 60w

"A disappointment because it deals so ineffectually with the two or three fundamental situations he has chosen to examine." Nathan Rothman

Sat R 35:23 O 25 '52 280w

"Earnestly subdued and level-toned, but thin in imaginative substance and halting in style, this is not the best that Mr. Baron can do." R. D. Charques

+ — Spec 188:526 Ap 18 '52 60w

Springf'd Republican p9C N 2 '52 60w

"This is quite a good description of the victory of character over circumstances."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p293 My 2 '52 70w

BERQUIST, GRACE. Speckles goes to school; pictures by Kathleen Elgin. 46p $1.50 Abingdon-Cokesbury

52-2951

Easy-to-read book, in which the story is about a "new boy" at school who overcame this handicap by taking his pet to school for the other children to see. The pet was a setting hen and her eggs were hatched when all could observe.

Booklist 49:18 S 1 '52

Horn Bk 28:336 O '52 50w

"Provides some first hand knowledge about eggs and chickens. The simple, steady text makes the book a good first reader as well."

+ Kirkus 20:367 J1 1 '52 110w

"While not an outstanding book, this easily read story will be a welcome addition to school and public libraries in need of simple reading material." H. E. Walker

+ Library J 77:1410 S 1 '52 40w

BERRIEN, FREDERICK KENNETH. Comments and cases on human relations. 500p $4.50 Harper

301.15 Psychology, Applied 51-10242

"Provides a practical application of the increasingly popular 'case method' for undergraduate and adult education courses concerned with human relations. Part I develops a consistent picture of human relations problems around the theme of the need for social harmony and self-actualization. It covers the role of clear communication in human relations, motives, effects of group codes and social skills, attitudes, and techniques useful in their reeducation, and functions and roles of leaders in both democratic and authoritarian societies. Part II presents 28 true-life cases involving typical disturbances in interpersonal relations. Several examples from industry are cited." Management R

"Excellent volume."

+ Management R 41:138 F '52 80w

"The book is a good start in the right direction. The author's points of view on democratic forces in society are excellent. The ultimate objectives are those held by most of us working in the social sciences today." W. H. Cooke

BERRIEN, F. K.—Continued

+ Social Educ 15:400 D '51 500w

"Those teachers of social studies who have been questioning the traditional stereotypes of instructional procedure should begin the reading of this book with the Appendix. To this reviewer, the Instructor's Appendix is the most interesting as well as the most controversial part of the text. Teachers of social studies who hope to compete with extra-curricular programs in the formation of conduct attitudes will find suggestions for experimentation in this appendix." J. W. Carr

+ Social Studies 43:220 My '52 250w

"Recommended for larger libraries."

+ Wis Lib Bul 47:158 Je '51

BERRILL, NORMAN JOHN. Journey into wonder; il. by the author. 338p $4 Dodd 574 Discoveries (in geography). Natural history 52-10162

Story of man's explorations of the ocean, written from the point of view of natural history. The author is a marine biologist, who was born in England, and is now a professor at McGill University. Index.

Booklist 49:84 N 1 '52

Bookmark 12:77 Ja '53 30w

"This gracefully written work is enhanced by the bold illustrations from the author's pen. It will interest the naturalist and the traveller; its warmth and air of excitement will interest the armchair layman as well." John Oughton

+ Canadian Forum 32:212 D '52 170w

Reviewed by W. M. Krogman

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 O 5 '52 450w

"By profession the author is professor of zoology at McGill University. As an avocation he indulges that half-philosophical, half-poetic contemplation of the living world which not all professionals are capable of. And in the present book he has found a happy opportunity to combine wide knowledge with the sense of wonder." J. W. Krutch

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 O 5 '52 700w

"As a naturalist, and especially as a marine biologist, Mr. Berrill gives a fresh and illuminating perspective to the published accounts of and by the explorers, freebooters, naturalists and scientists who have investigated the American Continents, some of the islands off their coasts, Antarctica and the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans during the past 500 years." Thomas Foster

+ N Y Times p22 S 28 '52 450w

San Francisco Chronicle p24 N 30 '52 250w

BERRISFORD, JUDITH MARY. Sue's circus horse; il. by Leslie Atkinson. 180p $2.50 Dodd 52-7332

Sue, an English girl, bought a white Arab mare that had been trained for the circus. Her many adventures from then on were usually centered on the beautiful Ballita.

Booklist 48:252 Ap 1 '52

Reviewed by E. C. Ince

Christian Science Monitor p14 Ap 3 '52 210w

"The characters are alive and entertaining. . . Recommended for girls 10-14." V. A. Russell

+ Library J 77:726 Ap 15 '52 80w

"Girls will find many English touches that probably could not have been edited away for Americans, and they will consider it all fairly impossible. Yet the main idea of owning a real circus horse will prove irresistible to many who are still absorbed in horse stories. And that group of specialists already know the English horsey world fairly well." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Mr 16 '52 130w

"To American grown-ups the tone of Miss Berrisford's story is rather too crumpety, but for 10-year-olds the language and Mr. Trent's European attitude toward performing for money are less important than Ballita's cleverness. To horse-story devotees this narrative and its drawings of jodhpured young riders will simply be 'wizard.'" S. C. Gross

N Y Times p22 Ap 13 '52 130w

Sat R 35:48 Mr 22 '52 120w

BERRY, ERICK, pseud. See Best, A. C.

BERSON, FRED. After the Big House; the adventures of a parole officer. 238p $3 Crown
364.6 Probation system 52-5682

Adventures of a former state parole officer, whose cases were from New York's lower East Side.

Kirkus 20:174 Mr 1 '52 140w

"All of Mr. Berson's twenty-two cases are interesting from start to finish, and very easy reading." E. L. Acken

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p21 S 14 '52 310w

"The trouble with Mr. Berson's narrative is its superficiality. Effective parole aims at rehabilitating the released criminal in addition to protecting society from him. If the author had any success at rehabilitation, it is hardly discernible here. He seems to have spent most of his time hustling his charges back into jail. In his preface, he explains that names and addresses in the book are fictitious. Some of his exploits have the same quality. But they make for lively reading just the same." Emanuel Perlmutter

N Y Times p20 Je 1 '52 280w

"The public is entitled to a responsibly written, balanced volume of interesting case histories of former convicts who have met their parole obligation with varying degrees of success or failure. Those who adjust to society and those who do not should be included in something like a proportion honestly reflecting the adequacy of the system. Mr. Berson's book fails completely to meet this requirement." Frank O'Leary

— Sat R 35:16 Ag 30 '52 330w

BERSTL, JULIUS. The tentmaker; a novel based on the life of Saint Paul; tr. from the German by Clarissa Graves. 312p $3.50 Rinehart

Paul, Saint—Fiction

52-5558

Portrayal in novel form of Saul of Tarsus, from the time he is sixteen up to his awakening on the road to Damascus. A second volume will deal with his later life.

Booklist 48:247 Ap 1 '52

"Brilliantly conceived story."

+ Bookmark 11:158 Ap '52 40w

"This is very interesting, tho I think none of it sheds any new or blinding light. My usual difficulty with biblical novels is that they cannot compete with the Bible. My favorite scene in the book concerns not Paul but Mary. It is Berstl's description of her as she appears among the Christian worshippers; here he really reconstructs how she may well have felt about her son. Indeed, I have no quarrel with the author at any point, but, as I say, he seems to me at his very best in sketching in his varied backgrounds. Like every good novelist, he makes one thankful for the art of fiction." Edward Wagenknecht

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Ap 6 '52 370w

Reviewed by F. D. Elmer

Christian Century 69:780 Jl 2 '52 550w

Reviewed by G. F. Taylor

Churchman 166:12 Ag '52 150w

Kirkus 20:45 Ja 15 '52 240w

"Recommended as an absorbing study of a troubled character." R. P. Tubby
+ Library J 77:432 Mr 1 '52 70w

Reviewed by Rose Feld
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 Ap 20 '52 650w

"Mr. Berstl, a successful novelist and playwright who has been a member of the B. B. C. staff for the past eight years, has given us an intimate and colorful picture of time and place. More important, he has presented a dramatic and sensitive study of one of history's most difficult characters." F. G. S.
+ N Y Times p16 Ap 13 '52 410w

"Mr. Berstl is an accomplished writer, and 'The Tentmaker' shows an immediate stamp of authority. It has been admired by many in England and will surely find admirers here. In qualified ways, I am one of them. Yet my reservations have some bearing on a fundamental problem in books of this type. . . I find a contradiction in Mr. Berstl's approach. It confuses the 'psychological-realistic' with the elements of the 'spiritual-miraculous.'" Edmund Fuller
Sat R 35:32 Ap 19 '52 600w

BERTOCCI, PETER ANTHONY. Introduction to the philosophy of religion. 565p $6.35; to schools $4.75 Prentice-Hall

201 Religion—Philosophy 51-14584

"This book is written more for students who come through religion to philosophy than for those who come through philosophy to religion. The religious life is taken for granted, and the aim is to help students analyze religious problems philosophically. Furthermore, the aim is to understand religion in terms of the most modern philosophy. Hence this is a most useful text for American colleges and in general for students of religion who have no previous philosophical training." J Philos

Christian Century 69:130 Ja 30 '52 100w

"The systematic discussions of the central problems, the well-selected references and guides to reading and questioning are an excellent and conscientious introduction to philosophical thinking."

+ J Philos 49:169 F 28 '52 90w

BERTRAND, HENRI GRATIEN, comte. Napoleon at St. Helena; the journals of General Bertrand from January to May of 1821, deciphered and annotated by Paul Fleuriot de Langle; tr. from the French by Frances Hume. 318p $3.75 Doubleday

B or 92 Napoleon I, emperor of the French 52-5547

General Bertrand was Napoleon's Grand Marshal of the Palace during his six years of exile on St. Helena. During these years Bertrand kept a diary, a day by day record of his activities and conversations with the Emperor. This volume contains the diary from January to May 1821.

Booklist 48:295 My 15 '52

"Taken as a whole, Bertrand's journals will not force a reinterpretation of the man, but they are lively and authentic reporting and they add information on some restricted questions." R. M. Brace

Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 My 11 '52 320w

Christian Century 69:326 Ag 13 '52 170w

Kirkus 20:61 Je 15 '52 180w

"Fine translation, with copious notes. Small libraries may hesitate to purchase because of its limited interest—but it is an essential purchase for all Napoleonic collections, and recommended for purchase wherever possible." E. M. Lilley
+ Library J 77:587 Ap 1 '52 130w

"As long as the jealous Olympians still lived, those crowned heads of Europe who condemned the Son of the Revolution to his lonely rock, there was adequate motive for suppressing this journal. Today its publication is long overdue and should be welcome. As an historical record it is merely corroborative and adds nothing important to what was already known about a despot who was corrupted by power a century and a half ago. But it helps to illuminate the mysterious compulsions that make honest and unselfish men serve selfish and dishonest masters and that is still a live issue." Geoffrey Bruun

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ap 27 '52 900w

"It is a book for the psychologist and the historian. Obviously it is also one for the student of Napoleon Bonaparte, and, I would think, for the general reader." T. C. Chubb
+ N Y Times p7 Ap 27 '52 750w

"The diary might well stand among other works on the history of medicine for it contains daily accounts of Napoleon's diet, temperature fluctuations and medical treatment. It will serve the future biographers of Napoleon well. But readability is the least quality of Bertrand's efforts, so the lay historian will not be held in thrall by the small new light shed on the emperor." B. B.

San Francisco Chronicle p13 Ag 10 '52 220w

Time 59:112 My 19 '52 900w

BERTRAND, LOUIS. History of Spain; pt I, From the Visigoths to the death of Philip II, by Louis Bertrand, pt II, From the death of Philip II to 1945, by Charles Petrie, bt. 2d ed rev 432p maps $6 Macmillan

946 Spain—History 52-9640

"Two chapters have been omitted from Part I of this concise one-volume history, but Part II is extended to cover the history of Spain through World War II." Booklist

Booklist 48:380 Jl 15 '52

"Despite flagrant lapses in accuracy and objectivity, 'The History of Spain' is a fresh approach to the story of one of the world's most interesting and rewarding countries." J. G. Harrison

+ — Christian Science Monitor p13 Je 2 '52 350w

"The book is consciously slanted against the tendency of British and American authors to depreciate the great contributions made by Spaniards to the common stock of our civilization. It also inclines to a defense of the present regime in Spain." G. F. Whicher

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ag 31 '52 70w

BESSELIEVRE, EDMUND BULKLEY. Industrial waste treatment. 391p il $7 McGraw

628.5 Factory and trade waste 51-12586

"Disposal of industrial wastes so that they do not pollute streams or otherwise menace health is now required by law in many jurisdictions and is considered an obligation upon responsible management everywhere. This book is addressed to executives and industrial engineers. It covers both the general principles and techniques of waste disposal and particular methods for specific kinds of waste. Economic factors also are discussed. Each chapter is accompanied by a bibliography, and federal and state laws are outlined in an appendix. The author is associated with the Dorr Company." (Library J) Indexes.

"Both management and technical men troubled with industrial waste problems will find this book helpful. It is easy, interesting reading, particularly the first 50 pages." H. R. Murdock

+ Chem & Eng N 30:4558 O 27 '52 130w

Chem Eng 59:363 F '52 20w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 77:1515 S 15 '52 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 37:72 S '52

BEST, MRS ALLENA (CHAMPLIN). Sybil Ludington's ride; written and il. by Erick Berry [pseud]. 128p $2.50 Viking 52-8188

Based on an actual episode in the Revolutionary war, this is a story for grades five to eight. Sybil Ludington and her younger sister Ricky played important parts in the war in their section of York Colony, especially Sybil who rode thirty miles one stormy night to rouse the colonists after the burning of Danbury.

Booklist 48:268 Ap 15 '52

Bookmark 11:186 My '52

"The two sisters' patriotic activities as they hide live stock and outwit local marauders and thieves are full of interest, as is the author's vivid picture of that dramatic period. Young readers will admire the girls and love their mischievous and playful colt." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 Ap 27 '52 170w

Reviewed by E. C. Ince

Christian Science Monitor p9 My 15 '52 130w

"This fictionalized account of a real event carries in its lively narrative the strong feeling of authenticity that comes from careful study." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 28:173 Je '52 130w

Kirkus 20:76 F 1 '52 180w

"Here are humor, good characterization, and, basically, a true story." L. R. Markey

+ Library J 77:908 My 15 '52 100w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 My 25 '52 210w

"Miss Berry is to be congratulated for finding a fresh source of unhackneyed material in little-known regional history. Fact-founded adventures like this one always seem a little more satisfying than purely fictional ones." N. B. Baker

+ N Y Times p32 Ap 6 '52 180w

Reviewed by M. G. Davis

Sat R 35:55 My 10 '52 120w

BEST science fiction stories: 1952; ed. and with an introd. by Everett F. Bleiler and T. E. Dikty. (Fell's science fiction lib) 288p $2.95 Fell

Short stories—Collections (49-10461)

Contents: The other side, by Walter Kubi-lus; Of time and Third avenue, by Alfred Bester; The marching morons, by Cyril Kornbluth; A peculiar people, by Betsy Curtis; Extending the holdings, by David Grinnell; The tourist trade, by Wilson Tucker; The two shadows, by W. F. Temple; Balance, by John Christopher; Brightness falls from the air, by Idris Seabright; Witch war, by Richard Matheson; At no extra cost, by Peter Phillips; Nine-finger Jack, by Anthony Boucher; Appointment in tomorrow, by Fritz Leiber; The rats, by Arthur Porges; Men of the ten books, by Jack Vance; Generation of Noah, by William Tenn; Dark interlude, by Mack Reynolds and Fredric Brown; The pedestrian, by Ray Bradbury.

"This year's volume is less admirable than others in its ponderous and irrelevant introduction and in the tasteless (if mercifully brief) blurbs before each story; but in the quality of the eighteen stories selected, it's quite possibly the best in the series to date." H. H. Holmes

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p34 O 12 '52 200w

"The s-f reader will find these stories variously appealing, but he will find few clichés. An excellent and erudite introduction completes what is certainly Messrs. Bleiler and Dikty's best anthology to date." Villiers Gerson

+ N Y Times p29 O 12 '52 200w

Reviewed by Don Fabun

San Francisco Chronicle p20 O 12 '52 210w

Reviewed by Fletcher Pratt

Sat R 35:43 O 18 '52 20w

BESTERMAN, THEODORE. UNESCO: peace in the minds of men. 132p il $2.50 Praeger 060 United nations educational, scientific and cultural organization 51-13461

"A brief account of Unesco's origin, accomplishments, aims and difficulties, by a former head of the organization's Department for Exchange of Information. In addition to a select general bibliography, a selected list of documents and publications is provided at the end of each chapter. The Appendix contains the Constitution of Unesco." Am Pol Sci R

Am Pol Sci R 45:923 S '51 50w

"On the correct assumption that UNESCO should be better understood by the public, Mr. Besterman has detailed his account of its aims and accomplishments in a manner that will be found both readable and informative to the general reader. The book embodies the observations of a man who from 1946 to 1949 held a high position in the organization as head of the Department for the Exchange of Information; it makes no pretense of scholarly research into documentary materials." Norman Hill

+ Ann Am Acad 279:186 Ja '52 360w

Booklist 48:59 O 15 '51

Current Hist 22:35 Ja '52 190w

Foreign Affairs 30:497 Ap '52 10w

Reviewed by Ruth Savord

Library J 77:213 F 1 '52 80w

School & Society 75:237 Ap 12 '52 30w

"The bibliographies are plentiful and the Unesco constitution is given in full. A detailed organization chart, a chronological table, and more representative photographs would have been desirable adjuncts to this enlightening book." W. W. Brickman

+ School & Society 76:344 N 29 '52 150w

BESTON, HENRY. Fairy tales; il. by Fritz Kredel. 353p $5 Aladdin 52-12601

Fairy tales

52-12601

A new edition with revised text of these famous fairy tales. Contains stories from The Firelight Fairy Book, and The Starlight Wonder Book. Contents: The shepherd of clouds; The master mariner; The adventures of Florian; Prince Sneeze; The river of Lantern Land; The seller of dreams; The wonderful tune; Aileel and Alilinda; The lost half-hour; The city of the winter sleep; The invisible baby; The palace of the night; Birdling, The two millers; The snowman; The brave grenadier; The city under the sea; The king of the wood; Diggory.

Booklist 49:76 O 15 '52

Reviewed by Elizabeth Yates

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 O 30 '52 250w

"Here are richness and variety, wonder, romance, fresh dragons to slay and new forms of invention born of a lively imagination and sheer joy in life on sea or land—and a good writer." A. C. Moore

+ Horn Bk 28:311 O '52 240w

Horn Bk 28:420 D '52 100w

Kirkus 20:546 S 1 '52 30w

Reviewed by E. W. Turpin

Library J 77:1820 O 15 '52 80w

"The stories have the quality which assures the child that for the time being, this dashing-ly created world of the Adamant Mountains is true. They have fine variety to delight children under twelve, both boys and girls." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 S 7 '52 360w

"In format the book is most satisfactory. It has a look of permanence. It is not too 'dressy.' We do not like the color printing in the frontispiece—but that is a small matter in comparison with the great value of the book itself. No home or school or public library can afford to be without it. Five dollars is really a small price to pay for it. It will undoubtedly be handed on from generation to generation."

+ Sat R 35:75 N 15 '52 120w

BETZ, BETTY. Betty Betz in teen Asia; 11. by [the author]. 172p $2.75 Random house 950 [915] Children in Asia. Asia—Description and travel 51-14390
An account of the author's travels visiting teen-agers in China, Japan, Siam, India, and the Philippines, Syria and Turkey. Illustrated by the author.

"This is a sorry comment on the American tourist."

— Kirkus 19:583 O 1 '51 180w

"Book is clever and outstanding. . . Chatty, very readable, yet serious in fundamental thinking and observations. Should have wide appeal and fill an important need. Highly recommended." R. C. Buell

+ Library J 76:2125 D 15 '51 80w

"The book does give some surprising glimpses of groups or clubs or charities or parties in all these lands. But such incidents as the destructive riot at the Hong Kong party and a few surprising conversations honestly reported show the uselessness of such a tour, either for creating real understanding at the moment or for good reporting. Neither 'Teen Asia' nor 'Teen America' is well served by such a book. But due to her wide following it will have wide reading." L. S. Bechtel

— N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ja 13 '52 200w

"Superficial as the book is, however, it has a point. Miss Betz' popularity among the bobby-soxers is so wide that her breezy goodwill, her pleas for tolerance and understanding, may well foster a larger viewpoint among young people who had hitherto given little thought to their contemporaries in other countries." E. L. E.

N Y Times p13 D 30 '51 200w

BEVAN, ANEURIN. In place of fear. 213p $3 Simon & Schuster

320.942 [342.42] Great Britain—Politics and government. Socialism in Great Britain 52-9313

The author, one of Britain's leading Socialist statesmen, here presents his political, social and economic aims and beliefs.

Booklist 48:290 My 15 '52

Canadian Forum 32:169 N '52 1250w

"The book is poorly written and even more poorly organized. Its arguments are frequently slipshod, and many of the facts from which they are deduced are open to question. Yet the book has an uncanny ability to create a climate of opinion for which not only the British people, but men everywhere, long." H. J. Morgenthau

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 My 4 '52 400w

"It is a disappointing book in the sense that, although it is prolific with challenging ideas, it is not well written. This comes as a surprise to anyone who has had the excitement of listening to Mr. Bevan's dynamic speeches over the past years of his rise to fame. Some of Mr. Bevan's arguments on paper seem faulty and obscure compared with the crisp and witty oratory with which he moves mass labor meetings into ecstatic fervor. After Winston Churchill, Mr. Bevan is the outstanding political speaker in Britain today. But whatever may be the criticisms of Mr. Bevan's book, there is no sense in dismissing it lightly." Peter Lyne

— Christian Science Monitor p9 Ap 29 '52 950w

Reviewed by Douglas Hyde

Commonweal 56:87 My 2 '52 1800w

Foreign Affairs 31:164 O '52 50w

"To those Britons and Americans who think of him as a demagogic careerist, it will come as a revelation. In a period characterized by the intellectual poverty of its political leadership, Bevan stands immense. But those who have glimpsed already beyond his fascinating, turbulent exterior will, in many cases, find disappointments." Paul Niven

+ Nation 174:431 My 3 '52 1450w

"In Place of Fear shows that Bevan may be a first-class orator or polemical journalist, but the task of carrying a sustained argument through the length of a book is not his forte." T. R. Fyvel

+ New Repub 126:18 Ap 28 '52 1100w

Reviewed by Kingsley Martin

New Statesman & Nation 43:392 Ap 5 '52 1350w

"Mr. Bevan appears to me to be at his warped worst in his chapter on 'World Leadership.' He is a good deal better when he is discussing the compulsory health service he fathered in Britain. But he is at his best, when he is arguing, often eloquently, for the world-wide social amelioration which—as a good many other people also realize—it is in the best long-range interests of the United States as well as of Britain to secure." Robert Waithman

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 My 4 '52 1350w

"Mr. Bevan has a good deal to say, much of it sensible and all of it interesting, about his own pet reform, the National Health Service. The American Medical Association might do worse than study it and try to find out what in the scheme is not nonsense. For a great deal of this book is sensible and, what is odder, is not in fact very radical. There is a passion for equality, an assumption that it will cure most evils, a hatred of the economically privileged and a real feeling for the poor. But on the greatest issue of the moment one is reminded, again and again, of the studious boy reading 'The Iron Heel' with the slag heaps of the Rhondra around him to underline the lesson." D. W. Brogan

+ N Y Times p1 My 4 '52 2450w

New Yorker 28:140 My 24 '52 180w

Sat R 35:20 My 17 '52 500w

"It is impossible to enter into rational argument with a man who continually indulges in loose thinking of this order—who simply does not care into what absurdities and disasters his policy may be leading him. But on the other hand it is impossible to ignore him. His emotional violence and his clear realisation that the continual movement to the left within the Labour Party is a powerful trend to be exploited make him formidable—but not as an intellectual. On the intellectual side he is always vulnerable. . . But an education devoted to the search for power and not to the search for truth is twisted from the start. Mr. Bevan can be forgiven the gaps in his knowledge, but not his passionate persistence in errors of judgment." Walter Taplin

Spec 188:444 Ap 4 '52 800w

Springf'd Republican p10C My 4 '52 500w

"In Place of Fear is not to be recommended as 'a good book.' It can scarcely be recommended as a readable book. Its slapdash construction, its stiff and pretentious paragraphs, mark both the haste and the difficulty of its writing. But it is, none the less, a significant and important book. No one will write quite the same book as Mr. Bevan has written at this point in mankind's history. Whatever the future holds for the world, whether we are about to move into an age of general benevolence or into a period of mutual destruction, In Place of Fear will rank as one of the documents of our time. It will be examined by historians either as a summary of fulfilled hopes or as an epitaph on their destruction."

Times [London] Lit Sup p229 Ap 4 '52 3000w

BEYLE, MARIE HENRI (STENDHAL, pseud). Lamiel; tr. and with an introd. by T. W. Earp. 256p $2 New directions

52-10026

Stendhal's last novel relates the adventures of the founding Lamiel, brought up by foster parents to be a soul dedicated to God. Instead, the girl takes matters in her own hands when she is in her teens, and goes to Paris in pursuit of love.

Reviewed by Paul Engle

Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 Je 15 '52 130w

BEYLE, M. H. S.—Continued

"An excellent picture of one phase of French life in the early 19th century." H. L. Roth
+ Library J 77:895 My 15 '52 80w

"It is good to have 'Lamiel' available, inexpensively, in a crisp version by T. W. Earp, who has also supplied a useful preface. It was Stendhal's one attempt to write a popular novel, although judging by what he intended it is not very clear how it was intended to be popular. . . The provincial scenes are brilliant and very funny. The rest was simply not written, although to the Stendhal enthusiast even his notes about what he would have done will have their great importance."

+ Nation 175:336 O 11 '52 220w

Reviewed by Isaac Rosenfeld

New Repub 127:20 Ag 25 '52 1450w

New Yorker 28:89 Ag 16 '52 110w

"The real world is there, but is Lamiel a real novel? It has all the marks of Stendhal's particular brand of greatness. . . But Lamiel is not a masterpiece, for the same reason that a human skeleton is not a human being. It is a book that Stendhal fans and students of novel writing might well read over and over to find out how a novel grows. But Stendhal said of it: 'The great and actual object is laughter'; and the true measure of Lamiel's incompleteness is that much of it reads like a fumbled joke."

Time 59:102 Je 2 '52 550w

BEYLE, MARIE HENRI (STENDHAL, pseud).
To the happy few; selected letters; introd. by Emmanuel Boudot-Lamotte; tr. by Norman Cameron. 384p $5 Grove

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. [52-44343]

"With the aid of these letters we can follow many aspects of Stendhal's extraordinary life: his love for Milan, the campaign in Russia in 1812, the collapse of the empire, his meetings with Silvio Pellico, Rossini and Lord Byron, his life in Paris during the Restoration, his friendship with Mérimée, his ceaseless activities as writer, lover, dandy." N Y Times

Reviewed by John Rosselli

Manchester Guardian p4 S 23 '52 550w

"These Letters are well translated but M. Boudot-Lamotte's ardent oration looks rather odd in English. The collection itself is very good and widely chosen." V. S. Pritchett

+ New Statesman & Nation 44:481 O 25 '52 1250w

"Stendhal's correspondence is as rich a source as his novels in helping us to an understanding of the actions of men, the mechanism of their passions, the logic of their temperaments and the endless spectacle of their will to power." Wallace Fowlie

+ N Y Times p5 N 2 '52 310w

+ New Yorker 28:66 D 27 '52 200w

"Mr. Norman Cameron is usually a sensitive translator. In the case of these letters, however, although sometimes catching Stendhal's conversational tone to a nicety, he tends on the whole to choose too literary a vocabulary. . . The publisher's part in this book, which translates a recent French selection from the Correspondance, has been a little perfunctory. The addition of a few more footnotes, which could have been taken from the complete edition, would greatly have helped the reader in places, where Stendhal's meaning is far from clear." J. M. Cohen

Spec 189:401 S 26 '52 650w

BEZANSON, ANNE CATHERINE, and others.
Prices and inflation during the American revolution; Pennsylvania, 1770-1790. 362p $6.75 Univ. of Pa. press

338.5 U.S.—History—Revolution. Prices
51-13903

"This volume completes the series of studies on pre-Civil War price history for the Philadelphia area, a series projected and carried out by Dr. Bezanson and her associates and assistants. The book complements the two previous publications, Prices in Colonial Pennsylvania, 1720-1775, by Anne Bezanson, Robert D.

Gray, and Miriam Hussey (1935), and Wholesale Prices in Philadelphia, 1784-1861 (Parts I and II, 1936 and 1937), by the same authors [Book Review Digest 1936, 1937]. Largely because the statistics for the Revolutionary era differ in sources and coverage from the other two periods, the volume under review overlaps by a few years both the first volume and the second." (Am Hist R) Index.

Reviewed by Fritz Redlich

Am Econ R 42:419 Je '52 700w

"This study will be of much value to students of price history and financial history, and also to those whose interests are in the general field of American history because it traces the pattern of price changes and helps to explain economic conditions at any given time in this eventful period of unrest." A. C. Bining

+ Am Hist R 57:766 Ap '52 400w

"Miss Bezanson and her assistants deserve the gratitude of all American economic historians for this important contribution to price level history." D. L. Kemmerer

+ Ann Am Acad 280:191 Mr '52 480w

"This is primarily a sourcebook. The authors have chosen to quarry the ore rather than to assay it. Nevertheless, some interesting beginnings have been made in the direction of analysis and interpretation. But the primary aim, in the words of the authors, has been 'to make generally available a continuous record of prices for a period hitherto neglected.' This task they have performed with distinction." G. R. Taylor

+ J Pol Econ 60:160 Ap '52 650w

"This study is of considerable historical value. Replete with documentation, tables, and graphs, its appeal will be to the historian and economist rather than to the general reader." J. C. Cairns

+ Sat R 35:48 Je 14 '52 320w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:152 Je '52 270w

BHATTACHARYA, BHABANI. Music for Mohini. 251p $3 Crown

52-5686

"India freeing herself from the shackles of her ancient customs and superstitions is symbolized in this charming story of Mohini and her husband. At first their lives are hampered by the rigid hand of tradition; in time they learn to distill the fundamental wisdom on which it was built, using that to fashion a happier free existence." Library J

Booklist 48:360 J1 1 '52

Reviewed by M. B. Snyder

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ag 10 '52
410w

Kirkus 20:234 Ap 1 '52 190w

"This is the first novel by a young Indian who has been press attache in the Indian Embassy in Washington, editor of the Illustrated Weekly of India and a free lance journalist. Deserves pushing in public libraries." Harriet Forbes

Library J 77:1011 Je 1 '52 110w

"The author has worked to further American understanding of India culture, and his novel is a welcome contribution to that end."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ag 3 '52
90w

"Here is a quiet, unassuming novel that has moments of true lyric charm and infectious humor." Eunice Holsaert

+ N Y Times p16 Je 15 '52 370w

Reviewed by Robert Payne

+ Sat R 35:12 Je 28 '52 700w

BIALK, ELISA (MRS L. MARTIN KRAUT-TER). Jill's victory; il. by Edward Shenton. 184p $2.50 World pub.

52-5181

Jill Allen, a twelve-year-old, went to spend a year with her aunt and uncle and two cousins on their farm, while her father was in Central America. Learning to live up to her capable cousins with their 4-H clubs took some doing. But with the help of an understanding family and the horse, Victory, Jill became a happily adjusted girl.

"A fine story for 10 to 14 year olds." Polly Goodwin
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Ap 13 '52 200w

"Country children will approve and city readers view with envy the 4-H Club activities which fill so happily and fruitfully the after-school hours and vacation days of the girls and boys in this warm and lively story of modern farm life." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 28:173 Je '52 130w

+ Kirkus 20:71 F 1 '52 90w

"Recommended." Anne Izard

+ Library J 77:364 F 15 '52 80w

"This is a serious character story, with much realistic detail about the wonderful 4-H Clubs. It is secondarily a good horse story. The very few pictures are a bit routine, but include very well-drawn animals, and the bookmaking is attractive." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Je 15 '52 120w

"The author, a determined tractarian for the 4-H, gets her points across. For readers whose attention is caught by the horse drawn on the jacket, Chapter 6 seems too far along in the story for the introduction of Victory. Nevertheless, Victory (either kind, equine or moral) is worth the work and the wait." S. C. G.

N Y Times p30 My 4 '52 180w

BIANCO, PAMELA (MRS ROBERT SCHLICK). Look-inside Easter egg. 40p col il $1.75 Oxford

52-6163

Fanciful story about Roxana who has breakfast with the Easter Rabbit in the garden which was inside the Easter egg.

Booklist 48:252 Ap 1 '52

Bookmark 11:186 My '52

"Exquisite little book." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 Ap 6 '52 150w

"A wonderful gift for the Easter rabbit to give small girls." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 28:98 Ap '52 120w

Kirkus 20:187 Mr 15 '52 80w

Reviewed by Phyllis Fenner

Library J 77:725 Ap 15 '52 70w

"A little tale of great charm for small girls." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Mr 30 '52 280w

"The prose is precise and charming and so are the pictures." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p32 Ap 6 '52 140w

"This is a perfect Easter gift for a little girl."

+ Sat R 35:60 Ap 12 '52 180w

BIBLE. WHOLE. Holy Bible; revised standard version. 997,294p $6; lea $10 Nelson

220.52

"This is the long-awaited complete 'R.S.V.' the New Testament portion of which was published in 1946. The title page carries the briefest possible statement of the essential facts concerning the lineage of this version: 'Translated from the original tongues, being the version set forth A.D. 1611, revised A.D. 1881-1885 and A.D. 1901, compared with the most ancient authorities and revised A.D. 1952.' It is, then, presented not as a new translation but as the latest stage in the revision of the so-called Authorized Version of 1611." Christian Century

Booklist 49:70 O 15 '52

"Why a R. S. V. when the great English classic, the King James version, is still available? First, biblical scholarship of the last 80 years has been more productive than all previous centuries. The 181,258 words of the King James New Testament are wrong in 5,000 instances. . . Then, the English language changes. For example, 'prevent,' in King James days, meant to go before. Today, it means to stop. Wealth then meant well-being. There are more than 300 words, the R. S. V. preface points out, that have entirely different meanings today than in the 17th century." John Evans

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 O 5 '52 400w

"The 500th anniversary of the issuing of the Gutenberg Bible was a fitting time for the publication of this notable new version. Both events are landmarks in the story of the Bible." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 69:1160 O 8 '52 800w
Kirkus 20:642 S 15 '52 50w

"It is indeed the 'greatest Bible News in 341 years!'" O. G. Lawson

+ Library J 77:1902 N 1 '52 120w

Reviewed by Paul Ramsey

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 N 23 '52 160w

"The language of the Revised Standard strikes a middle ground between excessive retention of hallowed phrases and a desire to be crisply up-to-date. True, there are the inevitable losses. Now and again the reader feels that brightness has faded from his favorite verses, or that organ music has been muted. . . Not all is loss, even from a strictly literary viewpoint. Sometimes the new version gains in both clarity and beauty. . . It seems likely that this new translation is here to stay." Chad Walsh

+ N Y Times p1 D 21 '52 500w

Reviewed by H. E. Fey

Sat R 35:8 D 20 '52 1150w

"For the most part the notable alterations made in notable verses are fully justified. But it is in virtue of the countless minor changes, which have smoothed out archaisms, improved accuracy and enhanced lucidity, that the R.S.V. provides by far the best translation for present-day readers. The work is designed to serve, not only private study, but public worship. It is eminently suitable for use in public worship. If it is read in Church services, the worshippers will be much more likely to find themselves listening." W. A. L. Elmslie

+ Spec 189:638 N 14 '52 900w

"The Revised Standard Version of the Bible is the most important English translation of the Scriptures since a slightly larger group of English scholars handed their three-year work to King James I in 1611."

+ Time 60:48 O 6 '52 800w

BIBLE. WHOLE. Reader's Bible. 1938p $6.50; india pa ed $10 Oxford

220.52

51-6651

"In this volume the publishers provide an easily read text of the complete Authorized Version. This includes 'The Epistle Dedication,' 'The Translators to the Readers,' and the Old Testament, the Apocrypha, and the New Testament. To aid the modern reader, attractive type is used, verse divisions are not marked, paragraphing and quotation marks serve as guides, and poetic passages are printed as poetry not only in 'the poetical books' but also in the prophets and elsewhere." J Religion

Reviewed by John Astley-Cock

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 D 23 '51 200w

"The only added 'helps' are the preliminary essays on the manuscripts and texts and on English translations of the Bible and the introductions which precede each group of related books. These are done in terms of the best modern scholarship and are really helpful. The 'Epistle Dedication,' with its fulsome praise of King James I, has some historical interest but is more amusing than edifying. On the other hand, 'The Translators to the Reader,' too often omitted from editions of the A.V. but here happily included, has permanent and serious value." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 69:19 Ja 2 '52 200w

BIBLE. WHOLE—Continued

Reviewed by R. E. Donlon

Christian Science Monitor p11 D 18 '52
200w

"While the volume is somewhat bulky, it is well printed, excellently bound, and easy on the eyes. It makes an excellent reader's Bible."

F. V. Filson

+ J Religion 32:145 Ap '52 200w

Kirkus 19:606 O 1 '51 130w

Reviewed by O. G. Lawson

Library J 76:2004 D 1 '51 70w

"The reading of the Bible is always a delight, and this new edition increases that delight. I found myself almost lured on to read on and on, and as I read my wonder grew, though all my life I have been 'familiar' with the Bible." A. G.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 My 28 '51
340wManchester Guardian p3 Je 25 '51
650w (Discussion)

"This edition contains the interesting preface to the first edition—'The Translators to the Reader'—often omitted in modern Bibles, as well as historical introductions to the main sections. The pages carry running heads that indicate the chapters and verses included in each double spread, but even so the book is not a handy one for looking up references. For general reading and for literary study it should prove much superior to conventional editions."

+ New Repub 125:21 D 24 '51 160w

Reviewed by A. N. Wilder

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Mr 9 '52
120w

Reviewed by Chad Walsh

+ N Y Times p22 D 2 '51 30w

San Francisco Chronicle p24 N 18 '51
120w

"It's a beautiful volume, as easily and as pleasantly readable as a book can be." Thomas Sugrue

+ Sat R 35:36 Mr 1 '52 50w

"The English text is that of the Authorized Version of 1611, 'the glory of the English language, the most powerful force in English literature, and the foundation and stay of English religion.' The same judicious temper is maintained in the vivid, though necessarily compressed account of the contents of the different sections. . . At last the magnificent English of the 'Epistle Dedicatory' of the Translators can be read with pleasure, with its bold refusal of any obligation to 'express the same notion in the same particular word,' a refusal which has resulted in their work remaining unmoved by the Revised Version."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p359 Je 8 '51
650wBIBLE. WHOLE. SELECTIONS. Bedside

Bible: an anthology for the quiet hours; selected and arranged with introd. and notes, by Arthur Stanley [pseud]. [rev ed] 368p $2.50 Scribner

220.52

51-14915

"Attractive selection with notes, which follows the Authorized Version, for the most part, and is especially arranged 'to tell a coherent story and show the evolution of belief.' Sources." Bookmark

Bookmark 11:107 F '52 30w

"In spite of the slightly disturbing eclecticism in the matter of versions, this volume is beautifully adapted to the purpose it is designed to serve."

Christian Century 69:193 F 13 '52 170w

Reviewed by J. F. Davidson

Churchman 166:16 Ap 15 '52 140w

Reviewed by Chad Walsh

N Y Times p5 D 2 '51 130w

BIBLE. WHOLE. SELECTIONS. Living

Bible; a shortened version for modern readers based on the King James translation, ed. by R. O. Ballou. 729p $3.75 Viking

220.52

52-7103

"A shortened form of the Authorized Version. Its editor has divided the historical parts of the Old Testament into biographies of the great Hebrew heroes. He has mixed the first three Gospels into a single story, and added the Fourth Gospel in its entirety. St Paul's letters are arranged according to subject matter, and the Book of Job appears as a drama." (Sat R) Reference notes. Index.

Booklist 48:207 Mr 1 '52

Reviewed by John Astley-Cock

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ap 20 '52
280w

"It is, as the editor says, for 'readers who wish easily to make or refresh their acquaintance with the great stories, the exalted poetry and drama, and the profound philosophy which has made the Bible the most widely known book of the Western world, a common heritage for Jews and Christians of every nationality.' To these, even if they begin as 'casual readers,' these beautifully printed pages will bring a rich reward and perhaps may lure them out of their casualness. I still don't see why an ancient translation should be expected to appeal to 'modern readers' more strongly than a modern one would." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 69:283 Mr 5 '52 350w

"Good typography and fine binding also make the volume very attractive. Recommended for all libraries." O. G. Lawson

+ Library J 77:530 Mr 15 '52 130w

"Excellent abridgment." A. N. Wilder

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Mr 9 '52
70w

"For those unacquainted with the Bible, Mr. Ballou has prepared an introduction. For those who already know it, he has produced a version omitting superfluous and repetitive passages, designing it for easier reading and greater emphasis upon the living spirit of the literature, history and philosophy of the Old and New Testaments. Both groups of readers will appreciate the reverent and loving care he has brought to his task." E. B.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p27 Mr 9 '52
170w

"The streamlining is sound and the arrangements, groupings, and associations will help young readers to remember more easily who was who and who did what to whom." Thomas Sugrue

+ Sat R 35:36 Mr 1 '52 70w

BIBLE. WHOLE. SELECTIONS. Readings from the Bible; selected by Mary Ellen Chase. 422p $3.75 Macmillan

220.52

52-12884

In her foreword Miss Chase says: "This collection of biblical readings has been made in response not only to requests from students at Smith College who have taken my course, The Literature of the Bible, but also to many similar requests from persons who have found my book The Bible and the Common Reader both interesting and helpful. In choosing the selections I decided early to include only those which my students and I have read during our study of the Bible in any given year at Smith. So far as material is concerned, this book, is, therefore, except for a few unimportant abridgments and the occasional necessary substitution of reference to certain passages in place of the passages themselves, an almost exact reproduction of the college course which I have given with ever increasing pleasure during the past fourteen years."

Booklist 49:59 O 15 '52

Bookmark 12:29 N '52 20w

"Dispensing with the artificial verses makes the passages more readable, while the rearrangement of some of the material (the Book of Job, for instance) is most helpful. As no theological arguments or interpretations are introduced, this book will be appreciated by people of all faiths or of no faith."

+ Kirkus 20:467 Ag 1 '52 250w

"With all passages in paragraphs if prose or in verse only when poetry, and accompanied by the author's scholarly judgments and her long-seasoned contagious appreciations both literary and spiritual, this book comes as a highly prized supplement to The Bible and the Common Reader—or to any shelf of inspirational reading." L. R. Miller

+ Library J 77:1394 S 1 '52 200w

Reviewed by Chad Walsh

N Y Times p11 D 21 '52 60w

"Many readers will miss some of their favorite passages, but the editor has based her selection on the principle that it is far better to know the best of the Bible than to have a smattering of all of it."

+ Sat R 35:31 D 20 '52 270w

BIDDLE, DOROTHY (MRS W. A. JOHNSON), and BLOM, MRS DOROTHEA (JOHNSON). Making corsages at home; drawings by Georgina Falk. 64p $2.50 Barrows

635.96 Bouquets

52-8924

Discusses the flowers to use in making corsages at home, and gives directions for the construction of the various types of corsage. Copiously illustrated. Index.

Booklist 48:276 My 1 '52

Sat R 35:36 Ag 2 '52 10w

BIDDLE, FRANCIS BEVERLEY. Fear of freedom; a discussion of the contemporary obsession of anxiety and fear in the United States; its historical background and present expression; and its effect on national security and on free American institutions; introd. by H. L. Ickes. 263p $3.50 Doubleday

323.4 Civil rights. Liberty

51-14392

For descriptive note see Annual for 1951.

"This little volume should be read by every thoughtful American but, unfortunately, those responsible for initiating and fomenting fear will not be the ones who will read it. . . The last chapter, 'The Choice Ahead,' is somewhat disappointing." F. J. Brown

+ Ann Am Acad 282:127 J1 '52 360w

Bookmark 11:103 F '52 60w

Foreign Affairs 30:674 J1 '52 40w

Reviewed by A. E. Sutherland

Harvard Law R 65:1269 My '52 1300w

"How far American fear of Russian communism has gone in destroying American liberties is thoughtfully set forth in this book by our former Attorney General, who was in a position to observe the beginning of the process at first hand and who has studied it carefully since he left office." M. R. Werner

+ Nation 174:41 Ja 12 '52 1050w

Reviewed by David Spitz

New Repub 126:17 Ja 21 '52 360w

"A book of special timeliness." Irving Babow
+ San Francisco Chronicle p26 F 3 '52 180w

"It is difficult to review a book so well written, so tightly written, that the reviewer is tempted to quote a large part of it, and this with a feeling of regret that he is not quoting it all." A. G. Hays

+ Survey 88:40 Ja '52 1900w

"Long a defender of civil rights, Francis Biddle, the former Attorney General, offers here a penetrating analysis of the causes, forms, and consequences of the mass hysteria and fear of freedom which today assail the United States. He carefully describes and evaluates the spread of the use of such methods of thought control as loyalty oaths, laws directed against Communists, and investigations of un-Americanism. . . His book is impressive in its calm, even at times tedious, presentation of the facts, and its clearly stated position against the current restrictive measures."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:67 Mr '52 270w

BIDDLE, LIVINGSTON. Debut. 378p $3.75 Messner

52-13615

The daughter of a socially prominent Philadelphia family is the central figure in this novel of emotional conflicts. Alicia Cameron made a promising debut, then broke her engagement and went to Italy with the Red Cross during World war II. Her experiences there taught her to defy her sadistic mother and live her own life.

Booklist 49:58; 105 O 15 '52; N 15 '52

Kirkus 20:611 S 15 '52 180w

"Recommended for light reading." H. R. Forbes

+ Library J 77:1809 O 15 '52 50w

"Mr. Biddle handles his essentially trivial material with considerable novelistic skill, developing his characters and incidents in smoothly readable fashion."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p21 N 9 '52 150w

"The mother, who all but steals the show, is skillfully drawn. Expert, too, is Mr Biddle's description of the social swirl both in Bryn Mawr and in Naples. His style is sometimes pedestrian and the eventual outcome of his story predictable. But he keeps interest alive, he arranges a 'big scene' climax, and he involves the mind as well as the heart of his reader." Charles Lee

+ N Y Times p50 N 9 '52 400w

New Yorker 28:171 N 8 '52 50w

"All this is managed smoothly and with high readability. Mr. Biddle gives considerable psychological substance to his characters if he cannot quite make them seem important." E. J. F.

+ Sat R 35:38 D 6 '52 140w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal

Springf'd Republican p6D D 28 '52 120w

BIDLACK, VERNE CLAUDE, and FASIG, EDGAR W., eds. Paint and varnish production manual [prepared for the Federation of paint and varnish production clubs]. 288p il col il $6.50 Wiley

667.6 Paint. Varnish and varnishing

61-14831

"What every young paint and varnish technician ought to know and to remember as he progresses into supervisory, service, sales, or management responsibilities is set forth in this well arranged book. The location, layout, and engineering of the plant; various types of equipment; raw materials, manufacturing processes and products, and methods of control and testing; cost accounting, research and development, employer-employee relationships; service and sales functions, and safety measures are discussed in sufficient detail for broad understanding. The sources to which one can go for further information are listed in extensive references." (Chem & Eng N) Index.

"An excellent manual." C. R. Bragdon

+ Chem & Eng N 30:1454 Ap 7 '52 250w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 77:536 Mr 15 '52 70w

BIEMEL, RAINER (JEAN ROUNAULT, pseud). Nightmare; tr. from the French by Vera Traill [Eng title: My friend Vassia]. 267p $3.50 Crowell

365.65 Convict labor—Russia

52-7371

A French journalist, seized by the Russians in Bucharest and sent to the Soviet labor camp in the Donets basin, here describes his experiences.

Reviewed by S. R. Tompkins

Ann Am Acad 283:221 S '52 420w

"There is nothing surprisingly new here, but the author makes few pretenses and his book is a faithful account."

Kirkus 20:210 Mr 15 '52 230w

"Recommended." F. A. Boyle

+ Library J 77:716 Ap 15 '52 70w

"M. Rounault managed to keep a sort of cynical, humorous detachment, and though one can see that he never got to respect the Russians, and thought poorly of their efficiency, he did get to like them and even to penetrate a little into the background of ordinary lives.

BIEMEL, RAINER—Continued

 "This is a book that those who like the direct human approach will find profitable."

Max Beloff

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Mr 25 '52
 200w

"His book is a documentary of conditions in a Soviet labor camp. It doesn't contain much that is new, it doesn't pretend to be an 'authoritative study,' it simply describes his nightmarish existence under a regime that was tyrannical, inefficient, corrupt and eccentric. . . The inane capriciousness of the ever-changing rules and ordinances of the camp add an element of desperate humor to this otherwise stark and truthful report of a modern 'House of the Dead.'" Richard Plant

+ N Y Times p18 Ap 27 '52 360w

Reviewed by Paul Ucker

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Je 15 '52
 380w

"The translation is really excellent, and the reader should not be put off by an introduction which is somewhat out of tune with the rest of this fine book." Richard Chancellor

+ Spec 188:554 Ap 25 '52 650w

"One of the most readable and revealing accounts of life in Russia." H. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p8D My 11 '52
 440w

Times [London] Lit Sup p326 My 16
 '52 480w

BIGLAND, MRS EILEEN. Ouida: the passionate Victorian. 272p il $3.75 Duell

B or 92 De la Ramée, Louise (Ouida, pseud)
 51-10422

The life story of the highly eccentric Victorian writer, known for her excessively romantic novels. Her best known novel was Under Two Flags.

Reviewed by R. L. Blakesley

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 D 23 '51
 300w

Manchester Guardian p4 D 19 '50 750w

"Theatrical, megalomaniac, entirely unrestrained by any self-knowledge, Ouida could not be the subject of a dull biography. Miss Bigland's is lively and full of detail, and if it tends to gush and fictionalize a little too much, this is not inappropriate in connection with its subject." Robert Phelps

+ Nation 174:89 Ja 26 '52 700w

Reviewed by Louise Bogan

New Repub 126:18 Ja 21 '52 550w

"Miss Bigland's new life of Ouida is fuller than the memoirs already in existence. There are still many mysteries but it is a just book and cannot help being entertaining. It is marred, however, by a prose that is stiffened with clichés which are a good deal duller than Ouida's." V. S. Pritchett

+ New Statesman & Nation 40:655 D 23
 '50 3000w

"In this most readable study Miss Bigland has avoided the obvious temptation to make Ouida merely a figure of fun. She has also avoided any effort to exaggerate her literary merits, and does not even appraise her total accomplishment. This last was probably wise: most of the books are hopelessly dated, and the narrative verve which gives them what life they retain cannot be conveyed in a critical summary." Delancey Ferguson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 D 2 '51
 950w

"Ouida herself is so much more fascinating and vigorous than Miss Bigland (a novelist and student of Victorian literature) has written her that she literally crowded this most recent biographer off the page. That was ever Ouida's way. Let any less forceful personality attempt to say a word in her presence and she instantly obliterated that person. But Miss Bigland's book does engage the reader's attention and hold it: it is, after all, about Ouida and about her it is impossible to write a dull book." Leo Lerman

N Y Times p5 D 23 '51 750w

"A biography of the popular nineteenth-century English novelist, whom Miss Bigland, in her subtitle, calls 'The Passionate Victorian,' and whom she depicts with a lack of sympathy that verges at times on sheer malice."

— New Yorker 27:85 Ja 12 '52 160w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles

San Francisco Chronicle p18 D 2 '51
 190w

"Merely to record the events of her life is to record a fascinating story, and Miss Bigland does just that. Occasionally when her writing is banal or purple, it seems so much like Ouida's that we forgive the biographer for taking on the coloration of her subject. We are thankful, at least, that she skillfully weaves together all her varied sources. For in this biography, oddly enough, we are treated to the kind of glamorous excitement that Ouida's novels gave to the readers of her own day." Robert Halsband

+ Sat R 35:29 F 16 '52 600w

"Her biography ends on a note of tenderness and sympathy which to me, at least, is more pleasing than the festoons of bright anecdotes which hang tinkling through the earlier pages. . . There is a consistency in Ouida's proud character which is neither comic nor despicable. She is an admirable subject for biography. Mrs. Bigland's is neither the first, nor will it be the last. She lays no great claims for its originality, but she assembles the facts and legends in a manner which is both informative and entertaining. Perhaps too entertaining." Nigel Nicolson

+ Spec 185:252 F 23 '51 600w

"Ouida appears now a tragic, vital creature whom life did its best to mock into littleness and could not. Mrs. Bigland treats her sympathetically but defaces the picture by a rather too un-Ouidesque manner. The shocked bourgeoisie are 'poor dears,' and there is 'a deal of' something and 'precious little of' something else."

Times [London] Lit Sup p33 Ja 19 '51
 450w

BIJVOET, JOHANNES MARTIN, and others. X-ray analysis of crystals; based on a tr. by H. Littman Furth. 304p il $6.50 Interscience

548.8 Crystallography. X rays A51-9964

"In recent years, most college curricula in chemistry have included at least the fundamentals of the theory of X-ray diffraction and crystal chemistry. Most chemical engineers have not, however, pursued the subject into the more advanced stages of crystal structure analysis, although much useful information regarding chemical processes may be obtained thereby. The present volume provides an introduction into the theory, experimental techniques, analysis of data and interpretation of results." Chem Eng

"The subject matter is developed by elementary but direct and convincing arguments commonly aided by excellent diagrams. The terse economical style of the text always is interesting and usually is illuminating. Occasionally a perhaps too nearly literal translation leads to a rather awkward English construction. There are also quite a number of minor, usually obvious, errors which should have been caught in proof. . . The surprisingly extended coverage of the book is a consequence of the Authors' direct approach and tersely efficient style in writing." J. L. Hoard

Am Chem Soc J 74:1873 Ap 5 '52 650w

"Written in a simple, easily-read style with mathematical detail confined to appendices. Much credit for the clarity of the English version must go to the translator, Mrs. H. L. Furth. . . Altogether, this is a book to be recommended to the uninitiated who wish to understand the principles of structure analysis or to prepare themselves for more advanced texts." J. S. Lukesh

+ Chem Eng 58:338 D '51 500w

BILL, ALFRED HOYT. Valley Forge; the making of an army. 259p $3.50 Harper 973.33 U.S. — History — Revolution — Campaigns and battles 52-5420

"The hardships of daily life at Valley Forge in the winter of 1777-78 have been told in many books. In this new study Mr. Bill uses them as active background for an excellent account of the military events of the period. Much attention is given to Washington as a brilliant commander-in-chief, to the conspiracies which threatened him at this time and to his emergence as a great leader of men." Library J

Booklist 48:317 Je 1 '52

Reviewed by Clarence Ver Steeg
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 My 11 '52
260w

"The book can be warmly recommended to all who want to know the facts behind the legend of Valley Forge." Denham Sutcliffe
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 My 22 '52 300w

"Authoritative and eminently readable history." + Kirkus 20:181 Mr 1 '52 160w

"This book is recommended for American historical collections as a careful and intensive study of a vital phase of the American Revolution." Herbert Cahoon
+ Library J 77:786 My 1 '52 90w

"As the title implies, special attention is given to the success of Washington and von Steuben in training and disciplining the main body of the Continental Army during the winter and spring of 1777-8. This aspect of the book is excellent. . . The other apparent object is to restore the discredited view of Washington's winning the war, in spite of the sabotage of his efforts by Congress and the malevolence of Generals Lee, Gates and Conway, rather than by their help. . . The old conception of Washington having to fight not only the British but Congress and several of his own generals, seems to have a strong appeal, but it will take other than mere assertion to shake the more favorable conception of Congress, Gates and other supposed internal enemies of Washington, established in recent years by painstaking study and documentation." Bernhard Knollenberg
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 My 25 '52 650w

"Using his sources with care, if not novelty, [the author] tells simply and excitingly a story of courage and accomplishment that appeals, and always will, to embattled free men who initially may lack everything except confidence in the rectitude of their position and in the final triumphant outcome." H. F. Graff
+ N Y Times p3 Je 15 '52 550w

"Written with insight, lucidity, and a deft touch that makes the book a joy to read." W. M. Wallace

+ Sat R 35:15 My 24 '52 800w
U S Quarterly Bk R 8:281 S '52 200w

BILLETT, ROY OREN, and YEO, J. WENDELL. Growing up. 370p il $2.80; pa $1 Heath

371.425 Vocational guidance 51-3679

"This book places emphasis on the individual in his high school career. It immediately draws attention to the pupil's future success and the importance of early planning. In a series of chapters, the necessity of understanding self and a study of self-appraisal in comparison with other people by the normative process are presented. The physical, mental, and emotional phases of development are emphasized as well as personal appearance and the importance of getting along with others." J Home Econ

"Growing Up should be helpful to home economics teachers as a supplementary aid when the home economics program calls for personal and social adjustment and home and family living. It is a well-organized text understandably written for junior and senior high school students. Boys as well as girls will find it helpful and most interesting." I. E. McDermott

+ J Home Econ 44:221 Mr '52 270w

"A teacher's manual, carefully worked out in great detail, with objectives for every unit, is available for use with the book." R. F. Osborne

+ School R 50:56 Ja '52 290w

BILLINGS, HENRY. All down the valley; il. by [the author]. 208p $3.50 Viking

976.8 Tennessee valley. Tennessee Valley authority 52-14056

"A comprehensive account of the T. V. A. project for high school age and adults. [The author] goes into the geography and history of the river, tells of the long debate that preceded the act of 1933, and describes with diagrams and maps the control system on the dams. He inserts three sections of a 'Clay County Chronicle,' which tells the bad and good fortunes of a family of farmers affected by the river through all the years." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 49:109 N 15 '52

Commonweal 57:176 N 21 '52 20w

"For all who want to know of T.V.A." + Kirkus 20:512 Ag 15 '52 190w

"Such a book may not sound like a 'family' book, but rather like a school reference book, or a gift for a serious young would-be engineer. Yet actually it is the very sort of book that many a father might well share with boys and girls over twelve." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p32 N 16 '52 150w

New Yorker 28:204 D 6 '52 100w

"As in his two earlier books, Henry Billings has made a factual and often technical record into a fascinating story. . . It is not only a deeply interesting book. It is a fine record of a great American experiment."

+ Sat R 35:73 N 15 '52 180w

BILMANIS, ALFRED. History of Latvia. 441p maps $6 Princeton univ. press

947.4 Latvia 51-14774

"First 'serious, full-length study' of Latvian history in any Western language. Author, Latvia's Minister to Washington until death in 1948, is well known through numerous publications on Latvian history and institutions. For centuries under German, Polish, Swedish or Russian dominance, independent in 1918, incorporated into Soviet Union in 1940, this little Baltic state is considered one of key outposts of the West against Russian push. Beginning with tribal eras, ending with Soviet invasion, political history and growth of national consciousness is emphasized, yet cultural research is carefully integrated." Library J

"Much is there, much is omitted, but it is a marvel of condensation. The tone is calm, restrained, and the patriotism of the author is overlaid by the statesman's feeling that he must be internationally minded." F. J. Bowman

+ Am Hist R 57:973 Jl '52 220w

Booklist 48:169 Ja 15 '52

"Full-length, definitive history of the little-known Baltic country by a distinguished Latvian."

+ Bookmark 11:129 Mr '52 30w

"For many readers it will be the best source of light upon the whole dark and tragic business of Baltic history."

+ Christian Century 69:249 F 27 '52 150w

Current Hist 22:102 F '52 80w

Foreign Affairs 30:680 Jl '52 50w

"Important for specialists. Also interesting for wider public." Kurt Schwerin

+ Library J 77:145 Ja 15 '52 140w

BINDT, JULIET. Handbook for the blind. 244p $3.50 Macmillan

362.41 Blind 52-1920

An aid for the blind and for those who work with them by a woman who has been blind since she was thirteen. Gives practical suggestions on clothing; how to handle food at home or in restaurants; how to travel alone; guide dogs; problems in marriage; housekeeping; cooking; etc. Index.

Booklist 48:331 Je 15 '52

Bookmark 12:81 Ja '53

BINDT, JULIET—Continued

"This is a sound, sensible guide for daily living that will be a useful and reassuring aid to the blind and to people who come into contact with them."

+ Kirkus 20:182 Mr 1 '52 160w

"Of tremendous value to the totally or partially blind, and all who associate with them. . . Most libraries will find owning it essential."

W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 77:887 My 15 '52 90w

"The second part of Mrs. Bindt's book, entitled 'To the Sighted,' is a small classic that might well guide any of us in our conduct toward all others. It's to be hoped that 'A Handbook for the Blind' will find the wide circulation it deserves. It might teach a lot of so-called 'sighted' people how to see." Baynard Kendrick

+ N Y Times p14 Je 15 '52 320w

"The author is a home teacher in the field services for the blind, California State Department of Education. In her quarter-century of experience she has learned much, and here she passes on her knowledge to the reader. . . Because of its second section, [the book] is a handbook for anyone who has any contacts with a blind person. A careful reading will make life immeasurably simpler and pleasanter both for such a reader and for the blind person concerned." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Je 18 '52 750w

Wis Lib Bul 48:167 J1 '52

BINGHAM, JOHN. My name is Michael Sibley. 242p $2.50 Dodd

52-5828

Mystery story.

"As an uncommon book about a rather ordinary man it is welcome although it deserves more praise for its intention than its execution, although even here it is at least adequate. Its conclusion is as tentative as the rest of it and a proper mark of punctuation for such proceedings. It's all likely to ruffle your temper along with your sensibilities, and that's a suitable function of a book, too." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 My 4 '52 160w

"This weak protagonist, incapable of either virtue or vice, whose petty stupidities manage to frame him neatly on a murder charge, is admirably conceived and realized. The confused flashback narrative method, the constant 'little-did-I-know,' and the clumsy prose with its recurrent 'between Kate and I' make the novel as a whole rather hard to take." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p33 Ap 20 '52 50w

"Without quite reaching the higher levels of suspense or ingenuity, My Name is Michael Sibley is fluently written and nicely characterized."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p121 F 15 '52 160w

BINNS, ARCHIE. Secret of the Sleeping river; il. by Raffaello Busoni. 213p il $2.50 Winston

52-5483

The Tompkins family (The Radio Imp, Book Review Digest 1950) move to the country and this time the excitement is provided by an odd TV set which has been tinkered with by an old gypsy. For ages 9 to 12.

Booklist 48:383 J1 15 '52

+ Horn Bk 28:103 Ap '52 80w

Kirkus 20:189 Mr 15 '52 130w

"A fast-paced, out-of-the-ordinary story which will be enjoyed by readers of the previous book." M. A. Herr

+ Library J 77:1081 Je 15 '52 60w

"The best this reviewer can say of 'Secret of the Sleeping River' is that it will please young people who enjoy that strange two-headed story form—prosaic fantasy." M. F. Kieran

N Y Times p14 Ag 3 '52 140w

BINSTOCK, LOUIS. Power of faith. 240p $3.95 Prentice-Hall

296.3 Jews—Religion. Faith

52-7633

"Dr. Louis Binstock, an eminent Jewish rabbi, lecturer and author, urges the enlistment of power of faith in behalf of troubled humanity. His book describes the meaning of faith and its importance in the life of the individual and in world affairs. The author is a philosopher with a keen sense of humor and deep understanding of human nature." (Spring'd Republican) His views apply to other religions as well as to his own.

Booklist 48:241 Ap 1 '52

"It is a good book to come at this moment when traditional supports are tumbling down and ancient sanctities are being tossed aside. Not only the synagog, but also the church, and many people outside of both institutions will find it helpful during these late winter days which begin to take on a lenten seriousness." Clarence Seidenspinner

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 F 24 '52 320w

"Here is a timely book, good medicine for our frightened, confused and sick age." R. F. Jenney

+ Christian Century 69:560 My 7 '52 900w

"Recommended especially for those who are looking wistfully to religion for an answer to their frustrations and for help in carrying the burdens of life. Active religionists and theologians will find the author's approach too broad, too unrelated to specific articles of faith."

+ Kirkus 20:121 F 15 '52 170w

Reviewed by Thomas Sugrue

N Y Times p29 My 25 '52 370w

"There is nothing new in the book but the Rabbi's own power of faith is so infectious that it will help many—if only those who need his help can be brought to read the book." E. M. T.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p29 My 25 '52 90w

Spring'd Republican p7D Ap 13 '52 330w

BIRD, BRANDON, pseud. of GEORGE EVANS and KAY EVANS. Downbeat for a dirge. 237p $2.50 Dodd

52-10161

Detective story.

"Shrewdly plotted tale in remarkably realistic and uniquely pulsating atmosphere." Drexel Drake

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p16 O 19 '52 60w

"Managed with brisk event and crisp comment. It's pleasant, too, to see a book planned with as much affection from its jacket (by the author and one of the season's best), past the parsing of its parts (theme, fantasie, nocturne misterioso and so forth) to the loving sequence descriptive of a dance band at work. It all wears its silliness with an air and gets by very smoothly." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p26 O 26 '52 150w

"The best of Brandon Bird's mysteries to date—which is pretty faint praise." Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p33 O 26 '52 50w

"Lots of Dixieland jargon, sounding like the real thing, makes an unusually good background; surprise ending isn't bad, either. B minus." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p11 O 19 '52 60w

"Good." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 35:47 O 25 '52 20w

BISHOP, CALVIN COLLIER. Electrical drafting and design. 3d ed 267p il $4.50 McGraw 744 Mechanical drawing. Electric engineering

51-12935

"An established text and reference manual on the making of drawings of circuit diagrams and wiring installations. It is addressed chiefly to student draftsmen enrolled in vocational schools, but it is suitable also as a reference or refresher for working draftsmen in need of particular information on electrical drawings." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 77:2007 N 15 '52 40w
N Y New Tech Bks 37:70 S '52

BISHOP, MRS CLAIRE (HUCHET). Bernard and his dogs; il. by Maurice Brevannes. 70p $2 Houghton

Bernard of Menthon, Saint—Juvenile literature 52-7143

An account of the life and deeds of St Bernard related in story form for young readers.

"The vigor and color of narration, matched by equally arresting illustrations, make this tale of 1,000 years ago alive and exciting for today's young readers." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p18 Mr 16 '52 230w

Commonweal 57:175 N 21 '52 30w

+ Kirkus 20:72 F 1 '52 130w

"The type is not very large, nor is the style too easy, though it is very clear and lively. So it probably will be read aloud to children under ten and used as a gift for those over that age. It has the Nihil Obstat and the Imprimatur, but many Protestants will welcome it and learn from it many interesting facts about Bernard." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 Mr 9 '52 180w

Reviewed by Eugenia Garson
N Y Times p32 Ap 6 '52 150w

BISHOP, MRS CLAIRE (HUCHET). Twenty and ten; as told by Janet Joly; il. by William Pène du Bois. 76p $2.50 Viking

52-12483

Story of twenty brave French children living in the mountains under the care of a nun, during World war II. When ten Jewish children are added to their number the French children receive and protect them when the Nazis come.

Booklist 49:74 O 15 '52

Bookmark 12:12 O '52 20w

Reviewed by B. J. Thompson
Cath World 176:203 D '52 30w

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 O 26 '52 130w

Commonweal 57:172 N 21 '52 40w

+ Horn Bk 28:320 O '52 40w

"Breath-taking story laid in occupied France of 1944. . . William Pène duBois has done excellent soft pencil drawings of thin, lively children and the French countryside." + Kirkus 20:407 J1 15 '52 160w

"As compelling a little book as the author's Pancakes-Paris. Adults may like it better than children do, but it will be wonderful to share. . . For all perceptive people over eight years old." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 77:1663 O 1 '52 30w

"In spite of its wartime atmosphere it is a story for all times." C. E. Van Norman

+ N Y Times p48 N 30 '52 90w

New Yorker 28:198 D 6 '52 60w

"There are real emotion, humor, and courage in this vividly told story—all qualities that were a part of life during the occupation. . . From the very first moment with this book one is fascinated by the illustrations." B. W. Shaffer

+ Sat R 35:54 N 15 '52 180w

BISHOP, JAMES ALONZO. Mark Hellinger story; a biography of Broadway and Hollywood. 367p il $3.95 Appleton

B or 92 Hellinger, Mark. Moving pictures 52-13839

A biography of a former Broadway columnist, who later went to Hollywood, became a producer, and died in 1947 at the age of forty-four.

"In its field of Americana where Gene Fowler is dean, this book is a striking success. It is well written in a vivid, evocative style." Charles Collins

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 N 9 '52 460w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 N 30 '52 180w

"The Mark Hellinger Story,' at times overly ornate and florid as was its subject, is more than the life of a fabulous character. It gives the reader a vivid, sometimes frightening, picture of the jealousies and pettiness which beset Broadway and Hollywood, and of the people who perish in the attempt to conquer them." Richard Maney

+ N Y Times p12 N 9 '52 370w

"Jim Bishop's biography hits the reader like a machinegun barrage. It is like looking at a speeded-up-film version of 'Only Yesterday' combined with an unabashed valentine to the columnist-producer, from his most enthusiastic fan." William Hogan

San Francisco Chronicle p24 N 23 '52 410w

BISHOP, LEONARD. Down all your streets. 688p $3.95 Dial press

52-5945

Depicts in great detail the lives of an East Side New York Jewish family during the depression.

Reviewed by Edmund Fuller

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ap 27 '52 380w

"The terminology is monotonously obscene, no character, addict or non-addict has integrity, all are saturated with sex, utterly amoral. A depressing book, perhaps of interest as 'documentary,' but not for public libraries." R. W. Henderson

— Library J 77:432 Mr 1 '52 140w

"There is a turgid quality about the writing. The language is as raw as it can possibly be, and yet this too is New York, not confidentially sensational but with a tortured earnestness. The writing is unadulterated slang and at times inept and graceless, yet the words have a bull-elephant, stampeding effect which a dozen slick writers cannot achieve. In spite of the preoccupation with sex and the seeming lack of purpose, a realistic story emerges that is suspenseful, honest and terribly sincere." Herbert Mitgang

N Y Times p30 Ap 6 '52 480w

"This is one of those teeming-city books, written with vigor and enthusiasm, and sometimes with anger, but it misses because in trying to encompass all humanity it fails to encompass, or even to cast a shrewd sidelong on, just one minute in the life of just one human being."

— New Yorker 28:138 Ap 5 '52 90w

"You may not like it—you may find it positively unpleasant—but the chances are you will go on reading it, as I did, to the bitter end. That is to say, the novel has obvious faults, and Mr. Bishop has a grim addiction to unpleasant facts. One might wish for more lightness or humor—a touch of geniality or compassion in these solid, heavy, tormented pages." Maxwell Geismar

Sat R 35:30 Ap 19 '52 500w

BISSELL, RICHARD PIKE. The Monongahela; il. by John O'Hara Cosgrave II. (Rivers of America ser) 239p $3.50 Rinehart

974.8 Monongahela river and valley

52-5562

Anecdotal, informal account of life on the Monongahela, a river "formed by the confluence of the West Fork and Tygart Rivers in West Virginia, flowing in a northeasterly direction into southwestern Pennsylvania and then in a northerly direction to Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, where it joins the Allegheny to form the Ohio River."

"The information assembled in The Monongahela is all available in other places, so the book cannot be recommended as an indispensable historical guide and atlas, but it is an indispensable pleasure for every reader whose heart leaps up at the sound of a steamboat whistle." P. L. Adams

BISSELL, R. P.—Continued

— Atlantic 190:78 S '52 350w

Booklist 48:336 Je 15 '52

"Capt. Bissell has written a tough, knowing, entertaining story of this workhorse of American rivers. He has combined wit and wisdom and created another valuable addition—the 46th—to the great store of Americana—the Rivers of America series." Richard Blakesley

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 My 25 '52 300w

"Mr. Bissell has little historical interest or imagination. He doesn't even bother with the steamboat history of the river. . . Still Mr. Bissell loves a steamboat and a steam whistle, and for that, we who don't live in the Monongahela Valley can forgive him much." Horace Reynolds

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 Jl 3 '52 450w

Current Hist 23:128 Ag '52 70w

Kirkus 20:216 Mr 15 '52 200w

"Humorous, authentic, nostalgic, artistic, and delightful. Recommended." Katherine Shorey

+ Library J 77:1074 Je 15 '52 80w

Reviewed by J. K. Hutchens

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Je 15 '52 700w

"Mr. Bissell (who wrote a fictionalized account of his experiences on the Mississippi in 'Stretch on the River,') writes a brisk, realistic and highly readable account of the Monongahela. He has little disposition to glamorize the story. . . But it is not all smog and greasy water; Mr. Bissell also has an eye for the trees in bloom on the West Virginia hills and the wild azaleas and mountain laurel and trailing arbutus. His chapter The Wonderful Day disproves his own disclaimer that his account is 'light on poetry.'" Coleman Rosenberger

+ N Y Times p3 My 25 '52 450w

"Mr. Bissell has avoided the bravura tricks and padding which have marred some of the river books. He writes with originality and native flavor." J. V.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ag 3 '52 330w

"No. 46 is one of the best in the series. It is also one of the few instances in which the right author met the right river."

+ Time 59:102 Je 16 '52 600w

"Mr. Bissell recalls picturesque river captains, and paints brief but colorful pictures of the important boats. He tells of river festivals and folkways, and explains the influence of the steam boiler on the river's way of life. Much of this Mr. Bissell interprets from personal experience; in so doing he lends authentic flavor to a book which is considerably apart in spirit from the others in its series."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:306 S '52 240w

BLACK, ROBERT CLIFFORD. Railroads of the Confederacy. 360p il maps $6 Univ. of N.C. press

973.7 Railroads—South. U.S.—History—Civil war 52-3559

"Mr. Black's book relates for the first time in any great detail the intricate story of the Southern railroads, at first treated indifferently by their government and finally broken down by overwork and enemy attack." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by William Leonard

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 O 5 '52 170w

"Mr. Black's volume has excellent maps and illustrations." Herbert Cahoon

+ Library J 77:1646 O 1 '52 70w

Reviewed by B. I. Wiley

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p36 D 7 '52 370w

Reviewed by R. S. Henry

N Y Times p3 O 5 '52 450w

Sat R 35:32 D 27 '52 210w

"Mr. Black, who is a member of the faculty of Trinity College in Hartford, has written a book that throws a great deal of light on the history and interpretation of the Civil War."

Donald Derby

+ Springfield Republican p35A N 16 '52 310w

BLACKHAM, HAROLD JOHN. Six existentialist thinkers. 173p $3 Macmillan

111 Existentialism. Philosophers, Modern [52-9507]

"What is existentialism? Does it contain common threads and themes which give it structure as a type of philosophy? H. J. Blackham, an English philosopher who edits a humanist quarterly, thinks it does and gives us a thoughtful little book in support of his opinion." Sat R

"Mr. Blackham's book is neither distinguished nor lively, but it is sensible, worthy and honest." Rayner Heppenstal

+ New Statesman & Nation 43:683 Je 7 '52 200w

"Mr. Blackham has a passionate and lyrical identification with his subject-matter, and his exposition can be followed by any intelligent and literate person who takes the trouble." William Barrett

+ N Y Times p11 Je 1 '52 420w

"In spite of an English reluctance to display enthusiasm, it is clear that for Mr. Blackham existentialism, far from being an hysterical irrationalism, is a contemporary reaffirmation of a Stoic individualism and an emphatic renewal of a necessary phase of human experience." Robert Bierstedt

+ Sat R 35:15 O 11 '52 130w

Times [London] Lit Sup p803 D 5 '52 1150w

Reviewed by G. K. Strodach

Yale R n s 42:307 winter '53 550w

BLACKMUR, RICHARD PALMER. Language as gesture; essays in poetry. 440p $5.75 Harcourt

808.1 Poetry—History and criticism. English poetry—History and criticism. American poetry—History and criticism 52-6451

Twenty-one critical essays, mainly about the poetry of our time. Some of the essays are from literary monthlies or quarterlies, but eight of the essays have not been published before in book form. No index.

Booklist 49:121 D 1 '52

"Blackmur is here, as always, a thoughtful and conscientious critic with something to say and a way of saying it that makes his criticism art. . . Not for the devotees of Faith Baldwin and Kathleen Winsor, but recommended for any collection serving readers with a serious interest in literature or thinking." Shirley Barker

+ Library J 77:1810 O 15 '52 60w

Reviewed by Herbert Read

New Repub 127:18 N 24 '52 700w

"A volume not comprehensive or systematic but remarkable for discernment and acuity. . . On many other pages the reader will be aware, if he is as aware as he should be, that he is witnessing a demonstration of poetic dissection by a master anatomist." Milton Rugoff

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 D 28 '52 1000w

BLAKE, NELSON MANFRED. Short history of American life. 732p il $5.75 McGraw

973 U.S.—Civilization 51-12587

"This book has much to say of immigrants making their way to new homes, of farmers, artisans, and merchants adapting their methods to changing conditions, of preachers and priests laboring for the Lord in strange vineyards of teachers and professors struggling to transmit the cultural heritage, of authors and artists seeking forms of expression. The general theme is the transplanting of European institutions to American soil and the modification of Old World heritage in its new environment to produce that pattern of life which we call American civilization." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 48:337 Je 15 '52

"Excellent story of the development of American culture. . . The book presents a fascinating picture of the continuous development of American life."

+ Current Hist 23:64 J1 '52 50w

"This [is a] very fine work well calculated to assist in the study of American life and institutions." K. V. Lottick

+ Social Educ 16:346 N '52 750w

BLANCHARD, FESSENDEN SEAVER. Where to retire and how: a comprehensive guide; planning, jobs, hobbies and housing, costs of living, climates and places; il. with photographs and maps. 299p $5 Dodd

301.43 [179] Retirement (from work) 52-10919

"In this volume we deal both with the planning of retirement and with places for retirement. We discuss in Part I what retirement means to many people, what should be considered in planning retirement, what are some of the work opportunities, avocations and hobbies, and economic problems. Then there is a chapter on the effects of climate on health and activity. In Part II, 75 places in different parts of the United States are analyzed from the viewpoint of retired people, with both the good and the bad points mentioned. . . It is aimed, primarily, at those with incomes after retirement of from $3,000 to $10,000 or so." Intro

Booklist 49:87 N 1 '52

Bookmark 12:29 N '52 20w

Reviewed by L. T. Heron

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 O 26 '52 40w

"Very useful. Recommended for public libraries." J. L. Ross

+ Library J 77:1394 S 1 '52 40w

BLANKFORT, MICHAEL. The juggler. 243p $3 Little

52-5011

"Life in a German concentration camp has destroyed Hans Muller psychologically. A world-famous juggler, he is neither at home with himself nor with the new Israel to which he has come for asylum. His self-discovery, blossoming from a near-murder, a love for children, and Ya'el the Israeli girl, is this novel's concern." Library J

Booklist 48:214 Mr 1 '52

"A story which has a warm approach to the making of a Jewish homeland."

+ Kirkus 19:712 D 15 '51 170w

"Recommended." M. S. Byam

+ Library J 77:360 F 15 '52 70w

"Mr. Blankfort who writes in lean, rhythmic prose, has written a novel which demands respect on every count, and especially for its masterly portrait of a new nation and of an exile who didn't know he had come home." Rose Feld

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Mr 2 '52 800w

"Mr. Blankfort is gifted with a fine sympathy that can conjure onto his canvas some moving specimens of the newest of all nationalities—the Israeli. . . With Muller himself Mr. Blankfort is less consistently felicitous. . . Hans Muller's heroism, exhibited during an Arab raid, seems somewhat too precision-timed, too neatly appropriate, for a natural climax. But these seem minor flaws in an otherwise vivid novel." Frederic Morton

+ — N Y Times p20 Mr 9 '52 550w

New Yorker 28:128 Mr 29 '52 100w

"'The Juggler' has its faults, but it also has its virtues—many of them—and it is well worth reading. There have been very few readable books about life in Israel, and this one is easily among the better ones." Charles Angoff

+ Sat R 35:44 My 24 '52 300w

BLANKSTEN, GEORGE I. Ecuador: constitutions and caudillos. 196p $3; pa $2 Univ. of Calif. press

342.86 Ecuador—Constitutional history. Ecuador—Politics and government A51-9332

For descriptive note see Annual for 1951.

"The author has supplemented his four years in the Office of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs with six months recently spent in the country he is describing. His acquaintance with the literature in Spanish and English is wide and discriminating. The result is a book which, while it is no more distinguished in its writing than run-of-the-mill American social science, merits the judgment that it is the best study of Ecuador's constitutional and political problems." W. R. Crawford

+ Am Hist R 57:484 Ja '52 440w

Reviewed by Willmoore Kendall

Am Pol Sci R 46:833 S '52 1100w

"This is one of the most realistic studies of governmental organization and functioning and political behavior in Latin America that has come to the attention of the reviewer. It should prove interesting and useful not merely to others working in the field of political science, but to geographers, economists, and sociologists as well. Indeed it is to be hoped that the little volume will be read by many of the 5 million college graduates in this country." T. L. Smith

+ Ann Am Acad 280:242 Mr '52 500w

Foreign Affairs 30:685 J1 '52 40w

"This sound investigation, careful in its attention to the sources, shows full cognizance of the intangible elements in human society and in political behavior."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:68 Mr '52 220w

BLAU, JOSEPH LEON. Men and movements in American philosophy. 403p $6; to schools $4.50 Prentice-Hall

191 Philosophy, American. Philosophers, American 52-8596

Traces the development of philosophic ideas and systems in the United States from the time of Jonathan Edwards to that of John Dewey. Covers such movements as transcendentalism, idealism, pragmatism, realism, and naturalism. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 48:350 J1 1 '52

"Though this book is undoubtedly designed for use as a textbook in college and university departments of philosophy, it would be unreasonable to ask for a clearer or more readable exposition of the course of philosophical thought in America from Jonathan Edwards to John Dewey."

+ Christian Century 69:1258 O 29 '52 240w

"This is a textbook history by an able and experienced teacher who knows the primary sources at first hand and has worked directly from them. . . There are of course blemishes, but they are remediable without abandonment of the general plan. There are, in the first place, minor inaccuracies in statements of fact. . . There are also opacities and confusions of interpretation. . . But if these are blemishes, as I think they are, they can easily be removed in a second printing, and they do not greatly detract from the usefulness of the first. On the whole the book is accurate, incisive, expertly adapted to its purpose, and, within its self-imposed limits, adequate." M. H. Fisch

+ — J Philos 49:675 O 9 '52 950w

School & Society 75:383 Je 14 '52 30w

BLEEKER, SONIA (MRS HERBERT SPENCER ZIM). The Cherokee; Indians of the mountains; il. by Althea Karr. 159p $2 Morrow

970.1 [970.3] Cherokee Indians—Juvenile literature 52-5928

A book for young readers about the Cherokee Indians, hunters, farmers and athletes, who ranged the forests and highlands of Kentucky, Virginia, Tennessee and Georgia before the white men came. There is a chapter on their famous ball game, lacrosse, and another on the great chief Sequoyia.

Booklist 49:18 S 1 '52

Kirkus 20:324 Je 1 '52 200w

"Such a book should interest any age over twelve and help to create a more enlightened attitude toward all Indians." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 N 9 '52 120w

Sat R 35:74 N 15 '52 50w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal

Springf'd Republican p6D Ag 24 '52 120w

Wis Lib Bul 48:218 S '52

BLEICH, FRIEDRICH, and RAMSEY, LYLE B. Buckling strength of metal structures; ed. by Hans H. Bleich. (Engineering societies monographs) 508p $10 McGraw

620.18 Strength of materials. Steel construction 51-12588

"A systematic presentation of theories and data useful to engineers in the design of structures such as ship hulls that include columns, plates and beams. The author combed the literature, but instead of merely abstracting papers, he synthesized their contents and simplified them where necessary. Citations to the source articles are included." Library J

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 77:902 My 15 '52 30w

N Y New Tech Bks 37:28 Mr '52

"This remarkable book combines an exhaustive historical and critical survey of the literature with an extensive amount of original work."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:211 Je '52 210w

BLEILER, EVERETT FRANKLIN, and DIKTY, T. E., eds. Imagination unlimited; science-fiction and science. 430p $3.50 Farrar, Straus

Short stories—Collections 52-1555

Thirteen science-fiction short stories.

Booklist 48:361 J1 1 '52

Bookmark 11:211 Je '52

"This is the most original science-fiction roundup ever to appear. It's not superior in all ways. Not every piece in the collection is a masterpiece. But, in a scholarly way, 'Imagination Unlimited' can't be beat." Mark Reinsberg

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p26 N 16 '52 170w

"These [stories] require some scientific background for complete understanding, but any SF fan can and will enjoy the ingenuity of plot." M. C. Scoggin

+ Horn Bk 28:342 O '52 30w

Kirkus 20:96 F 1 '52 120w

"Most of the stories in this volume are relatively recent; most of them are by authors normally capable of excellent writing; but almost without exception they are as arid as a collection of period pieces from 'Amazing Stories' of 1926, and as loose and inaccurate in their scientific thinking. It is impossible to believe that this pretentious but vacuous volume was edited by the compilers of the admirable manual 'Best Science Fiction' series." H. H. Holmes

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Ap 20 '52 160w

N Y Times p15 Ag 10 '52 310w

Reviewed by Don Fabun

San Francisco Chronicle p25 Ap 20 '52 150w

"Generally pretty good, with more emphasis on story than on science. Useful introductory collection." Fletcher Pratt

+ Sat R 35:34 Ag 2 '52 30w

BLEILER, EVERETT FRANKLIN, and DIKTY, T. E., eds. See Year's best science fiction novels, 1952

BLISH, JAMES. Jack of eagles. 246p $2.75 Greenberg

52-5618

Science-fiction.

"A rare Martian orchid to James Blish for giving us science fiction in its purest form; the logical extrapolation of present knowledge and probability so that the reader passes without a quiver from the known to the unknown." H. H. Holmes

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Ap 13 '52 170w

"Brilliant thought and logic are here contained within the framework of a pretty bad novel." J. F. McComas

+ N Y Times p17 J1 27 '52 160w

Reviewed by Don Fabun

San Francisco Chronicle p25 Ap 20 '52 200w

Reviewed by Fletcher Pratt

Sat R 35:44 My 24 '52 20w

BLOCH, MARIE HALUN. Big Steve, the double quick tunnelman; il. by Nicolas. 71p $2.50 Coward-McCann

52-4220

A tall tale for young readers. The hero, Big Steve, began his first tunnel at the age of three months, and from there on he and his "rock hog," who was part dog, part mole, and part gopher, dug bigger and better tunnels from Florida to Nebraska.

Booklist 49:144 D 15 '52

Horn Bk 28:405 D '52 130w

"A lively, funny book. . . Even though this is the fourth book Nicolas has illustrated on fall lists, his pictures are fine. Their vigorous humor and dashing action are just right for these wild doings. Younger boys will have a merry time with this book. How much is American legend and how much is Mrs. Bloch we are not able to say, nor does it much matter." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p2 N 16 '52 160w

"Big Steve, a convincing addition to American folk heroes, sounds like a bragger, but he does everything he says he'll do as calm and sensible as you please. The drawings, by Nicolas Mordvinoff, are also calm and sensible, in a big way." Marjorie Fischer

+ N Y Times pt2, p37 N 16 '52 130w

Sat R 35:50 N 15 '52 80w

BLOCHMAN, LAWRENCE GOLDTREE. Recipe for homicide. 222p $2.50 Lippincott

52-5633

Detective story.

Booklist 49:15 S 1 '52

"A bright brew."

+ Kirkus 20:308 My 15 '52 70w

"Mr. Blochman tells a story smoothly, with suitable mystification and he transmits a good deal of excitement even in his descriptions of the processes of soup manufacture. It all reads easily and although the solution isn't as interesting or as credible as the rest of it, that doesn't matter a great deal." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 J1 27 '52 220w

"Mr. Blochman handles the Communist question with more subtle credibility than most of his colleagues who adopt it as a stylish theme, while he fills in the reader on all the fascinating details of the cannery business." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p21 J1 13 '52 170w

"Displays beautiful mixing of accurate scientific detail with solid human interest. B plus." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 J1 20 '52 100w

BLOCK, HERBERT. Herblock book; text and cartoons by [the author]. 244p il $2.75 Beacon press

973 U.S.—History—Humor, caricatures, etc. World politics—Humor, caricatures, etc. Caricatures and cartoons 52-13175

"Herbert Block is a cartoonist for 'The Washington Post'. . . Hitherto Block's medium has been the political cartoon and in this book he has assembled a hundred or so of the most pungent, but to them he has added text as pungent as the cartoons. This text has much of the quality of the drawings, blunt, full of common sense, and depending for its effect on the pop that follows when an inflated balloon is touched by the lighted end of a cigarette." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Reviewed by Roland Sawyer

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 O 28 '52 670w

Reviewed by Donald McDonald

Commonweal 57:149 N 14 '52 550w

Kirkus 20:615 S 15 '52 210w

"The unfinished story of the 1952 Presidential campaign couldn't be completely covered in this volume but there is background material aplenty to enlighten the voters on the issues. May I suggest the Herblock Book as a quick refresher course for anyone looking for enlightenment." D. R. Fitzpatrick

+ New Repub 127:18 O 13 '52 850w

"This is one of the most remarkable books of the year and the most remarkable thing about it is the fact that it is remarkable. For its quality is plain common sense, backed by courage and lighted by humor, and it is remarkable that a man should be able to gain distinction merely by talking common sense boldly and humorously." G. W. Johnson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 O 19 '52 390w

"Herblock fans may reach for this volume simply to own a collection of Herblock cartoons. They won't be disappointed, for nearly every one of the 244 pages in the volume contains reprints of Herblock 'classics.' They will also get one of the keenest and best-informed commentaries on post-war American politics, economics and foreign relations." N. B. Brown

+ N Y Times p21 N 2 '52 750w

New Yorker 28:175 N 8 '52 100w

Sat R 35:33 D 27 '52 200w

BLOCK, IRVIN. Real book about explorers; il. by Jules Gotlieb. 192p $1.25 Garden City bks.

910.9 Explorers—Juvenile literature 52-8111

Accounts of some of the world's most fearless explorers, written for grades 5 to 8. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 48:324 Je 1 '52

Kirkus 19:704 D 15 '51 120w

"An excellent addition to the 'Real Book' series. . . Recommended for all libraries for developing interest in history and world understanding." Harriet Morrison

+ Library J 77:726 Ap 15 '52 40w

Reviewed by M. E. Martignoni

N Y Times p18 Je 29 '52 30w

BLOOMFIELD, ROBERT, pseud. See Edgley. L.

BLOUGH, ROY. Federal taxing process. 506p $5.65; to schools $5 Prentice-Hall

336.2 Taxation—U.S. 52-8597

"A comprehensive study and discussion of the many-sided process by which the tax policy of the federal government is developed and decided. Tax policy is treated as evolving from the clash of opinion (Part 1); formulated and passed through Congress, where it is subjected to the influence of the executive and of experts, and of opposing interests (Part 2); weighed as to considerations relating to the level of taxation (Part 3), and as to the distribution of taxes (Part 4). In Part 5 the conclusions are summarized to discover what bearing the taxing process has on the achievement of national policies, and to explore possible approaches to improvement of the policy-making process." Library J

"Occasionally there appears a book in which theoretical analysis and practical experience are so aptly interwoven as to give assurance to the reviewer that the work will become a classic in its field. The present volume deserves such a place in any list of writings on federal taxation." T. R. Snively

+ Am Econ R 42:969 D '52 1200w

"This is one of the half dozen most valuable books in the field of public finance that have appeared in the past quarter century, or even longer. Only Dr. Blough could have written it, since it is the fruit not only of thorough fiscal scholarship but also of his eight years as director of the Treasury Division of Tax Research and his current position as a member of the Council of Economic Advisors to the President." W. J. Shultz

+ Ann Am Acad 284:175 N '52 370w

Booklist 48:351 J1 1 '52

"A valuable, informative and stimulating work." J. E. Cross

+ Library J 77:1305 Ag '52 80w

BLUM, HAROLD FRANCIS. Time's arrow and evolution. 222p il $4 Princeton univ. press

575 Evolution. Thermodynamics 51-11726

For descriptive note see Annual for 1951.

"The book is distinguished because it asks profound and searching questions, and probes deeply in the attempt to find an answer. It is emphatically recommended to all who are interested in the philosophical aspects of biochemistry and biology." J. T. Edsall

+ Chem & Eng N 30:457 F 4 '52 220w

"The discussion in the book is preceded by expositions of basic concepts in geology, thermodynamics, organic chemistry, and biology. The scholarly layman and scientific specialist will find these expositions excellent introductions to the various fields of natural science which are relevant to problems of the origin and evolution of the world and of life. The solution presented in the book is essentially schematic."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:405 D '51 280w

"Disputable in part, as a really original work is almost sure to be, Dr. Blum's book is nevertheless a profound and stimulating contribution to some of the most basic problems of science. It is a mind-stretching book, and there is relaxation in turning to Mr. Williams' more facile, although also more somber, pages." G. G. Simpson

+ Yale R n s 41:275 winter '52 500w

BLUNDEN, GODFREY. Time of the assassins. 375p $3.75 Lippincott

52-5096

A story of what happened in Kharkov between the time in the late fall of 1941 when the Germans entered the city and the time sixteen months later when the Red Army drove them out.

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo

Atlantic 190:84 J1 '52 340w

BLUNDEN, GODFREY—Continued

"Blunden's artistic achievement is high here, as it was in 'A Room on the Route.' One of the foreign correspondents brought to Kharkov to witness the Communists' repossession of the city, Blunden observed the final scene. The whole book is the product of his informed imagination, what is in effect authentic history set down as fiction, the only possible medium." A. C. Ames

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 My 25 '52 370w

"In the Kafka trend, the sifting here of values, emotions, and mental processes has a sterile quality as a cohesive novel although in some of its scenes and incidents there is a clean cut impact in the grim and gruesome images of a manysided conflict."

Kirkus 20:233 Ap 1 '52 200w

Reviewed by R. S. Taylor

+ Library J 77:894 My 15 '52 90w

"Though 'The Time of the Assassins' does not possess all the dramatic stature its theme has scope for, it does attain near-epic proportions as a polemic. Five years ago Mr. Blunden wrote a widely commented-on study of authoritarianism in 'A Room on the Route.' Now with this second novel he presents another compelling brief against ideology gone berserk, against the goose-stepping boot that treads on the dignity and aspiration of the human countenance." Frederic Morton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Je 8 '52 700w

"Godfrey Blunden, who will be remembered for his searching novel, 'A Room on the Route,' now gives us another pitiful, tragic, but accurate picture of the Russian mind. 'The Time of the Assassins' is perhaps the only novel on Russia written by a contemporary that can stand favorable comparison with Mr. Koestler's fine book, 'Darkness at Noon.' Mr. Blunden is one of the very few war correspondents able to translate what he saw into moving and authentic fiction." Quentin Reynolds

+ N Y Times p5 My 25 '52 700w

"'The Time of the Assassins' is more a matter of reporting than of invention. But while it has no great aesthetic appeal and cannot be given much credit for literary grace, it makes its points in a blunt way and tells its horrid and fascinating story effectively. . . . Every page of the book is inspired by an affection for the Russians and for those Slavic traits that are the essence of Russian culture and that are the reason it is so rich and so productive, actually and potentially. It is easy to let one's fears bustle one into dishonesty and to fall into the crusading spirit that denies all virtue to the beastly heathen. Mr. Blunden is refreshingly honest and explicit about the innate virtues that make the Russians, however the winds of politics and expediency may blow, a likable breed of men. It is because of this honesty and tenderness that 'The Time of the Assassins' is such a moving and stirring book." Anthony West

+ New Yorker 28:113 Je 14 '52 1250w

"This is a book to horrify the most callous. And it is quite true that many people do not like to read novels that shock them or make them think. Nevertheless there are things which can be adequately conveyed by the novel far better than by the most carefully documented fact-piece." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Je 22 '52 800w

Reviewed by Nathan Rothman

Sat R 35:21 Je 21 '52 650w

Time 59:114 My 19 '52 700w

BODINGTON, NANCY (SHELLEY SMITH, pseud). Crooked man [Eng title: Man alone]. 186p $2.50 Harper

52-7297

Story of a criminal, his misdeeds, and his final fate.

"Dismal and unsavory gruel of scrapings from the bottom of England's social barrel." Drexel Drake

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p21 N 9 '52 50w

"An unsavory study which is precise in pathology and cold in ridicule."

— Kirkus 20:387 Jl 1 '52 110w

"Miss Smith transmits very cleverly what she calls 'the indescribable odor of the petty criminal,' but her story and its stuffs are so familiar, that one wishes her skill had been exerted upon a less commonplace subject." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 S 14 '52 120w

"Dissimulation is the highest form of humor; and Shelley Smith's chief protagonist is the jauntiest dissimulator you will ever meet. He is sly, mendacious, hypocritical, glib, amoral, crooked. You will love him." Rex Lardner

+ N Y Times p4 S 7 '52 290w

"The London sub-world and the generally subhuman characters of which Miss Smith writes may be a little gloomy and depressing in their monotony, but altogether this is an honest and convincing performance."

+ New Yorker 28:139 O 4 '52 80w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p25 S 21 '52 80w

"Case-history sort of job; cops only incidental (but effective); story's relentlessness almost painful at times. Unusual." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 35:38 S 20 '52 20w

"A sordid story, but well invented and told." Esther Haward

+ Spec 189:450 O 3 '52 20w

"An excellent mystery story, written in far better style than most 'whodunits.'" D. K.

+ Springf'd Republican p4C Ag 31 '52 50w

BOGAN, LOUISE. Achievement in American poetry, 1900-1950. (Twentieth-century literature in America) 157p $2.50 Regnery

811.09 American poetry—History and criticism 51-8384

For descriptive note see Annual for 1951.

Reviewed by Rolf Fjelde

New Repub 126:20 Mr 3 '52 260w

"Miss Bogan has attempted, and very nearly brought off, the impossible: a detailed history, in a hundred and nine small pages, of American poetry over the past half century, complete with its antecedents and present prospects. So many of her capsule criticisms are just and penetrating . . . that it is too bad such important poets as John Peale Bishop and R. P. Blackmur are not even mentioned. . . . Miss Bogan may inexplicably put Gilbert Murray at Cambridge and argue that women are the carriers of poetry, but she has a great many wise and moving things to say, and her love for the browbeaten muse comes through quite clearly."

+ New Yorker 28:134 Mr 22 '52 160w

Reviewed by Lawrence Ferling

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ja 6 '52 200w

"In spite of her debatable approach, there can be no question about the rightness of her direction. . . . It is no discredit to Miss Bogan that she is more at ease helping her readers through difficult terrain than she is on smooth and well-marked highways. . . . My objection is a limited one. It is not to Miss Bogan's style, which is taut and never trivial; nor to her taste, which is sensitive, if eclectic. My objection centers about the implications of her title, which is a promise and which the book only partially fulfills." Louis Untermeyer

+ Sat R 35:21 F 2 '52 850w

Reviewed by A. G. Smith

Social Forces 30:364 Mr '52 150w

"Miss Bogan's clarity of style, her ability to compress a great deal of information into a few lucid, interesting phrases, and her severely just appraisal form the chief attractions of this volume. Although it is possible to quarrel with certain omissions, the work of Horace Gregory, for instance, and with certain choices of proportion and emphasis, it should be recognized that problems of stress are inevitable in so short a book."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:21 Mr '52 230w

BOKSER, BEN ZION. Wisdom of the Talmud; a thousand years of Jewish thought. 180p $3.75 Philosophical lib.

296.1 [296] Talmud 51-14677

"The Talmud is an immense body of literature about which most Christians, unfortunately, know very little. Dr. Bokser's little book (180 pages) offers an easy and attractive introduction to both its history and its contents." Christian Century

Bookmark 11:179 My '52 30w

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 69:312 Mr 12 '52 280w

"This is the best introduction to the Talmud, both popular and sound, accurate and modern and easy to read, which is no mean virtue." J. A. Maynard

+ Churchman 166:17 Ap 1 '52 150w

"Rabbi Bokser's volume is useful because of its brevity and popular style." Alfred Werner

+ N Y Times p28 Mr 2 '52 230w

"A popular introduction to the Talmud which is meant—as, indeed, the Talmud itself was meant—for the general reader." H. U. Ribalow

+ Sat R 35:37 Ap 12 '52 410w

BOLLES, EDMUND BLAIR. How to get rich in Washington; rich man's division of the welfare state. 309p $3.75 Norton

301.46 [172.2] Corruption (in politics). U.S. —Politics and government—1945- 52-7612

"Analysis of the revelations which have been made by Congressional investigating committees of the recent misdeeds of Federal administrative agencies." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) Index.

Am Pol Sci, R 46:582 Je '52 30w

Reviewed by John Buttrick

Ann Am Acad 282:138 Jl '52 400w

"A good deal of the material has appeared, piecemeal, in the newspapers, but drawn together between the covers of a book, it makes grimly arresting reading. The author's meticulous documentation is going to make a good many people squirm: he names names by the score, cites dates, specifies the sums involved in wasteful or nefarious deals." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 189:80 Ap '52 600w

Booklist 48:241 Ap 1 '52

Reviewed by Walter Trohan

Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 Mr 2 '52 410w

Reviewed by Roland Sawyer

Christian Science Monitor p7 Mr 3 '52 850w

Reviewed by L. D. Farrar

Churchman 166:16 Ap 15 '52 250w

Current Hist 22:320 My '52 120w

Foreign Affairs 31:158 O '52 30w

Reviewed by John Ise

J Pol Econ 60:359 Ag '52 650w

Kirkus 20:104 F 1 '52 290w

Reviewed by R. S. Taylor

Library J 77:529 Mr 15 '52 120w

Reviewed by Willard Shelton

Nation 174:350 Ap 12 '52 750w

Reviewed by J. R. Newman

New Repub 126:23 Mr 31 '52 300w

"This is an excellent summary. . . It deserves to be read by every voter and taxpayer." Paul Douglas

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 Mr 2 '52 1500w

"One of the most convincing and effective recitals of mass corruption to be published in many years." Cabell Phillips

+ N Y Times p6 Mr 2 '52 900w

+ New Yorker 28:120 Mr 15 '52 160w

"This is not essentially a campaign document. It is a reasonably objective book whose great virtue is that it tries to get below the surface and find the basic answers to the eternal problem of how to save public men from private pressures. That he succeeds in finding the final answer is questionable, but he does set forth some interesting suggestions for a course to be taken." Karl Schriffigiesser

+ Sat R 35:44 Mr 15 '52 800w

Springf'd Republican p10D Mr 30 '52 120w

BOLLINGER, JOSEPH WALTER. Simple bracelets. 77p il $2.50 Bruce pub.

739.27 Bracelets

52-1

"A generously illustrated book on an article of jewelry that appeals to most handicrafters when they begin to make jewelry. Essentially, it is a project book. There are twenty-two projects beginning with plain bands and concluding with twisted-welded bracelets. Fundamental operations such as metal cutting, curving, punching, and gem setting are clearly described. Designed for use in organized classes, the book can be used easily by hobbyists working without formal instruction." N Y New Tech Bks

Booklist 48:181 F 1 '52

N Y New Tech Bks 37:8 Ja '52

BOLTON, HERBERT EUGENE. Pageant in the wilderness. 265p il maps $5.50 Utah State hist. soc, 337 State Capitol, Salt Lake City

979 Escalante-Dominguez expedition, 1776 51-8412

"In 1776, the Governor of New Mexico backed a missionary expedition that might, he thought, open up a trade route to California. It got as far west as the site now occupied by Deseret, Utah, turned south, and then on the way back to Santa Fe crossed the Colorado River just north of the Arizona line. That crossing and a diary kept by Fray Escalante are its chief claims to remembrance." (N Y Times) In this volume the author summarizes the diary, and then prints the diary in translation with notes.

"It is a fascinating account and a major contribution to the story of the southwest." John Randolph

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 N 11 '51 170w

"The present volume will add little to Herbert E. Bolton's illustrious reputation as historian and author. Yet his knowledge of geography always illuminates his historical writing. His map showing Escalante's trail enables a modern to know exactly where the explorers went." J. F. Dobie

N Y Times p20 O 28 '51 360w

"Dr. Bolton, writing with the lucidity he invariably commands, provides the first readily understandable picture of the Escalante expedition as a whole. This kind of clarity comes in great part from his having covered the ground himself, following Escalante's own record for the itinerary and observing as he went. You can't beat that method, as Dr. Bolton knows." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 S 23 '51 800w

BOLTON, ISABEL, pseud. See Miller, M. B.

BOLTON, IVY MAY. Father Junipero Serra; il. by Robert Burns. 160p $2.75 Messner

B or 92 Serra, Junipero—Juvenile literature. Missions—California 52-9144

Fictionized biography of the founder of the California missions for readers of junior high school age and up. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 48:324 Je 1 '52

Bookmark 11:236 Jl '52

"Vivid writing makes this life of the Franciscan missionary one that will be read and enjoyed by girls and boys." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 28:242 Ag '52 90w

"Good supplementary reading."

+ Kirkus 20:159 Mr 1 '52 160w

"Recommended for ages 10-14." H. M. Brogan

+ Library J 77:1018 Je 1 '52 80w

BOLTON, I. M.—Continued

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 My '52 20w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell
N Y Times p18 J1 13 '52 90w

"It is an appealing and tender story of a devoted man, whose dream of building missions in California came true and remains with us."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 My 11 '52 170w

"The book is thoughtfully, sometimes tenderly, written and, though it is plain hero-worship, its style is gentle and restrained. It is pleasing in appearance and has a good bibliography and index. The illustrations are nicely done." M. P. Allen
+ Sat R 35:35 J1 19 '52 130w

BONDI, HERMANN. Cosmology. 179p $4.50
Cambridge
523.1 Cosmology [52-9973]

"An expert presentation of cosmology as a branch of physics rather than of philosophy. In the first chapter the author describes the two traditional approaches to cosmology which he calls 'the extrapolating' and 'the deductive.' . . . The longest part of the book is devoted to the leading cosmological theories. . . . The style of the book is semitechnical and includes some mathematics. It will appeal primarily to persons—both scientists and general readers—with some education in physical sciences." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 77:1209 J1 '52 50w
N Y New Tech Bks 37:53 J1 '52

BONETT, JOHN, pseud. See Coulson, J.

BONI, MARGARET BRADFORD, ed. Fireside book of favorite American songs; arranged for the piano by Norman Lloyd; il. by Aurelius Battaglia; intros. by Anne Brooks; with a foreword by the late Carl Van Doren. 359p $5 Simon & Schuster

784 Songs. American

A companion volume to The Fireside Book of Folk Songs (Book Review Digest 1947). Contains 131 songs with music and illustrations, beginning with songs of the 1890's and going back in time to the songs brought to this country by the Pilgrims. Indexes.

Bookmark 12:77 Ja '53 20w

Reviewed by M. B. King
Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 N 30 '52 160w

Library J 77:2188 D 15 '52 30w

"This book will bring tears to the eyes and a mnemonic pleasure to the heart, and it will tell or remind its reader, its singer, its player of a lot about that civilization of which these songs are the dial tone." Irwin Edman
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 N 9 '52 550w

"Like its jolly predecessor, 'The Fireside Book of Folk Songs,' this is a book to gather around the piano with. Its pieces are well chosen, its piano accompaniments simple and easy without being scrawny, its editors, in their short notes, seldom stick out their necks beyond the reach of their knowledge. Illustrator Battaglia is a gleeful social satirist." Horace Reynolds
+ N Y Times p28 N 9 '52 490w

"Among the 131 songs here—with words and simple piano arrangements—there are all sorts of songs the reader will know. Mrs. Boni understands exactly what she is doing." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 N 24 '52 650w

BONN, MORITZ JULIUS. Whither Europe—union or partnership? 207p $3.75 Philosophical lib.

940.55 European federation. Europe—Politics 52-11275

"Western Unity began as an official issue in 1947. . . . From then on, a great debate began, whether a close federation, either of the Western European nations alone or of the whole North Atlantic community, was a possible goal. Dr. Bonn, a German economist who has lived many years in Britain and the United States, argues against union on a federal basis. He advocates instead, following therein the British and Scandinavian viewpoint, a system of multiple partnership and limited working arrangements." (New Repub) Index.

Reviewed by Hans Kohn
New Repub 127:28 O 20 '52 250w

"The vigor of argumentation and the elegance of style which characterize this volume just as they graced his previous books, seem extraordinary in an author so close to the age of eighty. Moritz Julius Bonn, the favorite disciple of the famous economist Lujo Brentano, is one of the last great representatives of the old liberalism in Europe." F. E. Hirsch
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 S 21 '52 450w

BONNER, CLINT. A hymn is born. 108p il $2.50; pa $1 Wilcox & Follett 245 Hymns

Fifty non-sectarian hymns, with a one page story for each giving origin. The stories have appeared in a syndicated newspaper column. Includes generally accepted versions but no music. Index.

Reviewed by W. L. Caswell
Churchman 166:12 J1 '52 90w

Reviewed by C. K. Miller
Library J 77:1512 S 15 '52 40w

BONNER, JOHN TYLER. Morphogenesis; an essay on development. 296p il $5 Princeton univ. press

575.6 Morphology 52-5847

"Study of what is known about the development of living organisms. It is organized under such chapter titles as 'Physics and Chemistry in Development,' 'Patterns of Growth,' 'Polarity and Symmetry,' and 'Patterns of Differentiation.' The author points out that there are both constructive processes and limiting processes in biological growth." Library J

Booklist 48:373 J1 15 '52

"The book will appeal not only to professional biologists and biochemists, but also to educated general readers who are attracted by biological topics." R. R. Hawkins
Library J 77:1308 Ag '52 70w

"This book is highly recommended to laymen as well as scientists. It is a stimulating, splendidly written survey of biology's most crucial questions." John Pfeiffer
+ Sat R 35:40 Ag 9 '52 280w

"The subject matter is unusually well selected, it is well and clearly presented, and is illustrated with many excellent figures. The book will serve admirably to help the many specialist researchers in this field to see the woods as well as the trees."
+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:312 S '52 210w

BONNER, MARY GRAHAM. Wait and see; il. by John N. Barron. 87p $2 Knopf

51-13017

Collecting was "Spider" Webb's hobby, but he was like most small boys, full of other ideas too. This is the story of Spider's most important find: an Indian campsite. For ages seven to ten.

Bookmark 11:211 Je '52

"Disappointing."
— Kirkus 20:125 F 15 '52 90w

"Good story about a boy, his dog, and his family that will interest 9-11-year-olds. Recommended." Helen Perdue

+ Library J 77:908 My 15 '52 80w

"Lots of boys will recognize themselves in Spider. At eight to ten, they may even start digging too, but they will need a Grampie about like this one, to make them persist, and also to choose the right place for their efforts." L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 My 11 '52 90w

"An appealing, true-to-life story of a small boy in the grip of an idea, this has a background of pleasant family relationships, a good plot, character interest and plenty of wholesome adventure." C. E. Van Norman

+ N Y Times p30 My 4 '52 130w

BONNER, PAUL HYDE. SPQR. 325p $3
Scribner

52-8112

The scene is Rome, 148. "[It is] the story of Lovat Fraser, an American abroad with the Embassy, determined to retain his innocence and remain uninvolved in the sphere in which he moves. But drawn into the rivalry between the Princess Biccholi (nee Daisy) and the Duchess Marina, over a bedroom boulder, Fraser intercedes to the point of disposing of the gentleman in question. . . The blackball which ricochets against their former lover, the poisoning of a Russian agent, the revelation of Marina's Borgian behavior, all this lands Fraser in dark, deep waters which return him to America and Daisy with a new appreciation." (Kirkus)

"Though crisply written and entertaining, the story in S.P.Q.R. is decidedly less impressive than Bonner's sure and intimate treatment of the Italian setting and his knowledge of Italy. There is an air of contrivance about the plot. . . But the printed page is wonderfully evocative when Bonner is writing about trout fishing at Rieti; the dazzling summer brilliance of the Piazza Novona with its chirping children and its mighty Bernini fountains. . . And there is one really superb characterization—the portrait of Monsignor Walsh." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 189:33 Ap '52 400w

Booklist 48:247 Ap 1 '52

"Facile, diverting, modern tale of high intrigue. . . Sophisticated."

Bookmark 11:184 My '52 50w

"S P Q R" starts out like a gentle idyl with Rome its heroine as well as its setting. It ends as a thriller with all of the literary organ stops pulled out and excitement tense. . . It is written with rare sophistication, with subtle understanding, with suavity, and it may well leave 'S P Q R' branded upon readers' hearts." Fanny Butcher

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Mr 23 '52 500w

"It is a romantic and silly story." William Pfaff

— Commonweal 56:53 Ap 18 '52 330w

"A fairly dressy drama of sophisticated internationalism, which is not quite as subtle or as devious as it would lead you to believe."

Kirkus 20:14 Ja 1 '52 180w

"Recommended for all collections aiming to include current fiction of value." R. E. Kingery

Library J 77:527 Mr 15 '52 150w

"Rome was never like this, even for the Americans."

— Nation 175:37 J1 12 '52 170w

Reviewed by Gouverneur Paulding

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Mr 30 '52 550w

"Mr. Bonner has taken all the absurdities of his story at their face value. He would like us to believe that the blood of Lucrezia Borgia still runs in the veins of Roman society ladies and that his hero is a Sir Pelleas, a good crusader, whose armor is bright. He has been keen enough to detect in the Rome of today 'a no identifiable virus, against which there is no known antibiotic.' But he has fallen himself a victim to the infection, 'SPQR' is a mildly interesting fantasy, it is not a picture of the disease." Paolo Milano

N Y Times p22 Mr 23 '52 600w

"It is not a good or even a serious novel, but it has the great virtue of being amusing."

Anthony West

New Yorker 28:137 Ap 5 '52 440w

"Since the time of Stendhal, writer-diplomats have shown a weakness for Rome. Mr. Bonner has done his bit in justifying their constant interest. He has written a very readable, light-hearted biography of a fascinating circle in a mad, sad, glad, but not so bad city. The Romans will like it and no doubt will go around roman-a-cleffing like mad." Serge Hughes

+ Sat R 35:16 Mr 22 '52 480w

BONY, JEAN. French cathedrals; photographs by Martin Hurlimann; descriptive notes by Peter Meyer. 47p 196pl $7.50 Houghton

726.5 [726.6] Cathedrals

51-14430

"A hundred and ninety-six pages of architectural and sculptural photographs devoted to the Gothic of the Ile de France and of Normandy, with an introduction and notes pointing out essentials of style and development." Spec

"A model of what a good craftsman can make of a semi-popular art book on an important subject."

+ New Repub 125:20 D 10 '51 60w

"The cathedrals of France, which must rank among the most vigorously imaginative structures ever erected by man, have all been photographed before—and abundantly—but hardly ever have they been made the collective subject of so penetrating a photographic analysis as this one. . . The text, which is written with great perceptiveness and authority, makes the whole thing an unusually rewarding and informative book."

+ New Yorker 27:178 D 8 '51 150w

"Since Mr. Hurlimann's sensitive negatives have been reproduced with what amounts to love and kindness, there is no good reason why this book shouldn't reach a much larger public than the chosen few who teach art and architecture in our colleges. All of which makes one wonder why the publishers have burdened the text with scholarly notes and a dignified introduction, fit reading for scholars who have Viollet-le-Duc and all the other authorities on their library shelves, but scarcely the sort of thing you and I would like to skim through on a winter's evening. . . A friendly preface would have made it plain that although all art may not belong to all men, the cathedrals of France belong to mankind." W. A.

+ Sat R 35:46 F 2 '52 320w

"The illustrations are admirably selected, and composed without that freakishness which invaded architectural photography shortly before the war. . . This is a book which will remind old travellers of what they have seen, and give future travellers a foretaste of experiences to come." J. M. C.

+ Spec 187:44 J1 6 '51 180w

"A notable contribution to the study of Gothic art. The reader is not taken on a mere sight-seeing tour of the French cathedrals but the relationship of these to one another is lucidly explained, while the photography is excellent. M. Hurlimann's admirable presentation of both the sculpture and the architecture makes M. Bony's description more readily understandable and doubly informative."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p624 O 5 '51 1150w

BOONE, LALIA PHIPPS. Petroleum dictionary. 338p $5 Univ. of Okla. press

665.503 Petroleum industry and trade—Dictionaries 52-10009

"The picturesque language of the oil field dominates this dictionary of petroleum terms. However, the author has included terms from refining, pipelining, and production as well as from prospecting and drilling. The terms were gathered over a period of about five years, part of which was spent in the oil fields interviewing oilmen. The author states that of the approximately 6,000 entries 2,254 are listed and defined for the first time. The dictionary of terms is preceded by a long essay on the origin and characteristics of the language of the oil field." Library J

BOONE, L. P.—Continued

Booklist 48:353 J1 1 '52

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 77:1308 Ag '52 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 37:69 S '52

"A valuable practical aid to those concerned with the oil industry and an excellent contribution to the study of the Americal language."

R. T.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 N 2 '52
230w

BOOTH, FRED W. Victory also ends. 267p $3
Rinehart

52-5555

Story of an American combat officer during several weeks of fighting in Italy. Thru Mike Andrews' thoughts and memories glimpses are revealed of his unhappy life as a civilian.

"A non-stop recapitulation which is strong on realism and reporting, which has its grim, macabre humor and wry bitterness and which, in posing a flawed character against the war, does offer a different sort of combat story. Men only."

Kirkus 19:711 D 15 '51 240w

Reviewed by H. L. Roth

Library J 77:361 F 15 '52 90w

"In writing 'Victory Also Ends,' the author was interested mainly in proving that 'physical courage is self-defeating without moral courage to direct it.' If Mr. Booth had probed more deeply into this aspect in his main character, Mike's death would have the tragic impact it deserved." Louis Falstein

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 My 18
'52 320w

"Most of this story dispenses with moralizing. The author, a former company commander in Italy, who now works in a Minneapolis advertising agency, ably shows that from battalion level down there is no 'big picture' but simply the test of arms. His writing is neat. One wishes, though, that he could have eliminated a battle or two proving only that physical prowess counts in war and let out the reins on the other reasons why men fight skillfully." Herbert Mitgang

+ N Y Times p24 Mr 2 '52 320w

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Je 29 '52
340w

"Mr. Booth has skillfully pictured the two aspects of his hero's character, but he has failed convincingly to show how they were combined in the one personality. The result is a constantly engrossing novel of high tension action, with vivid strokes of characterization, which falls just short of the author's larger intentions." E. J. Fitzgerald

+ Sat R 35:36 Mr 15 '52 230w

Springf'd Republican p10D Ap 20 '52
100w

BOOTHE, CLARE (MRS HENRY ROBINSON LUCE). See Luce, C. B.

BORCHERT, WOLFGANG. Man outside; the prose works; tr. from the German by David Porter; introd. by Stephen Spender. 259p $3.50 New directions

"The author of the thirty-nine short stories and the play that make up this book was a German who died in 1947, at the age of twenty-six, as a consequence of privations suffered on the Russian front and in Nazi prisons." New Yorker

Reviewed by W. P. Clancy

Commonweal 56:76 Ap 25 '52 750w

"Although the symbolism and concentration upon physical decay present a peculiarly dehydrated portrait of human beings caught up in the tragedy of our time, this is a compelling and interesting collection. However, it is doubtful whether the distilled style and grisly overtones will carry much popular appeal."

Kirkus 20:41 Ja 15 '52 220w

Nation 174:608 Je 21 '52 220w

Reviewed by Theodore Hoffman

New Repub 126:21 Je 30 '52 550w

"In Borchert, one meets an uncontrolled writer who can convey not only the idea of pain but the feeling of it directly, and who is also a complete and original master in displaying it. We can think of faults, can suspect, here and there, the tone, we can smell the theatre at times, but we have been made to feel by a poet who never loses his quickness, never fumbles an image, never sags in power, never loses precision." V. S. Pritchett

New Statesman & Nation 43:349 Mr
22 '52 2350w

"To those willing to pioneer into the unknown, Borchert's poetic discipline, his fiery spirit, and the Kokoschka-like quality of his vignettes will be a haunting experience." Richard Plant

+ N Y Times p12 Ag 3 '52 370w

"Some of the stories, though hardly more than sketches, evince a striking talent, and the play, 'The Man Outside,' made Borchert famous throughout Germany when it was produced—the day after he died. . . . There is a terrible nihilistic despair here, but it is relieved by a queer and engaging humor and by the author's inchoate belief in life."

+ New Yorker 28:136 Ap 12 '52 130w

"Even though Borchert does fail to create a picture of German guilt and responsibility, 'The Man Outside' remains a unique literary treat and a genuine artistic achievement." Jack Aldridge

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ap 6 '52
700w

"Borchert's stories have a permanent value and significance; if people wish to know what a great nation was like at the very moment of its greatest defeat, what this defeat felt like, looked like, they will read these stories." Goronwy Rees

+ Spec 188:344 Mr 14 '52 450w

BORDEN, CHARLES A. He sailed with Captain Cook; il. by Ralph Ray. 248p il $2.75
Crowell

52-7042

"Historical fiction based on a famous scientific expedition to the South Seas made by Captain James Cook of the British Royal Navy in 1768. Tobias, the young hero of the story, was a born sailor and already an able seaman at the age of fourteen, although he was so small for his years that he was called 'the runt' and often ridiculed for his size. His determination to conquer in spite of his handicap; his growing admiration for Captain Cook and the scientists who sailed with him; and his friendship with a South Sea Island boy all enrich this exciting and well-written book." Horn Bk

Booklist 48:268 Ap 15 '52

"Despite a lack of background and the maintenance of an irritating level of industry, duty, ambition and understanding by both the captain and 14-year-old Tobias, the hero, this account of the voyage of the Endeavor maintains its interest with plenty of villainy and suspense; a quantity of information about sailing comes in naturally, as well as the drama of the discoveries and the contacts with the island peoples."

+ Bookmark 11:163 Ap '52 60w

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 J1 27 '52
130w

+ Horn Bk 28:109 Ap '52 100w

Kirkus 20:73 F 1 '52 150w

"A fine book of exploration for boys and girls." C. W. Field

+ Library J 77:365 F 15 '52 60w

"First and best, for boys of twelve to fifteen or more, is the extraordinarily real sense given us of the work of all aboard an eighteenth century five-decker. The author is a sailing man; he has even crossed the Pacific in small sailboats. No wonder he can make real the storms, a near wreck, reefing the great sails, and all the wonderfully worded orders shouted by the captain." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 My 11 '52 300w

"Since Mr. Borden is apparently a better sailor than a story-teller, his plot sags at times, but the story of the voyage itself is swift-moving, colorful, and salty enough for any armchair seaman." E. L. B.

+ — N Y Times p22 Ap 13 '52 140w

San Francisco Chronicle p21 My 11 '52 150w

Sat R 35:29 Je 28 '52 70w

"The book is unusually well written, one of the best sea stories in recent years."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:258 S '52 60w

Wis Lib Bul 48:178 J1 '52

BORDEN, MARY (LADY SPEARS). You, the jury [Eng title: Martin Merriedew]. 346p $3 Longmans

52-5646

"Even in childhood Martin Merriedew was enigmatic, inspiring fierce devotion or hate. Lady Barbara, married to the presiding judge, relates the bitter story of his life and trial as a traitor. She loved Martin, though she never acknowledged it to herself. Because he followed the teachings of Christ in their literal rather than their spiritual meaning, Martin came a cropper with his fellow countrymen." Library J

Reviewed by P. L. Adams

Atlantic 190:76 S '52 380w

Booklist 48:369; 49:12 J1 15 '52; S 1 '52

Bookmark 12:9 O '52 40w

Reviewed by Riley Hughes

Cath World 176:71 O '52 320w

"Lest any one think that 'You, the Jury' is either primarily a religious tract or a plea for pacifism, there is the overwhelming evidence of its great popularity in England as well as its choice by the judges of the Book of the Month club. There is also, if you have any faith in the judgment of this old reviewer friend of yours, my assurance that 'You, the Jury' would be a remarkable novel whatever its theme, both technically and as a tense story." Fanny Butcher

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 S 14 '52 600w

Kirkus 20:86 F 1 '52 180w

"A thoroughly gripping novel, beautifully written." H. R. Forbes

+ Library J 77:432 Mr 1 '52 80w

"Much of the build-up, which places Martin consistently in an ambivalent light, now generous and bold, now malignantly dotty, is beautifully done. It is somewhere in the course of the trial that Miss Borden eschews competence; trying for something large, she fails awkwardly, if also with dignity." J. D. Scott

+ — New Statesman & Nation 43:280 Mr 8 '52 320w

Reviewed by William Shirer

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 S 14 '52 1100w

"The novel's chief fault is in its lack of conclusion; Martin cannot be understood by the narrator and, as a consequence, he remains hazy, not much more than a symbol. And at times Lady Barbara seems equally concerned about Martin's trial and the possibility of Cook's giving notice. 'You, the Jury' has the virtue of being thoroughly readable. But its grim subject-matter, in Lady Barbara's chatty style, becomes no more than table talk, slightly unusual and pleasantly stimulating." W. F. Weaver

+ — N Y Times p30 S 21 '52 300w

New Yorker 28:144 S 13 '52 70w

"Without being profound or superficial, Miss Borden writes a swift-paced novel intended to reach a wide audience." Ann Comfort

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 S 21 '52 700w

"It seems an ambition nowadays among writers of mystery stories to produce a trial which is the climax of the book. Well, here is a model of its kind, more extensive, more poignant in dialogue, and more important than the question of life or death. . . . Those who may be disappointed in the end of this story will not be disappointed in the story itself. And on consideration they will remember that our times are inconclusive and that in spiritual matters, when involved in a transitional world of science and materialism, we see only a little and darkly." H. S. Canby

+ Sat R 35:21 S 13 '52 700w

School & Society 76:159 S 6 '52 30w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal

Springf'd Republican p10D O 5 '52 210w

"The Second Coming is an ambitious subject for a novel. Dostoevsky touched on the idea in the Grand Inquisitor scene of The Brothers Karamazov. But it probably cannot be done in Author Borden's smoothly elegant manner, punctuated in startling places by punchy little colloquialisms—rather as though a piece of second-rate Henry James had been edited by Red Smith."

— Time 60:120 S 15 '52 380w

"The trial itself, which occupies half the novel, is treated with skill, and if some of Miss Borden's motivation is not very clear the issues are familiar enough to carry the occasionally blurred passages of narrative. Unfortunately, the extreme delusions of [Martin Merriedew] somewhat invalidate it as a study of conscientious objection, but what Miss Borden loses in universality she gains in melodrama."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p201 Mr 21 '52 110w

BORGENICHT, MIRIAM. Ring and walk in. 211p $2.50 Harper

52-5422

A novel of suspense, the scene of which is New York City.

Booklist 48:379 J1 15 '52

"Extraordinary characterization of a suave fiend in a movingly human, disturbingly frightening story of family disruption." Drexel Drake

Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 Je 22 '52 140w

Kirkus 20:203 Mr 15 '52 80w

"Miss Borgenicht wraps it up in an awful lot of words but what she really means to say is Boo. If you can gulp down her premise or her characters you might be frightened." James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Je 8 '52 40w

"Mrs. Borgenicht has pushed her terror just a millimeter too far; the physician-villain finally becomes all but incredible, and the overpowering evil of her plot could communicate itself more strongly if she did not so insistently rub the reader's nose into the word 'evil.' But the book still remains strong and moving, with the minor characters and the Manhattan background very much alive." Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p21 Je 15 '52 80w

"A story of mounting horror, neatly told." + New Yorker 28:100 My 31 '52 90w

"After you've finished this the villain may seem overdrawn and the psychiatry too pat, but while you're reading the suspense is terrific." L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Je 15 '52 40w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal

Springf'd Republican p5C J1 13 '52 150w

Wis Lib Bul 48:215 S '52

BORN, EDITH DE. Bidou inheritance. 255p $3 Norton

52-6918

Story of life in the Bordeaux region of France. Bidou, of the Bazar Bidou, had come up the hard way, and did not approve of the lazy husband of his only daughter, Madeleine. When the son-in-law was killed in the war, Madeleine and her son went back to live with Bidou. The conflict between father and daughter, Bidou's death, Madeleine's love affair, and her second marriage complete the novel.

Booklist 48:247 Ap 1 '52

"Edith de Born has written with restrained yet none the less intense excitement; and with a quiet ironic sense which is death to anyone it touches—and it touches not a few of these characters. Yet, apart from the artistry, perhaps the most moving quality is the warmth with which she accompanies her Madeleine through youth, unhappy marriage, and return to 'life with father'; through a passionate love, then, and final return to that sea level." Bradford Cook

+ Commonweal 55:622 Mr 28 '52 290w

Kirkus 20:42 Ja 15 '52 140w

"Strongly reminiscent not only of Gide—Mme de Born's obvious master—but also of the Flaubert of Madame Bovary, this mature first novel has a directness and simplicity that are refreshing in themselves and should lead us to expect further good things from the author, who is trilingual and writes excellent English."

+ Nation 174:257 Mr 15 '52 70w

"A careful, perceptive, thoroughly believable and extremely interesting study." A. L. G.

+ New Repub 126:23 Ap 7 '52 120w

Reviewed by Gouverneur Paulding

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Ap 6 '52 650w

"A cogent and moving novel, adroitly composed. . . There is something of Anatole France's touch in Miss de Born's way of telling her story through carefully contrasted little scenes." Nancy Lenkeith

+ N Y Times p20 Mr 9 '52 450w

"For all the author's laconic and unemotional approach to this sordid story, the long-drawn-out struggle between father and daughter results in a moving and effective novel. What makes it seem much better than many more profound novels is its admirable sense of proportion. Without the slightest loss of subtlety or sensitivity, it keeps the emotional and psychological problems of its characters in almost perfect balance with their daily-bread lives. This balance is one of the particular virtues of the French novel, and imparts to it a feeling of reality and completeness that is its extremely satisfying and pleasing characteristic feature. One can be glad that Miss de Born did not lose her grip on it when she decided to write in English." Anthony West

+ New Yorker 28:85 Mr 1 '52 900w

"The Bidou Inheritance' has no great originality of theme or treatment. The characters are not delineated with uncommon power. . . But the dull, mutilated life of the young woman dominated by her selfish and greedy father and especially the old miser, driven by his acquisitive mania and his horror of all that is sentiment and useless, imprint themselves upon the reader's mind. The novel boldly invites comparison with Balzac, Mauriac, and other giants of fiction. It does not come up to them, but it bears reading and even absorbs one to the end in spite of moderate gifts in the author." Henri Peyre

+ Sat R 35:15 Mr 8 '52 750w

"Not quite as alive as it should be, flawed here and there by a wish to explain, but beautifully cool in manner." R. D. Charques

+ Spec 187:896 D 28 '51 60w

"A restrained, carefully written story. . . The author essays a carefully cultivated, Flaubertian style, has a good eye for sociological background, and keeps her characters on the move."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p745 N 23 '51 200w

"Mrs. de Born is gentle, thorough, and absolutely truthful about all her characters; not one is badly done. But the towering figure is Old Bidou, the miser. This is exactly the character we might have expected to fail. . . Yet Mrs. de Born's miser is in no sense an imitation or a type. He has a quality of genial, almost good-natured stinginess, he takes a sinister but fascinating kind of joy in cheating his competitors and penny-pinching his own family, which rings true, reminds us of a dozen misers we have known, and yet carries the conviction of completely fresh observation." James Yaffe

+ Yale R n s 41:6 spring '52 280w

BORN, MAX. Restless universe; figures by Otto Koenigsberger; authorized translation by Winifred M. Deans. 2d ed rev 315p $3.95 Dover

530 Physics. Matter

51-13192

"A popular account of modern physics that has a deserved reputation for readability and authenticity. The English translation was first published in 1936 [Book Review Digest 1936]. The first 278 pages of this edition are a photographic reprint of the 1936 edition, including the ingenious illustrations in the page margins. Following these pages is a thirty-seven page postscript in which the main events in nuclear physics during the last fifteen years are recounted." N Y New Tech Bks

Booklist 48:103 N 15 '51

"The book is much more thorough and goes deeper into the material than most attempts in this line. The rather difficult subject of material waves is masterfully discussed. The style is easy and delightful." M. G. Mayer

+ Chem & Eng N 30:1232 Mr 24 '52 160w

Christian Science Monitor p11 F 2 '52 600w

"Since 1936 this book has been known as a readable and authoritative popular account of modern physics." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 76:1937 N 15 '51 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 36:91 N '51

BOSHER, ROBERT S. Making of the Restoration settlement: the influence of the Laudians, 1649-1662. 309p $5 Oxford

283 Church of England. Great Britain—Church history [51-13444]

"Here is a detailed narrative of the events which between 1649 and 1662 led to the restoration of the Prayer Book and the startling reversal of the fortunes of that Church order and sacramental and liturgical worship for which it stood. Clearly and readably Mr. Boshier takes us step by step through the various plans, stages and intrigues by which its restoration was accomplished." Times [London] Lit Sup

"A happy choice of subject, extensive research, a clear though not distinguished style, and sobriety of judgment, combine to make this a first-class monograph, which fills an important gap in a theological library." Godfrey Davies

+ Am Hist R 58:106 O '52 650w

"It is not only a work of great importance, it is also a piece of first-rate scholarship, and it is likely to remain a standard reference book for this period." F. J. Moore

+ Churchman 166:13 Ja 15 '52 220w

Reviewed by W. S. Hudson

J Religion 32:280 O '52 650w

Reviewed by N. K. Burger

N Y Times p28 Mr 2 '52 230w

"The book is admirably documented, and not the least pleasure which the reader obtains is derived from the numerous quotations from contemporary tracts. . . Mr. Boshier has shown himself in his book an ecclesiastical historian of great promise."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p29 Ja 11 '52 1250w

BOSLEY, HAROLD AUGUSTUS. Church militant. 159p $2 Harper

252 Sermons

51-11886

"This volume contains six lectures which Dr. Bosley gave in the Union Evangelical Theological Seminary in Buenos Aires on the Carnahan foundation and four sermons delivered in his great First Methodist Church at Evanston. It does not, however, break into two parts but constitutes a sufficiently unified discussion of the church—its message, life, witness and function." Christian Century

Reviewed by L. T. Heron

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 F 17 '52
200w

"Among the modern preachers who, in the full maturity of their powers, combine vigorous theological thinking with sensitivity and intelligence in regard to social problems, none stands higher than Dr. Bosley." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 69:342 Mr 19 '52
100w

Kirkus 20:118 F 15 '52 130w

BOSWELL, JAMES. Boswell in Holland, 1763-1764; including his correspondence with Belle de Zuylen (Zélide); ed. by Frederick A. Pottle. 433p il $6 McGraw

B or 92 Netherlands—Description and travel 52-5345

"Following chronologically the 'London Journal,' the new book carries Boswell from England across the Channel and through the first ten months of his stay on the Continent. . . . The bulky manuscript of over 500 pages was left at Utrecht when Boswell set out on his further travels, and he never saw it again. We need not, however, lament too much the loss of the fully-written journal, since enough other material has survived with which to reconstruct the whole story." N Y Times

"Boswell in Holland though not as lively and not of the same literary quality as the London Journal, is captivating reading, studied with piquant revelations about the human heart and mind. The self-portrait here is completely unretouched; and the chronicle has a brilliant and outspoken heroine." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 189:77 My '52 490w

Booklist 48:296 My 15 '52

Bookmark 11:179 My '52 20w

Reviewed by Munro Beattie

Canadian Forum 32:189 N '52 250w

Cath World 175:399 Ag '52 130w

Reviewed by A. C. Ames

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 My 4 '52
420w

Reviewed by Roland Sawyer

Christian Science Monitor p11 My 1
'52 750w

"A delightful addition to Boswelliana, finely edited."

+ Kirkus 20:205 Mr 15 '52 240w

"Boswell in Holland is lively, desultory, sometimes bawdy, and will not have the great popular success of Boswell's London Journal." E. F. Walbridge

Library J 77:794 My 1 '52 140w

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch

Nation 174:504 My 24 '52 850w

Reviewed by S. H. Monk

New Repub 126:18 My 19 '52 750w

Reviewed by Peter Quennell

New Statesman & Nation 44:45 Jl 12
'52 1150w

"Unfortunately for the reader whose taste for Boswell was sharpened by last year's best-selling 'London Journal,' this witty summary promises more than 'Boswell in Holland' actually delivers. Moralists may deplore it, but the truth is that, at least in the case of Boswell, the candid personal record of a profligate is more lively than that of the same character after virtue has set in." Richard Altick

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Ap 27
'52 1300w

"Mr. Pottle has skillfully selected from this mass of manuscripts just what is needed, and has woven the many elements into a continuous narrative. . . . There is constant variety, and the reader never knows quite what to expect. The next page may draw from him a howl of laughter, a snort of contempt, or a sigh of compassion. For readers who may delight in Boswell's harmless egotism, 'Boswell in Holland' will be a source of endless pleasure. Yet in stressing the amusing portions one must not forget the very serious moral struggle that Boswell was going through." J. L. Clifford

+ N Y Times p1 Ap 27 '52 1250w

"It is an engrossing book of self-absorption and self-revelation, charming for its freshness, delightful spontaneity, and piquant observation, not to say naïveté."

+ New Yorker 28:138 My 10 '52 180w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ap 27 '52
950w

"Although this strange and splendid book is perhaps not so much like a thunderbolt as its predecessor, 'Boswell's London Journal, 1762-1763,' it is, in its somewhat different way, as remarkable and interesting as that work, in which the art of the journalist was never better exemplified or concealed." Leonard Bacon

+ Sat R 35:11 Ap 26 '52 950w

Reviewed by Bonamy Dobrée

Spec 188:751 Je 6 '52 1000w

Times [London] Lit Sup p388 Je 13 '52
1100w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:231 S '52 220w

BOSWELL, JAMES. Journal of a tour to Corsica; and Memoirs of Pascal Paoli; ed. with an introd. by Morchard Bishop. 127p $2 Macmillan

945.9 Corsica. Paoli, Pasquale [52-9641]

"In 1763 [Boswell] embarked for Corsica, then in a state of revolt against Genoa. He stayed five weeks on the primitive island, much of the time with its leader, General Paoli; and though Corsica failed to win her liberation, and the General lived out his exile in England, Boswell had found a cause and a hero. In 1768 he published his book on Corsica. The first long section is a dull account of the island, compiled from two source books. The rest of it, which is now reprinted in an excellently edited little book, consists of his journals, including his conversations with Paoli." Sat R

Booklist 48:380 Jl 15 '52

"A charming little volume." Harvey Breit

+ N Y Times p25 Je 8 '52 170w

"It is a heroic portrait, for Boswell considered Paoli fit for inclusion by Plutarch, and the vivid impressions of the rugged island and its courageous people provide an excellent background for the figure. The present book, wisely divorced from the history of Corsica that was a part of it when the work was first published, in 1768, was described by Dr. Johnson as 'in a very high degree curious and delightful,' and it still is."

+ New Yorker 28:144 My 17 '52 200w

Sat R 35:38 Jl 12 '52 300w

BOSWORTH, ALLAN RUCKER. Ladd of the Lone Star; il. by George A. Malik. (American heritage ser) 192p $1.75; school ed $1.59 Aladdin

52-11812

A fictionalized treatment of an episode in American history, following the adventures of a youthful hero in Texas a hundred years ago.

Booklist 49:92 N 1 '52

Kirkus 20:556 S 1 '52 70w

Reviewed by S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 77:1663 O 1 '52 40w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 S 28
'52 10w

"The historical background is ample, though not overburdened with detail, and its high spots, the defense of the Alamo and the battle of San Jacinto, are handled with admirable restraint and vigor." M. P. Allen

+ Sat R 35:45 O 11 '52 40w

BOTEIN, BERNARD. Trial judge; the candid behind-the-bench story. 337p $5 Simon & Schuster

B or 92 Judges—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 52-9188

"A behind-the-bench account of Justice Botein's own ten years as a justice of the Supreme Court of New York County. . . He discusses such bugbears as influence in the courts, lawless jurors, inadequacies of the trial process, lawyers' tricks, and judges' devices." Publisher's note

Bookmark 11:229 J1 '52 20w

Reviewed by H. C. Havighurst

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 My 11 '52 280w

"A very useful book. To the large number of laymen who regard the court house as a secret shrine wherein mysterious rites are performed, this book is bound to be a fascinating revelation. To the smaller number who have some contact with courts but little understanding of their operations, Judge Botein's book should prove highly instructive. And both the laity and the Bar will find their pessimism diluted, their idealism refreshed, their optimism nourished and their faith in democracy strengthened." S. H. Rifkind

+ Columbia Law R 52:951 N '52 950w

Kirkus 20:115 F 1 '52 190w

"Most lawyers spend a great deal of their lives trying to understand what makes the judicial mind tick. Laymen devote less time to the question, but repeatedly are reminded how important a factor in their lives are these human beings we call judges. . . Judge Botein has given his answers to this question very skillfully by telling us what Judge Botein thinks about Judge Botein. An earnest and conscientious jurist, he has taken pains to present the picture in a book which is consciously and appropriately subjective, although it does not lose the perspective and proportion which is generally associated with objectivity." Rudolph Halley

+ N Y Herald Tribune BK R p3 My 4 '52 1100w

Reviewed by E. N. Cahn

N Y Times p14 Ap 27 '52 850w

"The author writes easily and with humor, citing cases and examples mainly from those that appeared on his own docket. An instructive and very readable book."

+ New Yorker 28:138 My 3 '52 120w

Reviewed by U. K. Alpert

Springf'd Republican p19A Je 1 '52 180w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:231 S '52 280w

BOTHWELL, JEAN. Paddy and Sam; pictures by Margaret Ayer. [36p] $2 Abelard

52-2417

Picture-story book for ages 5 to 8. It is about a little boy named Sam, and his trained duck, Paddy.

Booklist 49:37 S 15 '52

Reviewed by M. C. Skinner

Library J 77:1410 S 1 '52 80w

"It is a pleasant, might-be-true pet story, with appealing sketches of 'Paddy, my very own duck,' and all quite American." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Ag 3 '52 60w

"A delightful picture-story book with a lively plot and large colorful illustrations in cool tones of blue, green, yellow and black. Although the book has a definite summer appeal, the beginning reader will enjoy it at all times of the year." C. E. Van Norman

+ N Y Times p16 Ag 17 '52 90w

BOTHWELL, JEAN. Story of India; ill. with drawings by Jeanyee Wong and with photographs. 180p $3 Harcourt

954 [915.4] India—Juvenile literature

52-10062

In text, photographs, and drawings, the book pictures present day India and Pakistan and the people who live there. The main divisions of the book are: geography; history; Indian overtones; religion; the Indian way of life; and India among the nations. For age ten and older.

Booklist 49:128 D 1 '52

"An attractive, informative social survey."

+ Kirkus 20:661 O 1 '52 120w

"The photos are handsomely lithographed, but it is surprising that a Chinese rather than an Indian was chosen to do the line cuts. High school students would want a more thorough treatment. We hope that a later edition will include a book list on the younger reading level, including titles such as Miss Bothwell's own fiction." L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p7 N 16 '52 80w

"It is a difficult assignment. It is treated here with knowledge and sensitivity. The drawings by Jeanyee Wong are very effective."

+ Sat R 35:72 N 15 '52 140w

BOTSFORD, HAROLD EUGENE. Economics of poultry management. 337p il $5.75 Wiley

636.5 Poultry

Ag52-444

"This book is prepared as a guide for those who are or expect to be students of their poultry business and who wish to examine and make plans for the future in the light of what has gone before, what now is, and what is likely to be. It is designed for the high school or college student and the practical poultryman alike." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 48:353 J1 1 '52

"A well-organized body of information and advice." J. E. Cross

+ Library J 77:1305 Ag '52 40w

BOTSFORD, HARRY. Elsie's cook book; tested recipes of every variety, by Elsie, the cow; with the aid of Harry Botsford. 374p il $3; pa $1 Bond Wheelwright

641.5 Cookery

52-9712

Easy to prepare recipes arranged with main headings: soups; fish; sea food; poultry; meats; game; vegetables; cheese; salads; outdoor cookery; desserts. Index.

"Gives basic facts in inviting fashion and innumerable, easy-to-prepare recipes."

+ Bookmark 11:231 J1 '52 20w

"Everybody knows Elsie and her owners, and it is to the credit of both that this excellent new cookbook doesn't try to convert its readers to a milk and cheese diet. Instead, it is a first rate general cookbook, with all the basic recipes necessary for good eating." Valerie Bowers

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 Je 1 '52 70w

"Since Harry Botsford has written much of food, one does give him credit for most of this adequate cookbook. However, the Elsie-Elmer touch is perfect." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 77:1201 J1 '52 60w

"The recipes are solid enough, cover all departments of cookery, and are workably set down."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 Je 1 '52 30w

Reviewed by Ethel Dexter

Springf'd Republican p19A Je 1 '52 50w

BOURNE, PETER, pseud. See Jeffries, G. M.

BOUSSARD, JACQUES. London [by the author] with the collaboration of H. J. Stenning. 208p il $5 McGraw

942.1 [914.21] London—Description 52-6589

"The world's largest city, reduced to descriptive prose and more than a hundred and fifty impressive photographs. Its history, parks, buildings, art works, special neighborhoods, and current atmosphere are examined." New Yorker

"Its glory lies in its pictures—over 100 of the best photographs ever taken in the much photographed city. . . The text by Bousard is informative, but dull and somewhat unidiomatic. The chronological structure does not work well; the writer is in a state of constant and hence unemphatic superlatives; and no one has taken the trouble to edit the punctuation enough." A. C. Ames

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 F 10 '52 110w

"An adult and enlightening tour."

+ New Yorker 28:143 Je 7 '52 40w

"In addition to the buildings and places familiar to everyone who has read anything of English history, 'London' includes many excellent gravure reproductions of the masterpieces of art located in the National Gallery and other London museums." C. W. W.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 F 10 '52 70w

"The text by Jacques Bousard is not exceptional for style, but it is, all the same, pleasant, straightforward, and informative."

+ Sat R 35:33 F 9 '52 130w

BOWDEN, FRANK PHILIP, and YOFFE, A. D. Initiation and growth of explosion in liquids and solids. 104p il $4.50 Cambridge 541.39 Explosions [52-10886]

"A contribution to the knowledge of explosions. Mainly, it is based on original investigations carried out by the authors. They conclude that in most instances the initiation of an explosion is thermal in origin and starts in a small hot spot. They list further the ways in which these hot spots may develop. . . The book is of interest not only to scientists who are concerned with explosives research and manufacture, but also to persons interested in the safe storage and transport of explosives." (N Y New Tech Bks) Bibliography. Index.

"The book is characterized by lucid descriptions of experiments accompanied by unusually clear diagrams. The style is such that it can be enjoyably read. It should be a valuable addition to the library of anyone interested in explosives or propellants." H. F. Calcote

+ Chem & Eng N 30:4881 N 17 '52 210w

"The book is of interest to physicists and other persons who are concerned with research or design in such fields as ammunition, internal combustion engines, and, of course, explosives manufacturing and handling." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 77:2008 N 15 '52 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 37:56 Jl '52

BOWEN, VERNON. Wonderful adventures of Ting Ling; il. by Kurt Wiese. [48p] $2 McKay 52-11260

"This is one of the few fantasies that have appeared so far in the fall books of 1952. The scene is China, and the story tells of a little juggler's assistant who bravely set out to do four almost impossible things in order to win the hand of the Emperor's daughter." Sat R

Booklist 49:18 S 1 '52

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p18 S 14 '52 110w

Horn Bk 28:319 O '52 90w

"Very pleasant."

+ Kirkus 20:403 Jl 15 '52 110w

"The humorous drawings by Kurt Wiese add immeasurably to the story. Third- and fourth-graders should particularly enjoy hearing it read." M. B. Snow

+ Library J 77:1412 S 1 '52 70w

"This 'clever Jack' of old China will please many of the age who are hearing folk and fairy tales read or told aloud." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 S 14 '52 80w

"The story is exciting in content, urbane in style and has been illustrated by Kurt Wiese in his most engaging manner." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p18 Ag 24 '52 120w

"Ting Ling is an appealing young person, and there is a gentle humor in his story."

+ Sat R 35:39 Ag 16 '52 70w

BOWER, WILLIAM CLAYTON. Moral and spiritual values in education. 214p $3.50 Univ. of Ky. press

377.1 Character education 52-5901

"For three years educators in Kentucky have conducted a program for developing moral and spiritual values in the public schools which would not involve an expensive new department and additional personnel or violate the historic principle of separation of Church and State." (School & Society) This is an account of the experiment.

Reviewed by Galen Jones

+ Ann Am Acad 282:164 Jl '52 430w

"The state of Kentucky could not have found a better guide, leader and interpreter than Prof. Bower for its study of the problems here considered. . . The particular value of this book will be found in the philosophy of education which is basic to the whole experiment and in the detailed indication of the ways in which these principles can be applied in the public schools without, as the author believes, any breach in the wall of separation between church and state." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 69:853 Jl 23 '52 190w

"A high-minded and instructive book by a high-minded and instructive person. . . This not too lengthy survey honestly can be recommended to the morally, socially, and educationally conscious." Roger Shaw

+ Churchman 166:15 Je '52 150w

"An increasing number of writers are tackling the apparent dilemma of the American public schools. . . William C. Bower never comes to grips with this problem in this new book. . . These shortcomings, along with somewhat uneven organization of the book, are not enough to offset the interesting results, here described, of an experimental education program carried on in Kentucky with the active co-operation of several institutions of higher learning." G. E. A.

San Francisco Chronicle p24 Ap 13 '52 220w

School & Society 75:159 Mr 8 '52 30w

Reviewed by W. W. Brickman

School & Society 76:266 O 25 '52 60w

"The author has brought to bear upon the presentation a lifelong experience in the field of religious education as well as the power to interpret evidence in terms of a sound philosophy of education. The book should be of interest to teachers and supervisors in public and independent schools, as well as to the citizen who has a concern for the future of American society."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:149 Je '52 250w

BOWERS, FAUBION. Japanese theatre; foreword by Joshua Logan. 294p il $5 Hermitage 792.0952 Japanese drama. Theatre—Japan 52-12701

"This book is a report on the theatre in all its forms in Japan. It is a survey of what theatre arts exist there today and how they arose. Because Kabuki is the dominant type of drama in Japan today, and has been for some three centuries, most attention [is given] to it." (Pref) Three translations of Kabuki plays are given in the appendix. Index.

Booklist 49:62 O 15 '52

Bookmark 12:37 N '52 10w

Kirkus 20:484 Ag 1 '52 150w

"Highly recommended for Oriental and theatre collections regardless of size." George Freedley

+ Library J 77:1813 O 15 '52 40w

"To the scholar the book will be frustrating for its lack of footnotes and bibliography. For the interested non-specialist there will arise the problem of the many romanized Japanese names and terms, which, although necessary, frequently impeded the reader's progress. . . If the reader is able to disregard editorial faults, he will be rewarded by a delicious glimpse of a strange and vast new world of theater art. And Mr. Bowers's book, despite the limitation noted above, is still the most comprehensive volume on the Japanese theater written in the last twenty-five years." E. R. Harris

BOWERS, FAUBION—Continued

+ — Nation 175:470 N 22 '52 600w

"Since the NR has lately had to print more than one protest at the price of a book, it is a pleasure to report on a valuable and richly illustrated book which well might have cost more. I do not know what scholars in the field will say, but to the non-expert, for whom it is written, Faubion Bowers' volume is an eye-opener and a delight." E. B.

+ New Repub 127:22 O 27 '52 250w

"A number of fine critical appraisals and histories of the Japanese theatre have been published in France and Germany, but few in America. . . Faubion Bowers has now brought the subject into fine and living notice again. And he is well-fitted for the job. He knows the language and for some years lived in Japan and taught at Hosei University in Tokyo. In 1947-48 he was the official theatre censor for the Occupation Government." Paul Green

+ N Y Times p7 O 12 '52 600w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 N 9 '52 80w

Sat R 35:26 D 20 '52 260w

"A work of scholarship that could not be more timely, coming as it does at a time when Western interest in the Far East is at its height," Joseph Carroll

+ Theatre Arts 36:11 N '52 200w

BOWIE, WALTER RUSSELL. Bible story for boys and girls; Old Testament [il. with 23 color plates and with 20 black-and-white decorations, by Stephani and Edward Godwin]. 224p $3.50 Abingdon-Cokesbury.

221.95 Bible stories 51-9920

"This is a companion volume to Dr. Bowie's book on the New Testament. It tells the story of the Old Testament heroes as a continued narrative from Genesis through the Books to the Prophet Malachi in the last Book." (Sat R) Index.

Booklist 48:268 Ap 15 '52

Bookmark 11:186 My '52

"The black and white drawings by the Godwins are excellent, decorative and with some regional and period value. But the full page color plates, done by a number of artists, recall all too vividly the Sunday School Bible cards of our childhood. Probably they have merchandise appeal for a substantial number of uncritical readers; for others they will be a detriment to an otherwise distinguished book."

+ — Kirkus 20:126 F 15 '52 160w

Reviewed by M. M. Gantt

+ Library J 77:908 My 15 '52 90w

"Dr. Bowie loves his great book too much to treat it in any way except one of distinction. His simplifications include fine quotations, especially those in the chapters called 'Brave Men who Spoke God's Messages' and 'Prayers and Praises'. . . In large type, it is the sort of intelligent introduction which eleven and twelve year olds could read alone. The chapters, when long, are broken into good read-aloud sections for younger listeners." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 Mr 9 '52 240w

"Dr. Bowie's knowledge and scholarship supply a richness and understanding to his account that is often lacking in treatments of this sort. There are numerous illustrations; those in color are of a calendar-brilliance that will probably appeal more to young readers than to their elders." N. K. Burger

+ N Y Times p22 My 11 '52 150w

"One misses the wording of the King James version, especially in the stories of David and of Joseph. Its clarity and continuity will, however, give boys and girls a sense of 'the greatest story ever told,' leading them on to read the King James version for themselves."

+ Sat R 35:61 Ap 12 '52 70w

"This is a basic volume for a home, school, or public library collection."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:258 S '52 40w

Wis Lib Bul 48:175 J1 '52

BOWKER, ALBERT H., and GOODE, HENRY P. Sampling inspection by variables. 216p il $5 McGraw

658.56 [658.562] Sampling (statistics) 51-12589

"A manual of inspection plans based on the measurement of a variable or variables, a basis of inspection that is in contrast to the system of rejection or acceptance on the basis of a specified attribute. Most of the book is devoted to the design, installation, and operation of practical and statistically sound plans. The book is organized along the lines of and complements Columbia University, Statistical Research Group, Sampling Inspection [Book Review Digest 1948.] N Y New Tech Bks

"The book is potentially of interest both to persons concerned with quality control programs in manufacturing plants and to persons concerned with the acceptance or rejection of purchased articles." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 77:1815 O 15 '52 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 37:42 My '52

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:334 S '52 220w

BOWLER, STANLEY W. Photography for boys and girls. 96p il $2 Crowell

770 Photography—Juvenile literature 52-12592

"Although some of the terms and the books listed for further reading are English, this basic book with its clear explanations and easy-to-follow directions will be useful for beginning American photographers. Partial contents: Your camera and how it works; Let's take some photographs; Developing the exposed film; Making contact prints from your camera negatives; Different types of film and how to expose them; Portraits, clouds and a very little about colour; Simple flashlight photography. Grades 7-10." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 49:111 N 15 '52

"A simple yet comprehensive textbook on photography aimed at teen-age shutter-bugs." R. C.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 N 16 '52 40w

Kirkus 20:658 O 1 '52 160w

BOWLES, PAUL FREDERIC. Let it come down. 311p $3.50 Random house

52-5141

"Nelson Dyar leaves his sheltered job in a New York bank to take a job in a college friend's travel agency in Tangier. It gradually develops that the travel agency is a front for shady deals in international exchange. Meanwhile, Dyar has several erotic adventures, agrees to become a spy for the Russians, and absconds in the company of an Arab with some of the cash he was supposed to exchange." Library J

"The book's qualities, which are considerable, and its over-all failing are sharply reminiscent of The Sheltering Sky. The plot in this case is perhaps more intriguing, more entertaining in a raffish way." C. J. Rolo

Atlantic 189:84 Mr '52 550w

Reviewed by Larry Rogers

Canadian Forum 32:96 J1 '52 150w

Reviewed by Paul Engle

Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 Mr 9 '52 400w

"The fruit of which Paul Bowles has eaten is, unfortunately, that which confers knowledge only of evil, not of good. But a writer with no awareness of this essential duality can never fully explore the country of horror into which he has ventured. The act of violence with which Let It Come Down concludes is terrible indeed, and reverberates fearfully in the mind, but it is terror only of this flesh, of this bone, powerless to strike the man within." Richard Hayes

Commonweal 55:547 Mr 7 '52 600w

"Not our dish."

— Kirkus 19:686 D 1 '51 290w

"Can be skipped for most collections." R. E. Kingery

Library J 77:142 Ja 15 '52 210w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Jenkins

Manchester Guardian p4 Ap 25 '52 60w

"Compared to 'The Delicate Prey' this novel is studiously muted, as if Mr. Bowles were addressing himself to a Ladies' Home Journal audience which must be simultaneously shocked and informed—but never too much so—by an account of strange goings-on in far places. Long passages read like a rather dull travelogue. And where the writing in the short stories was wonderfully stripped of unnecessary detail and often deliberately flat so that no attention might be diverted from the subject, this writing seems flat merely out of carelessness or ennui. The process of cheapening has been drastic and thorough." Ernest Jones

— Nation 174:350 Ap 12 '52 380w

Reviewed by Kimon Friar

— New Repub 126:20 Ap 14 '52 750w

Reviewed by John Raymond

New Statesman & Nation 43:505 Ap 26 '52 340w

"Mr. Bowles has been concerned here, and elsewhere, with the impact and interaction of civilization with primitivism. The effect of this meeting provides him the means both for examining the individual consciousness and for illuminating the subtle conflict of the individual with any society. Some form of violence usually results from this coming together of inimical elements and forces, but not before each part has acquired some quality of its apparent opposite. In the present novel, however, these conflicts are not developed concurrently with Dyer's personal problems. There is a dichotomy of interest, a divided emphasis, two kinds of story, in fact, for which the reader pays with a measure of confusion." Gene Baro

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Mr 16 '52 700w

"There is nothing obscure or surrealist in 'Let It Come Down'; the writing is always perfectly lucid, the author always completely in control. Bowles is writing in a well-defined romantic-decadent mode with such a sharp reportorial eye for current realities that his story is fully engaging so long as we can keep from thinking about its philosophic intentions or about the character of the hero." R. G. Davis

+ N Y Times p1 Mr 2 '52 1250w

New Yorker 28:90 Mr 1 '52 140w

"In the hands of a less gifted writer all this would be merely sensational—even, one suspects, a little trashy. Mr. Bowles manages to make it convincing if not of startling importance. This is partly due to his remarkable skill in conveying atmosphere and creating suspense." Lewis Vogler

San Francisco Chronicle p22 Mr 9 '52 850w

Reviewed by Leonard Amster

Sat R 35:21 Mr 15 '52 500w

"I can imagine Mr. Graham Greene turning over some of this material and deciding, with a wry smile, not to use it. As a morality about the mess people can get into who believe neither in this life nor in any 'other, Let it Come Down has lots to say, but I do not see that much is gained by assembling a crowd of rootless creatures in a swamp and watching them rot." L. A. G. Strong

— Spec 188:556 Ap 25 '52 200w

Time 59:98 Mr 3 '52 440w

Times [London] Lit Sup p277 Ap 25 '52 550w

Reviewed by James Yaffe

Yale R n s 41:10 summer '52 50w

BOWRA, SIR CECIL MAURICE, and others.
See Golden ages of the great cities

BOX, EDGAR. Death in the fifth position. 221p
$2.50 Dutton

52-7788

Detective story.

"Skip it."

— Kirkus 20:291 My 1 '52 70w

"The agglutinate topicalities—Communism, homosexuality and balletomania—is pretty heavy-handed, partly because Mr. Box cannot resist any gag that occurs to him, whatever its decrepitude. When he does discover some fastidiousness about it he may write a pretty amusing book. This one has what might be called a lurking, smudged promise." James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Je 15 '52 140w

"The telling is terse and lively; and public-relations expert Sargeant is a likable narrator-detective. . . All of these virtues might have produced a more agreeable novel if Mr. Box did not so constantly strain himself to outdo Mickey Spillane and Adam Knight in sexiness. Most balletomanes will relish the book—but it's definitely not for the matinee audiences." Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p11 Je 22 '52 140w

"If you are very tough minded, this may seem funny, if you're not, don't touch it." L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Je 8 '52 40w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 35:40 Jl 5 '52 30w

Spring'd Republican p6D Ag 10 '52 70w

BOYD, JAMES. Old pines, and other stories [selected by Katharine Boyd]. 165p $3 Univ. of N.C. press

52-12702

Contents: Old pines; Elms and fair oaks; Bloodhound; Away! away!; Shiftless; The flat town; The verse on the window; The gizzard of a scientist; Civic crisis; Fiesta.

Booklist 49:89 N 1 '52

"Another step in the gradual enlargement of our picture of Boyd as one of the leading American novelists." Henry Cavendish

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 O 5 '52 200w

Christian Science Monitor p5 D 24 '52 210w

"For those of us who knew Jim Boyd, opening this book is like coming unexpectedly into his big house in Moore County, to find it once more full of dogs and children and laughter and the fragrance of Scotch oatmeal and well-soaped leather and to hear again the quiet voice that could tell a story or sing a ballad with a grace not soon duplicated." Sylvia Stallings

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 N 30 '52 700w

"An impressive little book. All but one of these pieces are laid against the North Carolina background which the author knew intimately. A few of them are softened somewhat by a gentle sentimentality. But the general feeling here is one of firm, steady control and clear, objective vision." Richard Sullivan

+ N Y Times p12 D 28 '52 330w

"What one expects, later in life, from the author of a 'high school classic' is a monumental dullness. James Boyd, whose famous novel is 'Drums,' turns out, of course, to be not that bad in a newly published posthumous collection of ten short stories. Two of the tales are downright poor. . . The rest of them, all set in the same Southern community, are rendered with grace and variety of style. But they set their own limits and go just that far and no farther." Edward Parone

+ — Sat R 35:54 N 8 '52 240w

BOYER, CHARLES. One shepherd; the problem of Christian reunion; tr. by Angeline Bouchard [foreword by John LaFarge]. 142p $2 Kenedy

280 Church unity. Catholic church—Relations 52-9473

"The rapid growth of the ecumenical movement among Christians outside the Roman Catholic church lends especial interest to this little book . . . by the president of Unitas, an international organization for bringing other Christians into the Roman fold. A French Jesuit, even tempered and benevolent, the author candidly discusses the special difficulties presented by the Eastern Orthodox churches, the Anglicans, and the Protestants. He evinces hopes for recovering all—the most hope for Eastern and Anglo-Catholic brothers, the least for Protestants." Chicago Sunday Tribune

Reviewed by L. T. Heron

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 My 18 '52 50w

"A clear, concise statement that has the added advantage of being readable. Anyone interested in the healing of the wounds on Christ's Mystical Body, the Church, which have been inflicted by blindness, pride and lack of charity, will note in Father Boyer's little book its all-pervading spirit of charity and piety." H. A. Reinhold

+ Commonweal 56:320 J1 4 '52 1700w

BOYNTON, GRACE MORRISON. River Garden of Pure Repose. 274p $3.50 McGraw 52-9450

During the days of the Sino-Japanese war a dying American Quaker, who has spent a long life teaching in mission schools, is given a home for her last few weeks in a Chinese garden-home in a West China city. Here her peace and serenity affect a number of other lives—American and Chinese, scholars, peasants and soldiers.

Booklist 49:105 N 15 '52

"Thoughtful novel, written with great delicacy and charm."

+ Bookmark 12:82 Ja '53 30w

Reviewed by Edith Weigle

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 N 23 '52 180w

+ Kirkus 20:516 Ag 15 '52 220w

"Highly recommended." L. R. Miller

+ Library J 77:1653 O 1 '52 60w

"Miss Boynton has, in effect, written a modern popular novel with all its standard apparatus of love-interest and socio-political overtones, and set it in the elaborate framework of the formal Chinese tradition. If there is an occasional awkwardness in its handling, this is probably as much a result of the ambitiousness of her plan as it is of narrative failure. The book should be a useful corrective for any one who thinks of the missionary as a tight-lipped stereotype, for this stereotype is belied both by Grace Boynton in the range of her interests and the qualities of her writing, and by Jane Breasted in the River Garden of Pure Repose as, waiting quietly for death, she weighs the qualities of the two worlds in which she lives." J. J. Espey

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 N 23 '52 500w

Reviewed by Evelyn Eaton

N Y Times p47 N 30 '52 210w

"Like Master Yuan, Miss Boynton, responding to the spirituality of a vanishing art form in which man and nature ideally commune, has written a poem. Hers is a prose poem important to our feral day, an elegy on China's dynastic gardens which, like the civilization enshrined in them, represent a noble past." Anne Wolfe

+ Sat R 35:36 D 6 '52 370w

BRACE, GERALD WARNER. The spire. 380p $3.50 Norton 52-11303

Novel of a year in the life of a small New England college. The protagonist is Henry Gaunt who was one of the figures in an earlier novel The Light on the Mountain (Book Review Digest 1941). Henry, a widower with a small son, comes to Wyndham College as a professor of English and finds life there neither peaceful nor easy.

Booklist 49:12 S 1 '52

Bookmark 12:9 O '52 30w

"Mr. Brace knows his academic scene, to the currents of this very moment, but his portrait lacks the bite and power of Mary McCarthy's recent The Groves of Academe." Riley Hughes

Cath World 176:72 O '52 280w

Reviewed by Edward Wagenknecht

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ag 24 '52 390w

"To this reviewer 'The Spire' has proved disappointing mainly in its lack of clear, spiritual dimensions, and in the author's apparently casual use of religious symbols." Kent Bush

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 21 '52 650w

"Most of the time interesting, though not wholly convincing, reading."

Kirkus 20:379 J1 1 '52 200w

"Not another Garretson Chronicle, but a very satisfactory novel. Recommended." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 77:1190 J1 '52 60w

"The author, an English professor himself, is at his best in his knowledgeable examination of that prestige-created microcosmos, that incessant tempest in a teapot which is faculty life in a small college. . . . The Spire, like the author's greatly over-rated Garretson Chronicle, is an odd mixture of perspicacity and hokum." David Goldknopf

+ New Repub 127:22 Ag 25 '52 280w

Reviewed by F. H. Bullock

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ag 17 '52 750w

"No high drama; no great conclusions; no large message; merely the account of what happens to certain rather decent people in a given place during a given school year, with all the personal and academic pressures accurately noted, and the background very knowingly got in. The whole thing is done simply, without stylistic flourish." Richard Sullivan

+ N Y Times p5 Ag 17 '52 700w

"If Mr. Brace, who knows his people inside out, were not so infatuated with Miss Houghton, he might have done better. As it is, his story is soft, and even wet-eyed in spots, but it is very readable, and his characters are so real that they can actually be recognized from one chapter to the next."

+ New Yorker 28:87 Ag 16 '52 120w

"The word 'urbane' has frequently been applied to Mr. Brace's novels. It is too slick a word for this one, as it doesn't convey that sense of compassion he had for those who are conserving the past, others who are trying to build a future, and those who are learning or cannot learn to be old. In his probing of inner conflicts there is a suggestion of Conrad." Jane Voiles

+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 S 1 '52 750w

"A sense of the complexity of people and institutions gives Mr. Brace's book a quiet variety of judgment which is its most impressive quality. It makes his dialogue work to show us what kind of people we are dealing with and never merely to score for the author; it makes his structure straightforward and at the same time full of unostentatious effects. Mr. Brace's own virtues are the un-demonstrative virtues of the Vermont from which his hero comes." Arthur Mizener

+ Sat R 35:13 Ag 16 '52 550w

Springfield Republican p16C S 14 '52 370w

Wis Lib Bul 48:215 S '52

"Another book at its best in its humorous passages. It is built around a rather heavy-handed plot, but the reader who is willing to keep the plot in its place will enjoy the humorous characterizations and dialogue in the book." Paul Pickrel

+ Yale R n s 42:20 autumn '52 50w

BRADBROOK, MURIEL CLARA. Shakespeare and Elizabethan poetry; a study of his earlier work in relation to the poetry of the time. 279p il $3.50 Oxford

822.03 Shakespeare, William—Criticism and interpretation 52-9906

"Miss Bradbrook combines a wide knowledge of the Elizabethan period with a sensitive appreciation of the literary art. Her book is a good map—the Elizabethans would have called it a card—of the kind of reading that a critic must first undertake before he is competent to pontificate on Shakespeare's meanings. It is particularly valuable in revealing the modes of Elizabethan thought and expression, accepted ideas and common symbols, poetic and dramatic conventions. Miss Bradbrook makes obvious the truth that not only Shakespeare's plays but even his lines connoted something quite different to their original hearers." Sat R

Booklist 48:375 J1 15 '52

"To search for Shakespeare himself against all the background now provided for him is to be reminded of some Poussin taking its title from a single diminished figure every line of which is in fact determined by the demands of the vast composition so tremendously disposed behind it. Viewed against this background, Miss Bradbrook's book is an excellent one. . . Again, Miss Bradbrook is tentative and tolerant without ever being dismally 'objective'; and she has considerable skill in letting theorists in one or another compartment of Shakespeare studies expose both their strength and weakness in brief citation." J. I. M. Stewart

+ New Statesman & Nation 42:571 N 17 '51 550w

"Miss Bradbrook demands a high level of mere knowledge from her readers but she writes with zest, wit, and insight." G. E. Harrison

+ Sat R 35:28 Je 14 '52 130w

"This book should be read by anyone anxious to see a little between the lines of the poems and plays he reads, but nervous of the more specialist forms of scholarship, of the searchlight which illumines one spot but throws the surrounding landscape into even deeper darkness. It will be very stimulating to young people who are reading or intending to read English in the university." J. M. Cohen

+ Spec 188:24 Ja 4 '52 470w

"Miss Bradbrook's generalizations sometimes leave us puzzled or unsatisfied. When she comes to particulars she is much more rewarding. . . But she is at her freshest when she remains close to her professed theme of the relation of Shakespeare's early work to the poetry of the time. When she dwells on the poetry and drama of the court, and whenever she touches on Elizabethan poetry and views of poetry, she writes with learning and discernment, and we lose the sense of being compassed about with a cloud of critics."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p94 F 1 '52 600w

BRADBURY, BIANCA. One kitten too many [il. by] Marie C. Nichols. 32p $1.50 Houghton 52-7192

Story of two little kittens, one good and one bad. Because Whiskers was a guest Tabitha put up with his drinking up all the milk, and sleeping on her soft cushion, but finally Whiskers went too far and Tabitha just had to teach him his manners.

Booklist 48:236 Mr 15 '52

"Wonderfully expressive pictures help the story teach a fine lesson in every day behavior." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 Mr 23 '52 120w

"The appealing colored pictures on every page make it an attractive little book which children as young as nursery school age will enjoy having read aloud. Third graders can read it themselves." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 28:98 Ap '52 60w

Kirkus 20:29 Ja 15 '52 40w

"Recommended for ages 3-7." V. A. Russell

+ Library J 77:539 Mr 15 '52 40w

"This is a well told tale, on the nursery level, very short, and with a simplicity fitting for the really very young. The engaging pictures will delight any age that loves kittens." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 My 11 '52 80w

"Young children will sympathize with the sorely tried Tabby and enjoy this entertaining story with its sly little message in etiquette and the equally amusing pictures." Elena Baker

+ N Y Times p22 Ap 13 '52 110w

Wis Lib Bul 48:217 S '52

BRADEN, CHARLES SAMUEL. Scriptures of mankind; an introduction. 496p $6.50 Macmillan

290 [291.8] Sacred books 52-10590

Study of the sacred writings of the world. Includes the scriptures of Egypt, Babylonia, India, Japan, China, Persia, and the Old and New Testaments. The last chapter deals with modern doctrines—the Book of Mormon, and Science and Health. Index.

"Thruout Braden is considerate of his readers. He quotes substantially but not tiresomely from the most inspiring passages. He maintains an unflinching good will toward the practitioners of the world's varied religions. He cites evidences of humor when he finds them. This book is a large contribution to the diffusion of knowledge about those writings which, in time past, present, and to come, occupy positions of the highest authority." A. C. Ames

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Je 29 '52 450w

"A flowing and easy style invites reading, though the content of the volume is unquestionably solid, and its ample bibliographies will meet the needs of students."

+ Christian Century 69:1161 O 8 '52 120w

"This is a thorough-going, scholarly study. . . As Dr. Braden is one of the outstanding scholars in the field of comparative religion, he is in a position to give a comprehensive interpretation of the scriptures produced by the various religions of the world."

+ Kirkus 20:119 F 15 '52 200w

"Interspersed throughout the book are many excellent selections from these sacred writings of mankind. Much of this material hard to come by in English is presented here in convenient form. Recommended." R. P. Braden

+ Library J 77:887 My 15 '52 190w

BRADFORD, WILLIAM. Of Plymouth plantation, 1620-1647; a new ed.; the complete text, with notes and an introd. by Samuel Eliot Morison. 448p $6 Knopf

974.4 Massachusetts—History—Colonial period. Pilgrim Fathers 51-13222

"Written between 1630 and 1650 and first published in 1856, Bradford's history of the Pilgrims and the Plymouth Colony has had only one exact and authoritative edition, this published in 1912. The present edition by Professor Morison of Harvard is a faithful transcription from the original manuscript now in the State House in Boston and contains brief but completely adequate notes." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 49:70 O 15 '52

"A basic piece of American history and literature, and an honorable tribute to the men of high courage who founded the colony on Plymouth shores."

+ Kirkus 20:438 J1 15 '52 240w

"The introduction tells what is known of Governor Bradford and gives a fascinating account of the wanderings and adventures of the original manuscript. Libraries which do not have the 1912 edition (edited by Worthington C. Ford) should acquire this new edition of one of the basic narratives of American history." Herbert Cahoon

+ Library J 77:1394 S 1 '52 100w

BRADFORD, WILLIAM—Continued

Reviewed by Perry Miller
New Repub 127:28 N 17 '52 470w

"Superb edition." J. T. Winterich
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p22 S 28 '52 480w

"The settlers at Plymouth in 1620 were fortunate in having in their number a historian who could do justice to their heroic enterprise. William Bradford's history of the 'Plantation,' now edited by Professor Morison, is by common consent not only a historical document of the first importance but the first 'classic' in our literature." K. B. Murdock
+ N Y Times p14 S 28 '52 750w

"The appendixes are singularly valuable, and include brief biographies of the Mayflower passengers."

+ New Yorker 28:135 O 4 '52 220w

Reviewed by B. R. Redman
Sat R 35:39 N 1 '52 370w

"Just why 'Of Plymouth Plantation' has up to now been treated as a literary curiosity rather than as literature is difficult to understand, especially since dozens of other 'source documents,' none of them half so important, have been carefully transcribed. Prof. Morison's notes are of invaluable aid in understanding the background of some of Bradford's less familiar allusions, and the volume itself is a complete delight and an unprecedented thrill for anyone reading Bradford's history for the first time." R. F. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p10D O 5 '52 400w

BRADLEY, MRS MARY (HASTINGS). Nice people murder. 210p $2.50 Longmans

52-5647

Detective story.

Bookmark 11:211 Je '52

Kirkus 19:689 D 1 '51 80w

Reviewed by E. F. Walbridge
Library J 77:210 F 1 '52 110w

"The book has been neatly if conventionally planned and executed in a series of honestly-intended deceptions on the part of the narrator. But instead of adding a special tension they turn up as a mild nag. The sum is familiar and edible if not particularly tasty. It was apparent in 'The Saturday Evening Post,' four or five years ago as 'Without Witness.'"

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p19 Mr 23 '52 90w

"One of her best." Anthony Boucher
+ N Y Times p32 Mr 16 '52 70w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p18 Mr 16 '52 70w

"Good." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 35:68 Ap 19 '52 30w

"Miss Bradley's writing is distinctly above average and this is an exciting yarn with an unusual background and peopled with an unusual group of skillfully presented characters. The plot is well contrived and moves to a climax that is unexpected and convincing." J. P. S.

+ Springf'd Republican p10D Ap 6 '52 70w

BRADLEY, MARY (HASTINGS). Nice people poison. 216p $2.50 Longmans

52-11033

Detective story.

Kirkus 20:476 Ag 1 '52 110w

"Peaky, but socially acceptable." James Sandoe
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 O 19 '52 30w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher
N Y Times p51 O 19 '52 80w

"This piece of detective satin is cut to classic style, wearable by any of our best-dressed writers." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p11 O 19 '52 40w

"Nice job, but lacks sharpness and clear focusing of previous effort." Sergeant Cuff
+ Sat R 35:47 O 25 '52 10w

"It is a book for those who like mystery and excitement in an atmosphere of sophistication, with its people knowingly and realistically portrayed." J. F. S.

+ Springf'd Republican p7C N 23 '52 70w

BRADLEY, MURIEL (DEMENS). Murder twice removed. 190p $2.50 Doubleday

51-14853

Detective story.

Kirkus 19:623 O 15 '51 70w

"Miss Bradley keeps events spinning like a top, and if you like the sensation it's obviously a book that will serve your turn." James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Ja 13 '52 100w

"An inept little item, crassly plotted and written; its one virtue is sound observation and recapturing of an unusual setting." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p21 Ja 6 '52 30w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ja 13 '52 60w

"Middling." Sergeant Cuff
Sat R 35:33 Ja 5 '52 30w

BRADNA, FRED. Big top; my forty years with the Greatest show on earth; as told to Hartzell Spence, including a circus hall of fame. 332p il $3.95 Simon & Schuster

B or 92 Circus 52-12541

An autobiography of Fred Bradna, the tall man in the top hat who for two generations was master of ceremonies for the Barnum and Bailey, Ringling Brothers circuses. Index.

Booklist 49:63 O 15 '52

"It makes grand reading... This book is life under the big top. Perhaps no living person has known intimately more of the all-time greats of circusdom than Bradna." V. P. Hass

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 O 5 '52 290w

"Grand reading for the fans."

+ Kirkus 20:446 Jl 15 '52 210w

"This has general reader interest and is recommended for general circulation, circus and theatre collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 77:1813 O 15 '52 40w

"It starts slowly and continues at about the same pace but as the facts mount the clinical details of the big show become as fascinating as the gaudy end product... This volume is a good addition to the literature of the circus. It is an inside job done with sincerity. It includes everything from an elephant named Myrtle to Calvin Coolidge, all treated with the same approach." John O'Reilly

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 S 28 '52 550w

"It is a warm and intimate book, abundant in the fascinations of life behind the circus scenes." R. L. Taylor

+ N Y Times p6 S 28 '52 1550w

"The circus fan will lose no time getting hold of this book. He won't be disappointed either; it's a topnotch job." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 O 24 '52 650w

BRADY, ROBERT ALEXANDER. Citizen's stake in price control. 161p pa $1.50 Littlefield, Adams & Co, Ames, Iowa

338.526 Prices 52-124

"Any price control is some control of people. This book reflects the judgment that, in the interest of people affected, we need now both more effective control of prices by government and more effective breaking of private price control. The latter objective comes out in the author's apparent feeling that pressure groups—business, farm, labor—have warped existing controls so badly that the main purpose is getting lost in the shuffle." Ann Am Acad

"Apart from the digressions and discussions which, in my opinion, have little to do with price control, the major weakness of the book appears to me to be the failure of the author to discuss adequately the type of price control program which is compatible with the present characteristics of our economy." P. W. Cartwright

— + Am Econ R 42:674 S '52 800w

Reviewed by J. P. Watson

Ann Am Acad 282:149 J1 '52 370w

BRAMMELL, PARIS ROY. Your schools and mine. 438p $4.50 Ronald

370.973 Schools, Education—U.S. 52-6201

"This book is intended to serve as an introduction to education for all who seek a thorough understanding of the American school system. Designed primarily as a first book in education for college students, it will also provide an orientation in education for all readers who want information about the school's place in our society. Whether used as a text in professional education courses or read by civic-minded citizens for the information it contains, the book should be helpful in dealing with local educational problems." (Pref) The author is dean of the School of education, University of Connecticut, Index.

"On the whole, the book is a significant and useful tool for orienting the citizen in making his schools instruments of the maximum development of personality and of shaping a culture of free people." P. L. Essert

+ Ann Am Acad 284:205 N '52 600w

School & Society 75:302 My 10 '52 20w

BRANCATI, VITALIANO. Antonio, the great lover; tr. from the Italian by Vladimir Kean. 280p $3 Roy pubs.

[52-27542]

A satire about Italy during the years of fascism. Antonio is a beautiful but impotent young man whose lies about his sexual abilities bring about his downfall.

"Though this is well translated, the symbolism obscures what might have been a sharp vignette, and the relentless realism which is applied towards the church may offend American Catholic readers."

— Kirkus 20:355 Je 15 '52 180w

"Entertaining and highly finished folk-satire." G. D. Painter

+ New Statesman & Nation 43:625 My 24 '52 300w

"If the American reader enters with an open mind the burnished town of Catania, nestling in the lee of Mount Etna and girded round with rich fields and groves of oranges, he cannot fail to enjoy the author's wit, satire, and bursts of impassioned rhetoric, nor can he fail to find, beneath the farcical aspects of Antonio's misfortune, the elemental pathos of the lot of man." Virgilia Peterson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Ag 31 '52 460w

"Vitaliano Brancati has not only written a humorous novel. He has also composed an incisive satire, peopled with strong, wonderfully articulate characters. Antonio bears more than a coincidental resemblance to fascism. Mr. Brancati is unquestionably a writer and thinker of eloquence and integrity, whose language has the universality of the true humanist." Robert Knittel

+ N Y Times p4 S 28 '52 350w

"A tiresome tale, full of a monotonous earthiness, or raciness."

— New Yorker 28:143 S 13 '52 90w

"Brancati is an Italian writer with genuine narrative skill whose work is new to English-speaking readers. His attempt to fuse social satire, some ribald sex comedy, and a few thoughts on Fascism and anti-Fascism into a persuasive whole in 'Antonio, the Great Lover' is not altogether successful. The central situation is nicely conceived." E. J. F.

— + Sat R 35:42 S 13 '52 170w

BRANCH, NEWTON, ed. This Britain; a tradition and achievement [contributors: Nigel Balchin, and others] 152p il col pl $5 Harper

942 [914.2] Great Britain

51-11887

"Illustrated appreciation of the tradition and achievement of Britain. Articles on science, pageantry, craftsmanship, industry, literature, architecture, and government have been contributed by writers like Ivor Brown, Paul Jennings, Michael Lewis, L. A. G. Strong, Stephen Potter, Osbert Lancaster, and Nigel Balchin." Library J

"While the book was written to familiarize the British with their own land, it should be of immense interest to American readers." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 76:2117 D 15 '51 70w

"Where only a few pages are allowed for each writer in which to treat of subjects on which long books could be, and have been written, some subjects are bound to be more easily hammered into the shape demanded than others. The works of the craftsman and the tasks of industry, in spite of their excellent illustrations, make less impression on the mind than subjects such as humor, character, or literature. Mr. Stephen Potter's knowledge of sport is so extensive and detailed that malicious persons might accuse him of professionalism."

Times [London] Lit Sup p520 Ag 17 '51 360w

Wis Lib Bul 48:90 Mr '52

BRANDT, BILL. Literary Britain; photographed; with an introd. by John Hayward. 100p 100il $10 British bk. centre

820.9 Literary landmarks—Great Britain [51-13701]

One hundred photographs of scenes, buildings, or interiors, associated with British writers from the days of Chaucer to the present. Each photograph occupies a full page; on facing pages are quotations from the writer illustrated.

"Superior photography and an interesting descriptive text."

+ Cleveland Open Shelf p27 N '51

"Mr. Brandt has an uncanny ability to interject atmosphere into his pictures—the result is that frequently the picture itself, without title or quotation on the facing page, will suggest the very lines or scene which the picture is supposed to illustrate. The paper and make-up of the book is of the highest quality, and it is an excellent gift item, as well as a handsome album to study at leisure." C. W. W.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p11 Ja 20 '52 190w

Reviewed by Anthony Richardson

Sat R 35:13 J1 12 '52 270w

"This is the most distinguished book of photographs that has appeared in this country for some years. . . The surprise consists in the fact that a single photograph of a place, perhaps only slightly connected with a writer, can increase one's understanding of his work—and the better one knows the writing, the more the pictures seem to yield. In the picture for Chaucer this is achieved with a certainty of aim that is almost casual. . . Beyond all qualities of literary enjoyment, humour, technical ability, the outstanding impression the book makes is one of beauty. Brandt's gift as a photographer is that he goes straight for the essential, discarding everything not directly connected with his vision." Tom Hopkinson

+ Spec 187:134 J1 27 '51 900w

BRANNER, HANS CHRISTIAN. Riding master; tr. from the Danish by A. I. Rough-ton. 159p $2.25 British bk. centre

[52-7511]

"[This was] originally a play. The action takes place during one day. The interest derives from a display of inner emotional conflicts by a small group of characters all of whom are still dominated by the figure of the Riding Master and who strive to take psychological responsibility for his death." Times [London] Lit Sup

"On the whole Mr Branner, who is now hailed as one of Denmark's finest writers, keeps a firm grip upon the forces with which his characters wrestle. His terse and simple style is both realistic and imaginative." H. I.A. l'ausset

+ Manchester Guardian p4 N 9 '51 180w

"If the book fails as a whole it is because one feels the author has attempted to graft an elaborate psychological message on to what is essentially a dramatic theme calling for stage treatment. Alternatively, he has not probed his subject sufficiently deeply; what should be Freudian icebergs remain mere snowdrifts on the sub-conscious surface." John Raymond

+ New Statesman & Nation 42:502 N 3 '51 240w

"There is quite a good deal of symbolic talk about horses and at various times a number of the characters think that maybe they are horses. This little bit of Freudian by-play is never quite worked out satisfactorily, but then neither is anything else in the book which, despite the theatrical violence of some of the scenes, maintains a deadly static quality." E. J. Fitzgerald

— Sat R 35:34 Ap 5 '52 230w

"The drama in which all this originated may have had affinities with M. Sartre and Strindberg. It makes rather turgid reading in fictional form, though flashes of talent are to be seen here and there."

Times [London] Lit Sup p745 N 23 '51 260w

BRAUN, JULIE (VOGELSTEIN). Art, the image of the west. 245p 65pl $4.50 Pantheon bks.

709 Art—History 52-8962

A series of interpretative essays dealing "with art as it mirrors the changing religious-philosophical concepts of Western civilization. . . Mrs. Braun-Vogelstein seeks to show us how the creation reveals the thought of the creator, how it records as well the underlying spiritual values of the time it was created." (Christian Science Monitor) No index.

Booklist 48:374 J1 15 '52

"The summer traveler in Europe casually looking into churches and galleries will hardly carry [this] book as guide. But the art student will find illuminating interpretations which may lead him to a healthy reexamination of his own purposes. And the true amateur of the arts who finds joy in an ever-unfolding awareness of the correlation of spiritual and aesthetic values will want this book on his reference shelves." Neil Martin

Christian Science Monitor p7 Je 12 '52 600w

"A well-made book, difficult to classify. The serious student of an epoch or a style will want further details; the erudite whole of the book will be difficult for the casual reader. . . The text, one suspects, may be much more readable in the original German." A. S. Plaut

Library J 77:1198 J1 '52 150w

"Mrs. Braun-Vogelstein displays the learning that the nineteenth century taught us to expect from her scholarly compatriots, but she also tends toward their solemn ponderousness. . . She has the knowledge that careful study in several fields and thoughtful travel in many countries can give. She sets it forth in a style that is now impressionistic, now transcendental, or a baffling mixture of the two. It is curious that so formidable a work as this should lack the usual scholarly paraphernalia of an index and a bibliography." Babette Deutsch

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 S 7 '52 650w

"With the book-learned mind of the scholar and the eye of the field archaeologist, the author observes successive alterations of form which manifest the changing modes of Western man's being. . . The translation (from the original German) is imaginative and lucid throughout." E. H. Hayes

N Y Times p10 Je 15 '52 550w

BRAUNS, FRIEDRICH EMIL. Chemistry of lignin. 803p il $14.50 Academic press

547.92 [547.3] Lignin 52-5202

"A comprehensive monograph of the current knowledge of the chemistry of lignins, written for professional chemists. It is based upon a literature survey; but, unlike some books that are similarly derived, the text does not lean on the original articles but is full enough to be useful in itself. . . The book is of primary interest to chemists in the paper industry and of secondary interest to chemists in the plastics industry and to botanists. The author is associated with the Institute of Paper Chemistry." N Y New Tech Bks

"The book will give chemists experienced in the field an excellent resume and is of especial value to newcomers entering the field. It is well printed and remarkably free from errors. The author is to be congratulated for making available his full and complete bibliography on lignin—representing many years' work." R. L. Shriner

+ Chem & Eng N 30:2647 Je 23 '52 160w
N Y New Tech Bks 37:23 Mr '52

"The book should be a very useful reference for advanced students and research workers in chemistry and botany, and for other specialists interested in lignin or wood chemistry."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:206 Je '52 250w

BREAN, HERBERT. Clock strikes thirteen. 244p $2.50 Morrow

Detective story. 52-10781

Kirkus 20:575 S 1 '52 60w

"This is a pretty capable concoction made strikingly effective by its evocation of the possibilities of the laboratory-trained germ." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p24 N 16 '52 120w

"A detailed and terrifying study of research in bacterial warfare, with more documented matter on the state of our present knowledge than I knew was available as unclassified material. It's also a fine variation on the old trapped-on-an-island gambit." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p44 N 30 '52 110w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p15 D 14 '52 50w

"Plus on balance." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 35:30 N 29 '52 20w
Springf'd Republican p7C D 7 '52 70w

BRECKINRIDGE, MARY. Wide neighborhoods; a story of the Frontier nursing service. 366p $4 Harper

B or 92 Frontier nursing service, incorporated 52-5423

An account of the life and work of the founder of the Frontier Nursing Service, which began in the Kentucky mountains over a quarter of a century ago.

Reviewed by D. G. Hay
Am J Pub Health 42:1478 N '52 240w
Booklist 48:296 My 15 '52
Bookmark 12:31 Ja '53

"Seldom have I read a book of this genre of equal tenor. It is expertly written, perfectly organized, all probable questions anticipated and answered, and all phases of the organization, administration, and results of the nursing service are explained." K. Smith

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 My 11 '52
200w

"A most careful accounting makes this of particular interest to social service workers, doctors and nurses, and the great audience which has been faithful through the years to FNS, while the general reader will also admire the extent of the author's activities and the warmth of her personality."

+ Kirkus 20:178 Mr 1 '52 220w

"There are literary flaws in 'Wide Neighborhoods.' So much emotion, so much quotation, so long an overture are usually undesirable. But they suit the old-fashioned concept of dedicated service they describe, and the region where to leave Wendover is to ride, Mrs. Breckinridge says, out of the twentieth century into the nineteenth; so here I like them all." E. H. Smith

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ap 20 '52 650w

Reviewed by Lucy Freeman

N Y Times p10 Ag 10 '52 270w

"Miss Breckenridge's book lacks professional finish and her frequent use of poetic quotations becomes a little cloying, but her stories are told with zest and relish. Relating the achievements of a great-hearted woman, the book has both documentary and human interest value." J. V.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Je 8 '52
410w

"Because its author learned how to write mainly by listening to spoken English and by practice, this book flows along without literary self-consciousness and tells a fine story simply and directly."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:232 S '52 200w

BREMS, HANS. Product equilibrium under monopolistic competition. 253p $4.50 Harvard univ. press

338.523 Competition. Monopolies. Prices
51-3500

"Author is assistant professor of economics, University of Copenhagen. This is an advanced research study based on the proposal of E. H. Chamberlain's 'Theory of Monopolistic Competition', that 'where both prices and products may be varied, complete stability must involve stability with respect to both.' The author's aim is to improve the theory of the individual firm, as well as the theory of markets, by inclusion of such features as product variation, advertising and selling effort, long-range planning, uncertainty and collusion." (Library J) Index.

"Professor Brems has made a very significant contribution to our theoretical literature. . . In one respect the book appears to show a lack of balance. The author passes by too easily a more important phase of monopolistic competition, that is, the simultaneous adjustment of product-quality and price. The contributions of Boulding and Stigler on this score are given only incidental notice." A. J. Nichol

+ J Pol Econ 59:541 D '51 110w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross

Library J 76:1128 Jl '51 80w

BREND, GAVIN. My dear Holmes; a study in Sherlock. 183p $2.50 Macmillan

823 Doyle, Sir Arthur Conan [51-13928]

A so-called biography of Sherlock Holmes which is based on the different stories about him. The author attempts to fill in the gaps left by Holmes' creator.

"One book of this kind would surely have been enough: the application, in a frivolous mood, of the methods of scholarship and higher criticism, to the activities and personalities of imaginary people, can be first-rate comedy.

Such a tour de force has to be justified by wit, or by satire: it can be used to satirise the excesses of a too logical and literal scholarship or the pomposity of the higher critic who has lost his sense of proportion. It can even be justified by being sufficiently amusing. On the whole Mr. Brend's book does not fulfil these conditions." Edward Hyams

New Statesman & Nation 42:506 N 3 '51 450w

"A substantial (and incidentally a dryly amusing) addition to the formidable array of scholarly inquiry." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p36 D 2 '51
240w

"Tops." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R of Lit 34:44 D 15 '51 30w

"Able and timely summing-up of existing knowledge and theory. The book is timely because the works of other commentators have become hard to find and we need a new standard biography beside us in the impending centenary year." P. H. Gore-Booth

+ Spec 187:516 O 19 '51 750w

BREWSTER, BENJAMIN, pseud. See Elting, M.

BRICK, ANNA RIWKIN (MRS DANIEL BRICK), il. Elle Kari. See Jannes, E.

BRICK, JOHN. Homer Crist; a novel of Highland county. 255p $3 Farrar, Straus

52-13222

A chronicle of life in Highland county, New York, during the years 1833 to 1872. The hero is a farm boy who becomes a lawyer, and finally a congressman.

Booklist 49:125 D 1 '52

"The Brick writes well of bitter family dissensions, of marital frustrations, and of the political arena, I don't think he sustains his starting level. Minor and useless vulgarities occasionally mar the work. But the central importance of this book, which is not inconsiderable, must be seen as its place beside 'The Raid' and 'Troubled Spring' in Mr. Brick's growing Highland county saga. This is a sound plan, the whole of which grows in importance beyond the merits of its individual novels." Edmund Fuller

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 D 21 '52
450w

Kirkus 20:610 S 15 '52 240w

"Though the subject matter is particularly apt, the book is a little thin and not up to the author's earlier books. . . Recommended." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 77:1900 N 1 '52 40w

"The complexities of Homer's character are revealed with a subtlety that makes Mr. Brick's novel much more than merely another historical chronicle."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 N 30 '52
150w

"It would be a real treat to be able to recommend John Brick's novel, 'Homer Crist.' But the author has whittled a set of wooden characters and posed them against a wooden background. The result is a lifeless and completely incredible book." Oriana Atkinson

— N Y Times p23 Ja 4 '53 330w

"Nothing in the book prepares us for the ending, which is abrupt and unreasonable, but it does not outrage us too much, because Homer, though likable enough, remains a small man, easily forgotten."

+ New Yorker 28:188 N 29 '52 40w

BRICKER, WILLIAM PAUL. Complete book of collecting hobbies. 316p il $3.50 Sheridan

708 Collectors and collecting 51-14832

Covers collecting hobbies such as the collecting of old furniture, old silver and plate, clocks, jewelry, glass, books, playing cards, stamps, dolls, etc., and gives information for obtaining satisfactory results. Contains photographs, bibliography, and index.

BRICKER, W. P.—Continued

Bookmark 11:79 Ja '52 20w

"If you collect still life paintings, Sung china in the reds known as 'mule's liver and horse's lung,' rock crystal, pearly nautilus, fairy tale buttons, playing cards or rubber dolls, Mr. Bricker has something pungent and informative to say about them." J. V.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p32 F 24 '52 110w

"A complete and comprehensive guide for the beginner and covers a wide field of collectible items. . . This vast amount of information can save both time and money for the beginner and the advanced hobbyist as well." Ethel Detxer
+ Spring'd Republican p4D Ja 27 '52 250w

BRICKHILL, PAUL. Escape or die; authentic stories of the RAF escaping society; with a commentary by H. E. Bates and a foreword by Sir Basil Embry. 248p $2.95 Norton

940.547 World war, 1939-1945—Prisoners and prisons. Escapes 52-12459

Eight true stories of the escapes of British airmen from imprisonment by the enemy. Some of the escapes, all aided by local men and women, were thru Malayan jungles, others in Tunisia, and others in France and Germany.

Bookmark 12:51 D '52 10w

Reviewed by John Broderick
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 S 21 '52 450w

Kirkus 20:441 J1 15 '52 180w

Reviewed by H. L. Roth
Library J 77:1496 S 15 '52 70w

"The author has reconstructed the adventure stories with narrative skill that encompasses an amazing amount of detail—not only the incidents that befell the R. A. F. men, but also the thoughts that went through their minds during the escape ordeals. One has a feeling of confidence in the fidelity of the reconstructions." Marcus Duffield

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 S 21 '52 500w

"Nothing like this has appeared since Eric Williams' 'The Wooden Horse.' Paul Brickhill, who gave us his own experience in 'The Great Escape,' has done a magnificent job in getting inside his eight characters; we are able to share the tensions, the uncertainties, the fears each experienced." Quentin Reynolds

+ N Y Times p29 S 21 '52 650w

New Yorker 28:118 S 27 '52 120w

"The author has written his book simply and well, but perhaps these stories are too fragmentary as they now stand. The best of the eight pieces deserve to be expanded into full-length accounts." Whitney Balliett

+ Sat R 35:43 N 1 '52 310w

Spring'd Republican p11C O 12 '52 240w

Times [London] Lit Sup p758 N 21 '52 450w

BRIDENBAUGH, CARL. Myths and realities; societies of the colonial South. 208p $3.25 La. state univ. press

975 [917.5] South—Social life and customs 52-13024

"Volume of lectures in Southern history delivered last year at Louisiana State University. In three essays—The Chesapeake Society, The Carolina Society, and The Back Settlements—based upon a wide use of original sources, Mr. Bridenbaugh describes the colonial South in the eighteenth century." (N Y Times) Index.

"The Bridenbaugh book should be read by all who are interested in 'Uncle Sam's other province'—the problem child of the nation—for nowhere else will they find a more suggestive account of the origins of Southern strengths, and weaknesses—seen here in their primitive complexity." Douglas Adair

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 N 23 '52 1150w

"In this reviewer's judgment Mr. Bridenbaugh, who is former director of the Institute of Early American History and Culture at Williamsburg, Va., has written the most discerning account of these three societies that has yet appeared." J. C. Sitterson

+ N Y Times p14 N 9 '52 650w

"Few historians have mastered so well the art of writing social and cultural history. Expert use of quotations, a supple style, deft summaries, and above all an understanding of the colonial South make this an interesting and significant book." J. M. E.

+ Sat R 36:21 Ja 10 '53 210w

Reviewed by L. W. Labaree
Yale R n s 42:287 winter '53 360w

BRIDGE, ANN, pseud. Dark moment. 337p $3.75 Macmillan

51-14992

Novel based on the rise of modern Turkey. It is the story of aristocratic Féridé, and her friendship with the English girl, Fanny Price, and what came of it during those years before, during, and after World war I. Féridé's marriage to an aide to Mustafa Kemal was a happy one; but Fanny's love for Kemal leads to a drastic decision.

Booklist 48:3; 159 S 1 '51; Ja 1 '52

Bookmark 11:108 F '52 40w

"Miss Bridge is frankly partisan; she not only extols Turkish culture, but also approves every public move of Turkey following the end of the First World War. She is perhaps less than fair to the Greeks; she can speak lightly of Kemal's retaliatory measures against them as 'victories marred by certain massacres.' Aside from this, her book is a pleasant and instructive recapitulation of a neglected aspect of recent history." Riley Hughes

+ Cath World 174:471 Mr '52 270w

"For the reader who knows of the Turkish revolution only by way of bare headlines and news accounts this book will illuminate the background and reveal its human significance, for this is one of those rare novels that deal with historical events in terms of fiction without altering or distorting the truth." Mildred Walker

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ja 20 '52 430w

"A book which breathes an authentic Turkish atmosphere, relives true Turkish history, and helps redeem a somewhat misunderstood people. It is scholarship in its most pleasant and easiest form. For it is plain that Ann Bridge feels great affection and respect for the Turkish nation and she conveys those sentiments to us." J. G. Harrison

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Ja 10 '52 550w

Kirkus 19:639 N 1 '51 270w

"The Turkish scene is rendered with fidelity and feeling. Turkish characters and the family relationships in an aristocratic household are described with real skill and sensitive perception. Plot and characterization are secondary to the scenic and political background." K. A. Shorey

+ Library J 76:1332 S 1 '51 130w

"Because of a style that is too often tedious, this novel doesn't measure up to the author's previous books." H. S. Taylor

— Library J 77:50 Ja 1 '52 90w

Reviewed by H. I. A. Fausset
Manchester Guardian p4 Ja 18 '52 230w

"Miss Bridge's recipe for using her plentiful historic-social material in 'The Dark Moment' is much the same as the one which has served her so well in 'Peking Picnic,' 'Illyrian Springs,' et al. Take big handfuls of exotic local color, add one fresh and appealing young love story, mix in a rich batter of interesting and authentic information, garnish with morsels of wisdom picked up during a long and observant life of travel, spice but moderately, pour into an adequate plot, and serve. I enjoyed 'The Dark Moment' exceedingly." F. H. Bullock

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ja 6 '52 650w

"Ann Bridge, the wife of a British diplomat, whose 'Peking Picnic,' 'Illyrian Spring' and 'Frontier Passage' proved her to be at home almost anywhere in the world, again compels one's admiration and respect for a thoroughly workmanlike job. . . The author's own pleasure and enthusiasm in writing this stirring book, which is the January Literary Guild selection, are communicated to the reader. It is a joy to read." Nancie Matthews

+ N Y Times p4 Ja 6 '52 500w

New Yorker 27:73 Ja 5 '52 60w

"There is no doubt that Miss Bridge feels her subject keenly. She knows how to convey those moods of heightened perceptiveness that can make life rich and satisfying under all kinds of physical hardships. But, perhaps, she is too much the lady to plough deep into the motives that govern the human spirit at a time such as this. This emotional lack is what you will notice in her story. This novel reads more like a book that had to be done rather than one in which there was real joy in the doing." J. V.

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ja 13 '52 600w

"If the polite dragoman prose of Ann Bridge does not exactly make for a vigorous story and characterization, there is enough genuine suspense in the historical events themselves. And if you do want to know just what happened in Anatolia between 1914 and 1920 and why it was a good thing it did, 'The Dark Moment' is your book—a pleasant, sincere, and exceptionally well-informed one." Joseph Hitrec

+ Sat R 35:18 Ja 10 '52 600w

Reviewed by R. D. Charques
Spec 188:654 My 16 '52 170w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal
Springf'd Republican p8D F 17 '52 170w

Times [London] Lit Sup p89 F 1 '52 260w

Wis Lib Bul 48:93 Mr '52

BRIDGES, CONSTANCE. See Jones, C. B.

BRIDGMAN, PERCY WILLIAMS. Nature of some of our physical concepts [three lectures given in April 1950 at the University of London]. 64p $2.75 Philosophical lib.

530.4 Physics 52-10010

"Three lectures delivered at the University of London in 1950 have been collected in this volume, after having been published in three 1951 numbers of the British Journal for the Philosophy of Science. The lectures pertain to the contemporary school of physical thought that is usually designated as operational analysis or operational philosophy. The author is one of the principal contributors to this school, and in this book he has both modified and extended some of his previous writings on the subject." N Y New Tech Bks

"Whatever one may think about the philosophy which seems implicit in this book, he should find Professor Bridgman's new reflection on operationalism a valuable contribution toward this interpretation of physics." Manley Thompson

+ Ethics 63:74 O '52 600w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 77:1308 Ag '52 30w

N Y New Tech Bks 37:62 Jl '52

"A penetrating study of the power of symbols." J. P.

+ Sat R 35:32 S 27 '52 200w

BRIDGMAN, PERCY WILLIAMS. Studies in large plastic flow and fracture with special emphasis on the effects of hydrostatic pressure. 362p il $8.50 McGraw

620.112 Strength of materials. Plasticity 51-12591

"Professor Bridgman's experiments with very high pressures are internationally famous. In this book he presents the results of a series of experiments that were designed to elucidate the phenomena of plastic flow and fracture of metals and other materials under high pressures. In general, the experimental methods and results are reported objectively without much attempt at theoretical conclusions. The book is potentially of interest to metallurgists and physicists." Library J

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 77:722 Ap 15 '52 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 37:28 Mr '52

"A wealth of data is here lucidly presented. The author's ingenuity and skill as an experimenter are apparent throughout. Occasionally his interpretation of results appears dubious; recent theoretical developments might well have been more fully utilized. Nevertheless, the book will be of very great interest to engineers who must deal with large plastic deformations in technological processes."

+ — U S Quarterly Bk R 8:212 Je '52 260w

BRIER, HOWARD MAXWELL. Cinder cyclone; il. by Jay Hyde Barnum. 233p $2.50 Random house

52-7218

Story of high school and college track racing. For high school age.

Kirkus 20:371 Jl 1 '52 150w

"Interesting racing bits, good characters, but rather forced thesis. However, boys will enjoy it." M. D. Read

+ — Library J 77:2079 D 1 '52 20w

"A fast moving story which shows a sensitive appreciation of one young man's problems as he approaches maturity." G. A. Woods

+ N Y Times pt2, p26 N 16 '52 110w

Reviewed by W. H. Baker

San Francisco Chronicle p3 N 16 '52 30w

BRIGGS, MRS BERTA (NABERSBERG). Charles Willson Peale, artist and patriot. (They made America) 262p il $3; text ed $2.80 McGraw

B or 92 Peale, Charles Willson—Juvenile literature 52-9763

"Tells the story of this great painter and lovable human being through his years of service with the Continental Army to the establishment of his famous museum of natural history and curiosities." (Sat R) For grades 7-10. Index.

Booklist 49:109 N 15 '52

"Good supplementary reading for high school classes in art and history." B. W. Schein
+ Library J 77:2186 D 15 '52 70w

"A story we found fascinating." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p11 N 16 '52 60w

"Without pretending to be erudite, she presents a lively picture of an artist with an active searching mind. . . A greater number of illustrations would, indeed, have been welcome, and more extensive critical remarks on the most important portraits would have given deeper insight into the actual work of the artist." N. G. Goodman

+ — Sat R 35:41 O 25 '52 290w

School & Society 76:191 S 20 '52 20w

BRIGHT, ROBERT. Richard Brown and the dragon; retold from an anecdote by Samuel Langhorne Clemens in A tramp abroad [il. by the author]. [92p] $2 Doubleday

52-9275

An episode from Mark Twain's The Legend of The Spectacular Ruin, in A Tramp Abroad

BRIGHT, ROBERT—Continued
has been adapted and expanded and illustrated by the author. It describes the adventures of Richard Brown who invented the fire extinguisher, which worked on dragons as well as on fires.

Booklist 49:18 S 1 '52

"Here is a variation of the traditional fairy story, done with a merry, modern touch. It is lots of fun." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p18 S 14 '52 120w

"Spirited drawings, including a technical diagram of the invention, add to ingenious text to make this a book that will be fun to share." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 28:319 O '52 120w

+ Kirkus 20:498 Ag 15 '52 90w

"Here is a dragon hunt with a freshness in the telling and the drawings that is delightful." M. C. Skinner

+ Library J 77:1661 O 1 '52 70w

"Mr. Bright's pictures are more elaborate than those in his previous picture books, and not always very clear. But their obvious satire matches that of the story. His dragon is really elegant." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 S 7 '52 300w

"Robert Bright has retained the original spirit of this yarn . . . the kind of anachronistic tale so dear to Mark Twain's heart. He has, however, added his own brand of fun and has embellished the story with a number of picturesque details. His pictures are freely drawn—a few, indeed, are a trifle confusing—but they are distinguished by a fine sense of comedy." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p18 Ag 24 '52 110w

New Yorker 28:192 D 6 '52 60w

BRINCOURT, ANDRE. Paradise below the stairs; tr. from the French by Henna Briffault. 292p $3 Duell; Little

52-9072

The experiences of a thirteen-year-old Paris schoolboy, who with two friends and one girl experiment with sex in the school cellar.

Kirkus 20:515 Ag 15 '52 210w

"A little horror!" W. K. Harrison

— Library J 77:1504 S 15 '52 50w

"The book has superficial faults of form. Though infrequently, M. Brincourt does indulge in extraneous moral commentary, forces scenes to their moral point, and confuses the otherwise beautiful rendition to adolescent mentalities by the too mature manner of his prose. . . Erma Briffault's translation is remarkably transparent, and, in the impossible matter of schoolboy slang from one language to another, quite painless and often the right flavor." Donald Sutherland

New Repub 127:22 D 1 '52. 390w

Reviewed by Carol Field

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p24 O 26 '52 550w

"The Paradise Below the Stairs' is more than a case history. It worthily ranks, from a literary point of view, with Radiguet's Flesh and the Devil, Rossi's 'Awakening' and Vittorini's 'The Red Carnation.' . . The most impressive part of the novel (and the best written) is the first—in which little 'happens' to François except that we follow the uncertainties, the lightning-quick reversals of feeling which characterize adolescence. Throughout, Henna Briffault's translation is first rate." Frances Keene

N Y Times p35 S 28 '52 480w

"M. Brincourt's horror at their behavior seems a little overdone, and he may feel that he is not up to making the world of children quite as dark as he wants it to appear, for he brings about a violent and not very likely death in order to achieve a climax for his story."

New Yorker 28:115 S 27 '52 50w

"The blind unawareness of parents and teachers, unable to enter into the children's world, is almost unbelievable, though real life affords many an illustration of it. The dialogues between the two brothers do not always sound convincing enough and lack conciseness. But the book is in most other respects an artistic success. It is well-written, ably translated, and, without any didacticism or psychological pedantry, it constitutes a most revealing document on child delinquency and on the awkward age when innocence and fairy-like imagination blend with cruel, self-tormenting, and almost criminal impulses." Henri Peyre

+ — Sat R 35:17 O 11 '52 600w

BRINIG, MYRON. Sadness in Lexington avenue. 342p $3.50 Rinehart

51-13511

Novel based on racial hatred between a Jewish and a German family. The scene is New York city, and the action begins in 1914 and ends in the 1940's.

"Unfortunately, despite the number of books published by the author, he is not a good writer. The book badly needs pruning, and pages of the conversations come naturally under the New Yorker heading of 'Things We Don't Believe Ever Were Said.'" E. McN.

— Canadian Forum 31:235 Ja '52 300w

Kirkus 19:456 Ag 15 '51 190w

"This book is obviously to show how miserable every one is made by this kind of racial hatred. Actually the characters are all so grotesque—the Jews whine and the Germans strut and bully—that the reader doesn't care what happens to any of them."

— N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 N 4 '51 240w

"The plot wheezes like an old freighter in a gale. Brinig's sentimental streak and his sympathetic touch with characters usually lend his books a warm glow of humanity, if not of art. It is missing here, probably because he was trying to people his novel with a cast of malicious morons he didn't believe in himself." John Barkham

— N Y Times p16 D 16 '51 270w

BRINK, MRS CAROL (RYRIE). Family grandstand; il. by Jean MacDonald Porter. 208p $2.50 Viking

52-14057

The lively doings of a midwestern university professor's family form the background of this story for ages 10 to 12.

Booklist 49:128 D 1 '52

Commonweal 57:171 N 21 '52 30w

+ Horn Bk 28:410 D '52 130w

"Delightful family adventures. . . There are tender moments, vigorous, uncontrived episodes and language that call a spade a spade, a sure fire chronicle of a healthiest of healthy families."

+ Kirkus 20:452 Ag 1 '52 190w

"Offers a variety of fun and excitement. The people are real and the air sparkles with the happenings of a college town in the fall."

+ Library J 77:1741 O 15 '52 30w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Johnson

+ Library J 77:2183 D 15 '52 40w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ja 4 '53 140w

"The Ridgeways are nice youngsters, none of them as memorable as the author's 'Caddie Woodlawn,' but ingenious, personable and natural—even if they don't spat as much as most children." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p52 N 9 '52 140w

New Yorker 28:197 D 6 '52 60w

"This is an unusually good book for the holidays—one to read aloud to the whole family at Christmas time." M. G. Davis

+ Sat R 35:45 D 13 '52 130w

BRINTON, CLARENCE CRANE. Anatomy of revolution. rev ed 324p $5 Prentice-Hall
323.2 Revolutions 52-8598

"The preface indicates that changes have been made throughout the text, a short new evaluation of the Russian revolution is added, the first chapter has been in part rewritten, and the bibliography brought up to date." (Booklist) For first edition see Book Review Digest 1938. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Hans Kohn

Ann Am Acad 284:182 N '52 400w
Booklist 48:340 Je 15 '52

"The value of the book is greatly increased by an impressive and well annotated bibliography, as well as by a detailed index." Paul Kinery

+ Cath World 175:478 S '52 290w

Current Hist 23:63 Jl '52 180w

"A readable, brilliant study. Market limited to political theorists and scholars. Not for the layman."

+ Kirkus 20:273 Ap 15 '52 240w

"Libraries which do not possess first edition, ought to buy this revision; other libraries, especially in colleges and universities, may benefit from having both editions on their shelves." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 77:887 My 15 '52 140w

"My original opinion that this is an erudite, witty and slightly tongue-in-cheek study remains unchanged. It is conversation which, no matter how frequently you interject demurrers, is pleasant and for the most part instructive." George Mayberry

+ New Repub 127:19 Ag 18 '52 480w

Reviewed by G. F. Whicher

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ag 31 '52 50w

"Such is [Professor Brinton's] wit and historical knowledge that what might have become a syllogistic hash in lesser hands turns out to be a keen and perceptive exposition and, like a well-conducted seminar, sets the mind of the reader racing off on its own."

+ New Yorker 28:86 Jl 12 '52 180w

"The social scientist will find this new edition a masterpiece of scientific scholarship, written in an informal and genial manner. The publishers and Brinton are to be commended for reissuing a volume which will rank as a major contribution in the study of revolution." P. M. S.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p25 Ag 17 '52 490w

"Having carefully compared the 1938 and 1952 texts, I am sure that almost every one of the changes is for the better." B. R. Redman

+ Sat R 35:57 O 4 '52 280w

School & Society 75:367 Je 7 '52 30w

"Uniformities can be cases of mere coincidence. It is, however, highly useful to have the parallels in the four revolutions chosen by Mr. Brinton—the English, American, French, and Russian—demonstrated with such erudition and clarity as appear in the main parts of the book. It should be added that the author is too good a historian and too lively a person to deny himself the expression of more than scientific interests. It is a book from which much can be learned." Hajo Holborn

+ Yale R n s 42:140 autumn '52 400w

BRINTON, HOWARD HAINES. Friends for 300 years; the history and beliefs of the Society of Friends since George Fox started the Quaker movement. 239p $3 Harper

289.6 Friends, Society of 52-5424

A study of the Society of Friends written to commemorate the three hundredth anniversary of their organization. Since 1936, the author has been director of Pendle Hill, a graduate school for religious and social study maintained by the Society of Friends. Index.

Booklist 48:350 Jl 1 '52

Bookmark 11:229 Jl '52 20w

Reviewed by A. C. Ames

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 S 7 '52
120w

"Howard Brinton is well qualified to write a history of the Quaker movement. Author of twelve books and director of the Quaker graduate school at Pendle Hill, he has also held lectureships or taught on the faculties of seven colleges in this country and in England. The author raises questions of interest for all concerned with the field of religious thought." S. R. Harlow

+ Christian Century 69:1407 D 3 '52 700w

"A valuable addition to the literature by Quakers about Quakers."

+ Kirkus 20:344 Je 15 '52 170w

"A thoughtful and penetrating study." G. D. McDonald

+ Library J 77:1008 Je 1 '52 140w

"The book is not a Quaker history; it is a brilliant examination of man's religious nature, an objective analysis of mysticism, and a thoughtful interpretation of humanity's contemporary dilemma. Howard Brinton's wisdom and understanding have triumphed over the facts of his assignment." Thomas Sugrue

+ N Y Times p7 Je 22 '52 550w

Wis Lib Bul 48:166 Jl '52

BRITTAI, ROBERT EDWARD. Let there be bread. 243p $3 Simon & Schuster

338.1 Food supply. Agriculture 52-1520

"Mr. Brittain's book outlines ways in which man, through the use of scientific and technological advances and native ingenuity, can produce abundant food for all. Man's successes and failures, past and present, to cultivate deserts, polar and tropic regions, farm land heretofore considered untillable, utilize the ocean floor, harness rivers for irrigation, combat wind and disease are the points elaborated upon." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 48:274 My 1 '52

"Shining through the fears and upheavals now enveloping the world is a new vision of the brotherhood of man which has the potential to wipe hunger from the earth. Robert Brittain has caught this vision, and the fresh breath of its challenge is felt in every page of his book. At the same time it is a highly practical and hardheaded book, dealing mainly with the means men already have for combating misery and increasing the food supply and the ways in which these can be applied today." R. C. Cowen

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 My 28 '52 500w

Reviewed by Gary MacEoin

Commonweal 56:253 Je 13 '52 550w

"Poet, professor and commentator on science for the B. B. C., Robert Brittain is well qualified for the writing of a book about the world's land and hunger problems, a task which he performs admirably."

+ Kirkus 20:64 Ja 15 '52 160w

"Brilliantly written, the author does not use technical language beyond the understanding of lay readers. It should have more than a limited audience." R. P. Bartolini

+ Library J 77:427 Mr 1 '52 130w

"Brilliantly written. . . Unlike de Castro, Mr. Brittain is not a trained scientist. He is a poet, and a scholar experienced in research methods, who decided it was high time to tell the story of the vast revolution which the botanists and zoologists are putting us through, with genetics, hybridization, nutrition analysis, unknown to most of us, while we build hydrogen bombs and space ships to establish law and order in a starving world. It is a thrilling story, and justifies Brittain's quoting the 'Antigone': 'Wonders are many on earth, and the greatest of these is man.'" Stringfellow Barr

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Je 8 '52 550w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ap 22 '52
220w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:312 S '52 190w

BRITTAIN, VERA MARY (MRS GEORGE EDWARD GORDON CATLIN). Search after sunrise. 270p $3 Macmillan

954 India—Politics and government. Gandhi, Mohandas Karamchand [52-6141]

"The author visited India with an international delegation invited by Gandhi, which proved a memorial mission since the great leader had been assassinated before the delegates assembled. Here is recorded a series of impressions received while the impact of an entirely new situation was fresh in her mind." Booklist

Booklist 48:183 F 1 '52

"It is a rewarding subject. Miss Brittain is a thoughtful person of positive convictions, and her point of view is worthy of attention." A. C. Ames

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ja 20 '52 400w

Foreign Affairs 30:683 J1 '52 10w

"Well written, here is a book of exceptional contemporary interest." Frances Witherspoon + N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Ap 27 '52 700w

"Vera Brittain is impressive because this is such a sensible, honest, careful, unpretentious book and it is, of course, the work of a keen, trained observer who can set down sights and impressions expertly." H. L. Matthews

+ N Y Times p10 Mr 2 '52 360w

"Those who remember 'Testament of Youth' and 'Testament of Friendship' may be disappointed in 'Search after Sunrise.' The difficulty of setting India down in words has disconcerted other great writers as it does Miss Brittain. Although her story seems hurriedly and discursively written, it gives background on the two countries, the enormous political, social and economic problems they are trying to solve, and the people engaged in that brave attempt." E. B.

San Francisco Chronicle p10 Ja 27 '52 220w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn

Springf'd Republican p10D Mr 30 '52 250w

BRO, MARGUERITE (HARMON). Stub; a college romance. 288p $2.50 Doubleday

52-6371

A novel for college age. It presents the problems of life in a coeducational college, and is particularly the story of Stub Larsen.

Booklist 49:109 N 15 '52

"Lightly sophisticated, heart rending and warming first year college experiences of young Stub Larsen in a novel that is steps above the average in teenage fiction."

+ Kirkus 20:509 Ag 15 '52 170w

"The descriptive passages describing some of the courses slow down the action of the story, but the more serious reader will appreciate the important values in the book."

+ Library J 77:1754 O 15 '52 30w

"You will like Stub and his friends, and will find yourself as interested in his courses as in his surprising succession of girl friends." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p16 N 16 '52 90w

"The author of this book, herself steeped in college atmosphere, has written a deeply helpful, understanding, and readable story." Bernice Frankel

+ Sat R 36:45 Ja 10 '53 200w

BROAD, CHARLIE LEWIS. Winston Churchill, 1874-1951. 611p $6 Philosophical lib.

B or 92 Churchill, Winston Leonard Spencer 52-6986

"This is a revised edition of [a biography] of Winston Churchill [first published in England in 1941], bringing the story of that statesman's career up-to-date to a point just prior to the elections of 1951. It is a comprehensive study of Mr. Churchill, encompassing his entire life and providing a full-bodied picture of his long public career as a soldier, M.P. and statesman.

Liberalism interwoven in the narrative are excerpts from Churchill's speeches, these being made the focal points of the various chapters." (Current Hist) Index.

Reviewed by C. L. Mowat

Am Hist R 57:1028 J1 '52 200w

Am Pol Sci R 46:588 Je '52 10w

"Excellent biography."

+ Current Hist 22:228 Ap '52 80w

Foreign Affairs 31:164 O '52 30w

Reviewed by R. S. Taylor

Library J 77:789 My 1 '52 140w

"While it is no masterpiece of writing, it is very readable."

New Yorker 28:92 Mr 1 '52 140w

BROBECK, FLORENCE RICHARDS. Good salad book. 189p $2.95 Barrows

641.83 Salads 52-9652

Recipes for all types of salads, from appetizer salads to main-dish salads. Includes menus, a section on health and calory-count salads, and one on large quantity recipes to be served at church suppers, etc. Index.

Booklist 48:373 J1 15 '52

"Here's another Brobeck item to add to every cookbook shelf. Attractive format, clear-cut presentation, adequate index."

+ Kirkus 20:298 My 1 '52 130w

Reviewed by Charlotte Turgeon

+ N Y Times p12 J1 27 '52 60w

BROCK, EMMA LILLIAN. Kristie's Buttercup; il. by [the author]. 86p $2.50 Knopf

52-6388

Another story of the Minnesota farm boys Elmer and Elner and their old horse Kristie. The boys trade their colt in order to help buy a Holstein cow and Kristie and the cow, Buttercup, become great friends. For grades 6 to 9.

Booklist 49:18 S 1 '52

+ Horn Bk 28:317 O '52 50w

Kirkus 20:499 Ag 15 '52 120w

"Libraries which found the other Kristie books popular will want this." M. J. Meade

+ Library J 77:1520 S 15 '52 40w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 O 5 '52 220w

San Francisco Chronicle p29 N 23 '52 60w

BROCK, RAY. Blood, oil and sand. 256p $3.50 World pub.

956 East (Near East) 52-5192

"An informative book by a veteran foreign correspondent about the turbulent Middle East, its nationalism, diplomacy and aims. Splendid analysis of problems, peoples, leaders: the Arab League, reawakened Turkey and courageous, sensitive Israel, prudent Abdullah of Jordan and his erratic, anti-Western son Talal, forceful Ibn Saud, fiery Mossadegh, strategic, problematic Syria, Lebanon, Iraq, discontented Tunisia and Morocco, alert Pakistan. Based on long personal observations." (Library J) Index.

"If the reader is able to take Brock's sensational style of presentation with enough salt, he is likely to find Blood, Oil and Sand usefully thought provoking." H. L. Hoskins

+ Ann Am Acad 283:234 S '52 320w

Booklist 48:278 My 1 '52

"One reads of 'Pakistan's king, Mohammed Zahir Shah.' Zahir Shah is monarch of neighboring Afghanistan. Pakistan is a member of the British commonwealth and therefore can be presumed to extend limited allegiance to Queen Elizabeth, but it has its own governor general and prime minister [Brock misspells the latter's name]. Someone should have read proof on this book, which could have been quite valuable." Percy Wood

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 My 4 '52 160w

"To cite the historical inaccuracies, unproven conclusions, and undocumented assertions which characterize this book would be an impossibly long task. . . . Even were it not for the book's other obvious shortcomings, such inaccuracies would be sufficient to weaken confidence in the author as a careful student or accurate historian." J. G. Harrison

— Christian Science Monitor p9 Ag 8 '52 650w

Current Hist 22:380 Je '52 70w

"Brock covers a lot of territory—too much to be thorough. His reporting is incisive, racy, and hurried. His ideas will rouse comment, and his book will serve to bring more consideration to an area of the world that severely demands our keen attention."

+ Kirkus 20:176 Mr 1 '52 250w

"Highly recommended," Kurt Schwerin

+ Library J 77:714 Ap 15 '52 150w

"Mr. Brock finds no shortage of windmills at which to tilt. They include 'pressure groups, lobbies, and special interests, at home and abroad' like 'Zionist organizations, the Arab League, oil companies, Bulgarian and Croatian irredentists' (!) and naturally the longsuffering State Department. In the Middle East everyone is out of step except Mr. Brock."

Jack Winocour

— Nation 174:406 Ap 26 '52 1100w

"Mr. Brock writes with a gusty flamboyance, and there are times when it's hard to discern the facts for the adjectives. He has an opinion about almost everything, and it's usually a strong opinion. He is often right. On matters of detail, anyway, he is sometimes wrong."

A. T. Steele

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 My 18 '52 550w

"About this vast area he has gathered much interesting information. It would make better reading, however, had he found time to prune out the purple phrases and tighten up his sentence structures." D. A. Schmidt

N Y Times p18 Ap 20 '52 700w

"He is a good reporter, but he doesn't seem to take into consideration some of the factors that weigh against the likelihood of a Soviet grab for this greatly expanded Middle East. The writing, regrettably, is terrible."

+ — New Yorker 28:146 Ap 26 '52 220w

"There is no sober backgrounding here, no attempt to explain seriously what America must do to fill a vacuum of power; in the entire book there is not a single significant reference to the people of the vast Middle East as people. . . . Mr. Brock's book errs in the nature of the geography he is covering. . . . Our understanding must be based on fact, and not on the prejudicial filterings and angry generalizations of a reporter zealous enough to write a book but apparently too impatient to make it a serious and helpful one." David Perlman

— San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ap 27 '52 750w

"There are a few good yarns here, some new, some old, but each of them engaging. . . . These tales told by Ray Brock, late of The New York Times and United Press, are wonderful but, alas, his book is not. This reviewer has just spent most of a lurid day blinking through its pages in search of light on the darkening Middle East. I am compelled to say that the only thing memorable in this heady volume is its confusion, spiced with monumental misinformation." Hal Lehrman

+ — Sat R 35:35 My 17 '52 1000w

Springf'd Republican p9D My 25 '52 450w

BROD, MAX. Unambo; a novel of the war in Israel; tr. by Ludwig Lewisohn. 309p $3 Farrar, Straus

52-5797

"This strange tale draws substance from Goethe's Faust, particularly the pact with the Devil. Protagonist Paul Helfin, Israeli cinema producer, employs a 'black-magic' gadget, the 'unambo' (un, one, ambo, two), which enables him to be two personalities simultaneously, thereby obviating decisions and eliminating the 'if.' His strong moral exertion brings him redemption finally, when he sacrifices his life to save a beloved comrade." Library J

Reviewed by A. Andras

Canadian Forum 32:46 My '52 120w

Kirkus 19:685 D 1 '51 240w

"The author, composer for the Hebrew Theatre in Tel Aviv, permeates this historical novel with probably the most detailed dialogue ever written concerning the war between Israeli and Arab. Recommended mainly for the public library's college-level clientele." J. M. Scheer

Library J 77:143 Ja 15 '52 140w

"Despite an intriguing portrait of the actress and some good battle scenes, Mr. Brod's new novel, is muddy, weakly constructed, and in the main unsuccessful as an analysis of the clash of good and evil at a critical point in recent history."

+ — Nation 174:189 F 23 '52 140w

Reviewed by Wade Donahoe

New Repub 126:20 My 26 '52 150w

"The bare outlines of 'Unambo' cannot do justice to this highly stimulating book. It is not alone Max Brod, the novelist who wrote it but, also, Max Brod, the Jew, the historian, the philosopher, the Kafka interpreter. Each makes his contribution and the whole, masterfully integrated, makes strong adult fare. Mr. Brod is fortunate in his translator for Ludwig Lewisohn renders his language sensitively on every level of expression." Rose Feld

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 Mr 9 '52 600w

"The writing, despite the attractiveness of the idea, is unfortunately rather dull. There is a heavy and steady propagandist note, as if the author—almost against his will as novelist—were being led by his own proud, sincere and ardent conviction into a pleading of Israel's cause. Some passages read like a publicist's rhetoric." Richard Sullivan

+ — N Y Times p23 F 24 '52 330w

"Besides being an ardent Zionist, Max Brod was the great friend and biographer of Franz Kafka. Brod and Kafka once collaborated in writing a travel sketch about a European train journey. In 'Unambo,' a chauvinistic novel of the war in Israel, Max Brod shows that some of Kafka's mystic imagery was contagious, but, unfortunately, he came away with none of the simple, fascinating prose style that makes Kafka so readable." J. A.

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p31 Ap 20 '52 400w

Sat R 35:17 Mr 8 '52 160w

BRODBECK, MAY, and others. American non-fiction, 1900-1950. (Twentieth-century literature in America) 198p $3 Regnery

810.9 American literature—History and criticism 52-12468

"Consists of three long essays: May Brodbeck's 'Philosophy in America, 1900-1950,' a quite formal examination of academic philosophy; James Gray's 'The Journalist as a Literary Man,' [an] account of such figures as Finley Peter Dunne, Lincoln Steffens, and Vincent Sheean; and Walter Metzger's 'American Social Thought in the Twentieth Century.'" Chicago Sunday Tribune

Booklist 49:63 O 15 '52

"One may approve or disapprove the particular judgments made by these three critics; but one must wonder why no place has been found in the volume on non-fiction for a treatment of American historical writing; why the history of recent American philosophy is only once—and tangentially—related to literary criticism, and nowhere to imaginative literature; and whether the association of literature and journalism is satisfactorily defined." Milton Crane

Chicago Sunday Tribune p19 N 9 '52 180w

BRODIE, JOHN (JOHN GUTHRIE, pseud). Merry-go-round. 218p $3 Pellegrini & Cudahy

51-12764

Post-war story of England which mildly satirizes British culture in the story of young

BRODIE, JOHN—Continued

Peter Smith. Peter conscientiously attends to his work at the Society for British Culture, but in his off hours he makes love to Valerie, Laura, or Hilde in Denmark, all with indifferent success.

Kirkus 20:167 Mr 1 '52 180w

"Mr. Guthrie's first novel to be published in the United States is innocuously likable and as shapeless as its title implies."

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p37 O 12 '52 250w

"If John Guthrie's other five novels are as amusing as this one, it is surprising that they haven't been published here. . . . What counts here is not Mr. Guthrie's untidy plot, but his witty and skillful use of dialogue." Nancie Matthews

+ N Y Times p15 Je 22 '52 180w

"Not to be confused with serious literature, 'Merry-Go-Round' is heartily recommended as pleasant satire for summer reading." J. E. C.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p27 Ag 17 '52 200w

"The British have a gift for amiably satirizing their own minor foibles, and in 'Merry-Go-Round' Mr. Guthrie exercises that gift to provide a few hours of pleasant and harmless diversion."

+ Sat R 35:21 J1 5 '52 190w

Reviewed by James Yaffe

Yale R n s 41:12 summer '52 100w

BRODRICK, ALAN HOUGHTON. Danger spot of Europe. 192p $3.75 Philosophical lib.

943.087 Germany—History—Allied occupation, 1945- 51-8783

A study of present-day Western Germany, by an English writer of travel books who visited Germany frequently during the Weimar period, and during the days of the Third Reich.

Foreign Affairs 30:677 J1 '52 10w

"Although Mr. Brodrick, an Englishman, has written widely on such subjects as North Africa, Burma, Prehistoric painting and early man, this latest book of his on the Germany of today is not a work of importance."

Kirkus 19:626 O 15 '51 170w

"Mr. Brodrick has an individual style and a nice sense of humor, and he knows Germany well."

+ New Yorker 27:78 F 2 '52 120w

"A remarkable book written by a shrewd observer of Germany between the wars and after the last war. . . . Students of Germany who have lived there for many years will be surprised by the deep insight acquired by the author and by the objective way in which he sees contemporary Germany and her problems—some of them at least."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p642 O 12 '51 450w

BRODRICK, ALAN HOUGHTON. Tree of human history. 253p maps $4.75 Philosophical lib.

901 Civilization—History [52-25953]

"The author, a widely traveled Englishman who has worked in museums and headed the International Congress of Anthropological and Ethnological Sciences, writes a lively account for nonspecialists of the events which led to the appearance of civilizations and their arts in Europe, Asia and the Americas." (San Francisco Chronicle) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 49:27 S 15 '52

"Mr. Brodrick handles a tough subject with remarkable facility and understanding, and he has some sensible things to say about a 'pattern' in history, about progress, and about the series of basic assumptions which holds a society together." I. B.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 O 19 '52 130w

BRODRICK, JAMES. Saint Francis Xavier (1506-1552). (Wicklow Press bk) 548p $5 Pellegrini & Cudahy

B or 92 Francis Xavier, Saint 52-9459

A biography of St Francis Xavier by an Irish Jesuit now living in England. "In writing St. Francis Xavier, he has had the advantage of a mass of new material on Xavier's life, most of it compiled by fellow Jesuit scholars." (Time) Index.

"This handsome volume, of which the publishers may well be proud, is satisfactory from every point of view. It really calls for superlatives." Joseph McSorley

+ Cath World 176:154 N '52 350w

"Father Brodrick's book is fascinating, well told, well documented, interesting as only the true story of a real hero can be. No need for fiction here. The truth is fine enough. The man Francis Xavier speaks for himself." Julie Bedier

+ Commonweal 57:237 D 5 '52 700w

"An Irishman belonging to the English Province of the Jesuits, Father Brodrick has long enjoyed a high reputation as a historian. Now he has added to his laurels with what is certainly the best book on Francis Xavier in any language." Theodore Maynard

+ N Y Times p39 N 9 '52 550w

"A highly successful attempt to present the saint and his work stripped of the false romanticizing."

+ Time 60:102 N 10 '52 700w

BROGAN, DENIS WILLIAM. Price of revolution. 280p $3.50 Harper

323.2 [321.092] Revolutions 51-11833

"This book is concerned with the problem of revolution, with the use of political violence to deal with economic and social problems. It is designed to suggest that, in making an estimate of the benefits to be gained from changes in social and economic conditions, the cost of the methods should be brought into the book-keeping." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 48:311 Je 1 '52

"Professor Brogan brings to all his writing knowledge, alertness, and a readiness to discuss contemporary affairs frankly. His readers may always be sure of finding good matter presented in smooth, even style." Joseph McSorley

+ Cath World 175:317 J1 '52 330w

"This is an uneven, and taken as a whole, not a very good book. It is written in a facile style, full of wit and anecdotes, and a learning which frequently seems to be extensive rather than profound. It is always entertaining but not always illuminating and sometimes outright misleading." H. J. Morgenthau

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 My 25 '52 380w

"Brogan is always good reading, as Americans have reason to know. In this latest book he is very good reading indeed. The fireworks go off on every page; when they don't soar upward from the text they can be counted on to erupt from the footnotes. The footnotes, as a matter of fact, are the best part of the book." P. H.

+ Christian Century 69:1002 S 3 '52 500w

Current Hist 23:63 J1 '52 100w

Foreign Affairs 30:669 J1 '52 20w

Reviewed by David Mitrany

Manchester Guardian p4 F 1 '52 550w

"This is a thoughtful book. It is better in parts than in the whole; it does not so much add up to a single argument as suggest a series of arguments or of propositions. It is a book that is really addressed more to an American than to an English audience, but it is the kind of book that few Americans could have written. We need not accept Mr. Brogan's dim views of past revolutions to go along with him on his views of modern revolutions." H. S. Commager

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 My 18 '52 1200w

"There is much wisdom in Mr. Brogan's comments and observations, yet, I fear, social scientists will find 'The Price of Revolution' disappointing. It is too discursive and, at bottom, undisciplined. It has no logical structure and contains no definitions. . . . Quite clearly, what scholars need is a careful analysis of the meaning of revolution, as well as a type-study of revolution. Mr. Brogan's book, readable and even entertaining though it is, has not supplied us with either." S. K. Padover

+ N Y Times p3 My 11 '52 1000w

New Yorker 28:144 My 17 '52 200w

"Since [the author] writes from an impressive fund of knowledge, yet with great grace and wit, the book is a thoroughly stimulating piece of work." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 My 15 '52 600w

"Mr. Brogan gives his views freely and these show him to be widely read, liberal-minded, moderate, and circumspect. To read the book is like listening to a well-informed, witty, somewhat garrulous man discussing current events in a highly entertaining manner." J. S. Schapiro

+ Sat R 35:12 My 10 '52 1150w

"The price of Revolution is to be welcomed and applauded as a piece of political thinking which manages to avoid the two opposed vices of most current political thinking—starry-eyed abstraction and vulgar realism. Politics are presented to us here neither, as the pursuit of Utopias nor as mere 'fixing,' but as not being deceived about our situation and doing our best in almost unendurably 'interesting' circumstances." Michael Oakeshott

+ Spec 187:825 D 14 '51 1100w

Times [London] Lit Sup p814 D 21 '51 1050w

"Mr. Brogan is a master of causerie and witty historical anecdote, but these pleasant gifts cannot quite make up for the shortcomings in lucid organization and methodic argument. His book lacks a clear focus." Hajo Holborn

+ Yale R n s 42:139 autumn '52 320w

BROLEY, MYRTLE JEANNE (MRS CHARLES LAVELLE BROLEY). Eagle man; Charles L. Broley's field adventures with American eagles [introd. by Edwin Way Teale]. 210p 1l $3.50 Pellegriani & Cudahy

B or 92 Broley, Charles Lavelle. Eagles 52-9364

At 58 the subject of this biography retired from his work as manager of a Winnipeg bank, determined to spend the rest of his life as an amateur ornithologist. At over 70 he is still pursuing the bald eagle and has placed identification bands on the legs of more than 1200 eaglets. This story of his life is written by his wife.

Booklist 49:61 O 15 '52

"It is regrettable that her manuscript was not submitted to the blue pencil to eliminate repetitions and to bring together certain paragraphs which should have run consecutively instead of some 10 to 100 pages apart." John Bayless

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 O 12 '52 210w

Kirkus 20:490 Ag 1 '52 70w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 78:63 Ja 1 '53 30w

"Mrs. Broley's book, simple and unpretentious, will, of course, appeal primarily to ornithologists. It is a unique source-book for eagle-love. But it is also an engaging portrait of a happy man." Alan Devoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p22 N 23 '52 480w

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 N 9 '52 190w

BROMHALL, WINIFRED. Chipmunk that went to church; ill. by [the author]. [28p] $2 Knopf

52-6392

Picture storybook about Penny who was sent to stay with a stern great aunt when her small brother had the measles. Without her little dog Penny was lonely until she made friends with a chipmunk.

Bookmark 12:11 O '52 20w

+ Kirkus 20:499 Ag 15 '52 100w

"Good picture-story book for children from 4-7. Second-graders should be able to read it for themselves. Recommended." D. M. Blasco

+ Library J 77:1410 S 1 '52 70w

"It is a gentle tale, with its point made none too clearly. But the unusual incident of the title may amuse small girls of the look-and-listen age, and the pictures are appealing." L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p38 N 16 '52 80w

"Although Miss Bromhall has taken the liberty of mixing a modern story with romantic illustrations of china wash bowls, Victorian dresses and formal parlors, no one should object too strenuously, since it all adds up to a charmingly sentimental picture-tale." M. L. Krupka

+ N Y Times pt2, p40 N 16 '52 120w

San Francisco Chronicle p28 N 23 '52 70w

BRONSON, LYNN, pseud. See Lampman, E. S.

BROOKS, JEROME EDMUND. Mighty leaf; tobacco through the centuries. 361p $5 Little 338.17 Tobacco—History 52-9094

History of tobacco from the days of John Rolfe to the present. Bibliography. Index.

"With quiet precision but a lightness of touch, the author goes industriously about his job of setting forth information on the subject of tobacco. . . . The author's literary method is that of interlarding amusing anecdotes and entertaining incident to avoid the dreariness which would almost inevitably follow too drastic a parade of facts." Henry Cavendish

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p23 N 16 '52 350w

Kirkus 20:621 S 15 '52 90w

"The story is continuously fascinating. But it was probably a mistake to try to synchronize the history of tobacco with the world events contemporary with its successive stages." Delancey Ferguson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 N 16 '52 650w

"Mr. Brooks' knowledge is profound, but never obtrusive and never solemn. . . . In investigating a complex culture element, he has not neglected to write a most entertaining book." William Breyfogle

+ N Y Times p20 D 7 '52 330w

BROOKS, RICHARD. The producer. 337p $3.50 Simon & Schuster

51-7129

"A story about the Hollywood jitters,—about a producer who knew that he had to make good—box office wise—but who was fed up with compromising with his conscience; about the producer's wife, who was bored with the activity and aimlessness of her life, and continually sought new nostrums, from psychoanalysis to dianetics to the Catholic Church; about a writer from New York, who spoke his mind on the matter of loyalty oaths and got brought up before the Committee on Un-American Activities; about a leading man who demanded rewrites and a leading lady who had to be played up for looks and not for sound." Kirkus

"The plot has been done before. But in the hands of Richard Brooks you get the underlying currents, the basic integrity, while seeing the whys and hows of a life of pressure and artificial standards. There's cynicism here, but there's compassion as well. And while the ending has good 'box office' qualities, there's no attempt to reform anyone, to tie up the loose threads, or to make one feel that it won't happen over again."

BROOKS, RICHARD—Continued

+ Kirkus 19:367 J1 15 '51 220w

Reviewed by Paul Bloomfield
Manchester Guardian p4 D 5 '52 140w

Reviewed by Harvey Swados
Nation 173:505 D 8 '51 750w

"His dialogue is as objective and alive as his comments and descriptive passages are woodenly propagandist. His chief merit, however, is that he has attempted to give us Hollywood's 'private grammar.'" John Raymond

+ New Statesman & Nation 44:732 D 13 '52 300w

"Hollywood novels are almost as numerous as Hollywood movies, and their artistic level about as consistent. But Richard Brooks' 'The Producer' is a rare exception, being a fascinating novel which makes the movie industry believable and even understandable, and the people who work in it understandable and even believable." Herbert Kupferberg

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 N 4 '51 650w

"An important, worth-while story, vividly told. In particular, the anguish Matt Gibbons undergoes in trying to maintain, privately, the reputation for uncompromising honesty with which he has publicly endowed himself, without at the same time losing his money, his job, or his professional standing, is painfully believable and thoroughly communicated." D. M. Maniewicz

+ N Y Times p4 N 4 '51 600w

"It isn't by any means standard to read a novel based on the career of a motion picture producer and to wind up feeling somewhat sorry for the hero and with more than a little respect for him and his job. Nevertheless that's the way you're likely to lay down [this] fast-moving, not too gentle tale." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p26 D 6 '51 850w

BROOKS, VAN WYCK. Confident years: 1885-1915. 627p $6 Dutton

810.9 American literature—History and criticism 51-14833

The concluding volume of the author's series on the literary history of the United States called Makers and Finders: A History of the Writer in America, 1800-1915. The years covered in this volume are from 1885 to 1915. Index.

"In Mr. Brooks one finds united, to an unusual degree, the talents of an indefatigable scholar, historian, psychologist, biographer, genre-painter, sociologist, critic, and literary artist; and though he is possibly not pre-eminent in any one of these capacities, his combination of gifts, and the immense powers of assimilation and synthesis that go with it, make him pre-eminent as a chronicler of American cultural activity. He brings the cultural past to life in all its interrelated aspects; illuminates it by an act of vivid re-creation." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 189:87 Ja '52 600w

Booklist 48:137; 157 D 15 '51; Ja 1 '52

Bookmark 11:104 F '52 20w

"This volume seems to me less successful than some of the others. Mr. Brooks is somewhat surprising in the gentleness with which he treats Dreiser and Gertrude Stein, as he is in the severity he shows toward Mencken, a man of whom he is, in his private capacity, very fond. . . . On the whole, what must be said most emphatically is that Brooks has performed a most exceptional work, one in which scholarship and art are perfectly fused." Theodore Maynard

+ Cath World 174:473 Mr '52 470w

"One feature of the book is rather puzzling: this is the addition of the title of the dates 1885-1915. Many books and writers are included who date post-1915. . . . However, it would be churlish indeed to reproach Mr. Brooks for giving us more than he promised! Here, at less than a cent a page, are more than 600 pages of reading pleasure for everybody who has enjoyed the American literature of our time."

Edward Wagenknecht
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ja 6 '52 500w

Reviewed by Robert Peel
Christian Science Monitor p7 Ja 10 '52 900w

Reviewed by Henry Rago
— Commonweal 55:618 Mr 28 '52 1500w

"Often inundating in the legion references and examples thrown at the reader, Brooks is slow pegging. But the comfortable flow and the comfortable bias make for comfortable reading, for his wide audience."

+ Kirkus 19:651 N 1 '51 300w

"This reviewer cheerfully confesses that he enjoyed the book too much to write dispassionately about it. It is not a serene classic like the Flowering of New England however, because the author has been a large part of what he writes about in the later years of this notable literary history." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 77:45 Ja 1 '52 140w

Reviewed by Marcus Cunliffe
Manchester Guardian p4 My 27 '52 240w

"As a piece of cultural history Mr. Brooks's series is in its way a unique achievement, but as an interpretation of American literature and of the American mind this closing volume sharpens one's sense of its shortcomings." Howard Doughty

Nation 174:63 Ja 19 '52 550w

Reviewed by Maxwell Geismar
New Repub 126:18 Ja 28 '52 1050w

Reviewed by John Raymond
New Statesman & Nation 43:562 My 10 '52 1050w

"Judged as a whole, 'Makers and Finders' is the most impressive work undertaken and carried through by any single American scholar of our time. . . . It isn't Mr. Brooks's definition of the American tradition that is important for the world today; it is his recovery of the tradition in volume after volume; it is his proof that in literature this country has long possessed a usable past. It is, beyond this, his love of letters as an art and his integrity as a lonely scholar. We are always much too slow to recognize a great achievement. Let us not make that mistake in the case of 'Makers and Finders,' which will be remembered long after our time." Malcolm Cowley

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 Ja 6 '52 2350w

"Everywhere Mr. Brooks reveals those qualities which he has beyond any contemporary critic—the power of evoking the past, of re-creating character, of summoning for us the very image of a place, its feel and taste and smell; the power of rescuing from oblivion those who have been forgotten and infusing them with interest; the talent of shaking up the parts in the kaleidoscope and making them into a picture and a pattern; the special quality of looking at men and books with fresh eyes, of saying new things about familiar matters or of saying old things in new and illuminating ways." H. S. Commager

+ N Y Times p1 Ja 6 '51 2050w

Reviewed by Alfred Kazin
New Yorker 27:93 Ja 26 '52 1500w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles
San Francisco Chronicle p8 Ja 20 '52 700w

"Those who have read the earlier books will not need to be told that the picture is both vivid and colorful, accurate in bold outlines and important details. . . . Nowhere is the author or reader confused by the confusions of mind and emotion of these changing times. . . . There is criticism—usually tolerant, wise, and shrewd—but it is of authors as people in an environment rather than of the things they wrote. Writers as different as Gertrude Stein and Edith Wharton receive equally sympathetic treatment because they depicted honestly the life they knew and so contributed to the unfolding of the American past, while harsh comment on H. L. Mencken and Paul Elmer More is directed toward their own rejections of the creative spirit of their times." R. E. Spiller

+ Sat R 35:11 Ja 5 '52 1200w

School & Society 74:432 D 29 '51 20w

"Whether there is any such thing as an American tradition may perhaps be doubted—it is difficult to see a traditional aspect in anything so vigorous and so varied in expression, so lavishly, so truculently experimental—but there cannot be any doubt concerning the importance and the literary excellence of Mr. Brooks' volumes, for Mr. Brooks has the double advantage of being a first-rate historian and a most accomplished writer." C. E. Vulliamy
+ Spec 188:650 My 16 '52 700w

Springf'd Republican p12A Ja 6 '52 550w

"In many ways The Confident Years (1885-1915) is the liveliest and most disciplined book of the five. If it lacks the cameo charm of The World of Washington Irving, it also avoids the saccharine traces of The Flowering of New England. Moreover, the closer Brooks gets to the present, the more aroused he becomes."

+ Time 59:87 Ja 7 '52 1000w

Times [London] Lit Sup p612 S 19 '52 1350w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:131 Je '52 220w

Wis Lib Bul 48:89 Mr '52

BROOKS, WALTER ROLLIN. Freddy the pilot; il. by Kurt Wiese. 247p $3 Knopf 52-10749

Freddy, Mr. Bean's accomplished talking pig, has a new angle; he has learned to fly a plane. It was necessary for his latest detective case. There is a mystery here, too, for ages 9 to 11.

Kirkus 20:601 S 15 '52 90w

"Recommended for its general appeal for children of 9-11. Easily read by this group and fine for reading aloud." K. H. McAlarney
+ Library J 77:2076 D 1 '52 50w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p10 N 16 '52 60w

"As this mystery unfolds, Walter Brooks takes many good pokes at the 'comics.'" S. C. Gross

N Y Times pt2, p36 N 16 '52 50w

BROOKS, WINFIELD SEARS. Shining tides. 281p $3.50 Morrow
52-5785

A novel about Cape Cod and a great fish, a striped bass, whose comings and goings had a lot to do with the lives of some of the inhabitants.

"The author has a tendency toward melodrama which shows itself in the fire, in the stabbing, and when Cal and Stormy are in the rip. It is the men in their less heroic moments who give the book its authenticity. The men, the Cape in its summer moods, the tidal changes of the undersea life—these are the themes Mr. Brooks writes of with zest, knowledge, and skill." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic 190:80 Ag '52 390w

Booklist 48:329; 339 Je 15 '52

Bookmark 11:235 Jl '52 50w

"Here is a technically interesting and rather unusual first novel." Riley Hughes

+ Cath World 176:72 O '52 200w

Reviewed by Edmund Fuller

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Je 29 '52 340w

Reviewed by Ruth Chapin

Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 26 '52 40w

Kirkus 20:265 Ap 15 '52 220w

"A most unusual story we heartily recommend for the general reader, with very special interest for the fisherman." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 77:1074 Je 15 '52 110w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Je 29 '52 200w

"A happy and lusty tale. Those who know the Cape (especially who have known the thrill of striped-bass fishing), will relive their own experiences, feel the tug on their lines, and enjoy the thrill of the play." H. F. West

+ N Y Times p6 Je 29 '52 300w

"A good deal of fishing goes on. The writing can only be described as enfeebled."

— New Yorker 28:84 Jl 12 '52 50w

"Mr. Brooks' novel has the merits and the faults that characterize so many 'firsts.' He tells the story of Roccus and her marine realm with originality and imaginative vigor and that of Father O'Meara with a genuine perception of what the work of a shepherd of souls is like. But the romantic situations are hackneyed and contrived. One could wish that Mr. Brooks had confined himself to fish and priests and omitted the two love stories that are on the ordinary run-of-the-mill side." J. V.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 Jl 13 '52 950w

"A first novel [which] could easily be advertised as a textbook on striped bass fishing, and for me this is its principal allure. It concerns very human beings, and their troubles, and it has a complicated plot, woven expertly and without gathers or loose ends, like a good shrimp net, but its chief character is undoubtedly Roccus, a gigantic striped bass that would go a hundred pounds." Pat Frank

+ Sat R 35:15 Jl 19 '52 600w

Springf'd Republican p5C Jl 13 '52 150w

BROSSARD, CHANDLER. Who walk in darkness. 192p $2.75 New directions
52-8562

A novel about a group of acquaintances who drift from job to job in New York's Greenwich Village, and enliven their dull lives with prize fighting, dope parties, and evenings in Harlem dance halls.

Reviewed by H. I. A. Fausset

Manchester Guardian p4 N 21 '52 90w

"Though the narration, and at times even the dialogue, are flawed and clumsy, the world Brossard recreates pulses with a true beat. What it adds up to is that self-absorption has taken the place of self-reliance, either intellectual or moral. Impotence to love or let love, to create or appreciate, has robbed these token citizens of the juice of life." Frances Keene

— Nation 174:531 My 31 '52 750w

"Brossard no doubt means to say that all is not lost, that there is still freshness in life and hope for man; but his novel is so worn out by its burden of hip and Hemingwayish clichés that it cannot rise to the energy which should attend such a conviction." Isaac Rosenfeld

New Repub 126:19 My 5 '52 400w

Reviewed by J. D. Scott

New Statesman & Nation 44:582 N 15 '52 220w

"All, or almost all, of his characters are lighted up with a kind of radiance, something like a phosphorescence given off by a dead mackerel on a beach. They talk a kind of jargon—and the author has rendered it with chilling accuracy—compounded of bop terms, the intellectual leavings of little magazines and big books, and any psychoanalysis they happen to have borne away from the couch." Gilbert Millstein

— N Y Times p14 Je 22 '52 400w

"Even though 'Who Walk in Darkness' is something less than a great novel, it marks Chandler Brossard as a writer with a power and clarity of expression that will enhance whatever he chooses to write about." J. A.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 Jl 13 '52 440w

"The author has written in an unemphatic style that has the flatness but not the force of Hemingway's very early prose. He reproduces 'hipster' dialogue with accuracy, and occasional scenes of violence—particularly his prize-fight scenes—almost get off the ground. His failure lies in his inability to convince that any of the problems of the characters on which he has expended so much effort were worth writing about in the first place."

BROSSARD, CHANDLER—Continued
— Sat R 35:36 My 10 '52 160w

Times [London] Lit Sup p705 O 31 '52
100w

BROWN, VICTOR LINCOLN. New way to better hearing, through hearing reeducation; introd. by Robert West. 226p col il $3 Crown
617.8 Hearing 51-12007

"Including practice sessions, an experienced physician explains his method of improving hearing in a clearly stated volume for the person impaired in hearing, his parents or relatives, teachers, social workers and special therapists. Charts and tests in appendices." (Bookmark) No index.

Booklist 48:166 Ja 15 '52
Bookmark 11:129 Mr '52 40w

"This is written strictly for the layman and the not too educated one at that, but it should provide information and some encouragement for any deaf person."
Kirkus 19:593 O 1 '51 150w

"While of the greatest value to every deafened person, this book should also be in the hands of every general practitioner, otologist, audiologist, and other workers in the hearing field."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:85 Mr '52 210w

BROWER, REUBEN ARTHUR. Fields of light; an experiment in critical reading. 218p $3.50 Oxford

809 Reading. Literature—History and criticism 51-7283

"Mr. Brower's experiment in critical reading exacts of the student close attention and considerable use of his brains. The method requires that the design of the work under study be traced through line-by-line search for the key images, metaphors, symbols, and the links that bind these together, so that in the end the imaginative integrity that fuses the whole may be understood, and enjoyed. This book is not for the lazy; it is strenuous going, this analytic appreciation, but it leads, ultimately, as a quotation from Henry James indicates, to 'the Beautiful Gate of Enjoyment.'" Nation

"Mr. Brower's taste is good, his capacity for appreciation catholic, and his method flexible." Roife Humphries

+ Nation 174:139 F 9 '52 480w
Springf'd Republican p14C N 4 '51 120w

"Compared with, say, Mr. Cle nth Brooks's The Well-Wrought Urn, this book seems to show a more sensitive and flexible intelligence. If at times Mr. Brower's style has the difficulty and Jamesian abstraction common to many American critics, he can also write with more direct felicity of Dryden's 'high heartiness and oratorical thump' or Thomson's 'random charm.'" +

Times [London] Lit Sup p630 S 26 '52 600w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:21 Mr '52 210w

BROWN, ANN CURPHEY, and GEIS, SALLY BROWN. Handbook for group leaders. 212p $3 Womans press

301.155 Clubs. Leadership 52-2210

"A mother and her daughter, active in varied community groups, offer useful suggestions with examples on program planning and techniques for successful participation in democratic living." (Bookmark) No index.

Booklist 48:331 Je 15 '52

Bookmark 11:205 Je '52 30w

BROWN, MRS CORA LOVISA (BRACKETT), and others. European cookbook; the four-in-one book of continental cookery, Italy, Spain, Portugal, France. 418p $3.95 Prentice-Hall

641.5 Cookery 52-6729

A revision of the authors' The European Cookbook for American Homes (Book Review Digest 1936). This edition contains recipes only from Italy, Spain, Portugal, and France.

Booklist 48:231 Mr 15 '52

Reviewed by K. T. Willis
Library J 77:1202 J1 '52 70w

Reviewed by Charlotte Turgeon
N Y Times p25 Mr 9 '52 180w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ja 28 '52 100w

BROWN, DEE. Trail driving days; picture research by Martin F. Schmitt. 264p $7.50 Scribner

978 Cattle trade. Cowboys. Frontier and pioneer life—West 52-7179

In running text and over two hundred pictures—reproductions of old photographs and prints—this volume tells the story of the trail-riding days when cattle were brought up from Texas to the cow towns, Abilene, Dodge City, and Ogallala. A companion volume to Fighting Indians of the West entered under M. F. Schmitt in Book Review Digest 1948.

"This volume will interest all students of the West. Minor errors should be corrected in later printings, and an index would add materially to the book's usefulness." Jay Monaghan
+ — Am Hist R 57:1067 J1 '52 400w

Reviewed by Edward Weeks
Atlantic 189:76 Ap '52 900w

Booklist 48:225 Mr 15 '52

Reviewed by Stanley Vestal
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Mr 2 '52 260w

Reviewed by R. R. Brunn
Christian Science Monitor p15 Mr 20 '52 410w

Kirkus 20:101 F 1 '52 100w

"The existence of a surfeit of phony horse-opera fiction and film fare has hampered the serious study of the real 'wild West' of the second half of the 19th century. Here is an invaluable contribution to that story." R. H. Dillon

+ Library J 79:428 Mr 1 '52 110w

Reviewed by J. F. Dobie
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Mr 2 '52 390w

"Like 'Fighting Indians,' this history is an absolute must for any library of the West." Hoffman Birney

+ N Y Times p18 F 24 '52 280w

"Fascinating book, which contains hundreds of pictures taken by pioneer photographers during the eighteen-sixties, seventies, and eighties, they cover every phase of driving meat on the hoof from the ranges to the rail-heads."

+ New Yorker 28:96 Mr 1 '52 100w

"A unique record of its kind, and thousands of readers, especially in the West, are going to want to own it." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 F 15 '52 600w

"Some of the stories they tell have been told before, but seldom if ever have so many good ones been strung together, with honest-looking pictures. The result is a book that takes the old West away from the spurious westerns and gives it back to the real cowmen and bad men."

+ Time 59:104 F 18 '52 750w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:179 Je '52 160w

Reviewed by J. F. Dobie
Yale R n s 41:613 summer '52 80w

BROWN, EUGENE. Trespass. 192p $2.25
Doubleday

52-10397

The story of a love affair between a young white college student and a Negro girl he meets when he visits a friend in Harlem.

"Warning to conservatives."

— Kirkus 20:382 J1 1 '52 240w

"Mr. Brown keeps insisting through his characters that the problems result largely from the emotional immaturity of his principal and he makes out a pretty good case. In the end, however, he blunts his point by his exclusive emphasis on the sexual aspect of Negro-White relations. This probably will heighten the audience-appeal of his book, which is also helped by a clean, forceful prose and a beautiful rendering of live dialogue, but makes the book considerably less significant than the author probably intended. You find yourself wishing he hadn't stacked the cards quite so expertly against his characters."

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p19 S 14 '52 160w

"Ann never knew what she was as a woman: Mitchell didn't think he was much of a man, particularly when Ann made the decision to break off with him. In that case, what happened to Mitchell Beal in Harlem with a Negro girl could have happened to him in Brooklyn with a white girl. Is Mr. Brown really trying to say something about the mixing of races—or is this merely another dead-end to love's dilemma?" Gilbert Millstein

N Y Times p35 S 28 '52 200w

"For the most part the author handles his somber story with taste, tenderness, a nice feeling for his characters and for his Harlem setting, and a superb handling of the colorful dialogue of the hipster. It's on the level of social understanding of his problem that I think he fails to contribute much." E. J. Fitzgerald

+ — Sat R 35:38 O 18 '52 150w

BROWN, FRANK CLYDE. North Carolina folk-love [his collection] general ed: Newman Ivey White. 5v v 1-3. ea $7.50 Duke Univ. press 398 Folklore—North Carolina. Folk songs, American

"The present collection, one of the most extensive in the English language, was amassed largely by one man. Collected over a period of some forty years by Frank C. Brown, a Duke University professor of English, it contains about 900 ballads and folk songs, more than Vance Randolph's recent four-volume Ozark collection. In addition it also contains games and rhymes, beliefs and customs, riddles, proverbs and proverbial sayings, folk speech, tales, legends and superstitions." (N Y Times) Bibliography. Indexes.

Reviewed by Horace Reynolds

Christian Science Monitor p11 O 30 '52 280w

"The indexes and annotations of the editors are especially valuable and Brewster's and Belden's bibliographical notes in particular make this an important general reference tool."

E. L. Lewis

+ Library J 77:2068 D 1 '52 170w

"This collection was made by a man who loved to collect but hated to edit folklore, and so went on, postponing from year to year the evil of editing, until he died, bequeathing the job to the various specialists here assembled. In each case these fetched-on editors have done their job of collation well, even if some of them do appear to look with a somewhat stepfatherly eye on the materials dished out to them. The collection undoubtedly loses something from its division of labors, but perhaps it also gains something too." Horace Reynolds

+ — N Y Times p3 Ag 31 '52 700w

BROWN, FREDRIC. Far cry. 222p $2.50 Dutton
51-8424

Detective story.

Kirkus 19:590 O 1 '51 70w

"Fredric Brown is a conscientious craftsman and he has avoided conventional mystery routine as much in this tale as in most of its predecessors. . . Then he blows it all up in the sort of blinding flash one expects from a short, short story." James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 D 23 '51 170w

"To hint at much of the plot might rob you of the extremely rare and welcome sensation of pure surprise which I experienced in reading the last chapter (though I could wish that Brown had not pushed on past that surprise to a somewhat too glib and tricky ending.) Let me simply say that the book contains a fine bitter study of a bad marriage, and an admirable sense of the reality of murder, and a well-sketched background of Brown's home state of New Mexico."

Anthony Boucher

+ — N Y Times p14 D 30 '51 140w

"The ending is a surprise, and perhaps not entirely a legitimate one, but Mr. Brown's story of an unbalanced mind is original and rather fascinating."

+ New Yorker 27:87 Ja 12 '52 110w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ja 6 '52 80w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R of Lit 34:38 D 22 '51 40w

BROWN, FREDRIC. Space on my hands. 224p
$2.50 Shasta pubs.

51-5685

A collection of humorous science-fiction stories.

Reviewed by Mark Reinsberg

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 My 25 '52 60w

"Imaginative, ingenious."

+ Kirkus 19:80 F 1 '51 70w

"A collection of sly, humorous science fiction stories which will probably exasperate the true fans but which are a joy to read."

M. D. Read

+ Library J 76:2127 D 15 '51 30w

"This collection of nine stories is uneven, and a few are even familiar from previous reprintings, but it averages out as one of the year's better volumes of fantasy shorts." H. H. Holmes

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p22 S 23 '51 160w

Reviewed by Don Fabun

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ag 5 '51 170w

Springf'd Republican p19A Je 1 '52 80w

BROWN, FREDRIC. We all killed Grandma. 224p $2.50 Dutton

52-6647

Detective story.

"Brown manages it all very easily as plain narrative without pseudo-psychological niggings and it should fill a mild, pleasant evening." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 My 18 '52 100w

"Hitherto his most uneven stories of murder and of science fiction have at least been startlingly original. This one is simply a standard stock case of arbitrary amnesia, such as flourishes only in murder novels." Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p37 My 25 '52 100w

"Rod Britten and his problems seem real enough, in Brown's expert treatment, to keep you reading, though when his memory returns the revelations are somehow disappointing."

L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p22 My 18 '52 60w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 35:31 Je 28 '52 30w

BROWN, HARRIETTE J. Hand weaving for pleasure and profit; il. by Craig Kavafes; photographs by Robert J. Lecomte. 273p $4.50 Harper

745.52 Weaving 51-11889

A step-by-step guide to two-harness weaving. Discusses equipment, yarns, techniques, and illustrates it all with clear drawings. Glossary, bibliography, index.

Booklist 48:316 Je 1 '52

Bookmark 11:209 Je '52 20w

"Written so that it can be read through for pleasure and returned to for practice, this is a treat for the potential treadle peddler."

+ Kirkus 20:51 Ja 15 '52 130w

"Will be found valuable to occupational therapists, teachers and students, Scouts, craft groups, and to all who wish to master the art, either for pleasure or profit." Ethel Dexter

+ Springfield Republican p10D Je 22 '52 180w

Wis Lib Bul 48:169 J1 '52

BROWN, HARRY PHILIP, and others. Text-book of wood technology; v2, Physical, mechanical, and chemical properties of the commercial woods of the United States. (American forestry ser) 783p $10 McGraw

634.9273 Wood. Timber (49-7675)

"The first volume of this useful work was reviewed [in Book Review Digest 1949]. The present volume, which completes the work, covers the topics named in the chapter titles as given above. The whole work is designed as a textbook for forestry students and as a reference tool for engineers, architects and others. The volume at hand will appeal particularly to those who are interested in wood as an engineering material." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 77:1209 J1 '52 100w

N Y New Tech Bks 37:48 My '52

BROWN, HELEN EVANS. Holiday cook book; with introd. by M. F. K. Fisher; drawings by Harry O. Diamond. 254p $3 Little

641.5 Cookery 52-9085

This cookbook goes right thru the calendar from New Year's Day to the following New Year's Eve, giving appropriate recipes for each holiday. Index.

"When Helen Evans Brown writes a cookbook, you can be sure that it is tops! And her new Holiday Cookbook is no exception." Morrison Wood

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p18 O 26 '52 150w

Kirkus 20:493 Ag 1 '52 90w

Reviewed by K. T. Willis

Library J 77:2073 D 1 '52 20w

"Helen Brown never goes all cutie-pie, as so many cookbook writers do, and she has, beyond most people, the right 'feel' for food." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 O 7 '52 600w

BROWN, HELEN EVANS. West coast cook book. 443p $4 Little

641.5 Cookery 52-5020

"West Coast cookery is made up of a lot of things. Recipes of a Spanish or Mexican type naturally came early to California and have become part of the cuisine. Up in the Northwest, family recipes arrived via the Oregon Trail, and many of them have a Yankee flavor, as they would. Others came to the West Coast with settlers from other countries, and still more grew up here because there were certain products that thrived in these regions—artichokes, avocados, figs, the citrus fruits and such. And still others have grown out of the itch to improvise which seems more active on the West Coast than elsewhere, perhaps because we are a young country. Out of all these Helen Brown has done her selecting." (San Francisco Chronicle) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 48:259 Ap 15 '52

Reviewed by Morrison Wood

Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 J1 13 '52 20w

J Home Econ 44:382 My '52

"One of the best regional cookbooks I have seen."

+ Kirkus 19:695 D 1 '51 180w

"Fascinating bibliography for anyone interested in western customs and manners, and the past." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 77:1202 J1 '52 80w

Reviewed by Charlotte Turgeon

N Y Times p30 My 25 '52 130w

"For variety alone, the volume is worth adding to whatever shelf of cook books you may have." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 Mr 24 '52 750w

BROWN, IVOR JOHN CARNEGIE. Winter in London; with drawings by Lynton Lamb. 320p $3.50 Doubleday

942.1 [914.21] London—Description 52-5714

"Ivor Brown, scholar and critic, during the winter of 1949-50 decided to set down a record of how one Londoner made the best of the four dark months of winter in London, by seeking out certain pleasures and curiosities often overlooked. He strolls, lingers, explores, and puts down his findings. He unearths the ghosts of the great; he describes games, sports, parks, gardens, crypts, cemeteries, churches, fairgrounds. In fact, he writes on anything that stirs his curiosity: Bankside, Tottenham Court Road, the Thames, pantomime, Karl Marx in Highgate, Clerkenwell, and the West and East Ends of London. His attitude is 'that a man is a fool who does not savor the place in which he lives,' especially if he lives in the most wonderful city in the world." (N Y Times) Index.

"I like this book for its pleasant memories, for its lively sense of participation, and for its refreshing use of the essay." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic 191:78 Ja '53 270w

Booklist 49:123 D 1 '52

Reviewed by Harold Hobson

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 N 21 '51 160w

"It is a captivating London that Ivor Brown knows. And he tells about it in beautifully constructed sentences; you can almost see him strolling along, with his coat collar turned up against the winter wind, turning and polishing the phrases in his mind. Everyone can enjoy these excursions, but to those for whom London already has familiar associations Winter in London must surely be most appealing." C. H. Weiss

+ Commonweal 57:242 D 5 '52 550w

Kirkus 20:584 S 1 '52 130w

"Highly recommended." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 77:2180 D 15 '52 70w

"A salt, glowing, and original London book, and that is much to say of a book on so well served a theme." J. B.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 F 6 '51 550w

"Winter in London is easy and agreeable to read; a series of pleasant essays suggesting that we follow the author's example and stroll about our town." Stephen Bone

+ New Statesman & Nation 41:312 Mr 17 '51 240w

"In spite of the assurance of its publishers, this meditative, acute, distinguished and charming book is clearly not written for those who do not know London at all. One must have had some acquaintance, however slight, with that darkest and most alluring of cities before he can give to Mr. Brown's pages the intelligent and even devoted attention which each deserves." M. E. Chase

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 N 9 '52 400w

"Though he obviously loves London he does not give her a beauty she does not possess. He does not idealize, he reports. The bombing dealt heavily, gaps abound, and desolation remains. He writes of the dreariness of brick in the Charing Cross Road, a unified ugliness only relieved by the second-hand bookshops, which have given Ivor Brown so much pleasure." H. F. West

+ N Y Times p28 D 7 '52 450w

New Yorker 28:56 Ja 3 '53 70w

Reviewed by John Garrett

+ Spec 185:354 Mr 16 '51 450w

Springf'd Republican p6D D 28 '52 500w

"Mr. Brown's book is neither guide nor history. It is rather an essay on the right way to look at London, the leisured way of a man with a sense of style and catholic tastes, who follows his own inclinations and makes no apology for what he leaves out."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p184 Mr 23 '51 450w

BROWN, JOHN MASON. As they appear. 258p $3.75 McGraw 814

52-11536

"A fourth set of 'Seeing Things' papers from 'The Saturday Review.' A drama critic, he writes about the theater when, for better or worse, it is worth his trouble, but when it is not his free-wheeling column in 'The Saturday Review' wheels freely through a number of other matters." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) Index.

Booklist 49:101 N 15 '52

Bookmark 12:29 N '52 10w

"In this, his 16th solo performance, Mr. Brown exhibits once more the scholarship, discernment, wit, and grace of style on which his high reputation as writer and lecturer is founded." John Beaufort

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 N 6 '52 650w

"This volume is recommended for literature and theatre collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 77:1496 S 15 '52 50w

"Another lively, personal and various book. . . The sympathy that led Mr. Brown to edit the Viking Portable Charles Lamb was clearly not by chance. There is truly something of a latter-day Elia here, a man who loves the theater but whose stage is where he finds it." J. K. Hutchens

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 O 26 '52 460w

"John Mason Brown is not yet the Dean of American drama critics. Critics seldom retire, so Mr. Brown must await his turn. But few of them, few indeed of even the novitiates of criticism, can match him in the intensity of his love affair with the theatre, his exuberance in a romance now flaming through its third decade. 'As They Appear' is additional proof of the case in point." Lewis Nichols

+ N Y Times p34 O 19 '52 320w

"It isn't possible to run down all 33 of Mr. Brown's essays here. Those who have come to know the incisive style, the widely informed approach, and (I'll say it again) the vast common sense that informs all Mr. Brown writes, will get hold of this newest group of his pieces immediately. For me, just by way of post-script, Mr. Brown's honest piece on Tennessee Williams' two-thirds-fraudulent 'Rose Tattoo' is worth the whole book. I'd be very happy if Mr. Brown would some day observe, with the same unclouded eye a few of the essential sillinesses in Mr. Williams' 'Glass Menagerie', and 'Streetcar.'" J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 O 28 '52 550w

"Part of the charm of Mr. Brown's writing is that his headlong style remains a stimulating combination of the quiet reflective essay and straight newshurst reporting. . . In some respects the present collection offers the best view we have had of his enormous vitality and many-sided interests." David McCord

+ Sat R 35:27 N 15 '52 450w

BROWN, JOHN MASON. Daniel Boone; the opening of the wilderness; il. by Lee J. Ames. (Landmark bks.) 181p $1.50 Random house

B or 92 Boone, Daniel—Juvenile literature 52-7223

"More than a fresh life of Daniel Boone, this book gives a vivid picture of the dangers of the frontier, Indian and white treachery and massacres, and the struggle between the English and French." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 49:144 D 15 '52

Bookmark 12:35 N '52 10w

Reviewed by C. I. Judson

Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 N 16 '52 50w

"The Boone story here receives one of the nicest literary treatments it has known. . . The rolling prose and eulogistic overtones suit Daniel Boone's wholesome conscientiousness and bravery and its combination of a sense of depth to a single historical event, makes this excellent reading for the next age level too."

+ Kirkus 20:457 Ag 1 '52 210w

"Distinguished addition to the 'Landmark' series." E. B. Mason

+ Library J 77:1664 O 1 '52 50w

"We expect a lively style and a sense of drama but we get also a deep human feeling that makes him a superb interpreter of the past for youth. His birds-eye glimpses of history are clear, and his insistence on 'the stuff of heroism' in Boone and the other Kentucky pioneers is memorable." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p11 N 16 '52 60w

"This is a biography that will appeal to both the younger and the older boys and girls and that has much to say to adults."

+ Sat R 35:70 N 15 '52 170w

BROWN, MARGARET WISE. Child's good morning; with lithographs by Jean Charlot. [32p] $2 Scott, W. R.

52-7270

Colored lithographs and a few words show the process of the awakening of two children and the world around them.

"This is a book of extraordinarily vivid and bold color. Any small child should love it." Marcia Winn

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 N 16 '52 60w

Horn Bk 28:396 D '52 80w

"Not as successful as the companion volume, A Child's Good Night Book."

Kirkus 20:545 S 1 '52 60w

"Though obviously intended as a companion volume to A Child's Goodnight Book, this is larger in format and less harmonious in concept. . . Nevertheless, a must book for the picture-book age." Mary Strang

+ Library J 77:2074 D 1 '52 70w

"There are few words, and few, very simple pictures. Yet, as always, Charlot gives us brilliant form and color, fills the few pages and floods our eyes with his impressive power. . . It is at once a collector's item, an art student's necessity and something to enlarge the sensibilities of the small child." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p3 N 16 '52 120w

"The blend of imaginative text and arresting pictures should bring pleasure and interest to any wide-awake nursery audience." I. S.

+ N Y Times pt2, p38 N 16 '52 80w

"It is a striking and beautiful picture."

+ Sat R 35:47 N 15 '52 70w

BROWN, MARGARET WISE. Christmas in the barn; pictures by Barbara Cooney. [32p] $1.75 Crowell

52-7858

A retelling of the Nativity story for ages four to eight. The text is in simple rhyme; the pictures are large and detailed.

BROWN, M. W.—Continued

"Excellent for special collections at Christmas time."

+ Bookmark 12:11 O '52 20w

Reviewed by B. J. Thompson

Cath World 176:203 D '52 60w

"It is a homely and endearing little book, with its simple verse-like prose and its glowing pictures of animals and people and barn and snowy night that today's child can recognize and love." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 D 14 '52 70w

+ Horn Bk 28:399 D '52 80w

Kirkus 20:546 S 1 '52 170w

"There may be some objection to the use of modern dress in the pictures instead of the traditional Biblical costume, but this does not detract from the spirit of Barbara Cooney's illustrations. They are lovely. Large print. Recommended for ages 4-8." D. M. Blasco

+ Library J 77:1519 S 15 '52 70w

"Miss Cooney's pictures are entirely delightful, half of them touched with color. It makes a happy extra Christmas picture book for very small children." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 N 30 '52 50w

"Miss Brown's phrases are musical and evocative, but because she omitted all religious significance her version loses point and drama unless it is amplified by a grown-up." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p50 D 7 '52 60w

BROWN, MARGARET WISE. Noon balloon; pictures by Leonard Weisgard. [30p] $2 Harper

52-5426

Story and pictures about a little cat who went sailing over the world in a balloon, to escape from the mice.

"Magic combination of names, with Leonard Weisgard as illustrator, but a story that seems to this reader rather pointless from two who know better."

— Kirkus 20:545 S 1 '52 50w

"This book has rhythm and beauty, soft as rain water, in both text and pictures. . . Libraries and families should both have it." Phyllis Fenner

+ Library J 77:1817 O 15 '52 80w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p3 N 16 '52 40w

"Miss Brown, who is an expert at describing the impact of new experiences upon the five senses, isn't quite as brilliant in her imagery as usual and her story is a bit disjointed. Nevertheless, she has captured in her prose the slow, drifting motion of the balloon, a quality which makes this a good book to read just before bedtime." E. L. B.

+ — N Y Times pt2, p41 N 16 '52 80w

BROWN, MARGARET WISE. Pussy willow; pictures by Leonard Weisgard. 24p $1.50 Simon & Schuster

52-6581

"A big picture book about a gray kitten who searches all through the year for his namesakes, the pussy willows. The animals whom he questions answer according to their own ways of life, which isn't very helpful." N Y Times

"This companion title to the same collaborators' 'The Golden Egg Book' is as enchanting as its predecessor." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 F 10 '52 150w

"Enchanting Leonard Weisgard pictures splashed in rich full color all over the double spreads, and a story that reads quite delightfully as a round the season pattern of growing things—this should prove a special Easter item, and a good all year round gift item. . . On an adult level the book has great appeal."

+ Kirkus 20:67 F 1 '52 160w

"One of the most imaginative and appealing of all Margaret Wise Brown's books is this story. . . Recommended." Christine Gilbert

+ Library J 77:364 F 15 '52 70w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Mr 30 '52 180w

"The charming word sounds and imagery don't quite carry the slight theme. The pictures are fully detailed in lavish color but there is a lack of restraint, uncommon in Mr. Weisgard's work, and the general effect is over-lush." E. L. B.

N Y Times p34 F 17 '52 110w

Spring'd Republican p4D F 24 '52 40w

BROWN, MARGARET WISE. Where have you been? il. by Barbara Cooney. [28p] $1.25 Crowell

52-6717

"Very small children will be drawn to this diminutive sized book with its winsome black-and-white drawings and repetitious verses about animals. Ages 2-4." Booklist

Booklist 48:252 Ap 1 '52

Horn Bk 28:96 Ap '52 70w

Kirkus 20:67 F 1 '52 80w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p21 My 11 '52 170w

"[These] little verses . . . are the kind of poetry which young children learn by heart without knowing it and they are also easy reading for beginners. Barbara Cooney's illustrations are drawn with precision and humor." E. R. B.

+ N Y Times p34 F 17 '52 50w

"On each page of this attractive, well-bound little book the bird or animal answers the question in the title. Barbara Cooney's drawings are especially attractive."

+ Sat R 35:46 Mr 22 '52 40w

Wis Lib Bul 48:96 Mr '52

BROWN, MORNA DORIS (MACTAGGART). Clock that wouldn't stop, by E. X. Ferrars [pseud]. 192p $2.50 Doubleday

52-5962

Mystery story.

Booklist 48:379 Jl 15 '52

Kirkus 20:169 Mr 1 '52 80w

Reviewed by James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p30 My 11 '52 100w

"Standard model, perhaps, but better than most of the intricate British jigsaw-puzzles. . . The whole adds up to the most satisfactory Ferrars novel to date." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p25 My 11 '52 40w

"Ferrars' placid, underdone British style enhances the adroit twists of the plot in a wholly agreeable way." L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p23 My 11 '52 40w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 35:47 My 24 '52 20w

BROWN, PAUL. Silver Heels. unnp il $2.50 Scribner

Ponies—Legends and stories 51-13703

Story of a family who loved horses, of the colt born to the pony Molly, of the formation of the pony clubs, and finally of the horse show where Silver Heels wins a unique prize.

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 Ja 27 '52 160w

"Plenteous riding action and the author's incomparable sketches mark this a welcome extra for fans."

+ Kirkus 19:617 O 15 '51 90w

"This is not so much a story as it is a beautifully illustrated description of the activities of a pony club. . . The many drawings of the horses in action will make it irresistible for those who like horses and riding." Anne Izard

+ Library J 77:66 Ja 1 '52 50w

"This is a fine, attractive gift for youngsters of about eight to ten who live in the same world as the Lairds, or wish they could." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 N 18 '51 80w

BROWN, WARREN. Chicago White Sox; il. with 15 pages of photographs. 248p $3.50 Putnam

796.357 Chicago. Baseball club (American league) 52-5274

Story of the Chicago White Sox from their beginning to 1951.

Booklist 48:243 Ap 1 '52

"Mr. Brown has done an exhaustive job of research and brightened the resulting text with a leavening of anecdotes." Robert Cromie

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Mr 30 '52 700w

Christian Science Monitor p7 Ap 26 '52 290w

Kirkus 20:206 Mr 15 '52 100w

"The whole series is essential in any public library." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 77:796 My 1 '52 20w

Reviewed by D. M. Mankiewicz

N Y Times p3 Ap 20 '52 300w

BROWN, WENZELL. Introduction to murder; the unpublished facts behind the notorious Lonely hearts killers, Martha Beck and Raymond Fernandez. 232p $2.75 Greenberg

364.15 [364.38] Beck, Martha. Martínez Fernández, Raymond 52-6109

Tells the whole story of Martha Beck and Raymond Fernández, who trapped lonely women with their "lonely hearts" racket, and murdered several of them.

"The stuffs of this book are sensational and disagreeable but the author's reporting of them is careful and restrained."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Jl 13 '52 280w

"The author has some harsh things to say about clubs for the lovelorn and matrimonial bureaus and the opportunities they provide for preying on the unwary. Police records bear him out." Emanuel Perlmutter

N Y Times p32 Ap 20 '52 380w

"Mr. Brown tells his story factually and objectively, and the reader may easily conclude that his protagonists were far more suitable candidates for a lunatic asylum than for the electric chair."

New Yorker 28:151 Ap 26 '52 200w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ap 12 '52 60w

BROWN, WESLEY. Self defense. 91p il $1.50 Barnes, A.S.

796.8 Self defense 51-14240

"Gentlemen, and ladies too, wanting to learn how to protect themselves against physical onslaughts of various types will find 'Self Defense' a handy guide . . . with photographs showing each knuckle jab and reverse wrist-lock. Lieutenant Commander Wesley Brown, USN, has provided the unarmed citizen with a clear guide to warding off attackers. There is a separate section on 'Club Maneuvers for a Police Officer,' and another titled 'The Ladies' Angle' which explains how to handle purse snatchers and other assailants." San Francisco Chronicle

Booklist 48:145 D 15 '51

"An excellent book of its kind, but the author's caution against possible serious damage to those practicing the art makes this a book only for mature adults, who may feel the need of special training." R. W. Henderson

Library J 77:58 Ja 1 '52 40w

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ja 13 '52 100w

BROWN, WILLIAM DONALD. Parachutes; with a foreword by W. J. Duncan. 322p il $8.50 Pitman

629.143 [629.134386] Parachutes [51-13512]

"The whole field is covered from physical principles through parachute types, materials, aerodynamics, strength, design, uses, repairs and testing. Also, there is a six-page glossary. Although parts are descriptive and only semi-technical, other parts are highly technical." Library J

Booklist 48:95 N 15 '51

"On the whole, the book will be more valuable to men concerned with the design of parachutes than to the general reader." R. R. Hawkins

Library J 76:2118 D 15 '51 80w

BROWN, MRS ZENITH (JONES) (LESLIE FORD, DAVID FROME, pseud.). Bahamas murder case. 188p $2.50 Scribner

52-7356

Mystery story.

Bookmark 11:159 Ap '52

Kirkus 20:49 Ja 15 '52 100w

"Not one of its author's more distinguished or controlled performances." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 Ap 6 '52 60w

"Leslie Ford turns from the straight detective story to the 'inverted' type, and achieves possibly her best book to date." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p32 Mr 16 '52 90w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p21 Mr 30 '52 80w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 35:36 Ap 5 '52 30w

Wis Lib Bul 48:181 Jl '52

BROWNE, DOUGLAS GORDON, and TUL-LETT, E. V. Scalpel of Scotland yard; the life of Sir Bernard Spilsbury; with a foreword by W. Bentley Purchase [Eng title: Bernard Spilsbury: his life and cases]. 503p il $5 Dutton

B or 92 Spilsbury, Sir Bernard Henry. Criminal investigation 52-6314

"Biography of Sir Bernard Spilsbury (1877-1947) [who] was for 37 years Honorary Pathologist to the Home Office, a post created for him which has not been filled again since, incurably ill, he took his own life at 70. His first and most famous case was Crippen's, in 1910, and the 250 murder trials at which he gave evidence include names familiar to readers of the Notable British Trials series: Seddon, Armstrong, Mahon, George Joseph Smith, Thompson Bywaters, and John Donald Merrett." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo

Atlantic 189:84 Ap '52 360w

Booklist 48:179 F 1 '52

Reviewed by R. L. Blakesley
Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ja 27 '52 450w

"Practically a 'must' for the serious follower of true detection."

+ Kirkus 19:672 N 15 '51 200w

"This fascinating and authoritative biography was based on Sir Bernard's own case cards, and written with the help of Lady Spilsbury and her son and daughter. Though gruesome in spots, the book can nevertheless be recommended to public as well as law libraries." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 77:45 Ja 1 '52 140w

Manchester Guardian p4 D 7 '51 170w

BROWNE, D. G.—Continued

"A memorable portrait of a life's absorbed and absorbing work rather than of a man, although the man himself, fastidious, fiercely if almost mutely individual, humane, tireless and notably selfless, emerges still, dimly but surely. It is a book so crammed with the sensational (never treated so, to the authors' credit) that when the last page is turned one must have some conception of the need for and possibility of detachment above horror and of the quiet assurance that made Sir Bernard the incisive, untouchable witness he was before judges and juries." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune BK R p10 Ja 27 '52 650w

"One of the most absorbing fact-crime books of recent years and one which in its portrayal of a unique man, should reach far beyond the fact-crime audience." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p5 Ja 27 '52 1000w

New Yorker 27:110 F 9 '52 190w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p18 F 13 '52 700w

Springf'd Republican p8D F 3 '52 420w

Time 59:78 F 4 '52 1000w

"Spillsbury's youth, about which there is not much to say, is described in a jaunty manner, with a good deal of padding, but the middle chapters about the type of man he was, his relations with students and doctors, Bench, Bar, police, and coroners, are serious in tone, and give a competent picture of a kindly, solitary man. The death of his children and his suicide at the end are treated with restraint. The rest of the book, however (the cases), is often handled in a lightly popular style."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p11 Ja 4 '52 850w

Wis Lib Bul 48:92 Mr '52

BROWNELL, BAKER. College and the community; a critical study of higher education. 248p $3.50 Harper

378 Education, Higher, Community and school 52-5717

"What's wrong with higher education in America? The answer of this book by Baker Brownell, Professor of Philosophy at Northwestern, is that the colleges have turned their backs on the normal human community. With few exceptions they have forgotten that a free and democratic way of life depends on the well-being of the little places, on the dignity and prosperity of small groups where people know one another and have a sense of belonging. . . College training is directed solely at individual attainment and success. It prepares students not for the life of whole persons in actual communities but for careers. . . He proposes that the college come off the campus and junk its city-bred ideals to do a better job of teaching and learning at the grass roots." (N Y Times) Index.

Reviewed by F. J. Brown

Ann Am Acad 284:203 N '52 490w

Booklist 48:274 My 1 '52

"A stimulating, well-reasoned discussion."

+ Bookmark 11:181 My '52 30w

Reviewed by Lloyd Wendt

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 My 4 '52 390w

Kirkus 20:112 F 1 '52 160w

Reviewed by F. Q. Shafer

+ N Y Times p27 Ap 27 '52 450w

"This book will stir up a storm of controversy in this country wherever there is higher education. That storm will be most refreshing and will help clear air which has grown stale." H. W. Schacter

+ Sat R 35:19 J1 26 '52 600w

School & Society 75:221 Ap 5 '52 20w

Reviewed by G. A. Panichas

Springf'd Republican p7D My 18 '52 500w

"In spite of an air of overcleverness, this book is of value because its suggestions offer real points of departure for action."

+ — U S Quarterly Bk R 8:277 S '52 230w

BROWNELL, EMERY A. Legal aid in the United States; a study of the availability of lawyers' services for persons unable to pay fees; foreword by Harrison Tweed; introd. by Reginald Heber Smith. (Survey of the legal profession) 333p $4.50 Lawyers co-op. pub. co., 30 Broad St, N.Y. 4

[361.4] Legal aid

"Executive director of recently reorganized National Legal Aid Association presents thorough, authoritative report. Wherever a consistent need in society exists, ways and means must be found to meet it. That the demand for legal aid is enormous and still unmet, is convincingly demonstrated. The bar as well as local authorities and the public must take their share of the blame. There are, however, hopeful signs of development in the field." (Library J) Index.

"Legal Aid in the United States is recommended to everyone who wants the facts, however detailed; who is interested in the brief but substantial history of the legal aid movement; who wants to help in its advance; who is interested in his country and its high principles." G. L. Schramm

+ Ann Am Acad 284:181 N '52 400w

"The plain fact of the matter is that, except in a handful of localities, legal aid in criminal cases is a myth. In this reviewer's opinion, Mr. Brownell is far too kind in his treatment of the current status of legal aid in criminal cases. The picture is more somber than his book would indicate. Looking toward the future, the author points out that legal aid has grown in the past and will continue to expand in the future. We have reached the stage where it is no longer necessary to argue the merits of legal aid: now it is just a question of expansion. The new committees and societies formed in the course of that expansion will find their greatest single source of help in this book." J. H. Roszbach

Columbia Law R 52:160 Ja '52 1500w

"Recommended not only for legal profession, but also for social workers and community minded citizens." H. H. Bernt

+ Library J 76:2002 D 1 '51 130w

BRUCE, ALFRED W. Steam locomotive in America; its development in the twentieth century. 443p il $7.50 Norton

625.26 [621.13] Locomotives 52-14477

"The time is appropriate," Bruce declares calmly, "for a definite history of the steam locomotive." . . . Bruce's career as a locomotive builder covers almost the entire half century spanned by his exhaustive survey, and he isn't writing for the dilettante interested in "the romance of the rails." . . . After briefly sketching the history of the principal engine builders of America, the work describes the development of designs and of construction, of power transmission, fuel combustion, smokestacks and drafts, cylinder and wheel arrangements, lubrication and braking." (Chicago Sunday Tribune) Index.

"Never once is there a trace of romanticism, but Alfred Bruce describes the life and times of the steel steed with an earnestness that bespeaks manly admiration." William Leonard

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 N 30 '52 220w

"It is not a popular book, nor is it designed by its author for any widespread acceptance by amateurs of railroading, by students of its folklore and atmospheric aspects or even by the host of admirers who lament the departing of steam from the high iron of the land." Lucius Beebe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p22 N 16 '52 550w

BRUCKBERGER, RAYMOND LEOPOLD. Golden goat; il. by Richard Seewald; English version by Virgilia Peterson. 62p $2 Pantheon bks.

52-10029

Parable of the Unworthy Poor Man and the Worthy Rich Man and the little goat loved by both of them.

"The Dominican Father Bruckberger has previously written two other little books published as 'parables': Seven Miracles of Gubbio and The Stork and the Jewels. Though I have read neither, I am prepared to believe from the simplicity and lucidity of this that those 'parables' are well written—that is, if you can endure anything less excellent than those related by Our Lord." Theodore Maynard

+ Commonweal 57:240 D 5 '52 400w

Reviewed by Thomas Sugrue

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 D 21 '52 230w

Reviewed by Francis Sweeney

N Y Times p22 Ja 4 '53 360w

Time 60:119 N 24 '52 480w

BRUCKBERGER, RAYMOND LEOPOLD. One sky to share; the French and American journals; tr. by Dorothy Carr Howell; drawings by Jo Spier. 248p $3 Kenedy

B or 92

52-11274

The journals of a French Dominican priest, describing first his part as a fighter in the French resistance, and second, his experiences in America, where he now lives at the Dominican priory of St Peter Martyr, Winona, Minnesota.

"Father Bruckberger's frank comments on events and trends in France are most revealing, and not less interesting are his reactions to American life as recorded in the American Journals of the last few years. He is a discerning observer with a distinct flair for vivid writing."

+ Kirkus 20:346 Je 15 '52 160w

"'One Sky to Share' is a book to be marked and memorized and quoted, but above all it brings to warm and vigorous life for the reader a man who demonstrates once again that human greatness is only real when one of its feet is fixed firmly on the ladder of the soul."

Thomas Sugrue

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ag 3 '52 650w

"It is the lyric history of an extraordinary soul which saw its ideals betrayed through France's long agony of the blitz, the occupation, the treason trials after the fighting—and then found those ideals realized and become signposts of a way of life in a new country. . . The journals, written from a colorist's palette and with grace abounding, will be welcomed in this country and in France as well as an important weapon in the struggle for the soul of the free world, which is becoming more and more the battle of the books." Francis Sweeney

+ N Y Times p3 Ag 3 '52 500w

+ New Yorker 28:86 Ag 23 '52 230w

"Bruckberger's writing is good, often with a lyric quality to it; it is well translated, so that one has a sense of the French idiom and the French personality behind it. The quality of this book that is most gratifying, however, is Bruckberger's affection for the American people and their way of life." D. P. T.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 S 14 '52 290w

"An irresistible book, as discerning as de Tocqueville, and one that no student of the American-European alliance can afford to miss." R. E. Roberts

+ Sat R 35:20 O 25 '52 550w

Reviewed by J. F. Rooney

Springf'd Republican p6D Ag 10 '52 180w

BRUCKBERGER, RAYMOND LEOPOLD. Stork and the jewels; a parable; tr. from the French by Gerold Lauck; il. by Peter Lauck. 50p $1.50 Harper

51-13664

The parable of a lame stork and a boy who cherished it. Before the autumn migrations the boy attached a red ribbon to the stork's foot, and in the spring the stork returned wearing a cord of gold. Each year until the boy grew to manhood this exchange took place, and finally the man sailed over the sea to find the girl who had sent him the tokens.

"Charming and most tastefully produced volume. . . Sensitively, one might almost say perfectly, translated, [it has] the gentle humor, the misleading simplicity, the subtlety and implicit faith of the Floretti of St. Francis. To be owned and treasured."

+ Cath World 174:240 D '51 30w

"As timeless as a fairy tale, this is a fable with a moral told simply and warmly."

+ Kirkus 19:453 Ag 15 '51 110w

Reviewed by George Conrad

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 D 23 '51 80w

"Exquisitely written story. . . The author's skill is in evidence on every page: it is rare indeed that a fable of this kind exhibits such easy verisimilitude in all its situations." Francis Sweeney

+ N Y Times p29 D 9 '51 310w

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ja 13 '52 180w

BRUNHOFF, LAURENT DE. Babar's visit to Bird Island; tr. from the French by Merle Haas. 40p $3.50 Random house

The elephant royal family pays a visit to the Bird King and Queen. Told in story and pictures by the son of the originator of Babar. For ages 4 to 8.

Bookmark 12:83 Ja '53

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 D 21 '52 20w

+ Kirkus 20:739 D 1 '52 60w

"Recommended to those who can afford it and have space to shelve it." M. J. Meade

Library J 78:66 Ja 1 '53 60w

Reviewed by Pamela Brisbane

Manchester Guardian p8 D 5 '52 30w

"The spring has gone out of the elephant family and the latest Babar isn't so happy a sequel. One is grateful to Laurent de Brunhoff for prolonging the series—he gave up his career as an abstract painter, it appears, to carry on his father's invention—but a sense of effort is evident." J. A. Smith

+ New Statesman & Nation 44:650 N 29 '52 70w

"It is all perfectly gorgeous fun. . . The very handsome printing was done in England. It arrived very late, but it will be one of the best-loved gift books of the year." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 D 14 '52 140w

"It is impossible for an admirer of Babar to be completely detached about a new book of his adventures. Perhaps a more objective eye will detect a certain clutter in some of these pictures, but to an old friend this seems a mere quibble, for the majority are as gay and brilliantly designed as ever." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p24 N 2 '52 90w

"The surprise of delightfully unexpected detail popping up in a bland statement of fact, which contributed so much to the late Jean de Brunhoff's Babar books, is nicely approximated in this new volume, by his son."

+ New Yorker 28:191 D 6 '52 30w

"As admirably spontaneous as its predecessors." Amabel Williams-Ellis

+ Spec 189:774 D 5 '52 110w

"Told with engaging naturalness by a French author-artist who knows how to splash his pages with vivid panoramic views that have what every child loves in a picture—a brilliant general impression combined with endless small details to be picked out at leisure."

+ Time 60:106 D 8 '52 30w

Times [London] Lit Sup p4 N 28 '52 40w

BRUNO DE JESUS-MARIE, PERE, ed. Satan [tr. by Malachy Carroll and others]. 506p il $5.50 Sheed

235.4 Devil 52-1245

"A group of scholars under the editorship of Father Bruno de Jesus-Marie, a French Carmelite, have made a frontal attack on the question of what the Devil is and what he should mean to a Christian. The 30 essays in the book jump from the theological aspects of evil to the psychology of witchcraft and demonic possession. Tolerantly and patiently written, they draw in their sum an interesting picture of a basic Christian doctrine which has had more than its share of rough handling." Time

Reviewed by R. M. Ames
Cath World 175:238 Je '52 220w

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison
Christian Century 69:534 Ap 30 '52 550w

Reviewed by W. J. Kerrigan
Commonweal 55:596 Mr 21 '52 650w

"This is primarily a book for Catholic scholars, but the increasing number of people of all faiths who realize that we must come to grips with the reality of evil will find it illuminating."

+ Kirkus 20:40 Ja 15 '52 120w

"In 550 pages of absorbing scholarship, there is nothing to regret except the absence of an index and of biographical material on the contributors. These we mention because 'Satan' is not only a midnight thriller without a dull chapter but a valuable work of reference." R. I. Gannon

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Mr 9 '52 850w

"Though only one essay deals with the devil in art, twenty-four fascinating illustrations much amplify the place given to this aspect. The literary section is rich indeed with studies of the explicit or implicit use of the demonic in the writings of Dante, Milton, Blake, Balzac, the Romanticists, Gogol, Dostoevsky, and of such moderns as Valéry, Bernanos, Claudel, Gide, Jouhadieu and Graham Greene." J. A. Pike

+ N Y Times p7 F 17 '52 600w

New Yorker 28:147 My 24 '52 170w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Mr 16 '52 130w

Springf'd Republican p21A Mr 23 '52 50w

Time 59:61 Mr 10 '52 900w

BRYAN, ALICE ISABEL. Public librarian; with a section on the education of librarians by Robert D. Leigh [a report of the Public library inquiry]. 474p $6 Columbia univ. press 023 Librarians 52-8829

"An exhaustive report on the personal characteristics, family backgrounds, education, interests, attitudes, and motivations of professional library personnel in the U.S., and on position and salary levels, physical working conditions, library practices with regard to selection, promotion, and in-service training, and similar administrative questions which influence the choice of a library career; also reports on library schools, their faculties, students, and curricula." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 48:258 Ap 15 '52

Bookmark 11:180 My '52 20w

"Careful and painstaking workmanship is obvious in the book, but like even an exquisite mirror, it does not correct defects or suggest ways for doing so. Like the other volumes of the series, its value lies in the facts which are presented, and the challenge they present to the profession. This challenge may at first cause consternation, but perhaps out of such tension a sounder public library program may be developed—one which our country and our profession are seeking." J. H. Jacobs

+ Library J 77:962 Je 1 '52 650w

"On the basis of the study general conclusions are drawn which will be read with considerable interest by librarians, prospective librarians and library boards." E. B.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 My 4 '52 170w

Reviewed by W. W. Brickman
School & Society 75:266 Ap 26 '52 190w
U S Quarterly Bk R 8:339 S '52 200w

BRYAN, DAWSON CHARLES. Building church membership through evangelism. 188p $2 Abingdon-Cokesbury

269 Evangelistic work. Church membership 52-5376

Outlines a program for visitation evangelism, suggests training of visitors, and lists materials. The author is one of the two ministers of the First Methodist Church, Houston, Texas, said to be the largest Methodist church in the world. No index.

Booklist 48:350 Jl 1 '52

"The enthusiasm which the book conveys and the definite instructions it gives can be of value to a church of any denomination or of any theological complexion, whether conservative or liberal." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 69:701 Je 11 '52 160w

BRYANT, MRS BERNICE MORGAN. Dan Morgan, boy of the wilderness; il. by Paul Laune. (Childhood of famous Americans ser) 183p $1.75 Bobbs

B or 92 Morgan, Daniel—Juvenile literature 52-5815

"A descendant of this hero of the American Revolution tells a wonderful story of the early life and adventures of Dan Morgan, who had the loudest voice in the New Jersey Colony except when he talked to his animal friends the beavers." Library J

"Recommended for all libraries." E. T. Dobbins

+ Library J 77:727 Ap 15 '52 70w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 My 4 '52 20w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell
N Y Times p18 Jl 13 '52 10w

BRYHER, WINIFRED (MRS KENNETH MACPHERSON) (BRYHER, pseud). Fourteenth of October. 223p $2.75 Pantheon bks. 52-7393

Novel about eleventh century England. The hero is Wulf, a Saxon boy, taken hostage by the Danes, and later sold to the Normans. In time he escapes and plays a part in the Battle of Hastings.

Reviewed by Ruth Chapin
Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 26 '52 130w

"Bryher is a serious and a careful novelist, and her book deserves more attention than the crude outline of a simple battle-and-defeat story would indicate. Her attention to detail, ability to recreate the terrain of Cornwall and the countryside around Hastings, her understanding of the actual campaign and knowledge of the age and history of the period—all are superbly realized. One stands in admiration of her achievement, and particularly of the verbal beauty with which she colors her descriptive writing." P. J. Driscoll

+ Commonweal 56:205 My 30 '52 800w

"There may be no magic here but the vigor, the recreation of the deathless year of 1066, the vivid procession of the people of that time bring past history close and make this a sound story for the whole family."

+ Kirkus 20:232 Ap 1 '52 150w

"Distinguished fiction, unique in its mastery of our language and idiom though the tale is told in an eleventh century manner." Robert Richman

+ New Repub 127:28 O 6 '52 220w

"The distinguished qualities of this book indicate that in some other medium the author's comment on life might have come off effectively." E. C. Dunn

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 Ap 27 '52 400w

Reviewed by Marianne Moore

N Y Times p4 Ap 27 '52 550w

"[The author] writes beautifully, although she croons a little and is often not as direct as she might be, and Wulf emerges from it all as a likable and deeply reflective young man, born out of his time perhaps."

+ New Yorker 28:138 My 10 '52 110w

"'Bryher' tells the story with all the warmth and spirit of one long soaked in the atmosphere of the period. Her narrative is convincing, pulsing with life; her characters are people the reader can believe in, no stereotyped figures in the static style of the all-too-familiar historical novel which so often turns out to be just another costume piece. Even if it carried no moral for today's reader, it would still stand up handsomely as first-rate fiction." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 Je 10 '52 650w

Reviewed by E. J. Fitzgerald

Sat R 35:37 Jl 19 '52 220w

Springf'd Republican p9C Je 8 '52 90w

BRYSON, LYMAN, ed. Foundations of world organization. See Conference on science, philosophy and religion in their relation to the democratic way of life

BRYSON, LYMAN. Next America: prophecy and faith. 248p $3.50 Harper

973 [917.3] U.S.—Civilization 52-5718

"The author's aim is to appraise the larger social forces at work in American society at this transitional time, in order to project the shape of things to come against the obstacles we now face." (Publisher's note) Index.

"This is an important book because it seeks to set the proximate goal for the development of American society. Its subtitle—Prophecy and Faith—accurately indicates the mixture of trend-projection and ethical aspiration of which the work is constituted. Although the breadth of the interpretation makes it very difficult to separate sociological analysis from prescriptions for the realization of values, the attempt will be made in this review." R. C. Angell

+ Am Soc R 17:632 O '52 1050w

Booklist 48:294 My 15 '52

Bookmark 11:229 Jl '52 30w

"A wise book, optimistic in the face of discouraging reality. Hard reading, but with rich rewards for the effort required." Avery Craven

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Je 29 '52 400w

"This is not an easy book to read, because—for all its great quotability—it is sometimes written in the special vocabulary of the social scientist, and it is packed with hard ideas. But it is one of the great American utopian books." E. D. Canham

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 Ap 24 '52 1000w

"Perhaps a slightly oversimplified view, but it's what many people will want to read—if they read this type of book."

Kirkus 20:150 F 15 '52 150w

"This is indeed a hopeful estimate in a time of the breaking of nations; a period when, as Alfred North Whitehead puts it, 'Mankind is changing its entire outlook upon the world.'" D. L. Cohn

+ N Y Times p13 Je 1 '52 600w

"My principal regret is that Mr. Bryson, who knows so well how to mass-communicate, has chosen to write too much of his book in the private language of the academic specialist. Those parts are hard reading. But it is all quite exciting." E. D. Canham

+ Sat R 35:39 Je 21 '52 800w

School & Society 75:253 Ap 19 '52 30w

BUBER, MARTIN. At the turning; three addresses on Judaism. 62p $1.50 Farrar, Straus 296 Jews—Religion 52-12304

"Three addresses on Judaism, delivered by Dr. Buber at the Jewish Theological Seminary in New York last winter. . . In these thoughtful, poetically expressed addresses, he speaks as a Jew to other Jews, but readers of other faiths or of little or no faith are likely to enjoy meeting as civilized a mind as that of Martin Buber." San Francisco Chronicle

"This little book is a thoughtful essay on the place of religion in contemporary civilization. It comes from the pen of a distinguished Jewish theologian. While it speaks to the condition of his fellow religionists his message is applicable to Christians as well as Jews."

+ Kirkus 20:464 Ag 1 '52 80w

Reviewed by J. M. Scherr

Library J 77:1186 Jl '52 80w

"Beautifully written and wise volume." I. B. + San Francisco Chronicle p11 O 19 '52 90w

Reviewed by Will Herberg

Yale R n s 42:293 winter '53 650w

BUBER, MARTIN. Israel and Palestine; the history of an idea [tr. by Stanley Godman]. 165p $4.50 East & West lib; Farrar, Straus 296 Zionism [52-11053]

"The Hebrew edition of this book appeared in 1944. In May 1948 the State of Israel was proclaimed, but it has not proved necessary to alter anything in the text of the present work, which is intended to shed light not on the history of a political enterprise but on that of a religious idea or rather on the spiritual history of a faith." Pref

Bookmark 12:52 D '52 10w

Reviewed by F. H. Heinemann

Hibbert J 51:86 O '52 50w

"A new book by Martin Buber is always an event, especially when, as in the present case, he deals with a highly controversial subject gently and with great learning. The author is by all odds the outstanding Jewish philosopher of the present day. . . The book goes beyond bare recounting to give an illuminating interpretation of all aspects of this movement. Of special interest is what the author has to say about the Biblical testimony and about the various modern Zionists." Paul Ramsey

+ N Y Times p10 Jl 20 '52 400w

"This book is not easy reading, but for those seriously interested in the literature of Zionism and the history of religion, it should be of value." I. B.

San Francisco Chronicle p25 Ag 17 '52 120w

Reviewed by Edward Hodgkin

Spec 189:310 S 5 '52 230w

Times [London] Lit Sup p591 S 12 '52 150w

Reviewed by Will Herberg

Yale R n s 42:293 winter '53 650w

BUCHAN, LAURA, and ALLEN, JERRY. Hearth in the snow. 306p il $3.50 Funk, W. 979.8 Alaska—Social life and customs. Eskimos 52-7097

This account of life in an Eskimo village in Alaska is based on letters written by Laura Buchan to her friend Jerry Allen. A delayed honeymoon brought Laura and her husband to Juneau and there, foot-free and enamored of the Northland, they got jobs as schoolteachers and went to live in a tiny settlement on Bering Strait.

Booklist 48:211 Mr 1 '52

Reviewed by T. M. Longstreth

Christian Science Monitor p13 Jl 3 '52 300w

"It makes quite a story for Outsiders and will remind its readers perhaps of Wilderness Wife in its unfolding of personal, modern pioneering history."

+ Kirkus 20:20 Ja 1 '52 160w

BUCHAN, LAURA—Continued

Reviewed by H. S. Taylor

+ Library J 77:141 Ja 15 '52 110w

"Attractively written and printed, this is a book to enlarge one's frontiers," Frances Witherspoon

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 Mr 23 '52 600w

"All this is set down pleasantly, clearly and with the evident desire to inform others about an Alaska that is generally misunderstood. This the book does, making a personal-adventure story of it at the same time. A lot of people will be pleased by it and will respect the courageous young couple who took on such a tough job and ran it so well." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ag 11 '52 700w

BUCHANAN, ANDREW. Film in education; introd. by J. A. Harrison. 256p il $5.50 British bk. centre

371.335 Moving pictures in education [52-3074]

"Andrew Buchanan, himself a British producer of educational films begins with the observation that too many classroom films are 'lifeless, stilted, and move unnecessarily slowly.' His aim in this book is twofold: to help increase the use and understanding of films for education in its widest sense, and to raise the level of motion picture quality in general. In the course of the book, he helps clarify for American readers some of the work done in the British Isles by such organizations as the British Universities Film Council, the National Committee for Visual Aids in Education, the Education Foundation for Visual Aids, the Central Film Library, and the Distribution Department of the British Film Institute." (Sat R) Bibliography. Index.

"This is one of the best books on the subject I have encountered. Extremely comprehensive; well illustrated. Recommended for all cinema and pedagogical collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 77:399 My 15 '52 20w

"Especially interesting are the sections on the history of educational films in Britain, comments on the role of the teacher-adviser in the production of films, suggestions on improving classroom showings, entertainment movies for children, a brief account of the Colonial Film Unit in Africa, and a delightful report on a series of films made by the author during wartime to explain to Arabian audiences the principles of the automobile, airplane, and parachute. Unfortunately, the short sections on American and Canadian films are both incomplete and out-of-date." Cecile Starr

+ — Sat R 35:37 My 24 '52 300w

School & Society 75:285 My 3 '52 20w

BUCHANAN, LAMONT, ed. Pictorial history of the Confederacy. 288p $5 Crown

973.7 Confederate States of America—History. U.S.—History—Civil war—Pictorial works 51-12017

This pictorial history of the confederacy begins with the delegates first meeting and ends with the final surrender in 1865. Index.

Booklist 48:157 Ja 1 '52

Reviewed by Avery Craven

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 D 16 '51 300w

"Pictorial material relating to the Confederacy is usually difficult to locate and of very uneven quality; some of the best of it is presented with brief descriptive commentary in this book." Herbert Cahoon

+ Library J 77:433 Mr 1 '52 70w

"Lamont Buchanan's 'Pictorial History of the Confederacy' is much less attractive and valuable than similar ones done for the North. His photographs are too often blurred and indistinct; his engravings incline to be crude and uninteresting. His posters and broadsides are decidedly the best reproductions in the book.

These things do tell something of the cultural backwardness of the antebellum South and its poverty in war times. They do not, however, add to the attractiveness of a modern work." Avery Craven

N Y Times p9 D 23 '51 500w

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ja 13 '52 170w

Spring'd Republican p12A Ja 6 '52 220w

BUCHLER, JUSTUS. Toward a general theory of human judgment. 176p $2.75 Columbia univ. press

160 Judgment (logic) 51-14076

"Professor Buchler here proposes a scheme intended to reveal connections among hitherto disparate matters and to be economical of categories. The new attempt is prompted by paradoxes which he traces to the use of traditional categories. Thus Professor Buchler invents the term proception to designate the unitary functioning of the individual. . . How the process of proception involves communication; how compulsion and convention are to be viewed in its light; how various perspectives define given situations in different contexts; how judgments are validated; such are the problems which occupy the book." (U S Quarterly Bk R) Index.

Reviewed by F. H. Heinemann
Hibbert J 51:85 O '52 100w

"In his preface Mr. Buchler promises that there will be further books to develop these notions in greater detail. It seems to this reviewer that we will have to await these further books before we can give an adequate evaluation of Mr. Buchler's contribution. He is working in an extremely interesting field. . . As yet, however, Mr. Buchler's theories seem to be suspended in mid-air. Until he uses his new vocabulary and his new concepts to clarify some specific problem in detail, it will not be possible to determine whether he has made an important advance over his predecessors in the field of process philosophy." M. W. Gross

J Philos 49:758 N 20 '52 1700w

"Since each of us brings to the reading of any book his own funded experience, it is inevitable, as the author himself would probably insist, that readers of this work will disagree as to its fertility and its suggestiveness for new interpretations of the phenomena of which it treats. In any case it needs to be supplemented by more exact and more detailed analyses of the complexities of human discourse. Lacking them, some readers who have already carried the analysis of some particular dimension of human judgment beyond the point to which Buchler's study takes us, will doubtless find it alternately vague and elementary. I found it in part a none too clear restatement of views I seemed already to know. But in part I also found, as in the discussion of conventions, a certain freshness of approach or as in the discussion of validation, a prod to further thinking." H. D. Aiken

+ — Nation 174:282 Mr 22 '52 1250w

"Professor Buchler's little work gives an exceptionally precise and clarifying exposition of the first principles of naturalism and is one of the 'most important of recent philosophical essays.'

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:39 Mr '52 240w

BUCHNER, GEORG. Plays; tr. with an introd. by Geoffrey Dunlop. 274p $3 Ravin

832 52-12305

Contents: Leonce and Lena; Danton's Death; Wozzeck. Bibliography.

"Recommended for drama and theatre collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 77:1814 O 15 '52 20w

"Perhaps it is better to have a great author accessible in any form than in none. Even so, Leonce and Lena is the only play Messrs. Dunlop and Ravin are putting back in circulation. Danton's Death and Woyzeck are both available, better translated—the former in

From the Modern Repertoire I, the latter in New Directions 12. The rest of Buechner—Lenz, Der Hessische Landbote, the letters—still awaits its first English translator." E. B. — + New Repub 127:22 S 1 '52 250w

New Statesman & Nation 44:219 Ag 23 '52 210w

"Ever since [1939] Büchner's reputation has continued to grow both in Germany and abroad; moreover, because of the interest aroused by Alban Berg's opera, a volume containing Woyzeck should be especially welcome at this time. It is the more regrettable that Mr. Dunlop's version of the plays, originally published in 1927 (though this is nowhere mentioned), should have been reprinted verbatim by the present publisher. This version and Mr. Dunlop's otherwise admirable introduction are based on the very faulty edition of Büchner's works by Karl Emil Franzos, published in 1879; both should have been radically revised in the light of recent research."

Times [London] Lit Sup p499 Ag 1 '52 350w

BUCK, MARGARET WARING. In yards and gardens; ill. by [the author]. 72p $3; pa $1.75 Abingdon-Cokesbury

574 Nature study 52-8350

"In only seventy-two pages of text and illustrations, the author succeeds in presenting clearly and concisely an amazingly large amount of information about birds, trees, shrubs, flowers, animals and insects commonly found in yards and gardens. Although the pictures are in black and white they can still be used for identification because the text supplements them so well. The book includes a good index and a suggested reading list of other books as well as bulletins and magazines." Horn Bk

Booklist 48:252 Ap 1 '52

Bookmark 11:186 My '52

"Her easily understood descriptions and lovely black and white drawings, written and drawn from long and careful personal observation and checked with specialists, give readers of any age a fascinating fund of information on the outside world close by and a persuasive eye opener to its delights." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 Ap 27 '52 120w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Yates

Christian Science Monitor p10 My 15 '52 160w

+ Horn Bk 28:113 Ap '52 70w

Kirkus 20:126 F 15 '52 110w

"A nine- or ten-year-old can use it himself with very little help. Pictures are plentiful and well done, but it's too bad no color was used." N. S. Chasteen

Library J 77:798 My 1 '52 70w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ap 6 '52 90w

Reviewed by G. O. Blough

N Y Times p30 Je 8 '52 110w

Sat R 35:63 My 10 '52 30w

Wis Lib Bul 48:175 J1 '52

BUCK, PEARL (SYDENSTRICKER) (MRS RICHARD JOHN WALSH). Hidden flower. 388p $3.50 Day

52-6174

Novel about a mixed marriage. The heroine is a beautiful, aristocratic Japanese girl; her husband, who met her in Japan during the Occupation, is a member of a prominent Virginia family. The marriage, resented by both families, came to an end when Josui, realizing the impossibility of her situation, went back to her life as a Japanese. She entrusts her son to a woman doctor to be raised.

Booklist 48:205; 297 Mr 1 '52; My 15 '52

"A book noteworthy for its atmosphere and background but not for its obvious plot."

Bookmark 11:210 Je '52 40w

"This novel is scarcely one of its author's major efforts, but it does possess a certain authority from her background knowledge of her subject. Neither comedy nor tragedy, it is a determinedly neutral observation on the meeting of East and West." Riley Hughes

Cath World 175:316 J1 '52 170w

Reviewed by M. B. Snyder

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 My 25 '52 370w

"Mrs. Buck continues to be extremely frank about sex, and some readers may believe her to be excessively so. Nevertheless, the author's incontestable sincerity in pleading for the Lennies of the world redeems the book to a large extent." M. W. Stoer

Christian Science Monitor p15 My 29 '52 470w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Horn Bk 28:256 Ag '52 50w

"Worth reading, but not her best."

Kirkus 20:286 My 1 '52 270w

"Though the descriptions of Japanese landscape and customs are interesting, the characters are not presented with enough force to arouse our sympathy. A pity because of the timeliness of the novel's theme." H. R. Forbes

Library J 77:894 My 15 '52 80w

"There is much tragedy here, and some rather confused philosophizing, but Miss Buck's sincerity comes through. All teen-age girls will love and cry over this story." M. D. Read

+ Library J 77:1525 S 15 '52 50w

Reviewed by Rose Feld

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 My 25 '52 800w

"Miss Buck has written a simple and appealing story and a story with a good deal of moral force. Two predictions are possible. It will be widely read, and with pleasure; and it will not receive the critical attention one would expect for the work of a Nobel Prize winner. Perhaps this is inevitable, but it is too bad." Elizabeth Janeway

N Y Times p4 My 25 '52 1200w

"The story is poorly written and proves nothing."

— New Yorker 28:142 My 17 '52 40w

"Fascinating and often moving novel." Harrison Smith

+ Sat R 35:18 My 31 '52 750w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal

Springf'd Republican p19A Je 1 '52 310w

Time 59:98 Je 2 '52 100w

BUCKLER, ERNEST. The mountain and the valley. 373p $3.95 Holt

52-10295

A first novel tracing the development of a lonesome, sensitive farm boy physically handicapped, but clever mentally. The scene is a small Nova Scotian village.

"In spite of the sympathy and skill with which these lives are sketched I find a rather frustrating aimlessness to the pattern in which Mr. Buckler presents them. I may be unfair in that. Perhaps it is the quality of life itself, a certain cyclic pattern, that he intends. I feel, too, that the book is marred by an excessive preoccupation with bodily and biological details. The author's self-consciousness on the point is shown by the fact that his honest and pleasing style tends to give way, at these passages, to painfully fancy writing." Edmund Fuller

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 O 26 '52 250w

Kirkus 20:519 Ag 15 '52 230w

"The background is a fascinating delineation of family life on a farm in a small Canadian village in a style pregnant with beauty, amazing detail and wealth of color, so that the reader lingers over each sentence to savor fully its significance and wonder at its aptness." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 77:1654 O 1 '52 100w

"The Mountain and the Valley" is rich in things of the earth, earthy... And it is rich also in the things of the spirit, in the feelings,

BUCKLER, ERNEST—Continued

sometimes lusty, sometimes tender, sometimes merely matter-of-fact, of boys growing to manhood on a farm. Also Mr. Buckler's first novel offers—as its finest contribution—a rare study of the effect of loneliness upon the human personality, and the blessed response when the hunger for companionship is satisfied." F. H. Bullock

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 O 26 '52 440w

"If at times the narrative seems uneven and formless, the language a little overripe . . . the author imparts to it a haunting eloquence, an almost aching sensuality. In the field of psychological conflict—between son and father, and between adolescents tentatively exploring the mysteries of sex—Mr. Buckler's work is perceptive and altogether first-rate. His ear for the native dialect is unerring." Stuart Keate

+ — N Y Times p5 O 26 '52 330w

New Yorker 28:198 N 22 '52 100w

"In an atmosphere of foreboding, thus early established, the reader feels before he has gone five pages that not very much pleasant is going to happen, that many are going to die; and he is not disappointed. . . Mr. Buckler's novel seems, at least to this reviewer, to split in excellence: his raw material, his reporting of his countryside and of the bleak, realistic detail of country people's lives, are superbly done." Ruth Moore

+ — Sat R 35:54 N 8 '52 210w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal

Springf'd Republican p7C N 23 '52 210w

BUCKLEY, JEROME HAMILTON. Victorian temper; a study in literary culture. 282p il $4.50 Harvard univ. press

820.9 English literature—History and criticism 51-12074

For descriptive note see Annual for 1951.

"After an interesting beginning, in which some of the conflicting opinions about the period are reviewed and the numerous little-known English poems inspired by Goethe's 'Faust' are surveyed, Professor Buckley's discussion of Victorian culture loses its sense of direction. It is full of names, dates, quotations, and allusions, but it suffers fatally from the lack of any apparent principle of organization."

Nation 174:332 Ap 5 '52 200w

"This book is objective and carefully documented. It is full of information. It is entertaining. It must be stimulating, because it provoked me to reread a considerable amount of quite bad minor Victorian verse." Kenneth Rexroth

+ New Repub 125:18 D 3 '51 800w

Reviewed by K. John

New Statesman & Nation 43:324 Mr 15 '52 900w

Spec 188:726 My 30 '52 300w

"Mr. Buckley handles his matter with a scholarly patience and a dry pungency of statement that preserves a delightful vitality. It may be easier for an American than for an English writer to attain to the breadth of vision that distance gives. Or is what we used to call Victorianism accepted still in America as the stuffy bombazine bundle it was to its English grandsons—who even now can find enlightenment as well as diversion as Mr. Buckley unwraps it?"

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p187 Mr 14 '52 900w

"The work falls short of the highest success in the most difficult of scholarly forms, [but] in breadth of scholarship, in an unhackneyed choice of material, in balance and perspective, in style and tone, it is entirely admirable. It is a work which attempts what G. M. Young did so brilliantly in the 'Portrait of an Age,' and it is not only comparable to that famous work, but for those who wish a literary and artistic emphasis, it will be more valuable." A. D. Culler

+ — Yale R n s 41:305 winter '52 550w

BUCKLEY, ROBERT D. Basic guide to lettering. 95p il $4.50 Greenberg

745.6 Lettering

51-13930

"This book is a guide to the study of fundamentals of letters and their proportions. It takes up the difficulties that usually face the beginning student and helps him overcome them. The many diagrams, letter styles, and alphabets give simplified methods for study of letter proportions, and for help in acquiring greater skill in rendering letters. The full page of basic pen strokes to practice are helpful to the beginning student." School Arts

Booklist 48:168 Ja 15 '52

"His diagrams in black and white and a cheerful blue are bound to be helpful from the simplest beginning outlines to more complicated letters and figures; his instructions also include directions for making stars and borders, corners and brackets. The mark of the tracing pencil will soon be seen on every page." A. S. Plaut

+ Library J 77:438 Mr 1 '52 70w

"Recommended for the high school and college levels."

+ School Arts 51:11-a Ja '52 100w

BUCKLEY, WILLIAM FRANK. God and man at Yale; the superstitions of academic freedom; introd. by John Chamberlain. 240p $3.50 Regnery

378 Yale university. Teaching, Freedom of 51-13645

For descriptive note see Annual for 1951.

"This extremely interesting and forcefully written book is one of the most controversial publications about higher education since the issuance of the Harvard Report. . . The smear technique of selecting isolated experiences and quoting out of context is not new. But it is unfortunate that one as young and as capable with his pen as Mr. Buckley should stoop to this level in his first book. In this reviewer's judgment, the issues are much deeper than those treated by Mr. Buckley." F. J. Brown

Ann Am Acad 280:215 Mr '52 480w

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 69:192 F 13 '52 650w

"Even if every word in this book were true (which is not so), this would still be a dishonest book. This reviewer knows personally the views of such men as Lovett, Schroeder, Greene, and Calhoun and they are viciously caricatured. . . This is more than an attack on Yale; it is an attack on all liberal education. It is not a plea for more religion, but for a religion of external authority." R. C. Miller

— Churchman 166:13 Ja 15 '52 220w

"Young Buckley did not and could not, with his lack of experience, take up the problem of secularism affecting all society and all schools, including the church-related ones. But a word or two can be said for him. He is a good lively journalist and a promising publicist. . . Here is one youthful mind that would not take it lying down. It is a tribute to one boy to say that he kept his eyes open, that he effectively resented the imposition and dishonesty and incompetence so common in schools. His book is immature and far from scientific. Yet it is good it was written, good for Yale, good for all of us." L. R. Ward

+ Commonweal 55:473 F 15 '52 1400w

Springf'd Republican p6D Ja 13 '52 200w

Reviewed by Paul Ramsey

Survey 88:43 Ja '52 1150w

BUCKMASTER, HENRIETTA, pseud. See Henkle, H.

BUDENZ, LOUIS FRANCIS. Cry is peace. 242p $3.75 Regnery

335.4 Communism—U.S.

52-10846

"Primarily an interpretation of current and very recent trends in Communist activity, drawn from a variety of sources, including the McCarran Subcommittee on Internal Security. The Soviet 'crusade for the pact of peace' provides a thread upon which the author hangs numerous criticisms of American 'appeasement' tendencies, as well as suggestions for a stronger policy. Much of this lies outside Mr. Budenz's field of intimate knowledge—which is the workings of the Communist apparatus in America during his membership in the party—and must be judged with that fact in mind." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) Index.

Am Pol Sci R 46:899 S '52 10w

Booklist 48:372 J1 15 '52

"At no little cost to himself and partly, it would seem, by way of expiation, Mr. Budenz is devotedly serving the best interests of our country and indeed of the free world. Fortunately for us, because of his unique history, he is in a position now to do more good than he ever did harm; and it is to be hoped that all of us will appreciate this fact and be proportionately grateful."

+ Cath World 175:399 Ag '52 190w

"This is by all odds one of the best available books on the important subject of the communist conspiracy against the United States. It is well organized, hard hitting, and excellently documented. Long an active member of the American Communist party and editor of the Daily Worker, the party organ, Mr. Budenz has performed a great patriotic service to his country by making a clean break with the ideology of an alien dictatorship and doing everything in his power to expose and confound the intrigues of the Communists and their intellectual and emotional allies and dupes." W. H. Chamberlin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Je 15 '52 500w

Reviewed by Joseph Fletcher

— Churchman 166:12 S '52 320w

Current Hist 23:192 S '52 70w

Foreign Affairs 31:157 O '52 20w

Reviewed by R. S. Taylor

Library J 77:1008 Je 1 '52 150w

"Mr. Budenz is an authority on the operations of the Communist party, and he has rendered valuable service in exposing it. This book, however, reveals that when he leaves the field of his special competence he is an unsafe guide. His information is inadequate and the conclusions he draws from it dangerous." H. W. Baehr

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Je 22 '52 800w

"Obviously, we have to protect ourselves from Communist conspirators. Mr. Budenz makes some excellent points in advancing the argument that the Communist party should be frankly outlawed in the United States as a treasonable and foreign conspiracy. . . But it doesn't make much sense to confuse ourselves by searching for easy explanations of complicated events or by mistrusting every American who refuses to follow a standard pattern of thought. This is the very way to turn our democratic strength into weakness, to play into Communist hands." J. B. Oakes

N Y Times p6 Je 15 '52 1050w

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ag 3 '52 450w

Reviewed by Oliver Pilat

Sat R 35:14 Ag 30 '52 650w

Reviewed by J. F. Rooney

Spring'd Republican p5C J1 13 '52 220w

BUECHNER, FREDERICK. Season's difference. 303p $3.50 Knopf

51-11970

A group of grownups and children spending a summer at the estate of the wealthy Dunn family are confronted by the fact that the children's tutor has seen a vision. Each reacts in his or her own way to the phenomenon.

"This second novel by the author of A Long Day's Dying seems to me a book by a writer with a gift for subtly nuanced, intricately spangled prose—and nothing significant to say."

Atlantic 189:84 F '52 150w

Reviewed by Riley Hughes

Cath World 175:72 Ap '52 270w

Reviewed by Edmund Fuller

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ja 13 '52 270w

Reviewed by George Miles

Commonweal 55:379 Ja 18 '52 650w

Kirkus 19:642 N 1 '51 260w

"The emphasis is less on plot than on the development of atmosphere but even that emphasis seems to get lost in an arty attempt at developing a feeling of mysticism. The characters right down to the precocious children shriek of unreality and preciousness. At completion of the novel one is left with the feeling that something has happened, but it is difficult to say what." H. L. Roth

Library J 77:48 Ja 1 '52 100w

Reviewed by Norman Shrapnel

Manchester Guardian p4 J1 25 '52 220w

"Judging from his securely contrived symbolism, his conservative if baroque syntax, his non-spatial narrative technique, and above all, his genteel dramatis personae . . . Frederick Buechner still declines to expose himself to any novelistic possibilities beyond those perfected by Henry James." Robert Phelps

New Repub 126:21 F 18 '52 260w

"If The Seasons' Difference is lacking in impact, if at the end the reader is uncertain what it is all about, that may be due to the fact that Mr. Buechner is still experimenting; personally, I am rather puzzled." J. D. Scott

New Statesman & Nation 44:216 Ag 23 '52 130w

"Mr. Buechner probably needs more time to complete his own vision of the world that is glimpsed in certain descriptive passages of his prose. The promise of his first book is still awaiting its fulfillment. True visions, as his young tutor learned, cannot be willed nor planned too neatly, nor does every season cause a fall of brightness from the air." Horace Gregory

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Ja 13 '52 500w

"Now and then Buechner's elegantly over-written sentences, spangled with such images as 'the applause of leaves,' 'the swollen beginnings of a wave,' . . . embellish a vivid scene. . . More often they gleam like hollow baubles on a sapless, rootless, papier-mâché tree." Robert Lowry

— N Y Times p4 Ja 6 '52 500w

"Mr. Buechner's people chatter banalities with an operatic self-confidence that is deadening when it is not deafening, and whatever honest impulse he started work with is soon buried under a heap of opinionated generalizations, heavy ironies, and stale social satire."

— New Yorker 27:73 Ja 5 '52 130w

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ja 13 '52 850w

"'The Seasons' Difference starts with promise. Again and again it looks as if the promise were going to be fulfilled. There are moments when it lights up brightly, and one thinks, at last he has hit his stride—but always, somehow, the light goes out again. It is one of those most tantalizing of all things in writing—a near miss." Oliver La Farge

Sat R 35:18 Ja 19 '52 500w

"Brilliant and closely knit both in its rather overloaded descriptive power and its invention, The Seasons' Difference may be recommended as one of the most distinguished novels that has recently come out of America." Tangye Lean

+ Spec 189:142 J1 25 '52 260w

Time 59:90 Ja 7 '52 420w

Times [London] Lit Sup p529 Ag 15 '52 60w

"The arresting quality of this sensitively and elaborately written novel lies in the delineation of its characters, especially the children, and of their interrelations: adult to adult, child to adult, and child to child. . . The adults, brilliantly evoked as they are in some highly intellectualized conversations, nevertheless suffer from the weight of the rather nebulous symbolism which they are forced to sustain, from the artist and the beautiful but heedless model to the cynical outsider and the old minister who is either saintly or senile."

BUECHNER, FREDERICK—Continued
+ — U S Quarterly Bk R 8:136 Je '52
200w

Reviewed by James Yaffe
Yale R n s 41:8 spring '52 120w

BUECHNER, GEORG. See Büchner, G.

BUELL, BRADLEY, and others. Community planning for human services. 464p $5.50 Columbia univ. press 361.8 Community life. Public welfare

52-6256
Based on a statistical study of some 41,000 St Paul families under the care of agencies. Should be of interest to social workers and students. Bibliography. Index.

"This work is informative and challenging, a splendid book by experienced workers. Public health people will do well to look at this group portrait and get to know their cousins in this community service family." G. T. Palmer

+ Am J Pub Health 42:451 Ap '52 290w

Reviewed by P. V. Young
Am J Soc 58:320 N '52 270w

Reviewed by S. A. Queen
Am Soc R 17:392 Je '52 250w

"The book is interesting, stimulating, and thought-provoking largely because it approaches these complex problems of human trouble from the perspective of the local community. The final chapter in the book on the significance of the findings for community-wide planning is an excellent statement." Marietta Stevenson

+ Ann Am Acad 281:222 My '52 650w

Booklist 48:191 F 15 '52

"For home economists who wish to understand the community services which are available and who wish for further proof of the importance of family life, this study is important." Esther McGinnis

+ J Home Econ 44:666 O '52 360w

"Bradley Buell and his associates have performed an immensely valuable service in this study of our social enterprises in behalf of human need; and one of the most valuable things about it, perhaps, is that it comes at a time when, if we have the wit and will, we can make valuable use of their findings and advice." H. C. Ostertag

+ Survey 88:140 Mr '52 450w

"Students of social welfare administration and community organization, and general readers as well, will find the study thought provoking."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:180 Je '52 280w

BUENO, BILL, ed. American fisherman's guide; with an introd. by Ed Zern; photographs and line drawings under the supervision of G. Don Ray; full-color plates by Duane Raver. 549p $5.95 Prentice-Hall

799.1 Fishing—North America 52-8600

"An encyclopedic anthology on fishing in the U.S., from Pacific salmon to lowly bullhead, with all the variations of tackle and methods favored by a galaxy of sporting writers, such as R. L. Haig-Brown, Ray Bergman, J. A. Knight, E. E. Hewitt and others. Some from books, others from popular magazines. Illustrated with 10 color plates and 100 half-tone and line drawings." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 48:355 J1 1 '52

"A book for all ages, the one basic requirement is enthusiasm for the sport."

+ Kirkus 20:271 Ap 15 '52 230w

"A good buy." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 77:1206 J1 '52 40w

Reviewed by Edmund Gilligan
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 S 7 '52
110w

Reviewed by Jack Pegues
San Francisco Chronicle p19 S 28 '52
90w

BULLA, CLYDE ROBERT. Johnny Hong of Chinatown; il. by Dong Kingman. 69p $2 Crowell

52-7859

Johnny Hong lived in an American Chinatown. He had been ill and could not go to school so he knew no children to invite to his eighth birthday party. Then he helped to put out a fire at the Charming Tea House and became a hero. After that there were plenty of people at his birthday party. Ages 7 to 10.

Booklist 49:128 D 1 '52

"This is a jolly, happy book for youngsters 6 to 9. It is not goody-goody, but has lessons of unselfishness and kindness to others, and is an interesting story." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 O 12 '52
100w

+ Kirkus 20:656 O 1 '52 110w

"A nice little modern easy-to-read story for third- and fourth-graders to master themselves. . . Recommended." Claire Nolte

+ Library J 77:1817 O 15 '52 70w

"The theme of the melting pot is never over-emphasized and the details of Chinese-American life are nicely accented by Dong Kingman's drawings." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p32 S 21 '52 150w

BULLA, CLYDE ROBERT. Song of St Francis; il. by Valenti Angelo. 71p $2.50 Crowell

Francis of Assisi, Saint—Juvenile literature
52-6739

The story of St Francis of Assisi written for ages seven to ten. End papers have words and music of the Song of St Francis.

"Charming little book." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 F 17 '52
160w

+ Kirkus 20:69 F 1 '52 160w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 Mr
'52 90w

"Facts are reduced to a minimum and conjecture is given free rein, no doubt with the purpose of adding to the book's appeal to very young readers. This factor, along with a style simplified to the point of monotony, deprives the book of the strength and vitality one would expect from a biography of so colorful a figure." Elizabeth Hodges

N Y Times p24 F 10 '52 180w

San Francisco Chronicle p21 My 11 '52
90w

"Valenti Angelo's drawings give this book its greatest value. They give a clear impression of the lovely hill towns of Tuscany, and their design is beautiful. The text, written for younger boys and girls, fails to convey the humor and sweetness of St Francis."

+ — Sat R 35:61 Ap 12 '52 80w

BULLARD, FREDERIC LAURISTON. Lincoln in marble and bronze. (Abraham Lincoln association. Publication) 353p il $7.50 Rutgers univ. press

B or 92 Lincoln, Abraham—Monuments
52-9189

"In the 86 years since John Wilkes Booth shot and killed the sixteenth president of the United States, 68 original heroic statues of Lincoln have been erected throughout the country. The story of these statues, the work of 55 sculptors is told in this volume." Publisher's note

"Price, poor quality of the photographs, and unimaginative format all serve to limit purchase of a book which may still be wanted in collections of Lincolniana."

Booklist 48:296 My 15 '52

"Dr. Bullard has given us not only a valuable work but an entertaining narrative. Students of American art as well as students of Lincoln will welcome the book, and many who are neither will find it interesting." R. P. Basler

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 My 18 '52 180w

"This latest book on Lincoln will be most appreciated by students and collectors of Lincolniana, but it will prove interesting to the general reader as well." A. W. Eckman

+ Christian Science Monitor p15 My 29 '52 490w

Reviewed by H. I. Brock

+ N Y Times p9 Je 8 '52 350w

"'Lincoln in Marble and Bronze' will serve as a monograph of high readability and a worthy addendum to the Lincoln saga." J. T. Winterich

+ Sat R 35:49 Je 14 '52 320w

BULLETT, GERALD WILLIAM. News from the village. 55p $1.75 Cambridge 821

Collection of quiet poems about the English countryside.

"With humility, the poet expresses gratitude to his publishers for bringing out his book 'in difficult and crowded times.' The times need such books, and gratitude goes instead to the poet." John Holmes

+ N Y Times p6 Ag 3 '52 120w

"Tenderness mellows Mr. Bullett's irony in these brief lines; and the irony rescues these country notations from the sort of bathos that Wordsworth too often fell into." G. P. Meyer

+ Sat R 35:21 S 6 '52 210w

Times [London] Lit Sup p679 O 17 '52 80w

BULTMANN, RUDOLF KARL. Theology of the New Testament; tr. by Kendrick Grobel. v 1 366p $3.50 Scribner

230 Bible. New Testament—Theology (51-14678)

"Bultmann's Theology of the New Testament is not yet complete, but the parts which have already been published in Germany have won a widespread welcome on the part of New Testament scholars everywhere. The first installment (covered in the present volume) deals with (1) Presuppositions and motifs of New Testament Theology, i.e., the message of Jesus, the kerygma of the earliest church, and the kerygma of the hellenistic church aside from Paul. Part II covers the theology of Paul, which is classified as follows: (a) Man prior to the revelation of faith, viz., the anthropological concepts and the Pauline ideas of flesh, sin, and world and (b) Man under faith, viz., the righteousness of God, grace, faith and freedom." (Crozer Q) Bibliographies. No index.

"This is very stimulating and important work. On the other hand, I would not be true to the reader if I did not register my dissent from many of the individual conclusions of the author. . . . Though the author's views deserve respectful attention, they should not be accepted without the careful investigation of competing views. This is not a manual for introductory students, but mature minds will find the volume a stimulating guide to the exploration of New Testament thought." C. T. Craig

+ Christian Century 69:399 Ap 2 '52 1000w

"Bultmann's Theology of the New Testament is 'radical' in the best sense. It goes down to the root meanings of the New Testament terms and it follows through to the end the implication, as well as the methods, of thoroughgoing philological and historical criticism. Professor Bultmann never bats an eye when face to face with a difficulty of text or interpretation, and he never tries to 'save appearances' by a few well-chosen words of edification. The result is that the theology of the New Testament—or its religious thought, in case one does not recognize a 'theology' here—stands out in all its pristine glory and power." F. C. Grant

+ Crozer Q 29:192 Ap '52 1250w

Reviewed by A. N. Wilder

J Religion 32:128 Ap '52 900w

Kirkus 19:630 O 15 '51 90w

BUNDESEN, HERMAN NIELS. Toward manhood. 175p il $2.95 Lippincott

612.6 Sex instruction 51-11205

"An informal presentation of sex and its problems, realistically geared to the level of the teen-age boy. Dr. Bundesen [is] Chicago's Health Commissioner." San Francisco Chronicle.

Reviewed by R. E. Dickerson

Am J Pub Health 42:739 Je '52 270w

Booklist 48:180 F 1 '52

"Some plain spoken, sensibly based advice about sex."

+ Kirkus 19:549 S 15 '51 100w

"In his book, Dr. Bundesen uses an intelligent 'man-to-man' approach which should profit younger readers and some parents as well." C. A.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 F 10 '52 150w

BUNDY, MCGEORGE, ed. Pattern of responsibility. See Acheson, D. G.

BUNKLEY, ALLISON WILLIAMS. Life of Sarmiento. 566p il $7.50 Princeton univ. press

B or 92 Sarmiento, Domingo Faustino 52-8763

"[Biography] of one of the great South American liberals of the nineteenth century. Sarmiento—who numbered among his friends Horace Mann—was a notable sociologist, author, president of Argentina, reorganizer of the Argentine school system, founder of newspapers, establisher of agrarian communities to settle the Pampa, and envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to the United States 1865-1868." Library J

"Taken as a whole, the Life of Sarmiento is a brilliant piece of work, drawn from original sources and citing freely the opinions of Latin American writers whose researches and studies make up a bibliography of some twenty-five pages. No better picture could be given of the political forces at work in Latin America of a hundred years ago, contrasting in a most interesting way the Jacksonian period in our own country." C. G. Fenwick

+ Commonweal 57:313 D 26 '52 250w

"This posthumous volume is a scholarly, well-documented, comprehensive, and absorbing biography. . . . Large public, college, and university libraries will wish to have it." Joseph Borome

+ Library J 77:2069 D 1 '52 60w

"Allison Williams Bunkley, late assistant professor at Princeton, has left us the most complete life of Sarmiento written in English. He examined 15,000 of Sarmiento's unpublished letters in preparation for this study. His book has the fascination of Sarmiento's own life, and could not appear more opportunely." German Arciniegas

+ N Y Times p40 D 7 '52 480w

School & Society 76:303 N 8 '52 20w

BURGESS, DOROTHY WHITEMORE (BATES). Dream and deed; the story of Katharine Lee Bates. 241p il $4 Univ. of Okla. press

B or 92 Bates, Katharine Lee 52-10500

"Many Americans know Katharine Lee Bates as the author of 'America the Beautiful.' New Englanders know her as a local poet who spoke of their condition in measured

BURGESS, D. W. B.—Continued
verse steeped in the tradition of the great English and American writers. Wellesley College graduates and faculty members know her as the 'Eighties' Katie, but chiefly as a friend and a provocative teacher. . . Dorothy Burgess has written the life story of her aunt with meticulous concern for the historicity of her reports. She has had access to Miss Bates' own notebooks and publications as well as family letters and messages from many friends." N Y Times

Booklist 48:358 J1 1 '52

Bookmark 11:230 J1 '52 40w

Reviewed by H. S. Hughes

Christian Science Monitor p7 J1 24 '52 460w

Reviewed by DeLancey Ferguson

N Y Herald Tribune BK R p7 Ag 17 '52 390w

"A warm, readable account of an important life." M. M. Horton

+ N Y Times p4 Je 29 '52 500w

San Francisco Chronicle p24 S 14 '52 280w

"'Dream and Deed' represents Americana at its truest and best. It is the ingratiating portrait of a mind and heart that owes much of its lively coloring to excerpts from Miss Bates's books, letters, and diaries." A. F. Wolfe

+ Sat R 35:45 Je 14 '52 500w

School & Society 76:47 J1 19 '52 30w

Reviewed by Ethel Dexter

Springf'd Republican p7C N 30 '52 100w

BURGWYN, MRS MEBANE (HOLOMAN).
Penny Rose. 223p $3 Oxford

52-9426

A novel for older girls. It is the story of Penny Rose Wilder who had to give up her dream of marrying a wealthy neighbor in order to help reclaim her family farm. In so doing she found a happier solution to her problems.

Booklist 49:50 O 1 '52

"Older girls not yet mature enough for adult novels will enjoy reading about Penny Rose Wilder's problems and accomplishments."

+ Bookmark 12:13 O '52 20w

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 N 16 '52 120w

"A little on the sentimental side."

Kirkus 20:604 S 15 '52 140w

"Fine story of a young girl's awakening to maturity." B. W. Schein

+ Library J 77:1826 O 15 '52 80w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune BK R pt2, p24 N 16 '52 60w

"If her accomplishment seems monumental for one so young, her driving need is very real. Very real, too, are the qualities that make this young novel strongly convincing, its solutions valid, its romance believable and sound." Nora Kramer

+ N Y Times p18 N 16 '52 150w

"It's told pleasantly enough if too innocently." E. J. F.

+ Sat R 35:44 N 22 '52 100w

BURKE, ARVID JAMES. Financing public schools in the United States. 584p $4.50 Harper

379.11 School finance

51-2128

"Provides a background for determining policy and practice in the financing of public schools. It presents the problems, facts, principles, and techniques involved in policy formulation and financial practices. It summarizes and evaluates the policies of federal and state governments in school finance and provides an introduction to local financial management of schools. Public school expenditures are treated in relation to other public spending." (Publisher's note) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 47:302 My 1 '51

"It is the reviewer's belief that a well-rounded course in school finance should include Financing Public Schools in the United States as a useful adjunct to other textbooks in this area." Procter Thomson

+ El School J 52:117 O '51 500w

"This provides a thorough and realistic background for determining policy and practice in the financing of public schools."

+ School & Society 73:190 Mr 24 '51 20w

BURKE, JAMES WAKEFIELD. Big rape. 282p $3 Farrar, Straus

52-11655

A novel about life in Berlin in 1945 when the Russians took over. It is the story of the Markgraf family, and especially of Lilo, who contrived to survive and help her family to live thru the nightmare interlude.

Reviewed by Paul Engle

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Ag 17 '52 340w

Kirkus 20:306 My 15 '52 230w

"Has all the elements of cheap melodrama: sex, sentimentality, adventure and flat characters. With such a title and such a tale, the book in reprint form should have a good news-stand sale." R. S. Taylor

— Library J 77:1190 J1 '52 70w

"The publishers call 'The Big Rape' a documentary novel, and such it is, with both the virtues and shortcomings that the term implies. If the subject matter were less momentous, one might cavil at some of the passages. . . Mr. Burke's reporting gives every evidence of being honest and able, and his use of the technique of the novel to convey it is, on the whole, effective." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 J1 27 '52 650w

"Undoubtedly the gory details of the Russian occupation are real, as is the Berliner's talent for surviving moral erosion, with no profound damage to his self-esteem. But the author's glibness, vulgarizations and crashing clichés smother the voice of Berlin." Sam Hunter

N Y Times p12 Ag 3 '52 300w

"Not a good book. It takes more than research (of which Mr. Burke has done prodigious amounts) or journalistic skill (which these pages never lack) to transmute epic happenings into epic fiction. John Hersey turned the trick in 'The Wall.' . . Mr. Burke, on the other hand, tries to fit some plot-convenient figures into the jet-propelled Götterdämmerung of the crashing of the Third Reich." Frederic Morton

Sat R 35:18 S 27 '52 350w

BURKE, OLIVER WALLIS, and others, eds. Light hydrocarbon analysis; analytical methods compiled and tested for the Office of rubber reserve, Reconstruction finance corp. by the Butadiene committee on specifications and methods of analyses. 639p il $15 Reinhold

547.92 Hydrocarbons

"A collection of analytical methods applicable to the chemical analysis of petroleum gases and associated substances classified as light hydrocarbons. It will become a basic reference book for chemists working with this class of materials. It is based on work by the Butadiene Committee of the Office of Rubber Reserve in connection with the synthetic rubber program during World War II, but it includes also methods developed since 1945." (Library J) Index.

"The book is a valuable addition to the branch of analytical chemistry concerned with testing light hydrocarbon mixtures and fills the existing gap in the available information on this subject. No well-equipped petroleum laboratory can afford to miss this book in its library." V. A. Kalichevsky

+ Chem Eng 59:381 Je '52 470w

Library J 77:536 Mr 15 '52 70w

"An important contribution to the literature of analytical chemistry. . . The work is of interest to graduate chemists engaged in analytical work in the petroleum and gas industries and in other industries using petroleum gases as a raw material."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 37:7 Ja '52

"Highly specialized, and unique in its field, the value of the work lies in its complete coverage and careful detail. It will prove useful to laboratories dealing with petroleum, natural and manufactured gas, and to all parts of the chemical industry dealing with the light hydrocarbons, especially those containing less than six carbon atoms."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:212 Je '52 160w

BURKE, REDMOND AMBROSE. What is the Index? 129p $2.75 Bruce pub.

098 Index librorum prohibitorum. Prohibited books 52-9314

"Director of Libraries of De Paul University presents brief historical background of Catholic Church's attitude to books and reading, followed by discussion of various pertinent canons of Code of Canon Law. He explains types of work examined, procedure of examination, special permissions, and penalties for violation of regulations. Various appendices contain lists of writers or specific works, the reading of which is restricted to varying degrees." Library J

Booklist 48:289 My 15 '52

Reviewed by H. H. Bernt

Library J 76:2000 D 1 '51 150w

Time 59:52 Ap 28 '52 600w

BURKHARDT, CHARLES H. Domestic oil burners; installation and servicing. 359p il $8.50 McGraw

697.6 [697.7] Oil burners 51-3285

"A book for men who are preparing for work as oil burner installers and service men or who are already engaged in the field. Types and operating principles; installation and controls; service and maintenance are all covered from the practical viewpoint. Presumably to save space, detailed discussions of certain older types of burners such as the high speed vertical rotary have been omitted. On the other hand there is rather full discussion of maintenance operations on specific makes of burners still being manufactured." Library J

Booklist 47:340 Je 1 '51

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 76:1132 Jl '51 90w

N Y New Tech Bks 37:9 Ja '52

BURKS, ARTHUR J. Bells above the Amazon. 241p map $3 McKay

B or 92 Mense, Hugo 51-14366

An account of the life and labors of Father Hugo Mense, who for twenty-seven years was the head of a Franciscan mission among the Mundurucu Indians on the Rio Cururu in Brazil.

+ Bookmark 11:129 Mr '52 30w

"The reader will appreciate what Mr. Burks has been able to tell about a wise and gentle priest, although he will regret that a firsthand report is not available on this man, who seems to have been of major stature." Hubert Herring

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 Mr 9 '52 400w

BURLINGAME, ROGER. Mosquitoes in the Big Ditch; the story of the Panama Canal; il. by Helen Damrosch Tee-Van. 177p $1.50 Winston

52-5486

The story of Dr Gorgas' conquest of yellow fever in the Panama Canal Zone, as seen thru the eyes of a French boy who works under Gorgas. For ages 9 to 14.

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Ag 3 '52 60w

Kirkus 20:261 Ap 15 '52 110w

"Fine remedial reading for junior high schools. Somewhat choppy but readable and interesting. Recommended." A. B. McCreary

+ Library J 77:1212 Jl '52 80w

"It is a good combination of fact and action for readers around twelve to fourteen, with unusual medical background." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 My 11 '52 70w

"The story of the medical research has much the same suspense as a detective story." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p26 Je 8 '52 20w

Reviewed by Eleanor Breed

San Francisco Chronicle p3 N 16 '52 40w

"It is a very well-written story, convincing in detail and background and constantly interesting."

+ Sat R 35:46 O 11 '52 30w

BURMAN, BEN LUCIEN. High water at Catfish Bend; il. by Alice Caddy. 121p $2.75 Messner

52-9138

This is the story as told by old Doc, the raccoon, to the author, of how it was the animals and not the farmers who finally persuaded the Mayor and the Army engineers to build levees at Catfish Bend.

Booklist 48:344 Je 15 '52

Bookmark 11:236 Jl '52

"This wise and humorous little tale—the author's first for children—is bound to charm young ones as his Mississippi stories have charmed elders. . . Mr. Burman's warmly drawn word portraits of these five engaging little animals are supplemented by his wife's very funny drawings." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Jl 20 '52 140w

"A good river yarn, full of humor and action, with amusing drawings that add to the folk-tale flavor of the story." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 28:174 Je '52 80w

Kirkus 20:224 Ap 1 '52 130w

"Recommended." Elizabeth Hodges

+ Library J 77:1018 Je 1 '52 90w

"It is an animal story to amuse a wide age range. It is a bit of Americana that celebrates the Mississippi, its bayous and floods. The delightful pictures by the author's wife add much to the legendary flavor of the pages. We end the book with a sense of the animals' reality as animals, and a happy belief in their quietly symbolic achievement." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 My 11 '52 170w

"Children will appreciate the way the animals get the best of the Mayor and adults will enjoy the subtle humor." Phyllis Fennner

+ N Y Times p16 Jl 20 '52 170w

"The book can be read on two levels. Children will like it for its fantastic yet warm story; older persons will like it for its subtle approach to you and me and the world."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 My 11 '52 120w

"It is a wise tale with a moral particularly applicable to these times. The animals are never sugary or goody-goody, but have about them something of the same straight forward 'I can be good, I can be bad' air that charac-

BURMAN, B. L.—Continued
 terized the animals the original un-Disney-fied Pinocchio knew." H. S. Arnov
 + Sat R 35:40 Ag 16 '52 320w
 U S Quarterly Bk R 8:258 S '52 60w
 "Excellent for family reading."
 + Wis Lib Bul 48:218 S '52

BURNETT, WHIT, and BURNETT, HALLIE
SOUTHGATE, eds. Sextet; six Story discoveries in the novella form; first publication of Domhnall O'Connell, and others.
 (Story press bk) 246p $3 McKay

Short stories—Collections 51-13446

Six long short stories, or novellas, by six new and largely unpublished writers. Contents:
Lilacs out of the dead land, by Domhnall
 O'Connell; Jesus complex, by Charles Mohler; Falcon's nest, by Tom Bair; Life's old sweet dream, by George Moffett; Rod of God, by Gilbert Rees; Nadia Devereux, by John Eichrodt.

"In these six long stories editors Whit Burnett and Hallie Burnett attempt to promulgate the novella form, which languishes in a vacuum created by commercial expediency. . .
 The editors of 'Sextet' unfortunately have not found six outstanding pieces. They have found four fairly good ones: Domhnall O'Connell's
 'Lilacs Out of the Dead Land,' 'The Jesus
 Complex,' by Charles Mohler, 'The Falcon's Nest,' by Tom Bair, 'The Rod of God,' by Gilbert Rees. . . The last two pieces in 'Sextet' are horses of another color." Warren Beck
 + — Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 O 21 '51
 450w

"A volume which contains one splendid story, two fairly good ones and three pretty bad." V. P. Hass
 N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 D 23
 '51 440w

"Three entries are far and away above the rest. 'Lilacs Out of the Dead Land,' John Eichrodt's 'Nadia Devereux,' and 'The Rod of God,' by Gilbert Rees. [This last] is an adept characterization, understated, but poignant, of a New England woman held captive by Indians. Here is the book's point of finesse and fine writing." B. V. Winebaum
 + — N Y Times p16 D 16 '51 280w

"This is an interesting volume which as a whole will prove less than rewarding for readers who are looking for finished accomplishment. Its interest lies rather in its foreshadowing of more considerable accomplishments from these writers." E. J. Fitzgerald
 Sat R of Lit 34:20 D 8 '51 700w

BURNETT, WILLIAM RILEY. Vanity row.
 276p $3 Knopf

52-6403

A tale of corruption in high places in a modern city. Frank Hobart, a nationally known lawyer is shot down in the street, and the administration's private gunman is called in to keep the public from discovering Hobart's connection with crime. The beautiful night club girl selected to take the rap upsets the plan.

Kirkus 20:352 Je 15 '52 190w

Reviewed by James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 S 7
 '52 80w

"'Vanity Row,' in synopsis, must have seemed another likely vehicle for the Burnett skills and special knowledge. In complete form, despite these undeniable assets, the novel appears spurious. 'Vanity Row' is too overdrawn, too much an opera bouffe of big city corruption. . . Maybe Mr. Burnett's next novel will be in better form if he will just let the reader work up a little sympathy for somebody, even a cop." James Kelly
 + — N Y Times p4 Ag 17 '52 480w

"The writing is choppy and tired."

New Yorker 28:89 Ag 16 '52 30w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p15 Ag 15 '52
 650w

"As a writer of hard-boiled gangster fiction
 Mr. Burnett has achieved some notable successes in the past and recurrently raised the hope that he might be going to move on to higher levels of novelistic achievement. It is a hope that has never been realized and isn't even hinted at in this latest punch-filled product."

Sat R 35:37 Ag 23 '52 180w

Reviewed by J. F. Rooney

Spring'd Republican p6D Ag 24 '52
 60w

BURNHAM, JOHN R. Contest story. 298p il $3
 Dorrance

659.13 [659.17] Prize contests 51-14077

"This gives something of the history of the subject, describes the various kinds of commercial contests open to the public, with a few words about the people who run them and about those who win them, and concludes with several chapters on how to go about winning a contest." Chicago Sunday Tribune

Booklist 48:139 D 15 '51

"Excellent introduction." John Randolph

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 N 25 '51
 90w

BURNS, ARTHUR FRANK, ed. Wesley Clair
 Mitchell, the economic scientist. 387p il $4
 Nat. bur. of economic res.

330.4 Mitchell, Wesley Clair, Economics
 52-6013

"The aim of the book is to emphasize Mitchell as a scientist. The chapters are mostly by friends and admirers, though the editor states that 'some effort' was made to include different schools of thought. Much of the material has appeared before. The new parts consist of a eulogy by A. F. Burns and a revealing biographical sketch by Mrs. Mitchell."
 (Ann Am Acad) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by L. H. Haney

Ann Am Acad 284:184 N '52 440w

Reviewed by R. A. Lester

New Repub 127:20 Jl 7 '52 650w

"The single contribution especially prepared for this volume is a 'personal sketch' written by Mitchell's wife. It is a remarkably fine and delicate piece which combines objectivity with restrained devotion. . . Both biographically and from the point of view of economic theory, this is an important addition to the literature on Wesley Clair Mitchell."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:269 S '52 220w

BURNS, EUGENE. Fresh and salt water spinning; photographs by Clyde Childress. 96p $1.50 Barnes, A.S.

799.12 Fishing 52-11603

"The author of this book, a contributor to outdoor magazines on fishing subjects, requires fewer than 100 pages of type and illustrations to give anglers a quick but thoro briefing on the fascinating game of spin-casting for game fish. His chapters on equipment, productive lures, and reading water are especially helpful for a novice." Chicago Sunday Tribune

Booklist 49:34 S 15 '52

Reviewed by Bob Becker

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p19 S 14 '52
 40w

"A good book for the beginner." R. W.
 Henderson

+ Library J 77:1904 N 1 '52 30w

"Spinning is a controversial matter among fishermen. And oddly enough the argument against spinning is that it results in catching too many fish! If you are a fisherman, however, who enjoys the reward of a full creel (and few don't), then it is advisable to know how spinning rods and reels work and where they are most effective. Eugene Burns is a Bay Area writer and angler of distinction and a logical man to tell you about all this. The Childress photographs are exceptionally fine." Jack Pegues

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 S 28 '52
40w

BURNS, EUGENE. Last king of paradise. 345p
$4 Pellegrini & Cudahy

B or 92 Kalakaua, David, king of Hawaii.
Hawaiian islands—History 52-5050

"This is a very good account of the degeneration of Polynesia that started with the coming of the flags and the traders. Eugene Burns tells the larger story by concerning himself mainly with the life and death [of] David Kalakaua, the last king of Hawaii." (Library J) No index.

"A thrilling, romantic sidelight on history, written in a delightful, forceful style." R. L. Blakesley

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Mr 16 '52
350w

"Eugene Burns' lively style does justice to his hero and to the significance of the period so important in the growth of the Pacific and the study of western impact on native culture."

Kirkus 20:59 Ja 15 '52 260w

Reviewed by W. B. Ready

Library J 77:524 Mr 15 '52 300w

"All the colorful dirt that seldom appears in formal histories of Hawaii has been swept into this narrative life of David Kalakaua. . . The biography is a journalistic job, lopsided, full of loose ends, deficient in historical perspective, confused in intention and sloppily written. As a picture of civilized corruption heaped upon barbaric immorality, however, it will probably remain for some time to come unsurpassed." G. F. Whicher

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 Ap 20
'52 800w

"This is a rewarding book, although a poorly written one. It has all the merits of a piece of painstaking reporting, and all the faults of journalese. Mr. Burns' writing being conditioned by long years in that exacting but uninspiring school of composition, The Associated Press. He is somewhat too preoccupied with the sexual rituals of the Polynesians, however much they do to this day make a cult of concupiscence, at the expense of many richer aspects of the native pattern of life which contributed to the tragedy of the race's decline in its collision with the predatory haole's ruthless pragmatism." Walter Karig

N Y Times p16 Mr 16 '52 450w

"This is fast-moving, colorful and dramatic history with numerous background references to American and California history of the same period. There are many scenes that would make good movie material, notably the coronation, the King's astonishing trip around the world, and his final escape to San Francisco after an uprising. There is also ample material to delight those who are interested in strange native customs and rites." C. W. Weinberger

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 Mr 23 '52
430w

"This account of Kalakaua, last King of Hawaii, known as The First Gentleman of the Pacific, belongs to a school of biography for which 'imaginative' is one word, 'overweening' another. . . The technique is familiar. When the writer is well soaked in his subject and admits he is doing a biographical novel, it can make good reading. Mr. Burns, however, calls this book 'a biography' and does not seem altogether adequate to filling in the synthetic detail." J. C. Furnas

Sat R 35:20 Mr 8 '52 600w

BURNS, JAMES MACGREGOR, and PELTASON, JACK WALTER. Government by the people; the dynamics of American national government. 946p il $7.50; to schools $5.50
Prentice-Hall

320.973 [342.73] U.S.—Politics and government—Handbooks, manuals, etc. 52-8925

"This is a college textbook which earnestly tries to get away from dry exposition of structures and powers in order to 'picture American government as an alive and dynamic thing.'" (Ann Am Acad) Bibliography. Index.

"Though the authors avoid minutiae they nevertheless employ abundant homely and concrete examples and illustrations. The student ought to feel at home both with the style and with the attitudes expressed. . . This reviewer would like to add, for what it is worth, that students will never be led by this book to reach down for the roots of the problem of the relation between liberty and security. The tacit assumption throughout is that big government and big power, as means for the advancement of the general welfare, are inevitable and that administrative process is the characteristic development of modern democracy." S. G. Brown

Ann Am Acad 283:194 S '52 320w

"There are excellent charts, tables, diagrams, and a selective bibliography. Sprightly writing and some of Herblock's mordant cartoons make this a book to be enjoyed by the general reader."

+ Nation 175:335 O 11 '52 190w

Springf'd Republican p9C Je 8 '52 70w

BURNS, JOHN HORNE. Cry of children. 276p
$3 Harper

52-9547

David Murray, aristocratic, well-to-do, son of a devoted mother, meets Isobel Joy, a girl from a lower-class Irish home. David and Isobel set up a kind of housekeeping in a Bohemian section of Boston, but the relationship finally palls, and David returns to his own kind and Isobel to hers.

"A Cry of Children is moderately humorous in places; but novelists have worked over this particular situation pretty extensively, and I failed to find anything particularly fresh or stirring about Burns's treatment of it." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 190:104 O '52 150w

Reviewed by V. P. Hass

Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 S 21 '52
420w

"With such a book, it is difficult to be sympathetic with either characters or situations, or Burns's handling of them. It gets to be awfully hard going, and one wonders what has happened to John Horne Burns." J. A. Lynch

Commonweal 56:633 O 3 '52 480w

"Too bad when a man can write as Burns can write, that he betrays his gifts. Not for P. L.'s!"

— Kirkus 20:381 Jl 1 '52 210w

"A Cry of Children is either a good parody, or pure soap opera, whichever you wish. It has all the standard overtones of America as the crushing mechanistic society, where all our youth run amuck, their souls in the wind, where religion is a hollow bell, and where, as the author says, 'all life is a dance hall, sister.' Mr. Burns said some of the same things in The Gallery, but at least he said them better. So, although it won't be easy, we must make an effort to remember that." Whitney Balliet

— New Repub 127:22 S 15 '52 800w

Reviewed by Anthony Curtis

New Statesman & Nation 44:656 N 29
'52 280w

"The story Mr. Burns tells in 'A Cry of Children,' is a sordid, violent one, full of superficial reality and not a little insight into human desires and conflicts. He writes vigorously and crudely—as befits his materials—and, like so many of our younger writers, as though he had learned the language wholly by ear, using—and misusing—colorful, rich-sounding words in profusion. But despite this and other deficiencies, the total effect of 'A Cry of Children' is dynamic." F. H. Bullock

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 S 7 '52
550w

"Sound threadbare? It isn't, really. 'A Cry of Children' has a well-furnished feeling, due largely to great comic blowiness, to acid-etched vignettes of the city and its apartment

BURNS, J. H.—Continued
 dwellers, to sin-haunted observations of physical love in all its twists and turns. Most of the characters are brilliantly executed types, even if they never quite emerge from the morass of desperate vulgarity which holds them all. Full of original conceits and imaginings, the novel dramatizes the clash between old and new morality, between mother and mistress, between a man and a woman who find they have nothing in common beyond primary instincts." James Kelly

+ — N Y Times p4 S 7 '52 550w

Reviewed by Brendan Gill

New Yorker 28:115 S 6 '52 340w

"Unfortunately, Mr. Burns has no assets of style, wit, and poetry. Nor has he a comparable command of techniques. Much of 'A Cry of Children' is told in the stream-of-consciousness manner, following the thought of David, of his mother, or of the young mistress. But in none of these passages is a believable human intelligence allowed to speak with a persuasive individual accent." James Gray

— Sat R 35:23 S 13 '52 550w

Reviewed by R. D. Charques

Spec 189:580 O 31 '52 60w

"There are still a few vague echoes of his original talent, but for the most part they are buried under a non-stop chatter of unoriginal, and now stale and petty, depravity."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p737 N 14 '52 350w

BURRESS, JOHN. Little Mule. 314p $3 Vanguard

52-6779

"Little Mule (age 4-6 yrs.) was one of five small children of a 'poor but proud' widowed mother in a Missouri farming area. In spite of constant 'whuppings' Little Mule remained an ornery little cuss, whose tendency to trouble germinated from too literal interpretation of his mother's moral instruction. However, he manfully measures up to crisis, and emerges quite a hero." Library J

Reviewed by Marge Lyon

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ap 27 '52 450w

Kirkus 20:91 F 1 '52 160w

"There is much attempt at humor: naïve, childish situations, supplemented by slapstick; but it fails to get across. This first novel is amateurish, impressing one as an attempt to novelize a comic strip." R. W. Henderson

— Library J 77:528 Mr 15 '52 100w

"Despite a plethora of detail in these episodes (like the children, the prose is frequently 'tired but happy'), Mr. Burress wisely keeps the sentiment from getting out of hand, and through understatement he imbues some of the incidents with occasional flashes of genuine pathos and humor." W. B. Bracke

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ap 13 '52 450w

Reviewed by Richard Sullivan

N Y Times p4 Mr 30 '52 550w

New Yorker 28:137 My 3 '52 80w

Sat R 35:53 Je 7 '52 170w

Springf'd Republican p10C My 4 '52 130w

Wis Lib Bul 48:172 Jl '52

BURSK, EDWARD COLLINS, ed. Thinking ahead for business. 215p $3.25 Harvard univ. press

338.973 Economic conditions. Business conditions—Forecasting. World politics 52-5388

"This book is based on the proceedings of the Twenty-First National Business Conference, sponsored by the Harvard Business School Association, June 9, 1951. The purpose of the Conference was to consider the major political, economic and sociological forces throughout the world which promise to have such a profound effect on the future course of American business." The questions posed were: (1) 'What are the patterns and prospects of these forces?' and (2) 'What problems, opportunities, and responsibilities do they present to you—the American businessman—now and in years to come?' Accordingly, the presentation of the material here is divided into two parts: I—External Forces, and II—Internal Problems." (Pref) No index.

Reviewed by Henry Sowerby

Christian Science Monitor p9 Jl 15 '52 380w

"Effectively organized, the book makes stimulating reading. Selected bibliography by the Baker Library." J. E. Cross

+ Library J 77:598 Ap 1 '52 120w

Management R 41:555 Ag '52 70w

BURT, KATHARINE (NEWLIN) (MRS MAXWELL STRUTHERS BURT). Escape from paradise. 308p $3 Scribner

52-10736

The paradise was a large estate on the Hudson presided over by stout, lovable Aunt Kinny. Those who lived with her were the children Luke, Maggie, and Selena, with various others dependent on Aunt Kinny's wealth. The novel describes the love of both of the girls for the handsome, undependable Luke, and various "escapes" from the too loving care of Aunt Kinny.

Booklist 49:12 S 1 '52

Reviewed by Maureen Daly

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Jl 27 '52 200w

Kirkus 20:305 My 15 '52 160w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Ag 31 '52 140w

"Despite its intrigues and mystery, its suspense and adroit twists, the plot still never achieves the impact one waits for because the hard, gripping sense of reality is missing. Yet the author knows how to make the most of the haunting overtones of a remembered love that brings only pain. And she knows the devious way of a woman's heart." Andrea Parke

+ — N Y Times p14 Jl 20 '52 250w

San Francisco Chronicle p15 O 19 '52 180w

"Family secrets and skeletons play a large if not very convincing part, and the problems of having a lot of money are given a thorough airing. The time is the turn of the century but it seems more remote than that." E. J. Fitzgerald

Sat R 35:29 Jl 26 '52 160w

+ Wis Lib Bul 48:215 S '52

BURT, WILLIAM HENRY. Field guide to the mammals, giving field marks of all species found north of the Mexican boundary; text and maps by [the author]; il. by Richard Philip Grossenheider; sponsored by National wildlife federation and National Audubon society. 200p $3.75 Houghton

599 Mammals

52-8269

A compact guide to all species of mammals found north of the Mexican boundary. Has the easy system of field identification of species contained in the other Peterson field guide books. 187 species included, with photographs, distribution maps, weights and measurements, etc. for each. Index.

Booklist 49:6 S 1 '52

"With midwesterner Dr. Burt, the University of Michigan's distinguished professor of zoology, writing clean-cut, concise text and Mr. Grossenheider, the noted painter, excelling as an animal artist, this compact little book has everything an amateur nature fan will want in a study of American fauna. The maps showing where each animal may be found are another practical and helpful feature of this smart little book." Bob Becker

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ag 10 '52 120w

"The information has been compiled with skill, care and authority; the drawings, some in black and white, many in full color, by Richard Grossenheider, have the life and vitality that is inherent in the natural world." E. Y.

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Ag 14 '52
160w

"Recommended for all collections." V. K. Fitch

+ Library J 77:1668 O 1 '52 80w

San Francisco Chronicle p29 S 14 '52
130w

BURTON, MRS KATHERINE (KURZ), and RIPPERGER, HELMUT LATHAR. Feast day cookbook. 194p $3 McKay

641.5 Cookery 51-14834

"This is not just a directive for American eating holidays; it is the story of the feast days of the Christian church, their origin, the various customs with which they are observed in many lands and the traditional foods connected with each occasion. Beginning with the first of the year, the authors have followed the calendar—telling the tale of the days devoted to the saints and the martyrs as well as the more generally observed Easter, Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays." N Y Times

"For the collector of culinary memorabilia, the 'Feast Day Cookbook' is an interesting and informative volume. . . . However, the 100 or more recipes in the book have little appeal to the average homemaker. They may provide 'conversation pieces,' but the book definitely is for the library, not the kitchen." Morrison Wood

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p20 F 17 '52
70w

"Whatever the agreement, the collaborators have done an entertaining job that gives us a cookbook to read as well as to cook by. Good index. For all libraries." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 77:1202 J1 '52 30w

"The pleasant style with which the authors have presented historical facts and the dependable though not numerous recipes will appeal to those who like to read about food as well as cook it." Charlotte Turgeon

+ N Y Times p25 Mr 9 '52 240w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ja 28 '52
390w

"A rich book to dip into and copy from." Lawton Mackall

+ Sat R 35:70 Mr 8 '52 100w

BURT, EDWIN ARTHUR. Types of religious philosophy. rev ed 468p $4.50 Harper

201 Religion—Philosophy 51-11521

"This is a revised edition of Dr. Burt's well-known and widely used textbook, surveying both historically and from the side of contemporary interest various widely accepted 'philosophies of religion.' The changes which have been made for the new edition are largely by way of bringing descriptive and bibliographical matter up to date." (Crozer Q) For first edition see Book Review Digest 1939.

Booklist 47:402 J1 15 '51

"It is a useful and an objective volume. Many a student of philosophy and, above all, many a candidate for advanced degrees has found it helpful for its wide covering of the field; many more will find it so, in its new form." W. N. Pittenger

+ Crozer Q 29:76 Ja '52 410w

"Dr. Burt is fair to the variant philosophies—fair, that is, in the philosophical sense. His tone is considerate and polite, and while some may not agree with him, they will not be incensed. Read before buying."

Wis Lib Bul 47:247 N '51

BUSCH, FRANCIS XAVIER. Guilty or not guilty? (Notable American trials) 287p $3.50
Bobbs

343.1 Trials 52-5803

Contents: The trial of Leo Frank for the murder of Mary Phagan (1913); The trial of

D. C. Stephenson for the murder of Madge Oberholtzer (1925); The trial of Samuel Insull and others for the use of the mails to defraud (1934); The trials of Alger Hiss for perjury (1949-1950).

"Probably the greatest job of writing in the two volumes is the report on the two Alger Hiss trials—complex and confusing to the average newspaper reader, but presented with uncanny clarity and simplicity here." R. L. Blakesley

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Mr 23 '52
350w

"Although Mr. Busch does not attempt to document completely the sociological or political impact of these trials, he portrays the broader setting both accurately and vividly. Certainly, no one will emerge from the cases with a feeling of having read a dry court record or a shallow Sunday supplement piece." A. F. Westin

+ New Repub 127:19 Ag 25 '52 480w

Reviewed by James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Je 8 '52
150w

Reviewed by Meyer Berger

+ N Y Times p4 Mr 16 '52 230w

New Yorker 28:148 Ap 19 '52 70w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 F 26 '52
160w

BUSCH, FRANCIS XAVIER. Prisoners at the bar. (Notable American trials) 288p $3.50
Bobbs

343.1 Trials 52-5802

Contents: The trials of William D. Haywood and George Pettibone for the murder of ex-Governor Steunenberg of Idaho (1907); The trial of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti for the murder of Alessandro Berardelli and Frederick A. Parmenter (1921); The trial of Richard Loeb and Nathan Leopold for the murder of Robert ('Bobbie') Franks (1924); The trial of Bruno Hauptmann for the murder of Charles Lindbergh, Jr. (1935).

Reviewed by R. L. Blakesley

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Mr 23 '52
160w

Reviewed by A. F. Westin

New Repub 127:19 Ag 25 '52 480w

Reviewed by James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Je 8 '52
150w

"Perhaps his greatest achievement in these two intensely interesting volumes is his utter fairness even when he writes of defendants who seemed to have forfeited the right to such consideration. Mr. Busch writes warmly, yet without passion—a rare literary trick. . . . The reader who likes his crime accounts neat rather than watered down will be happily served at this bar." Meyer Berger

+ N Y Times p4 Mr 16 '52 230w

"Thorough and conscientious, but certainly not to be compared with the work of such masters of the genre as Roughead and Pearson."

New Yorker 28:148 Ap 19 '52 70w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 F 26 '52
160w

BUSCH, NOEL FAIRCHILD. Adlai E. Stevenson of Illinois; a portrait. 233p il $3.75
Farrar, Straus

B or 92 Stevenson, Adlai Ewing. Campaign literature, 1952 52-11089

Campaign biography of the fifty-two-year-old governor of Illinois, in 1952 Democratic candidate for the presidency. He is the "former newspaper man, lawyer and veteran of Washington's bureaucratic jungle who, in his first try for elective office, swept Illinois by 578,000 votes (when Truman was carrying the state by 34,000) and whom the author calls 'the best all-round political orator to appear on the U.S. scene' since Franklin Roosevelt." N Y Times

BUSCH, N. F.—Continued

Booklist 48:376 J1 15 '52

Bookmark 12:4 O '52 10w

"Mr. Busch relieved himself of most of the burden of doing a 233 page volume by the simple expedient of including 113 pages of Stevenson's writings and sayings. This is not remarkable, because the book admittedly was done in a hurry. The succession of errors and significant omissions starts on the cover flap with the assertion—evidently intended to be impressive—that Busch tells the Stevenson story 'after living in Springfield, Illinois, for many weeks.' William M. Blair, the governor's young assistant and tennis partner, says Busch was there 'most of two weeks, living in a hotel.'" George Tagge

— Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Ag 3 '52 550w

Reviewed by Harold Lancour

Library J 77:1304 Ag '52 110w

+ Manchester Guardian p4 O 22 '52 70w

"Governor Stevenson is fortunate in his biographer. Noel F. Busch has written a hasty but surprisingly detailed and fresh profile, both witty and low-keyed and far superior to the stodgy 'official' biography with which most candidates are ignobly endowed." Willard Shelton

+ Nation 175:55 J1 19 '52 550w

"Author Busch achieves his choice effects by understatement and amusing oblique twists: the disconcerting effect of highbrows Stevenson and Douglas on the run-of-mine Illinois Democratic precinct politicians, for example, must have been something. . . . Adlai Stevenson's views on practically every political subject are discussed in interviews; on most of them he takes a firm liberal position." Richard Strout

+ New Repub 126:20 Je 30 '52 1200w

New Statesman & Nation 44:460 O 18 '52 190w

Reviewed by G. W. Johnson

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Je 22 '52 1550w

"Readable, persuasive campaign biography. . . . Those who already have decided that Mr. Stevenson is the best available Democratic candidate will find in this book all the supporting arguments, including a carefully documented defense of how he came to make a deposition which favored Alger Hiss. Voters not yet committed are likely to be favorably impressed but left wondering if Mr. Stevenson is also tough enough to make the awful decisions which will confront the next President." Samuel Lubell

+ N Y Times p10 Je 22 '52 550w

"Mr. Busch, an old hand at smooth and somewhat glib topical biographies, has done a satisfactory job."

— New Yorker 28:83 J1 19 '52 180w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p15 J1 1 '52 850w

Reviewed by R. L. Neuberger

Sat R 35:11 J1 19 '52 600w

Times [London] Lit Sup p703 O 31 '52 500w

BUSH, CHRISTOPHER. Brackenford story, by Michael Home [pseud]. 278p $3.50 Macmillan

52-9007

Chronicle of sixty years in the life of an East Anglian county family. The time is from 1887 to the present day.

Booklist 48:221; 281 Mr 15 '52; My 1

"A leisurely, satisfying novel."

+ Bookmark 11:210 Je '52 30w

Reviewed by Riley Hughes

Cath World 175:390 Ag '52 290w

Reviewed by J. A. May

Christian Science Monitor p11 My 8 '52 500w

"Pictures in slow motion, with the elements that will provide a modern Galsworthy with substance for a better book. An evocative, nostalgic book, which one can read with quiet pleasure."

+ Kirkus 20:45 Ja 15 '52 270w

"Socialism, to [the author] is the way to death—and, though he tries, through his characters, to be fair to the Labor movement, his picture is an ugly one. This is a satisfying, if somewhat sobering book." Nancie Matthews

N Y Times p20 My 11 '52 300w

"All who care for the small things of England, the odd, the lovable, the tiresome small things will find quiet entertainment in 'The Brackenford Story.'" R. E. Roberts

+ Sat R 35:22 Je 7 '52 700w

BUSH, CHRISTOPHER. Case of the corner cottage. 240p $2.50 Macmillan

52-3554

Detective story.

Reviewed by Drexel Drake

Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 J1 27 '52 100w

"Slowpoke but solid."

+ Kirkus 19:668 N 15 '51 60w

"The crotchets of Ludovic Travers are less apparent than usual in this slow, palely ingratiating tale." James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p19 Ja 27 '52 100w

"Exasperating is The Case of the Corner Cottage with a 'surprise' solution which is at once over-obvious, implausible and brilliantly deduced by Ludovic Travers from a 'fact' concerning Catholic rosaries which happens to be flatly untrue." Anthony Boucher

— N Y Times p25 F 10 '52 90w

"Good specimen of the leisurely, soothing British school. C plus." L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p20 F 10 '52 50w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 35:48 Mr 15 '52 30w

BUSH, CHRISTOPHER. Case of the happy medium. 223p $2.50 Macmillan

52-3695

Detective story.

Booklist 49:126 D 1 '52

"Suavely narrated English detective yarn, with much insinuated droilery, some of it bright, some of it dull." Drexel Drake

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 S 7 '52 100w

Kirkus 20:476 Ag 1 '52 50w

"This is another of the candid garrulities of Ludovic Travers and an ingratiating example in a long and mellowing succession." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 S 14 '52 160w

N Y Times p18 Ag 17 '52 50w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p26 S 14 '52 60w

"As usual, too many characters; pace slow; handling conscientious." Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 35:35 Ag 30 '52 20w

BUTLAND, GILBERT JAMES. Chile; an outline of its geography, economics, and politics. 128p il maps $2.50 Royal inst. of int. affairs

933 Chile

51-14835

"This comprehensive outline gives the reader an up-to-date basis for an understanding of the country. The work includes a survey of the greatly contrasted geographical area which comprises the country, of its people and their educational process, and of the demographic processes. Chile's agricultural, industrial, financial and commercial framework is discussed in the light of the latest statistical evidence. An outline of Chilean history, with emphasis on events since 1925, provides an introduction to a consideration of its present political, economic and social structure." Current Hist

Am Pol Sci R 46:260 Mr '52 30w

"This little volume should appeal to the economist, geographer, political scientist interested in Latin America, and the industrialist interested in the Chilean market. The textual discussion is supplemented by seven simple, clear, effective maps and by many short statistical tables." C. F. Jones

+ Ann Am Acad 280:243 Mr '52 300w

"In these few pages the author has done an admirable job of amassing a multitude of facts about Chile."

+ Current Hist 22:169 Mr '52 100w

Foreign Affairs 30:509 Ap '52

"Gilbert Butland, a teacher who lived for years in Chile and who now teaches at Birmingham University, should be particularly commended for his emphasis on the way Chileans clung to democratic practices through depressions and revolutions." H. L. Matthews

+ N Y Times p13 Ag 17 '52 170w

BUTLER, GEORGE PAUL, ed. Best sermons, 1951-1952. (V5) 358p $3.75 Macmillan

252 Sermons (44-51581)

An anthology of current preaching. It consists of 52 sermons, selected from the 6,985 submitted to the editor. Index.

"They undoubtedly represent the best preaching today. Every clergyman will find them personally helpful as well as professionally useful. Dr. Butler, book and religious editor of the New York Mirror, has rendered a real service to the pulpits and congregations of America in this volume." C. L. Willard

+ Churchman 166:17 N 1 '52 40w

Kirkus 20:120 F 15 '52 170w

"Recommended for purchase by all libraries." O. G. Lawson

+ Library J 77:428 Mr 1 '52 70w

Reviewed by O. J. Aldrich

Springf'd Republican p4C J1 6 '52 120w

BUTLER, JAMES DONALD. Four philosophies and their practice in education and religion. 551p $4 Harper

190 [140] Naturalism. Idealism. Realism. Pragmatism 51-9485

"The picture of education and religion which emerges from this book is not a portrayal of a distinct philosophy for each; both are seen as phases of life in which all four philosophies (naturalism, idealism, realism, and pragmatism) are practices." (School & Society) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 47:231 Mr 1 '51

"Professor J. Donald Butler, of the Princeton Theological Seminary, has written a book which apparently is directed primarily at philosophers, educators, and religionists who might be interested in an examination of that relationship. He expresses the hope that the work may cause persons interested in each of these areas of thought to feel a proper respect for the other fields. It should also be of interest to the general reader." R. M. Helm

+ Crozer Q 29:207 Ap '52 650w

"With the exception of one or two criticisms, this reviewer cannot overexpress his enthusiasm for this book. It is the work of a genuine scholar, brilliantly organized and as readable as a good novel. . . He has made a significant contribution to the reuniting of educational theories and practices to their deeper foundations in theology and metaphysics and has thus provided his readers with a realistic experience of participating in vital philosophic thought. Although the author has achieved a remarkable balance in his presentation of the four major patterns of thought, he nevertheless betrays his bias for idealism long before he comes to the exposition of his own position in the concluding chapter." A. W. Painter

+ J Religion 32:212 J1 '52 600w

School & Society 73:79 F 3 '51 40w

BUTLER, JESSIE REHY'OLDT HAVER (MRS HUGH D. BUTLER). Time to speak up; a speaker's handbook for women; foreword by Nancy Astor. rev ed 261p $3 Harper

808.5 Public speaking 52-6279

A new edition of a book first published in 1946 (Book Review Digest 1947). "The revision incorporates brief helps on telecasting, platform dress, and installation procedure, and includes a chapter on propaganda." (Booklist) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 48:380 J1 15 '52

"An outstanding speaker herself, Jessie Haver Butler is well qualified to teach the art of public speaking, and in her book she shares this knowledge generously." Ethel Dexter

+ Springf'd Republican p4C Ag 31 '52 160w

BUTTERFIELD, HERBERT. History and human relations. 254p $3.50 Macmillan

901 History—Philosophy 52-7327

A series of essays on historiography and the philosophy of history by the professor of modern history at Cambridge. "The essays range from a candid analysis of the inevitability of conflict between two powers oriented as are the United States and the U.S.S.R. (regardless of the 'goodness' of their respective governments) to a consideration of the power of love—of God and of men—in human relationships." (N Y Times) No index.

"Eight widely ranging and wise essays." B. C. Shafer + Am Hist 58:156 O '52 380w

Booklist 48:226 Mr 15 '52

Reviewed by R. W. Albright
Christian Century 69:673 Je 4 '52 1050w

Reviewed by Paul Hutchinson

Christian Century 69:1129 O 1 '52 800w

"These reflections of an eminent historian and Cambridge don deserve to be read by every historian, and by everyone who agrees with Professor Butterfield that one cannot understand the whole of the present without understanding the whole of the past. . . This book shows Professor Butterfield to be a literary craftsman, for it is well written and interesting. The only complaints which might be lodged against it are concerned with matters of viewpoint." H. C. Hinton

+ Commonweal 55:524 F 29 '52 1050w

Current Hist 22:319 My '52 50w

"Here is learning and original thinking presented with such modesty that these collected lectures and essays have not even been deemed worthy of an index." G. J. Renier

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Ag 21 '51 550w

"The comments of an urbane and cultured man upon his craft almost always make for good reading, and this latest volume by the eminent historian Herbert Butterfield is no exception." C. F. Hovde

+ Nation 174:561 Je 7 '52 270w

"The book cannot be adjudged an authoritative deliverance in the field of history and human relations, which is a field of no inconsiderable area. But it is a strong plea for the objective approach, all the more effective because it is made with wit and grace, by an artist with words. And when Dr. Butterfield surveys the delinquencies of bad historians he is not merely a moralist; he is the sternest of Puritans." G. W. Johnson

+ New Repub 126:20 Mr 24 '52 800w

"Professor Butterfield's previous works had one defect. They were diffuse. They lacked bite and precision. His new book is his most effective. In form a collection of occasional pieces, it has the unity of a single theme. It discusses different aspects of the historian's task; and the essay-form has disciplined Mr. Butterfield, making his thought clearer and more compact. He is still not a brilliant writer, and this is all to the good." A. J. P. Taylor

BUTTERFIELD, HERBERT—Continued
+ New Statesman & Nation 42:594 N 24 '51 2200w

"To see a scholar setting limits to his own discipline is always a refreshing experience. It is one which awaits the reader of this series of essays." J. A. Pike
+ N Y Times p17 Mr 2 '52 370w
New Yorker 28:90 Je 28 '52 130w

"This book from a leading historian, distinguished alike by urbanity and a fine wit, is most welcome." John Trueman
+ Sat R 35:36 Mr 22 '52 290w

"A book that is rich in historical illustration, pungently written, and humble in tone. It should go far in preparing the reader to avoid many a pitfall while trying to understand the meaning of the issues and problems of our time." A. W. Roehm

+ Social Educ 16:345 N '52 550w

Reviewed by Keith Feiling
Spec 187:369 S 21 '51 1200w

"Stylistically, the reader has a treat in store for him, for this is lucid and cogent writing at its best. . . . Anyone who wants to discover how a reading of history can add a dimension of fresh meaning to the harassing life of our times, may well begin with these essays." Ordway Tead

+ Survey 88:235 My '52 300w

BUTTRICK, GEORGE ARTHUR. Faith and education. 136p $2 Abingdon-Cokesbury

370.1 Education—U.S. Church and education 52-5732

A critical examination of college and university education in America today. The author is pastor of the Madison Avenue Presbyterian church, New York city.

Bookmark 11:230 Jl '52 20w

"Here is a penetrating analysis of the inner motivations of education. American collegiate education in particular is his area of scrutiny. He writes with trenchant lines about the divorcement of religion from educational method and goal which has characterized the modern period." K. B. Cully

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Ap 27 '52 230w

Reviewed by W. L. Caswell
Churchman 166:12 S '52 250w

+ Kirkus 20:343 Je 15 '52 160w

"The voice is that of one of our most capable and respected clergymen, but he speaks the prophet's cry for a culture's self-examination—a cry against the church as well as against the school. Many will disagree with the book's thesis; some will desire additional qualifying statements. Yet can any ignore the issue?" Frederick Schumacker

N Y Times p19 Je 1 '52 260w

Reviewed by W. W. Brickman
School & Society 76:263 O 25 '52 200w
Time 59:68 My 19 '52 800w

BUZZATI, DINO. Tartar steppe; tr. by Stuart C. Hood. 214p $3 Farrar, Straus

52-11813

A short novel translated from the Italian. It describes the life of an Italian army officer, Drogo, who spends the thirty years of his military career stationed in a lonely border fort, waiting for the enemy to appear. When the invasion finally comes Drogo is no longer there; he is dying alone in a distant inn, too old to share in the battle he waited for so long.

Reviewed by Edmund Fuller
Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 S 7 '52 360w

"Highly recommended for collections which cover current fiction of distinction." R. E. Kingery

+ Library J 77:1405 S 1 '52 150w

Reviewed by Adrienne Foulke

Nation 175:391 O 25 '52 410w

"As some one must have said of Kafka's 'The Castle' when it first appeared, Dino Buzzati's 'The Tartar Steppe' is bound to be one of the strangest and one of the most provocative novels of the year. . . . The excellence of 'The Tartar Steppe' is proportional to the number of its stimulating ambiguities. Less vivid and less rich in implications than either 'The Trial' or 'The Castle,' nevertheless it compels one to think and to feel about many of the curious and cruel dilemmas in which most modern men are reluctantly involved." H. C. Webster

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ag 31 '52 370w

"Wonderfully well written, translated by Stuart Hood with grace and respect for the thought of the author, 'The Tartar Steppe' is a novel with philosophical overtones: bound to recall Kafka, Buzzati is at once more modest, less exciting, and more sane." Frances Keene

+ N Y Times p5 Ag 24 '52 550w

"A beautifully written novel. . . . Drogo, a nice, singularly inert man, is an understandable and pitiable figure, but at the last his plight arouses only a kind of impatient indifference, as though we had been witnessing—as, in fact, we have—a well-endured lifelong sickness, which ends, as we knew it would, in a silent, dignified death."

+ New Yorker 28:71 Ag 30 '52 110w

"It is a 'fabulous' tale, out of time and place in a familiarly surrealist world where symbols and things symbolized partake of the same fluidity, and in which insights are apprehended by mood and not ideas. . . . To refer to the surrealist mood of this work, however, is not to say that it is fragmentary in the sense that some of the best wild things of Cocteau are, or that it is episodic. It has a well-defined contour, and the narrative is altogether free of meaningless distracting complications." Serge Hughes

Sat R 35:13 S 6 '52 370w

"This is a well conceived and interesting piece of work, rising at moments to an eloquent symbolism. . . . Signor Buzzati offers a Mediterranean warmth and relative simplicity in place of the brain-spun fevers of Central Europe." R. D. Charques

+ Spec 188:378 Mr 21 '52 190w

Time 60:76 Ag 25 '52 800w

"Signor Buzzati, in spite of the comparisons with Kafka that his fort inevitably recalls, succeeds remarkably well in conveying the curious spell of military ritual, even when unrelated to action and divorced from reality. And, like The Eastern Gate, the Tartar Steppe holds the interest both as a novel of ideas and as the account of an ascetic military community."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p201 Mr 21 '52 450w

BYRNE, HOWARD. Without assignment; how to free lance in photography. 198p il col il $3.95 Pellegrini & Cudahy

770 Photography, Journalistic 51-12762

Advice on commercial photography by a journalist and photographer who has had wide experience in this country and abroad. No index.

Booklist 48:224 Mr 15 '52

Reviewed by R. V. Hamm

Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Ap 20 '52 80w

"The astute photographer brave enough to risk the chill rigors of free-lancing can benefit by the author's abundant experience and thus learn irrefutably what makes them tick, or fail. Kindred spirits who regard personal freedom as highly as this man does will be willing to go along with him on the hard road of free-lancing." D. A. P.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p27 Mr 23 '52 250w

C

CABELL, JAMES BRANCH. Quiet, please. 105p il $3 Univ. of Fla. press; for sale by Farrar, Straus 818' 52-7061

"An autobiographical memoir that seems at first to be the mumbbling harangue of an old man who has written fifty books and thinks he's been forgotten. This tone, however, turns out to be just some fractious kidding, and in the course of the book Mr. Cabell manages to touch on a wide variety of subjects. With discretion but unregenerate gusto, he tells off, like beads, his early love affairs with some of the flower of Virginia's womanhood; goes on to pass some literary judgments, largely in favor of J. B. C.; and relates how dispirited he was when he recently tried to reread Sir Walter Scott, one of his youthful heroes and literary models." New Yorker

Bookmark 11:129 Mr '52 30w

"This slim, exquisitely designed book belongs, not with the incomparable Cabell romances, but with such belles lettres as the 'Lives and Letters' series and the essay portions of the 'Biography of Manuel.' It has the familiar Cabell mixture of bleak disillusion and amused persiflage, with good sense and good humor persistently breaking in. But it is the most simply and directly personal of all his books." Edward Wagenknecht

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 F 17 '52 190w

"His prose is ever in the convoluted but richly sonoral, richly descriptive vein of his other works, fun to read and puzzle over, but obscuring to the novice Cabell reader."

Kirkus 20:101 F 1 '52 180w

"Recommended." E. F. Walbridge
+ Library J 77:529 Mr 15 '52 100w

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch
Nation 174:180 F 23 '52 750w

Reviewed by J. L. Davis
New Repub 126:21 Mr 24 '52 350w

Reviewed by F. H. Lyell
N Y Times p20 Mr 23 '52 900w

"All in all, a very civilized and amusing little caper."

+ New Yorker 28:109 F 23 '52 160w
Sat R 35:62 Je 14 '52 180w

"Ignore an egotist and he is apt to become petulant. This is especially true if he is a writer. James Branch Cabell, novelist and egotist, is today largely ignored. What makes it even worse is that he was once the critics' darling, and for a while, in the '20s, the public's too. His comedown has been so complete that the petulance of his 53rd book, Quiet, Please, can be forgiven."

Time 59:101 F 25 '52 850w

CADY, ERNEST. We adopted three. 250p $3.50 Sloane

362.73 Adoption 52-10307

Describes the Cadys' experiences in adopting three children, so that their son should not be an "only."

Bookmark 48:356 J1 1 '52

Bookmark 11:230 J1 '52 40w

Reviewed by F. D. Heron
Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 J1 13 '52 260w

"There is, perhaps, too much repetition, as well as a frequent effort to be determinedly colloquial; in addition there are quite a few gratuitous clinical details in regard to various physical problems. However, these are relatively minor items in contrast to the sound worth of the book as a whole, recording a greatly enriched home life, evidenced in the daily fruitage of warmth, love, gaiety, and companionship." M. W. Stoer

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 26 '52 450w

"Not a sociological treatise but a sincere, thoughtful and often amusing balance sheet of more than documentary interest."

+ Kirkus 20:218 Mr 15 '52 210w

"To any one hesitating about the adoption of a child, Ernest Cady's delightful book should bring reassurance. His and his wife's happy experience in adding three girls to their family through adoption would seem to indicate that adoption is both a practicable and a desirable method of acquiring the family nature or circumstances have denied." Frances Witherspoon

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 J1 13 '52 410w

Reviewed by Dorothy Barclay

N Y Times p26 O 5 '52 370w

"Mr. Cady's straightforward, friendly account of the experience should be required reading for any who are thinking of adopting a child, as also for those who have an adopted child or children already. And a lot of others will read it with pleasure and profit. This may well include those connected with adoption procedures, for Mr. Cady has some sound suggestions based on experience." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 My 27 '52 600w

Reviewed by Pamela Taylor

Sat R 35:28 S 13 '52 500w

Wis Lib Bul 48:169 J1 '52

CAFFREY, NANCY. Somebody's Pony; il. by Jeanne Mellin. 72p $2 Dutton

Ponies—Legends and stories 51-12809

"When a runaway pony finds its way to the farm, Jay and Jan are overjoyed, their only worry being that the owner will come to claim him. However, they enter him in a horse show, where they win blue ribbons and locate the owner." Library J

Booklist 48:107 N 15 '51

Kirkus 19:387 Ag 1 '51 60w

"Recommended." F. M. Hensley

+ Library J 76:1712 O 15 '51 80w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 F 10 '52 60w

Wis Lib Bul 47:258 N '51

CAIRNS, HUNTINGTON, and WALKER, JOHN, eds. Great paintings from the National gallery of art. 183p col pl $15 Macmillan

759 Paintings 52-14240

"[Presents] not only color reproductions of 85 of the gallery's most admired paintings but also a large number of excerpts from the literature of several nations and periods. These writings are matched with each picture in such a way as to complement or elucidate it or to reinforce its emotional impact." (Chicago Sunday Tribune) Forms a companion volume to Masterpieces of Painting, ed. by Cairns and Walker, in Book Review Digest 1944.

Booklist 49:138 D 15 '52

"Beautiful assemblage of Great Paintings. If one will sit down with it, turn the pages slowly—maybe once in half an hour or so—look, absorb and be absorbed, the result will be a great delight and, in the truest sense of the word, personal possession of these well chosen examples of the best in painting in the western world over a period of five centuries."

+ Cath World 176:239 D '52 180w

Reviewed by Edward Barry

Chicago Sunday Tribune p22 N 16 '52 200w

Reviewed by S. L. Faison

Nation 175:582 D 20 '52 270w

"A most satisfying new art picture book." Emily Genauer

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 D 7 '52 420w

"As with its companion volume published in 1944, the reproductions are large and comparatively excellent. The informative material is factual, reliable, perceptive and graceful and always faces the painting. . . And in most cases the selections are apt and engrossing. Give this book at least three stars." Aline Louchheim

CAIRNS, HUNTINGTON—Continued

+ N Y Times p44 D 7 '52 120w

"The reproductions, while at times a bit harsh in texture, are done with commendable fidelity."

New Yorker 28:182 D 13 '52 130w

Reviewed by Alfred Frankenstein

San Francisco Chronicle p3 N 30 '52 290w

"The selection of paintings from the National Gallery, Washington, D.C., suffers somewhat from its predecessor, a companion volume of color plates which included a good deal of the best of the collections. But if all the paintings are not of the high quality one has come to expect from this young and immensely rich museum, the reproductions are superb." T. B. Hess

+ — Sat R 35:12 D 20 '52 140w

CALAHAN, HAROLD AUGUSTIN. The sky and the sailor; a history of celestial navigation. 262p il $4 Harper

527 Navigation 52-5427

A history of the science of navigation from earliest times to the present. Glossary. No index.

Booklist 49:84 N 1 '52

"At times one feels the author's own stories are also mythical; there is as much speculation as fact (it becomes quite technical at times), but for lovers of the sea this book has its definite interest."

Kirkus 20:488 Ag 1 '52 160w

"Not all are going to agree with some things he has to say, but any navigator, would-be or actual, is going to be interested and informed. . . Mr. Calahan has written a serious volume, but in research but not heavy in treatment." C. B. Palmer

+ N Y Times p50 N 23 '52 450w

CALDWELL, ERSKINE. Courting of Susie Brown. 202p $3 Duell; Little

51-10889

Seventeen short stories, seven of which have appeared in previous volumes by the author. The remainder have been selected from various magazines.

Reviewed by Paul Engle

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Mr 2 '52 500w

"For the sake of moving friskily through his particular world of stunted, crotchety people, Caldwell squeezes most of what is normal out of his characters, leaving them with a residue—sometimes a highly comic residue—of 'humors' or fixed ideas. He works in the tradition of the tall tale; his humor is essentially frontier humor and reminds one of an animated cartoon, in which everybody goes around acting crazy." David Dempsey

N Y Times p4 F 17 '52 450w

"Seventeen trivial, topical stories by a man who writes with such blunt force that it is hard to believe he is saying next to nothing."

— New Yorker 28:109 F 23 '52 40w

"None of the seventeen short stories in 'The Courtship of Susie Brown' is new, and most of them are undistinguished. Seven—the best—have already been gathered into earlier collections. Of the rest, most have, in the author's words, been 'dormant and dusty' in the pages of magazines for ten years or more. I think he would have been well advised to have left them in that neglected state." E. J. Fitzgerald

Sat R 35:36 Mr 15 '52 180w

"The stories are at their best when Caldwell sticks to his happy flair for earthy comedy. . . Caldwell has less luck when he focuses on city people, and when he fumes with social indignation, the stories fall flat."

+ — Time 59:104 F 25 '52 50w

Wis Lib Bul 48:93 Mr '52

CALDWELL, ERSKINE. Lamp for nightfall. 211p $3 Duell; Little

52-5516

"Erskine Caldwell's latest novel illuminates some shadowy corners of backwoods Maine, where the conflict between old-stock 'petered-out' Americans and the more vigorous-blooded 'foreign element' can be as troublesome as a jug of hard cider at a wedding." N Y Times

Reviewed by Riley Hughes

— Cath World 175:234 Je '52 210w

"One of the regrettable aspects of the novel is that we are told every circumstance in the first chapter, so that the balance of the book is merely a demonstrating in particular events that the general issues stated at the beginning were actually true. This makes the novel far less a discovery than it should be. Combined with the transparent simplicity of the characterization, this makes 'A Lamp For Nightfall' a thin story with some fairly interesting moments." Paul Engle

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 J1 20 '52 280w

"A typically Caldwell story which leaves a bad taste."

— Kirkus 20:7 Ja 1 '52 160w

"A Tobacco Road for the State of Maine. . . 'A Lamp for Nightfall' is written crudely, and, for all its clumsy uncouthness, the tale lacks vitality. Mr. Caldwell simulates it, however, with various grotesque incidents. . . Mr. Caldwell has an excellent theme in 'A Lamp for Nightfall.' . . But he has here done little more than state and restate it, repetitiously." F. H. Bullock

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ap 27 '52 650w

"Caldwell followers willing to make the trek north will find the journey rewarding, although hardly a pioneering experience; the ingredients are standard Caldwell and to this reviewer at least they are beginning to run thin. . . Despite this—perhaps because of it (the reader is never sure)—Caldwell's story is not dull." David Dempsey

N Y Times p4 Ap 20 '52 450w

"Mr. Caldwell has made a desperately earnest attempt to write a startling novel about the inhabitants of a town called Clearwater, in Maine. He has not been successful."

— New Yorker 28:145 Ap 19 '52 20w

"Contains most of the Caldwell techniques for telling a gruesome, yet absorbing story, relieved only occasionally by a glimpse of primitive humor." Oliver Harrison

Sat R 35:37 My 3 '52 550w

— Time 59:118 Ap 21 '52 440w

CALDWELL, JANET TAYLOR (MRS MARCUS REBACK). Devil's advocate. 375p $3.50 Crown

52-5681

A novel of America in 1970 when an enslaved and oppressed people finally rise against their masters, the ruling powers of a totalitarian state, whose origin is traced back to the New Deal of the 1930s.

"The cops and robbers stuff Miss Caldwell handles with exemplary skill, but the rest is unfunny, and quite dangerous, nonsense." Riley Hughes

+ Cath World 175:313 J1 '52 260w

"Miss Caldwell has written a courageous book. As a novel, 'The Devil's Advocate' falls far below her best work. She develops her theme sensationally—and more than a little monotonously—and she attempts little in the way of characterization." Edward Wagenknecht

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 My 4 '52 300w

Kirkus 20:164 Mr 1 '52 200w

"The dangerous and ingenious program of Arthur Carlson and young Durant in Miss Caldwell's engrossing story, told with no claim to style but with great narrative ability and so earnestly that it makes of 'The Devil's Advocate' a novel to be thoughtfully read by Americans of all shades of political conviction." F. H. Bullock

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 My 4 '52 950w

"Arguments can assuredly be mounted against Welfareism, and Miss Caldwell's ledger remain as queen of the lending library is well-known. But this time she has simply out-punched herself. The fury of her interpretations of history vitiates whatever merit certain of her criticisms may contain—and gives to the shrill story illustrating them all the weight of a comic-strip." Charles Lee
— N Y Times p24 My 4 '52 400w

"The author seems occasionally to be arguing with herself. . . . Nevertheless, there is both excitement in the novel and common sense in Miss Caldwell's expositions of her hatred of war as the destroyer and enslaver of the common people and in her reiteration of the thesis that the impoverishment of men and the earth in the very act of preparing for war leads to tyranny and to the slow erosion of our liberties. It is a philosophical nightmare which does not have to be believed to be read avidly." Harrison Smith
Sat R 35:22 My 3 '52 850w
Time 59:104 Je 23 '52 400w

CALDWELL, JOHN COPE, and FROST, LESLEY. Korea story. 180p il $3 Regnery 951.9 U.S.—Foreign relations—Korea.
Korea—History 52-12564

The author, son of American missionaries, has served as a State department worker in both China and Korea. This book is a record of his experiences in Korea and a criticism of American policies there before the outbreak of war.

Reviewed by Frank Dell'Isola
Cath World 176:157 N '52 200w

Reviewed by Walter Simmons
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 O 5 '52 350w

"Mr. Caldwell has launched one of the most devastating attacks against the State Department's record in Korea that has yet been published. 'The Korean Story' is at times inaccurate; the author's strong feeling often leads him into the mistake of substituting emotional prejudice for objective analysis. But most of Mr. Caldwell's specific criticisms deserve close study. . . . Basically and from the standpoint of the broad picture, Mr. Caldwell's story merits close scrutiny. The book is colorful, absorbing, and well written." Gordon Walker
+ — Christian Science Monitor p9 O 1 '52 500w

Kirkus 20:445 Jl 15 '52 210w

Reviewed by H. P. Linton
Library J 77:1394 S 1 '52 100w

Reviewed by C. M. Wilbur
Nation 175:610 D 27 '52 500w

"In spite of its occasional bright spots, the book is a disappointment. It is written in a dismal combination of military, bureaucratic and journalistic jargon. It is narrow, because it is confined largely to the author's experiences and impressions. It is superficial, because its analyses seldom penetrate below the depth which even a second-rate reporter could attain after a short stop in an unfamiliar country. It is lacking in objectivity, because the author sees nearly everything in terms of black (the State Department and the Communists) and white (himself, his friends, and the missionaries), whereas, in reality, the Korea story was an extremely complex one, full of varying shades of gray." H. C. Hinton
— + N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 O 5 '52 750w

"Mr. Caldwell has not, of course, told the Korea story. That remains to be done. He has told a lively tale of small accomplishments, personal hardships and bumbling bureaucracy. He has demonstrated a broad sympathy for the Korean people, whose position in the frightful events of the still 'cold war' is best described by an ancient Korean proverb: 'When the whales fight the shrimps get hurt.'" R. J. H. Johnston
+ — N Y Times p37 S 28 '52 450w

"On the whole this is a bitter book and yet not without its message of hope, for Mr. Caldwell is firm in his belief that the peoples of Asia can be won to our side if we will only give up the stupid assumption that friendship can be bought." George Creel

San Francisco Chronicle p21 O 5 '52 1000w

"Each reader will have to judge for himself as to the accuracy of Mr. Caldwell's observations, but since this book is the product of one who was actually on the scene it at least seems to deserve thoughtful consideration, since if the charges which the author makes are correct in any large measure they would seem to have considerable value as a guide for future American diplomatic activities in distant quarters of the troubled world." H. H. Spring'd Republican p10D O 5 '52 200w

Reviewed by Rupert Emerson
Yale R n s 42:285 winter '53 270w

CALDWELL, TAYLOR. See Caldwell, J. T.

CALITRI, CHARLES J. Rickey. 216p $2.75
Scribner

52-11386

Psychological novel describing the events leading up to a murder trial in which the protagonist is an appealing boy of fifteen. The trial and its outcome are included.

Kirkus 20:330 Jl 1 '52 130w

"This first novel, of powerful, dramatic intensity, is written with genuine social consciousness. Absorbing as a tale, it arouses many questions concerning juvenile delinquency, family life. . . . An excellently portrayed psychiatrist brings understanding. A 'nasty' subject, but treatment is wholesome and enlightening." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 77:1302 Ag '52 50w

"Mr. Calitri tells Rickey's story simply, without scientific jargon, though he is dealing with emotions and motives that very few except the scientists have been able to approach directly and objectively. This is an unusual novel that could have been written only by a man who likes and deeply understands people, especially young people. Though it encompasses murder and mystery and has its mainspring in subjective forces, it is unlike any whodunit or 'psychological novel' I have met. This is apparently Mr. Calitri's first novel. It is to be hoped that he will soon give us another book." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ag 17 '52 340w

"Readers from two camps will be drawn to Mr. Calitri's novel. The devotees of the mystery thriller will find suspense, violence and plenty of such familiars as the cynical reporter, the crooked politician and detective squad heavies. Those who thrill to the performance of a subtler kind of detective, the psychiatrist tracking motive to its psychological lair, will likewise find God's plenty." J. A. Winterbottom

+ N Y Times p14 Ag 17 '52 280w

"Mr. Calitri has constructed an unimpeachable Freudian case history. Without rancor he places the blame for Rickey's crime upon his parents, his teachers, his friends, his whole environment. . . . However, right as his case against these others may be, it does not absolve Rickey of all responsibility and the author errs in implying that it does. In his anxiety to save the tree, Mr. Calitri has in his brilliant first novel, cut down the forest." W. H. Baker

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p23 S 2 '52 600w

"Arrestingly tense first novel. . . . At times the case-history aspects of the story become too obtrusive, but in general, by artfully rounding his characters and managing the elements of suspense, the author takes this hurdle successfully, and produces a novel of absorbing interest and power that excites our compassion and deepens our understanding of the problems he has chosen." Martin Rice

CALITRI, C. J.—Continued

+ Sat R 35:15 Ag 16 '52 350w

Spring'd Republican p16C S 14 '52 100w

CALKINS, CLINCH (MRS MARK MERRELL). Calendar of love. 303p $3.50 Simon & Schuster

52-12496

"A novel of two families—the Fleets and the Porters—from the time of their weddings (both couples were married on the same day in 1925) to just after the bombing of Hiroshima. Miss Calkins takes us through their early close friendship in Philadelphia, to their reconciliation after an estrangement, in Washington, and finishes with a paean in praise of love, youth, and general tolerance." New Yorker

Booklist 49:141 D 15 '52

"A casual, occasionally bright daybook which touches off a sequence of familiar circumstances and some common concerns. For women."

+ Kirkus 20:385 J1 1 '52 180w

"An extremely interesting novel. . . Recommended for pay rental collections. Await demand for free circulation." George Freedley

+ Library J 77:1504 S 15 '52 60w

"Sometimes one feels that the course of Miss Calkins' narration is almost too imperturbable, for its own good, that its situations are too pat and its language occasionally too precious. Life, as Miss Calkins' characters live it out, has few surprises, but it contains tragedy and comedy aplenty, and many people may be reminded by her chronicle of almost forgotten chapters of their own." Herbert Kuperberg

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 O 5 '52 350w

"Miss Calkins leaves behind the homes which cradle the bulk of her story in order to chronicle the burning and the squalling infant days of the N. R. A. . . It is a scene which has rarely been used to its fullest in fiction, and it is a rewarding one. Miss Calkins does not, however, let the reader long rejoice in her successful venture into bureaucracy. The book's main action returns, all too soon, to the Fleet and Porter homes. In subject-matter, the author is working the lodes that produce women's magazine fiction. This is not to say she brings up the same ore." Trudie Osborne

+ N Y Times p25 O 12 '52 370w

"The writing is gentle and womanly, the people involved are all average, and the atmosphere is wholesome and unexciting."

+ New Yorker 28:152 O 11 '52 50w

"Calendar of Love is not a uniformly successful book, but it has more perception, more of a sense of life responsibly lived, than most of the novels one reads. Miss Calkins' style is admirable." Paul Pickrel

+ — Yale R n s 42:16 winter '53 300w

CALKINS, FAY. CIO and the Democratic party. 162p $4 Univ. of Chicago press

329.02 Congress of industrial organizations. Democratic party. Politics, Practical

52-12225

"The author is research assistant for the National CIO Political Action committee, but hers is a coldly impartial, first hand report on CIO-PAC projects in Chicago, Rockford, Ohio, and Michigan. Her analyses of what succeeded, or failed, and why, are well done reminders of what makes every political machine produce votes. There is not a trace of partisan argument." (Chicago Sunday Tribune) Bibliography. No index.

Booklist 49:26 S 15 '52

"This is a terse, practical volume of only 160 pages, which can be instructive to anyone seriously planning political action of any kind.

Despite its brevity, the book does a thoro job on political ways and means." G. H. Tagge

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p16 S 14 '52 80w

"Her scholarly approach does not dim her rather lively style. A book that should be of interest even after election is over." D. K. Oko

+ Library J 77:2004 N 15 '52 130w

"It is fundamentally honest and factual, admirably so in light of the fact that Miss Calkins has been personally and ideologically associated with the CIO." H. F. C.

+ New Repub 127:21 S 1 '52 450w

Reviewed by Daniel Bell

N Y Times p16 O 26 '52 330w

"Very timely and scholarly first-hand study of how pressure groups operate on our political parties." L. B.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 O 26 '52 160w

Reviewed by L. L. L. Golden

Sat R 35:21 N 15 '52 140w

CALLAHAN, CLAIRE WALLIS (NANCY HARTWELL, pseud). Who was Sylvia? il. by Edward J. Smith. 201p $2.50 Holt

52-9042

Mvstery story for junior high school girls.

Booklist 49:143 D 15 '52

Reviewed by Lucile Pannell

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 N 16 '52 110w

Kirkus 20:510 Ag 15 '52 170w

"Well-written, enriched by the heroine's interest in music and good recordings and by wholesome family life, boy-girl relationships, and discriminating values. Useful addition to reading for junior-high music appreciation and for young people's collections." M. K. Walraven

+ Library J 77:1668 O 1 '52 70w

"Sylvia's adventure in self-discovery is ingeniously compounded of a number of reliable ingredients: a mystery, career interest, and romance. The reasons for her loss of identity are not entirely convincing, but they furnish the basis for a story which is consistently entertaining." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p40 O 5 '52 170w

"Miss Hartwell treats her characters with sympathy, humor and understanding."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 D 7 '52 50w

Spring'd Republican p5C D 21 '52 80w

CALLAHAN, NORTH. Smoky Mountain country. (American folkways) 257p $4 Duell; Little 976.889 Great Smoky mountains 52-6783

"An informal history beginning with John Sevier and his pioneers; pointing up events concerning Andrew Jackson, James K. Polk, Andrew Johnson; regaling us with tales of the 'War of the Roses' Tennessee gubernatorial campaign; and bringing us up-to-date with Great Smoky Mountains National Park, T.V.A., Oak Ridge, and Estes Kefauver." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 48:357 J1 1 '52

Bookmark 11:238 J1 '52 10w

Reviewed by Russell MacFall

Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 S 14 '52 260w

"The author avoids the formality that would stamp his book as a sociological 'study,' but its matter is as substantial as its manner is agreeable."

+ Christian Century 69:1032 S 10 '52 100w

"It is a sort of clothesline history on whose chronological strand are hung not only the dress events of Smoky Mountain times but the garments of ordinary living. . . The book is a true story of a great awakening and a fine addition to the American Folkways Series." T. M. Longstreth + Christian Science Monitor p7 Ag 7 '52

420w

"Here is history in a pleasant amount, told with pleasant humor."
+ Kirkus 20:252 Ap 1 '52 170w

"Presents an intelligent interpretation in a readable, lively and thoroughly entertaining manner." E. P. Nichols
+ Library J 77:1194 J1 '52 100w

"Mr. Callahan, in this volume of the American Folkways Series, has told the story well, as befits a man born and raised in East Tennessee." Sylvia Stallings
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Je 15 '52
850w

"In crisp and readable style, North Callahan gives here a highly entertaining account of a people and countryside where log cabin and linsey-woolsey frock, hillbilly music and early American legends still dwell cheek by jowl with the Tennessee Valley Authority's twenty-six river dams and the Oak Ridge atomic energy installation." J. N. Popham
+ N Y Times p4 J1 6 '52 460w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles
San Francisco Chronicle p10 Ag 10 '52
420w

"North Callahan is a native of this area and writes with a pleasant nostalgic desire to escape his New York quarters and return whenever possible. . . Unfortunately the author is not as much at home with the historical narrative as he is with the generation of his father and himself. His research is incomplete and his writing marred by fundamental errors of fact." J. W. Livingood
+ Sat R 35:33 J1 12 '52 550w

Reviewed by Ethel Dexter
Springf'd Republican p6D Ag 3 '52
360w

CAMDEN, CHARLES CARROLL. Elizabethan woman. 333p il $4.50 Elsevier

396 Women in England. England—Social life and customs 52-5665

"Written by a scholar, this [is a] revealing picture of woman's emancipation after the Renaissance. Mr. Camden has used every source and has added contemporary drawings to illustrate the never dull text." Library J

"More than entertaining for the general reader. . . Adequate notes and index and beautiful make-up enhance the delight of this useful book. For general purchase." K. T. Willis
+ Library J 77:1394 S 1 '52 40w

"A sober and scholarly book based upon exhaustive research, especially in the Folger and Huntington libraries, but it will be without interest only in those places, if there are any, where women are not discussed." J. W. Krutch
+ Nation 175:195 S 6 '52 1050w

Reviewed by Margaret Evans
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 S 7 '52
550w

"Mr. Camden's book is fascinating reading in its own right, and a rich mine of lore for the historian and the novelist. The next novel of the Elizabethan scene will be the better because of it." Lillian De La Torre
+ N Y Times p16 S 7 '52 400w

New Yorker 28:119 S 27 '52 120w

"What the English woman was like when England was young and 'merry' and when there was a special delight in living is what Mr. Camden writes about in this book, beautiful in format, which carries its learning lightly." J. V.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 O 12 '52
310w

CAMERON, FRANK THOMAS. Cottrell, samaritan of science; foreword by Ernest O. Lawrence. 414p $4.50 Doubleday

B or 92 Cottrell, Frederick Gardner 52-5532

"Anyone acquainted with the term electrical precipitation is equally familiar with the name

Cottrell. However, the familiarity usually ends with the name, for up to now little has been known regarding the inventor of the process whereby valuable products are salvaged from the smoke stacks of industrial plants. In this excellent biography we get an insight into Frederick G. Cottrell's almost endless contributions to applied science, his boundless curiosity and enthusiasm for all things scientific, and his ability to recognize and solve the seemingly unsolvable." (Library J) Index.

"Careful and understanding biography."
A. B. Lamb

+ Am Chem Soc J 74:5237 O 20 '52 1150w
Booklist 48:246 Ap 1 '52

Bookmark 11:180 My '52 30w

"Dr. Cottrell's life will be an inspiration to future scientists, and it is fortunate that Mr. Cameron has preserved the record of it in such a readable form." Farrington Daniels
+ Chem & Eng N 30:2646 Je 23 '52 500w

Reviewed by H. C. Parmelee
Chem Eng 59:320 Ap '52 1000w
Kirkus 20:24 Ja 1 '52 200w

"Recommended." J. E. Brown
+ Library J 77:428 Mr 1 '52 130w

"Mr. Cameron, as a result of two years of work, with access to Cottrell's letters and diaries, has given us a vivid and human picture of this remarkable man, a real idealist, who could write his wife that 'I undoubtedly don't feel the ties of kinship in as forceful a way, compared to the ties of humanity as a whole, as many people.'" James Stokley
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ag 31
'52 750w

"In preparing this biography, Mr. Cameron, a free-lance writer, was allowed to read the scientist's diaries, kept for forty years prior to his death in 1948, and some 10,000 letters. The chapter on his student days in Germany is enriched with quotations from this correspondence. Inclusion of such material gives the book a subjective, and at times almost autobiographical, quality." Hillier Kriehbaum
N Y Times p7 Mr 30 '52 900w

"Mr. Cameron has done remarkably well in portraying some of the more significant of Cottrell's manifold activities." H. A. Spoehr
+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Mr 23 '52
1000w

Reviewed by Boyden Sparkes
Sat R 35:18 My 3 '52 1000w

"The biography is done in a highly readable style, and achieves an excellent balance between the description of Cottrell's colorful personal career and the scientific work which has made him so prominent a figure in this country's technological development."
+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:113 Je '52 240w

CAMERON, MERIBETH ELLIOTT, and others. China, Japan and the powers; with a foreword by Kenneth Scott Latourette. 682p $6.50 Ronald 950 Eastern question (Far East). China—Foreign relations. Japan—Foreign relations 52-6194

"Three history professors have compiled this intelligent study to provide material for an understanding of the 'revolution of fundamental importance . . . occurring throughout the Far East.' They first give a background survey of the culture and history of China and Japan, and then pass the emphasis to politics, government, and foreign relations up into 1951." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 48:318 Je 1 '52

"To aid us in understanding the nature of our present deep involvement in the Far East, the authors of this volume have provided an excellent background of pertinent information."
+ Current Hist 23:126 Ag '52 110w

"The book, heavily factual, is designed for the college student, but has the general reader also in mind. A generous amount of black type, indentations, and other typographical devices and a detailed index facilitate its use

CAMERON, M. E.—Continued
as a text and reference; a clear, smooth style helps all around." H. P. Linton
+ Library J 77:1196 J1 '52 100w
Reviewed by J. K. Fairbank
New Repub 127:22 Ag 25 '52 290w

CAMERON, NORMAN ALEXANDER, and MAGARET, ANN. Behavior pathology [under the editorship of Leonard Carmichael]. 645p $5 Houghton

132 Psychology. Pathological 51-12306

"The rise of twentieth century behavior pathology has been characterized by two developments which hold the promise of a solution for this situation. One is a tremendous growth of interest in the genesis of symptoms and their utilization as defense, aggression or evasion; the other is an increasing realization that therapy in this field is fundamentally a process of maturation and learning. . . . These two interrelated trends have brought into prominence the basic importance of social learning in the genesis of behavior pathology and in the modification or elimination of its phenomena. . . . This book is an expression of these trends." (Pref) Name and subject indexes.

"This book should give new stature to American psychiatry. The work is no clarion call for the faithful to rally around a new psychiatric ideology with its therapeutic trappings—something quite common in these hectic days—but rather is a sober, systematic, empirically grounded, and logically ordered scientific treatise on the development of those behavior forms which are regarded in our society as pathological." H. W. Dunham

+ Am Soc R 17:372 Je '52 1050w

U S Quarterly Bk R 7:394 D '51 240w

CAMERON, OWEN. Catch a tiger. 213p $2.50
Simon & Schuster

52-12460

Detective story.

Kirkus 20:389 J1 1 '52 50w

"This is certainly one of the most strikingly successful tales of this mystery year, in spite of the essential familiarity of its materials and because the author has realized them all freshly in that small town setting in Northern California." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 S 28 '52
90w

"Mr. Cameron has limited his focus to three essential characters of a murder case. . . .
There is violence here, quiet, underplayed and deadly; there is sex and suspense and every other needful ingredient. But what you will remember are these three portraits and particularly that of Jake—as satisfactorily detailed a full-length study as any detective has sat for in years." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p41 S 28 '52 140w

"Intensely human and three-dimensional, this story sounds as if it had really happened, and builds with slow power to a climax of honest suspense." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 O 5 '52
130w

CAMERON, OWEN. Mountains have no shadow. 244p $2.75 Harper

51-11891

The story of a present-day murder and man-hunt in a mountain town in California.

Booklist 48:228 Mr 15 '52

"A lean and muscular type of narrative from the first page to the last." Henry Cavendish
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Mr 30 '52
470w

Kirkus 20:13 Ja 1 '52 130w

"Out of this situation, Mr. Cameron fashions a rousing good story, which avoids melodrama because its action develops from always credible characterization. We know enough about these people to believe in what happens to them. Covering a sequence of only eleven days, 'The Mountains Have No Shadow' has the compactness of a short story." Martin Levin

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ap 13
'52 240w

"A rapidly moving and highly readable book. But after you finish it, you may have a few disturbing thoughts. Does the motivation quite stand up? Shouldn't murders, perhaps, be left to those specialists the writers of mysteries? Are as many people as despicable as they appear to be in this story? . . . Technically, Mr. Cameron shows excellent qualities as a novelist. He characterizes surely, shifting the point of view as he finds necessary.
The background, apparently the foothills of northern California, stands out sharply, and is highly suggestive, even in its place-names, of the region of the author's home in Shasta County." G. R. Stewart

+ N Y Times p5 Mr 16 '52 450w

"In a note on the book's jacket, Walter van Tilburg Clark suggests that this novel reflects 'real, organized democracy, working out its own justice.' I am not at all sure about that; in fact, I disagree completely, as I think many others will. But I am wholeheartedly with Mr. Clark when he adds that Mr.
Cameron's novel has 'the force of a classic tragedy.' It has, and in the same ways. Mr.
Cameron is a first-rate writer." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Mr 26 '52
950w

Sat R 35:45 Je 21 '52 170w

"A most dramatic story, filled with suspense and action, and expertly written." R. F. H.
+ Springfield Republican p10D Ap 6 '52
130w

CAMP, CHARLES LEWIS. Earth song; a prologue to history. (Chronicles of California)
127p il maps $5 Univ. of Calif. press

560.9764 Paleontology. Geology—California
52-13705

The story of the earth's surface as the story is told in California's own "dis-ordered mass of fragments of the past." Contains maps and figures, a glossary, and index.

Reviewed by Russell MacFall

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 D 21 '52
100w

Kirkus 20:677 O 1 '52 230w

"Like California, it has everything: excellent drawings of extinct animals, well-considered diagrams, clear explanations of difficult geological principles. It also has some very high-flying language. . . . Some readers may be enchanted by this style, others will be exasperated."
J. N. Leonard

+ N Y Times p18 O 26 '52 350w

"Mr. Camp knows his subject but has also a sense of the significant fact. You may be surprised, moreover, to find him something of a poet as well as a paleontologist. The various sections of the book are prefaced by brief paragraphs—mood pieces, so to say—that lean well toward the lyric-dramatic in their task of scene-setting. They do the job very successfully too." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 N 6 '52
800w

CAMPBELL, CLYDE MEVERIC, ed. Practical applications of democratic administration.
325p $3 Harper

370.1 Education. Democracy 52-5428

"The first four chapters of the volume set the theme, the idea of educational leadership in a free society. The next seven chapters make concrete applications, spelling them out in detail. Two concluding chapters bring the reader back to initial starting points. . . . While the authors are not identified as to place and title, they are all Michigan school men of one sort or other. Case examples are confined pretty much to local improvement programs under way or just ended in that state." (Am Soc R) Index.

"The book has been written as a college text. Its title is definitive, exactly so. There are ideas in these 325 pages, a good selection of sociological and psychological concepts. Chapter bibliographies are good, as are the questions for discussion. The book has feeling, notably in Part I, giving to ideas a common lift, an incentive to learn more, an urge to try out." L. A. Cook

+ Am Soc R 17:637 O '52 400w

Booklist 48:274 My 1 '52

"The book is one to which most present and future school administrators should have access. Each chapter has a good bibliography, which should be helpful to those seeking further information on all the aspects of democratic leadership. While the book has some weaknesses, inherent in a book to which many people contribute, it gives sufficient material to make all who have responsibility for educational leadership aware that democracy is more than a word—it is a way of living and working together." M. L. Berge

+ El School J 53:177 N '52 600w

School & Society 75:207 Mr 29 '52 30w

CAMPBELL, JOHN WOOD, comp. Astounding science fiction anthology. See Astounding science fiction (periodical)

CAMPBELL, JOSEPH, ed. See Arabian nights entertainments. Portable Arabian nights

CAMPBELL, ROY. Light on a dark horse; an autobiography (1901-1935) [il. by the author]. 312p $4 Regnery

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 52-12844

The first half of this autobiography of a South African poet is an account of the author's childhood and youth in Natal and Rhodesia, and a picture of Bohemian London in the '20s; the second half is about the author's experiences later in France and Spain. No index.

"It is so clear from the outset that Campbell is magnificent—tops in anything he undertakes—that there is no suspense, the issue of every episode bound to be success for the hero. This may be true; it is nonetheless rude, and the style is often crude. Part of the rudeness is no doubt deliberate. . . . There is some truth here, and any man is entitled to his opinions and prejudices. But Campbell throws his out with too much bombast, and apparently too much haste." R. M. Ames

+ Cath World 176:238 D '52 200w

"Roy Campbell is surely one of the 'most unforgettable characters' a person could ever meet, whether on or outside the covers of a book. His current fractional autobiography is unhesitatingly recommended as a feast of spectacular episodes, unified by a reckless, courageous personality of tremendous gusto." A. C. Ames

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 O 12 '52 400w

"All of this is rather old hat, reminiscent at times of Hemingway, at others of Ezra Pound. . . . At a guess, it is more likely to offend than attract."

+ Kirkus 20:399 Jl 1 '52 150w

"Fast action, unusual settings and characters, and graphic details are the strong points of the book." Clarence Gorchels

+ Library J 77:1810 O 15 '52 90w

"His more violent attitudes may strike some as self-consciously romantic, but there is really little evidence in this book to suggest that they are anything other than the natural expression of an uncommonly ebullient personality. Even the unrestrained sounding of his own wreathed horn is in the old epic tradition and perfectly in character. This must irritate a good many people, especially old enemies who get a blast full in the ear, but it has at least the virtue of complete naturalness—forceful, but unforced." Iain Hamilton

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Ja 15 '52 650w

"Roy Campbell is innocent. It is not only the number of dashing things he does but the confident candor with which he beholds himself doing them that makes his book so ingratiating. I cannot imagine anyone reading 'Light on a Dark Horse' and not wishing for half an hour that he had been the author." Robert Phelps

+ Nation 175:360 O 18 '52 430w

"Half of this autobiography is a superb account of a childhood and youth . . . the other half, which describes quarrelling with men, bulls and horses in France and Spain, is nothing like as good." V. S. Pritchett

+ New Statesman & Nation 43:17 Ja 5 '52 1200w

"He writes well of his childhood; thereafter the record grows dim, and we see him only in sudden flashes, now roaring in the Cafe Royal, now living a carefree life among Mediterranean fishermen, now pursuing some hapless Socialist until they are locked in one another's arms, fighting a duel." Robert Payne

+ N Y Times p21 S 14 '52 700w

"A dazzling narrative of adventure by a man who is entirely sui generis and can write like a streak."

+ New Yorker 28:179 O 18 '52 150w

Reviewed by Kenneth Young

Spec 188:272 F 29 '52 800w

"It conveys a lively and convincing picture of Mr. Campbell's character and the life he has led. Characteristic high spirits set the tone of the narrative, but in spite of this sometimes rather aggressive heartiness and unabashed egotism of manner, a number of stimulating points emerge, while sympathy is hard to withhold from a story so entirely different from many of the volumes of autobiographical experience from time to time offered to the public by men of letters."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p819 D 21 '51 1500w

CAMPBELL, WALTER STANLEY (STANLEY VESTAL, pseud). Joe Meek, the merry mountain man; a biography. 336p il $5 Caxton ptrs.

B or 92 Meek, Joseph Lafayette 52-5211

Life story of Joseph L. Meek, who in 1828 left his Virginia home to become a beaver-trapper, explorer and Indian fighter in the Rockies. After a strenuous life in the Oregon territory, where he served as sheriff, legislator, and U.S. marshal, he died in 1875. Bibliography. No index.

Booklist 48:338 Je 15 '52

"An early American portrait which has vigor and vitality, to which Vestal lends a practised hand and an established name."

+ Kirkus 20:145 F 15 '52 170w

Reviewed by Lewis Nordyke

N Y Times p12 Ag 10 '52 150w

"The best of his 18 published books. . . . That this is the best of Vestal's books is no more nor less than purely personal opinion. However, in handling the life and times of Joe Meek . . . Vestal foregoes his sometime dependence upon exaggerated idiom, scene and event and relies upon a sure reportorial sense to make his impact felt as the impact of Joe Meek. Vestal uses his considerable skill to lubricate the story of a man's life and in Joe Meek's life, lubrication is as necessary to the story as it was to Joe—He seemed to take his sins so easylike." W. H. Hutchinson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Je 25 '52 800w

"It is too bad this excellent book by a master of frontier literature does not contain a map, so that the reader can follow Joe Meek's doughty wanderings, from the District of Columbia to the mouth of the Columbia River." R. L. Neuberger

+ Sat R 35:21 Jl 12 '52 750w

"Biographer Vestal is an old hand at getting the best out of western frontier material, and has done well by his latest hero, who is one of the saltiest and most cheerful border dwellers to appear in the rapidly-increasing literature on the old West." R. F. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p10D Je 22 '52 200w

CAMPBELL, WALTER STANLEY (STANLEY VESTAL, pseud). Queen of cowtowns, Dodge City; the wickedest little city in America, 1872-1886. 285p $3.50 Harper

978.1 Dodge City, Kansas. Frontier and pioneer life—Kansas 51-11962

"For at least a decade, from the middle 1870s to the middle 1880s, Dodge City, Kansas, was the 'wickedest little city in America' and took a certain perverse pride in that fact. . . In his new book Stanley Vestal who has been re-searching the West and writing about it for many years, tells something of Dodge's story. His book is not a full history of the town. Instead, Mr. Vestal has cooked up a pudding of Dodge at its wildest and that pudding consists almost wholly of plums—episode, anecdote, incident, mostly violent and one treading on the heels of the next." San Francisco Chronicle

Booklist 48:194 F 15 '52

Reviewed by Paul Engle

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 F 10 '52
350w

Kirkus 19:674 N 15 '51 130w

"For many years Mr. Vestal has been writing the saga of the old Southwest, and holding fast to the record without even a side glance at Hollywood. Thus one finishes his present work with the satisfied feeling of having been made acquainted with the place that actually existed, and was likely pretty much as it appears in the book; and not a mirage concocted for film. There are several old photographs of Dodge and its characters. Each chapter is documented." Stewart Holbrook

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 F 24 '52
750w

"The phenomenon of Dodge, alias 'Hell on the Plains,' in the Seventies and Eighties, is both a dime novel and a document in our social history. Mr. Vestal astutely plays it soft and quiet, presenting the documented facts, leaving his reader free to make of them what he will. The result is a clear, almost eyewitness account of one of our country's most flamboyant moments." Horace Reynolds

+ N Y Times p6 F 10 '52 500w

"Those interested in the West's past, men especially, will find much to entertain them in Mr. Vestal's book. They'll learn some history, too, and, in its way and of its kind, quite a bit of sociology—though this wasn't what they called it then." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 F 1 '52
650w

"A good guide makes a good tour. Stanley Vestal is a splendid guide; his Dodge City is a real and vital place to him; not only does he make the reader see images of past action, usually rough and often brutal, but he can quote authorities, reminiscences, courthouse records, and tombstone epitaphs, as well as the best secondary writers, to validate his stories." W. P. Webb

+ Sat R 35:13 F 23 '52 700w

Springf'd Republican p22A Mr 2 '52
210w

Wis Lib Bul 48:90 Mr '52

CAMPBELL, WILLIAM EDWARD MARCH (WILLIAM MARCH, pseud). October island. 246p $3 Little

52-9778

"Somewhere in the Pacific lies a lush Eden, called October Island, where the world was created by the two Gods Raha and Baat. This island's people, happy and content, lived for centuries, following their religion of sensuous Hedonism. Missionaries came and went as did archaeologists making no changes; then the missionary Barnfields arrived and from their coming things begin to happen." Library J

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo

Atlantic 190:110 N '52 130w

Booklist 49:67 O 15 '52

"'October Island' is told without so much as a visible smile on the face of the author. Yet it is brilliantly amusing, and, fundamentally, it is a pointed commentary on a way of life esteemed by many Americans. As a novel it is best described as a civilized diversion which will be treasured by many of its readers." August Derleth

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 O 19 '52
240w

"There is quiet and often barbed irony in this subtly humorous tale, and those who take it seriously may be offended. An off the beaten track bit, not for every reader."

Kirkus 20:514 Ag 15 '52 160w

"A delightful story of the fulfillment of a prophecy. Good humor and reading and excellently concocted anthropology." H. L. Roth

+ Library J 77:1505 S 15 '52 50w

Reviewed by Paul Bloomfield

Manchester Guardian p4 Je 13 '52 150w

"This is a civilised, entertaining book, and if it had appeared during the period of the events it describes, and particularly if it had appeared before The Way of All Flesh—not to say before South Wind—it would have been a remarkable one. At the present day, not only in what has already been described, but in the interwoven story of Mrs Barnfield's sister Lurline, who broke away from her despotic Pontifex-like father to become a prostitute, it seems a little old-fashioned." J. D. Scott

+ New Statesman & Nation 43:748 Je 21 '52 250w

"It is a wry, ironic story. . . William March has handled it cleverly; he has underplayed the evil which is basic to Irma's nature; she is convincing to the point of terror because she is as normal as the woman in the next block. . . Her portrait is the book's triumph; it is drawn softly, with subtlety, so that not until the story is done does the reader realize that Irma fills its canvas completely." Thomas Sugrue

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 O 5 '52
600w

Reviewed by Donald Barr

N Y Times p44 O 19 '52 500w

"The impact of the Barnfields on the islanders and of the islanders on the Barnfields is lost, because all Mr. March's characters, on both sides, are only grotesques aping humanity, and therefore what might have been a tragedy or an ironic comedy resolves instead into a chilly and rather tiresome farce."

— New Yorker 28:177 O 18 '52 110w

"Few readers will be offended, I think, except perhaps the over-devout who themselves reject Nature and gentleness for concepts of religion as narrow as Samuel's own. Others will see the essential health in the satire and be happy with it." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 O 14 '52
750w

"'October Island' is destined to linger in the minds of its readers as a charming and wise fantasy. We have had little of this kind of enchantment in our recent literature." Harrison Smith

+ Sat R 35:34 O 4 '52 850w

Springf'd Republican p8C N 9 '52 180w

"A choice tropical romp in the serio-comic vein of Satirists Aubrey Menen and Edgar Mittelholzer."

Time 60:112 O 6 '52 470w

"Mr. William March has been highly praised as a writer. There can be no doubt that his narrative is unfolded with remarkable smoothness. At the same time the air of simplicity, seeming to suggest some deep inner meaning, sometimes raises doubts in the reader's mind about its final effectiveness."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p383 Je 13 '52 200w

El CAMPESINO. See González, V. R.

CAMUS, JEAN PIERRE. Spirit of St. Francis de Sales; ed. and newly tr. and with an introd. by C. F. Kelley. 249p $3.50 Harper

B or 92 Francis de Sales, Saint, bp. 52-5457

"The author of this work was the closest friend of its subject. Camus, bishop of Belley, wrote his biography, interpretation and eulogy of Francis in six volumes, which were published not many years after the death of the saint. The present abridged edition omits biographical materials except insofar as these are in the form of episodes, anecdotes and sayings which are arranged topically so as to exhibit his teachings on such subjects as the love of God, devotion, prayer, humility, temptation, poverty." Christian Century

Booklist 49:3 S 1 '52

Christian Century 69:853 J1 23 '52 60w

Reviewed by B. R. Redman

Sat R 35:23 D 13 '52 40w

CANBY, EDWARD TATNALL, and others. See Saturday review home book of recorded music and sound reproduction

CANBY, HENRY SEIDEL. Turn west, turn east; Mark Twain and Henry James. 318p $3.50 Houghton

928.1 Clemens, Samuel Langhorne, James, Henry. American literature—History and criticism 51-14000

For descriptive note see Annual for 1951.

Reviewed by J. M. Thellusson

Cath World 174:476 Mr '52 270w

"A provocative and stimulating literary criticism. . . Critically speaking, you either thoroughly enjoy Mark Twain, or you don't like him at all, while an appreciation of James can be a slowly maturing but fascinating experience. If for no other reason, Dr. Canby's fascinating research into the lives and writing of these two American giants is a generous gift to all inquiring readers." L. S. Munn

+ Springf'd Republican p8D F 3 '52 650w

"Neither Mark Twain nor Henry James emerges in his full and true character, but Mr. Canby has achieved his special effect rather by selection and focus than by distortion of the evidence."

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:22 Mr '52 290w

+ Wis Lib Bul 48:35 Ja '52

CANNING, VICTOR. House of the seven flies. 220p $3 Mill

52-9697

Tale of adventure, romance, and murder, the scene of which is Holland. The hero is Edward Furse, an English ex-army officer.

Kirkus 20:431 J1 15 '52 90w

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge

New Statesman & Nation 44:526 N 1 '52 50w

"Mr. Canning's fairly conventional materials are neatly handled through the seesawing of advantage and disadvantage, his Dutch and seaborne setting are agreeable (although a map would have made them more so) and the consequence is enjoyable for an evening's reading." James Sandoe

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p34 O 12 '52 160w

"A dull, wordy and trite adventure novel." Anthony Boucher

— N Y Times p41 S 28 '52 90w

New Yorker 28:155 O 25 '52 120w

"The human problems, the chase sequences and the background of small boat navigation are genuinely exciting, with that feeling of reality that is Canning's special talent. B plus." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 O 12 '52 40w

"Largely OK." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 35:42 O 18 '52 20w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal

Springf'd Republican p11C O 19 '52 180w

CANOYER, HELEN G., and VAILE, ROLAND SNOW. Economics of income and consumption. 355p il $4.50 Ronald

339.4 Consumption (economics). Income 51-13100

"From the viewpoint of the consumer, relates the laws and phenomena of economics to the consumption interest, shows how increased understanding can contribute to increased national income, to raising the individual's share and to more informed and intelligent use of personal income." (Library J) Indexes.

"This is an excellent college text for beginning students in economics of consumption and adequately fulfills its role." C. C. Zimmerman

+ Am Soc R 17:128 F '52 160w

Reviewed by L. J. Gordon

Ann Am Acad 281:214 My '52 320w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross

Library J 77:829 My 15 '52 20w

School & Society 74:207 S 29 '51 70w

"Two weaknesses were noted in the review of this work which tend to reduce the utility of the book in a present-day course in consumer education. The first objection is based upon the abundance of charts and figures derived from obsolete data. . . The second objection to the work reviewed is the lack of accuracy in presenting data. . . Not all of this text can be so criticized, however, for there are many portions of the volume which do justice to the material treated. The final sections, dealing with a chronology of legislative attempts to improve the position of the consumer, are complete and valuable as reference material." F. E. Bauer

+ — Social Educ 16:234 My '52 450w

CAPLAN, SAMUEL, and RIBALOW, HAROLD URI, eds. Great Jewish books, and their influence on history; introd. by Ludwig Lewi-sohn. 351p $3.75 Horizon press

296.1 Jewish literature 52-9125

An introduction to twelve of the most important books in Jewish literature. Includes: Bible; Talmud; Prayer Book; Rashi; Yehuda Halevi; Maimonides; Moses de Leon; Joseph Karo; Heinrich Graetz; Theodor Herzl; and Bialik. There are biographical sketches of the classic essayists; a translator's who's who; and selected bibliographies.

"An expert eclectic selection may be questioned but not disputed. Altho there will be unanimity of approval for the editors' choice of the Bible, The Talmud and perhaps the Siddur [Prayer Book] and the Shulchan Aruch [Code of Laws], there will be a general raising of eyebrows concerning the remainder of their list of the 'Great Jewish Books.' . . . But when the word 'great' instead of 'greatest' is used, every man to his taste and purpose. On the whole the selection is highly acceptable and the quotations are of excellent quality." Louis Binstock

+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p17 S 14 '52 250w

Reviewed by K. M. Chworowsky

+ Churchman 166:14 My 15 '52 120w

"Recommended for its popular form, size, and value." J. M. Scherr

+ Library J 77:792 My 1 '52 140w

"Unfortunately, the selections are so scant as to be of dubious service. While Hillel may have put the gist of Judaism into two sentences (which is to be questioned), the essence of the Bible or of the twelve folios of the Talmud cannot be rendered in a score of pages. Still, for those who know virtually nothing of these vast worlds, or to whom Maimonides and Ahad Ha'am are merely names, if that, the fewest words are better than none. 'Great Jewish Books' should open doors to many readers; and while they won't go far with it alone, they won't go wrong. A pertinent bibliography tells where to go next." Marvin Lowenthal

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 S 7 '52 450w

CAPOTE, TRUMAN. Grass harp; a play. 120p
$2.50 Random House

812

52-8665

A play based on the author's novel of the same title (Book Review Digest 1951).

Booklist 48:356 J1 1 '52

"There is something irresponsible, and even faintly condescending, in Mr. Capote's approach to the stage. It is a little bit as though the author had set out to bestow his own rich talents on a waiting, and relatively easy, form, and as though we were expected to be grateful for the smallest of small favors. There is no sense of discipline about 'The Grass Harp,' of respect for the difficulties of an exacting form. Capote has tossed off a number of random recollections and reflections, draped them loosely over a whimsical frame, and then hoped—it seems to me—that the fanciful manner would justify, or at least excuse, the undigested matter." Walter Kerr

+ Commonweal 56:68 Ap 25 '52 650w

"The text of the freshest play to reach Broadway this year. Should be widely done by community theatres. Highly recommended for drama, theatre and belles lettres collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 77:1307 Ag '52 30w

Reviewed by Norman Shrapnel

Manchester Guardian p4 N 7 '52 130w

"Although in The Grass Harp there is none of the scandalous subject-matter for which writers like Mr. Capote are known, and we are, on the contrary, in the company of virginal old ladies, innocent schoolgirls, and wistful widowers, this author's interest in innocence seems more extravagant than his interest in vice. Here is a form of sentimentality which is simply the reverse side of unpleasant sophistication. It has all the defects of pure sentimentality plus those of sentimentality gone rancid. Ostensibly we are presented with simplicity yet everything is slightly off—off color, off center, off key." Dramatic criticism by Eric Bentley

New Repub 126:22 Ap 14 '52 1350w

"Men who, in the literary sense, are not authors at all can be admirable playwrights. Unfortunately, the reverse is no less true, as 'The Grass Harp' once again makes clear. The fact that Mr. Capote is a talented and original novelist in no way guarantees that he knows or can meet the theatre's needs. He writes, and writes beautifully, for the reading eye but not as yet for the speaking actor or the listening audience." Dramatic criticism by J. M. Brown

— Sat R 35:43 Ap 19 '52 1250w

CAPRIO, FRANK SAMUEL. Living in balance. 246p $3.75 Arundel press, inc, box 2606, Washington 13, D.C.

616.08 [616.8] Mental hygiene 52-1621

"One of the purposes of this book is to show how nervous breakdowns can be prevented. It is also the aim of the author to teach the reader how to achieve better living through better thinking. The book attempts to explain in nontechnical language the root-causes of many of our emotional conflicts—the psychology of our fears, prejudices and hatreds and how the mind works." (Pref) No index.

"Destined to be a popular book on mental hygiene." J. M. Scherr

+ Library J 77:786 My 1 '52 120w

"Although this is psychiatry at a very popular and easy-to-understand level, Dr. Caprio hews close to accepted advice and practices of professional mental advisers. There may be nothing here that would cure a neurotic who is on the brink of the falls, but those with less serious mental discomforts probably could find much of value." R. F. H.

Springf'd Republican p17A Je 15 '52 170w

CAREY, BERNICE. Missing heiress. 192p $2.50 Doubleday

52-8056

Mystery story.

Booklist 49:15 S 1 '52

Kirkus 20:290 My 1 '52 90w

"Miss Carey evokes the camp and its ordinary people with more than ordinary interest, which is why a rather nominal mystery and very little detection (most of it huddled into the final pages) is sufficient still for cozy reading." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Je 29 '52 200w

"In the minute depiction of the inhabitants of that court, trailer by trailer, Carey finds precisely the right material for her talents. The novel deals not so much with murder, which is pretty unmysterious, as with the heiress' attempts to integrate herself with a life she never suspected existed." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p12 J1 6 '52 120w

"Though mystery is minimized here, there's still rather too much of it to allow full character development; the Carey touch on background, however, is sure as always. B minus." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 J1 13 '52

70w

"Good." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 35:40 J1 5 '52 20w

Springf'd Republican p6D Ag 10 '52 40w

CAREY, BERNICE. Three widows. 190p $2.50 Doubleday

52-5113

Detective story.

Bookmark 11:134 Mr '52

Reviewed by Edith Fowke

Canadian Forum 32:118 Ag '52 90w

Reviewed by James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p19 Ja 27 '52 140w

"Bernice Carey has produced her most smoothly written and constructed book to date in The Three Widows." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p12 F 3 '52 130w

"In spite of an overabundance of coincidence and a certain bucolic flavor in the writing, Miss Carey has produced an original and entertaining book."

+ New Yorker 27:79 F 2 '52 160w

"The stage settings are superb and the characters ring absolutely true. Too many coincidences—one all but incredible—weaken the plot, but you may not care too much in the face of Mrs. Carey's wonderful portrayals." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p31 F 3 '52 50w

"Good." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 35:48 Mr 15 '52 30w

CAREY, ERNESTINE MOLLER (GILBRETH). Jumping Jupiter. 237p $3 Crowell

52-6915

A story of life and politics behind the scenes in a big department store. Mrs Carey was co-author of Cheaper by the Dozen (Book Review Digest 1949).

Booklist 48:196 F 15 '52

Bookmark 11:133 Mr '52 40w

Reviewed by A. F. Otis

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 F 10 '52 180w

Reviewed by B. E. S. Fischer

Christian Science Monitor p6 Mr 6 '52 110w

"Those who picture the life of a buyer in a large department store as glamorous are due for a rude shock. . . . The author has captured the feverish spirit of this fantastic world with admirable fidelity. Recommended for light reading." H. R. Forbes

+ Library J 77:143 Ja 15 '52 90w

"The department-store background and the love story will delight teen-age girls. This is just froth, but it is engaging and readable." M. D. Read

+ Library J 77:733 Ap 15 '52 40w

"It is a glimpse of the merchandising world broad in its humor, but sharp in its revelations of store politics, jealousies and double-crossing. Having been through the mill, the author has no illusions—and leaves her readers with scarcely any."

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 Ja 27 '52 140w

Reviewed by Jane Cobb

N Y Times p4 Ja 27 '52 270w

"Mrs. Carey's dialogue creaks with effort, and her characters' attempts to deliver their lines with humor, while worrying all the time about keeping their jobs, create an effect that is too grisly to be entertaining but not grisly enough to be interesting."

New Yorker 27:76 F 2 '52 40w

"It's an amusing story though actually no very great shakes as a novel. But if you'd like to see something of what it's like behind the scenes in a big store—well, you'll learn something about it here." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 F 4 '52 650w

Reviewed by Bernard Kalb

Sat R 35:44 Mr 22 '52 240w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal

Springf'd Republican p10C My 4 '52 200w

Wis Lib Bul 48:93 Mr '52

CARLSON, MRS BERNICE WELLS. Do it yourself! tricks, stunts, and skits; il. by Laszlo Matulay. 159p $2; pa $1.35 Abingdon-Cokesbury

733 Amusements. Tricks 52-1173

A volume for young readers showing how to do a variety of tricks, ranging from the very simple to the more complicated; some stunts, both physical and mental; and some brief dramatizations. Index.

Booklist 48:252 Ap 1 '52

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ag 17 '52 100w

Reviewed by Ruth Wales

Christian Science Monitor p10 My 15 '52 40w

"On the whole it is a lively forthright book and a necessary kind of reference for the young library."

+ Kirkus 20:126 F 15 '52 110w

Reviewed by Mary Strang

Library J 77:798 My 1 '52 70w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Je 8 '52 40w

"For the planned or impromptu party this collection of tricks, stunts and skits offers fun for both performers and audience." L. P.

+ N Y Times p30 Je 8 '52 60w

Wis Lib Bul 48:175 Jl '52

CARLSON, NATALIE SAVAGE. Talking cat, and other stories of French Canada; re-told; pictures by Roger Duvoisin. 87p $2.50 Harper

52-5429

Stories of French Canada for young readers. Contents: The skunk in Tante Odette's oven; The talking cat; Jean Labadie's big black dog; The speckled hen's egg; The canoe in the rapids; The ghostly fishermen; The Loup-Garou in the woods.

Booklist 48:324 Je 1 '52

Bookmark 11:186 My '52

"These remarkable new stories are a welcome find for both story tellers and their young audiences. Like the old folk tales, they make sly use of human foibles and frailties, ending each hilarious episode with a delightfully worded little moral." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 My 25 '52 200w

"A thoroughly delightful collection of stories which have unmistakable French-Canadian flavor even though they are not, I am glad to say, written in dialect. Easy for the children to read themselves and perfect for the story hour in their direct simplicity and humor, they are a fresh contribution to American folklore."

J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 28:106 Ap '52 90w

"A wonderful collection of re-told French Canadian folk tales—humorously witty and expressive of the slow, gentle French country way of life."

+ Kirkus 20:279 My 1 '52 160w

"A special treat for children and a treasure for the storyteller." Elizabeth Mitchell

+ Library J 77:909 My 15 '52 80w

"Told with skill, giving the feeling of the primitive setting entirely through action, these rare tales will amuse children who are past the fairy-tale age and ready to find fun in fairly adult human mistakes. They would be fine reading aloud in a family group that knew French Canada or planned to go there. Beyond that they will amuse any age that delights in tall tales." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 My 11 '52 360w

"These stories are as Gallic as the French shrug, as American as the tall tale, and as wisely humorous as the folk tales of any people. Mrs. Carlson heard them from her mother, who in turn heard them from a French-Canadian great-uncle who 'talked as if a house had no walls' and acted out every story." Eulalie Steinmetz

+ N Y Times p18 Je 15 '52 120w

New Yorker 28:202 D 6 '52 20w

"This book is made for storytellers. It has humor, atmosphere, and clearly drawn characters. Roger Duvoisin's drawings are an integral part of it. They, too, have humor and atmosphere." M. G. Davis

+ Sat R 35:50 My 10 '52 110w

Wis Lib Bul 48:175 Jl '52

CARLSON, RAYMOND, ed. Gallery of Western paintings. 85p il $8.50 McGraw

759.13 Paintings, American. West—Pictorial works 51-12661

"This book, with its 64 pages of reproductions of paintings in full color by famous artists gives you a vivid interpretation of the West by eight outstanding artists. In addition, there are 20 sketches by Ross Santee. The eight artists whose paintings are reproduced in this book are: Frederic Remington, Charles M. Russell, William R. Leigh, Gray Bartlett, Maynard Dixon, Gerard Curtis Delano, James E. Swinnerton and Ray Strang." School Arts

Booklist 48:140 D 15 '51

"Raymond Carlson's nine short and breezy biographical sketches and Ross Santee's brushwork decorations complement each other in giving a finished touch to this book." Gary Sheahan

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 F 3 '52 160w

School Arts 51:9-a Ja '52 100w

CARMAN, HARRY JAMES, and SYRETT, HAROLD COFFIN. History of the American people. 2v 746; 812p il maps $15; text ed ea $5.75 Knopf

973 U.S.—History 52-5073

"In this retelling of the history of the U.S., the authors have attempted to interpret past events in terms of their enduring significance, but without imposing present-day standards on the actions of past generations. They have compromised between the chronological and topical plan by dividing American history into large periods, and have treated a number of major topics within each period, covering as fully as possible the political, diplomatic, intellectual, social, economic, and religious history of the American people. Volume I is based on Carman's Social and Economic History of the United States, published 1930-34." (Booklist) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 49:64 O 15 '52

CARMAN, H. J.—Continued

"The enormous task of presenting a detailed story of the American nation and its people in approximately 1500 pages has been done before and will certainly be done again; but it will be a long time before the all-round excellence of the present work is equalled." Herbert Cahoon
+ Library J 77:1304 Ag '52 120w

"The writing in these volumes is clear and unadorned but unfortunately on the whole a bit heavy." Avery Craven
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p36 D 7 '52 360w

CARMER, CARL LAMSON. Flag for the fort; pictures by Elizabeth Carmer. 125p $2.50 Messner

52-13617

A story for upper elementary grades, based on a true incident in the War of 1812. It tells how Caroline and her friend Sam helped save the city of Baltimore from the British guns.

Booklist 49:144 D 15 '52

Bookmark 12:35 N '52 10w

"Readers 8 to 12 will find this a stirring episode in American history." P. G.
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 16 '52 130w

"Fine reading for history projects or the thrill of chancing on a story about something learned in school."

+ Kirkus 20:504 Ag 15 '52 170w

"Presents history in a lively and easy-to-read style. Recommended for upper elementary grades." Elizabeth Hodges

+ Library J 77:2012 N 15 '52 50w

CARNAC, CAROL, pseud. See Rivett, E. C.

CAROSSO, VINCENT P. California wine industry; a study of the formative years [1830-1895]. 241p $3.75 Univ. of Calif. press

338.17 Wine and wine making. California—Industries and resources 51-62531

"History of the development of the wine industry in California, from the time when viticulture began to be commercially practiced until it became well established and on its way to its present status of big business. This period corresponded with the introduction of agricultural policies and practices which have transformed California. It bears the impact of the pioneers—Vignes, Wolfskill, Haraszthy, Kohler, and of successive state and voluntary bodies which in total overcame the obstacles to success." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

"A valuable text for grape growers, wine makers, and merchants." Peter Valaer
+ Chem & Eng N 29:5077 N 26 '51 140w

"Interestingly written and well-documented." J. E. Cross

+ Library J 77:53 Ja 1 '52 120w

Sat R of Lit 34:15 D 29 '51 200w

U S Quarterly Bk R 7:377 D '51 200w

CARPENTER, BRUCE. Blossoming year. 176p $2.75 Lothrop

52-10968

Novel for older girls. It tells of the youth and marriages of two sisters of very different temperaments.

Bookmark 11:236 Jl '52

"Written with restraint, understanding sympathy and humor, this deserves high place among our all-too-few really good novels for young girls." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 28:239 Ag '52 60w

"Sensible, exciting treatment of an awkward young Boston girl's experiences in romance, social rejection and the establishment of her own foundations for happiness."

+ Kirkus 20:375 Jl 1 '52 220w

"The backgrounds of this story for older girls are interesting enough to overcome its many defects in style, and the unreality of its characters." L. S. Bechtel

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ag 17 '52 200w

"Uneven as this book is in style and technique it is considerably more interesting than the average junior novel of contemporary life." E. L. Buell

+ — N Y Times p32 S 21 '52 190w

Wis Lib Bul 48:215 S '52

CARPENTER, FRANCES (MRS WILLIAM CHAPIN HUNTINGTON). Wonder tales of horses and heroes; il. by William D. Hayes. 238p $3 Doubleday

Horses—Legends and stories 52-6361

A collection of myths and legends from the folklore of many countries, telling tales of wondrous horses and the heroes who rode them.

Booklist 48:383 Jl 15 '52

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 S 7 '52 130w

Kirkus 20:188 Mr 15 '52 110w.

"Contains for the most part stories never before retold for children. Only a few were familiar to this reader. Will be sure-fire with children, and the excellent literary style and content will make it valuable to teachers, librarians, and storytellers. Recommended for grades 4-6." E. J. Bowland

+ Library J 77:1212 Jl '52 60w

"We think they are all wonderful tales, an exciting new treasure trove for storytellers and good reading for ages nine to twelve. The pictures are superb, cleverly handled across two opening pages of each story." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Je 29 '52 160w

"Will be enjoyed by the many children who are fond of fairy tales and horses alike. The vigorous illustrations are admirably in keeping with the text." Eugenia Garson

+ N Y Times p14 Ag 3 '52 140w

Wis Lib Bul 48:218 S '52

CARPENTER, WILLIAM SEAL. Unfinished business of civil service reform. 128p $3 Princeton univ. press

351.3 [351.6] Civil service—U.S. 52-5834

"A comprehensive look at civil service as it exists today on the federal and state level. The author points up the paradox of the present system, which has taken control of the administration of laws from the executive and yet which continues to make him responsible for the execution of the laws. The author maintains that the problem today is no longer to 'keep the rascals' out, but rather to encourage intelligent, ambitious and creative persons to enter government service. Also discussed are the questions of loyalty oaths and the position of the colleges in the training of civil servants." Current Hist

Reviewed by Ferrel Heady

Am Pol Sci R 46:896 S '52 440w

Booklist 48:311 Je 1 '52

Current Hist 22:378 Je '52 120w

"A low-keyed but outspoken criticism of the way civil service has degenerated throughout this country, in municipal, state and federal governments. . . In these days of government scandals and their resulting distrust of government, this is not only an enlightening but perhaps an encouraging book and will interest readers concerned with this problem in the political world. For the trade unionist the chapter on employer-employee relationships and other references to trade unions will have especial interest." D. K. Oko

+ Library J 77:1203 Jl '52 140w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:295 S '52 220w

CARR, ALBERT H. Z. How to attract good luck; and make the most of it in your daily life. 241p $2.95 Simon & Schuster

177 [174] Chance. Conduct of life 52-13329

A noted economist discusses the possibility of consciously contributing to your own good fortune. He cites many true cases to prove his points. No index.

"All in all this provides some sensible pointers on a pattern of life you can help to direct and determine."

+ Kirkus 20:487 Ag 1 '52 130w

"There is very little in this stimulating book with which you will disagree, but the basis of it all is intelligence, so do not relax entirely and depend on luck. Mr. Carr is as constructive as Overstreet and Pitkin but he writes with a difference. For general purchase." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 77:1810 O 15 '52 50w

Springf'd Republican p9C N 2 '52 150w

CARR, CHARLES CARL. Alcoa, an American enterprise. 292p il $3.50 Rinehart

669.722 Aluminum company of America
51-14776

A history of the first sixty-two years of the Aluminum company of America, popularly known as Alcoa. The author was for many years Director of public relations for the company. Index.

"The portrayal comes from both a sympathetic and a well informed writer. The technical reliability is equally vouched for through the acknowledged cooperation of Junius D. Edwards who has been an associate director of Aluminum Research Laboratories for over 30 years. Also contributing substantially has been the collaboration of J. G. Taylor, a long-time editor of employee publications of Alcoa. The value to many chemical engineers and executives in reading this work will be the stimulus often needed in surmounting the insurmountable." R. S. McBride

+ Chem Eng 59:365 F '52 250w

Reviewed by W. E. Brewster

Christian Science Monitor p9 F 21 '52 490w

"Early patent problems, anti-trust litigation, constant laboratory testing and improvement round out the story, make it of value to the interested adult, the budding high-school industrial scientist."

+ Kirkus 19:654 N 1 '51 130w

"Through anti-trust suits and charges and prosecutions for monopoly practices he justifies the company on all counts. Written for popular consumption it will have some usefulness as a convenient compilation, though with little documentary or reference value." J. E. Cross

Library J 77:54 Ja 1 '52 120w

"Charles C. Carr, Alcoa's public relations chief, tells the story disarmingly. It is not a simple story; the Government's great anti-trust suit against the company required thirteen years to untangle the facts of the case and the law applying to it. The suit probed to the very bottom of the monopoly problem, but brought no solution other than the paradox that a corporation may obey every jot and tittle of the law, and yet be a monopoly." Palmer Harman

N Y Times p25 Ja 6 '52 150w

"Alcoa's difficulties under anti-trust legislation are not avoided, nor is the subject of its labor relations. Nevertheless, the result is not entirely satisfactory. The author's tendency to repeat and to write around the subject weakens the book."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p8 O 19 '52 110w

CARR, EDWARD HALLETT. History of Soviet Russia; v2, Bolshevik revolution, 1917-1923. 400p $6 Macmillan

947.083 [947.084] Russia—History—Revolution, 1917-. Communism—Russia (51-1610)

"The second volume of Edward H. Carr's three-volume study of Bolshevik Russia under Lenin deals with the economic struggles of the Soviet dictatorship and the new economic organizations and controls which were emerging from them. His first volume [Book Review Digest 1951] analyzed the political triumph of bolshevism, and the international role of the new regime will be presented in a forthcoming volume." (N Y Times) No index.

"The wealth of detail presented—based on a great amount of searching through relatively little-used source material—makes this volume, even more than the first of the series, an important contribution to the study of Soviet Russia." R. V. Daniels

+ Am Hist R 58:115 O '52 650w

Reviewed by Jerome Davis

Ann Am Acad 283:225 S '52 380w

Booklist 48:278 My 1 '52

"Aside from its value as a penetrating historic analysis, the lasting contribution of this book may well be found in the revelation it offers of the ways the Bolshevik mind operates when confronted with problems of unprecedented magnitude." H. J. Morgenthau

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ap 20 '52 420w

Current Hist 22:377 Je '52 60w

Foreign Affairs 30:679 J1 '52 50w

"Recommended for all serious students of Bolshevik revolution." H. H. Bernt

+ Library J 77:792 My 1 '52 140w

Reviewed by M. P. Price

Manchester Guardian p4 My 6 '52 800w

"Much of the material will be familiar to those who have read the accounts of Dobb and Baykov, whose treatment is somewhat more sympathetic and less politically discerning than Carr's. There is also a variety of specialized studies, such as those by Hubbard, Many Gordon, Naum Jasny, W. Koch, that have beginning chapters covering much of the same ground. From none of these books, however, can one get the same sense of the interrelationship of the various developments that emerges from Carr's pages. . . Carr is restrained, balanced, urbane, and slightly mocking." Barrington Moore

+ Nation 174:383 Ap 19 '52 1100w

"This book does more than illuminate the development of Soviet Russia. It is vital reading for anyone who is concerned with the advance to Socialism in any country." A. J. P. Taylor

+ New Statesman & Nation 43:350 Mr 22 '52 1000w

"Carr writes not as an economist but as a political scientist with experience in the British foreign service, as teacher in Wales, in London and as editorial writer for 'The London Times.' As an experienced political scientist he has woven the complicated fabric of people, wealth and power into a fascinating study for those prepared to examine the detail of the early years of the Russian revolution. From this second volume the Russian peasant emerges as the principal figure." J. N. Hazard

+ N Y Herald Tribune BK R p6 Ap 13 '52 1550w

Reviewed by P. E. Mosely

N Y Times p19 Ap 13 '52 800w

New Yorker 28:149 Ap 26 '52 160w

"On the whole it would seem fair to characterize this volume as a competent but partial historical essay. Complex developments are treated too briefly to grasp them fully but in too much detail to see them with easy clarity. Data and points of view which are at variance with the author's purpose are passed over lightly. The Bolsheviks act with a rationality which hardly accords with the atmosphere of a passionate and turbulent revolution; the 'proletariat' and 'peasantry' are treated implicitly as the objects of history—as Lenin may have regarded them." F. C. Barghoorn

+ Sat R 35:16 J1 12 '52 850w

Reviewed by Max Beloff

Spec 188:404 Mr 28 '52 1350w

"Mr. Carr has been virtually the first writer to trace, almost step by step, the emergence and growth of some of the economic and social institutions which, for many years, held a central place in the Soviet system. For this pioneering work present readers, and one may confidently add future historians, will be in-debited to him. A work of this sort inevitably has its gaps, but of these nobody is more aware than the author himself."

CARR, E. H.—Continued

Times [London] Lit Sup p165 Mr 7 '52
2550w

"Whether one accepts or rejects Mr. Carr's proposition, nobody can question that it has led him to a scholarly achievement of high significance. The only serious criticism to which his works are open is his inclination to measure events almost exclusively in terms of success." Hajo Holborn

+ Yale R n s 42:142 autumn '52 500w

CARR, EDWARD HALLETT. New society [six lectures delivered in the third program of the B.B.C. in May and June, 1951]. 118p $1.60 Macmillan

320.15 State, The. Economic policy [51-13905]

"Primarily, this volume is an argument for a planned economy. Based on the theory that true political freedom cannot be attained without freedom from want, Prof. Carr advocates controls until such time as scarcity of materials no longer exists. He believes that the gradual revolution through which we are passing is replacing competition, the economic whip and individualism with controlled economy, the welfare state and mass democracy." Current Hist

Reviewed by V. J. Puryear
Ann Am Acad 28:238 My '52 460w
Current Hist 21:354 D '51 60w

"Mr. Carr was an excellent choice for these broadcast lectures on the state and problems of our Western society. His gifts for lively exposition, for fitting argument with apt illustration, are well suited for such a broad historical sweep." David Mitrany

+ Manchester Guardian p4 N 30 '51 410w

"Not by any means all the best radio talks stand up well to critical scrutiny on publication. But in this instance, Mr. Carr is positively helped by the peculiar demands of his medium. He has taken a massive subject and succeeded in distilling his ideas into crisp, homely paragraphs which must have been comprehensible to most listeners and are of exemplary clarity to the reader." John Freeman

+ New Statesman & Nation 42:676 D 8 '51 600w

Reviewed by Geoffrey Bruun
Sat R 35:59 Mr 8 '52 150w

"It is a large theme, but Mr. Carr's manner is brisk and the reader will understand and allow for the difficulty of compressing what has to be said into small space. His sincerity is transparent, his opinions are to be respected; he has something interesting to say on all the topics he takes up and the reader is rarely in doubt about his meaning, even when his arguments do not appear as well founded as could be wished."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p642 O 12 '51 850w

Reviewed by C. H. Driver
Yale R n s 41:631 summer '52 650w

CARR, JOHN DICKSON (CARTER DICKSON, pseud). Behind the crimson blind; another adventure of Sir Henry Merrivale. 249p $2.50 Morrow

Detective story. 52-5055

Bookmark 11:109 F '52

Kirkus 19:649 N 1 '51 50w

"Carter Dickson has never before given us so unabashed an exercise in comic melodrama. It is entirely theatrical and done with enormous gusto. The consequence is preposterous and exceedingly funny." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Ja 13 '52 190w

"If this were a first novel by an unknown, I'd undoubtedly praise it for unusual literacy, for its evocation of the picturesque, exotic background of Tangier, for the first-rate delineation of an unusual Spanish-English police officer, for being occasionally very funny (though there is much farce and little wit or humor), and for highly ingenious (if not startlingly new) jiggery-pokery with 'impossible' situations. This is all true; but the book is simply not up to the standards which Carr himself has set." Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p20 Ja 13 '52 400w

"Somehow the spirit that has animated most of Mr. Dickson's previous works seems lacking."

New Yorker 27:80 F 2 '52 90w

"Up popped the locked-room problem again, this time hiding diamonds instead of a killer. The resulting antics have color and action enough for anyone, and are conspicuously light-hearted even for Dr. Dickson, though not as impenetrable as some of his murder puzzles. Just the same, they're enthralling. B plus." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p10 Ja 20 '52 80w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff
Sat R 35:31 Ja 26 '52 40w

Reviewed by Esther Howard
Spec 189:712 N 21 '52 30w

Springf'd Republican p16A Ja 20 '52 100w

CARR, JOHN DICKSON (CARTER DICKSON, pseud). 9 wrong answers; a novel for the curious. 331p $3 Harper

52-7280

Detective story.

Booklist 49:126 D 1 '52

"Certainly the solution is surprising but I'm afraid that it isn't a tale for the common reader but one for the connoisseur or those other fellows the cognoscenti or their cousin the aficionado. Its theatricalities are strained, even in Mr. Carr's cloudy lighting, and its ingenuities are puckeringly dry." James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 N 2 '52 270w

"Something has happened to The Master's touch. Judged purely as fiction, this is an exceedingly long and ponderous novel, superficially and even inconsistently characterized. It will not be read as a story; it must stand or fall as a pure technical puzzle. And the regrettable fact is that it is not well or honestly constructed." Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p32 N 16 '52 400w

New Yorker 28:135 N 1 '52 150w

"It is truly painful to report that Mr. Carr has written a poor book, with only faint glimmers of his usual genius." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p27 N 23 '52 60w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff
Sat R 35:37 D 6 '52 30w

"The book is too much of a tour de force to be a top-grade mystery novel." R. F. H.

Springf'd Republican p7C N 23 '52 70w

CARR, LOWELL JULLIARD, and STERMER, JAMES EDSON. Willow Run; a study of industrialization and cultural inadequacy. 406p il $5 Harper

309.1174 Willow Run, Michigan. Social surveys 51-11892

A sociological study of the bad living conditions of workers in a Ford bomber plant near Detroit from 1941 to 1945. Includes tables, graphs, and illustrations. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by W. F. Cottrell

Am Soc R 17:507 Ag '52 650w

"This book will have a limited value for courses in sociology on social change, the community, and methods of research. There is more criticism of conditions than objective description of interactive factors within the community." L. G. Brown

Ann Am Acad 282:159 Jl '52 430w

Booklist 48:207 Mr 1 '52

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:307 S '52 220w

CARRIER, WARREN. The hunt. 208p $2.75
New directions

"This first novel concerns George, an earthy character; his 'morbid and ineffective' brother, Chris, who murders their father; and a girl, Josephine. Chris flees to the mountains followed by the other two, and the hunt is on. Their respective life-histories are narrated in flashbacks." Library J

"The Hunt is not a good novel. There are things that are good about it, such as the descriptions of landscape and the interesting handling of the flashback technique, but in general the book fails badly, when—conceivably—it could have succeeded brilliantly." Philip Driscoll

— + Commonweal 57:46 O 17 '52 650w

"The novel's relentless accumulation of unpleasant details and emetic images will offend many readers, and it isn't really necessary for librarians to buy the book, unless it seems advisable for some reason to patronize home industry." E. F. Walbridge

— Library J 77:1504 S 15 '52 60w

"The characters in 'The Hunt' have few positive instincts. They may experience lyrical reveries about some far-off radiance, but they are doomed from the first syllable. The reader becomes blunted to their fate." Frederic Morton

— + N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p25 N 23 '52 450w

"By the time all three principals reach their grim ends you're likely to be pretty tired of their involved but fairly routine psycho-sexual problems. Mr. Carrier's turgidly fanciful prose doesn't help things." E. J. F.

— Sat R 35:41 S 13 '52 140w

"Mr. Warren Carrier's pretensions far outweigh his achievements, and while a genuine experimental novel is always interesting, Mr. Carrier's prose bears too many marks of undigested influences. . . Nevertheless, his story has a certain stark power, especially in the suggestion of atmosphere." E. J. F.

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p481 J1 25 '52 280w

CARRINGTON, HEReward, and FODOR, Nandor. Haunted people; story of the poltergeist down the centuries. 225p $3.50
Dutton

133.1 Ghosts. Psychical research 51-8924

"Poltergeists ('noisy spirits') are supposed to throw things about and cause showers of unrelated objects. They are now associated with adolescents and split personalities, besides plain frauds. . . A long chronological list of cases of the phenomenon omits Mary Roberts Rinehart's experiences in a Long Island house and Washington apartment as told in her My Story." (Library J) Index.

"An interesting merger of scientific investigation and speculation, for a field which has a marked, if defined, fascination."

+ Kirkus 19:628 O 15 '51 160w

"A curious and interesting book, of some value to psychologists." E. F. Walbridge

Library J 76:2000 D 1 '51 130w

Reviewed by Lorine Pruette

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ja 20 '52 800w

CARRINGTON, PHILIP, abp. Primitive Christian calendar; a study in the making of the Marcan Gospel; 2v; v 1, Introduction and text. 235p $6 Cambridge
226.3 Bible. N.T.—St Mark. Church calendar

"This book presents a new liturgical theory of St Mark's Gospel. It is, that the Gospel consists of a series of lessons for use in the Christian ecclesia on the successive Sundays of the Year, and of a longer continuous lection for the annual commemoration of the Passion. . . The theory grew out of the author's researches into quite another problem of St Mark's Gospel, the meaning of the Seed Parable. . . A second volume is promised in which the calendrical order is to be related to its general background in thought and history, and its significance to the Christian movement established." (Publisher's note) Index.

"This is a fascinating but not altogether convincing account of a liturgical theory of the origin of Mark." R. C. Miller

+ — Churchman 166:12 N 15 '52 140w

"A dozen years ago Archbishop Carrington published a modest volume, called The Primitive Christian Catechism, which opened up new lines of study in the field of Christian ethics in the Apostolic Age. The fruitfulness of the approach may be seen in the long essay appended to Dean Selwyn's Commentary on 1 Peter and in Dr. C. H. Dodd's recently published book Gospel and Law. Dr. Carrington's new book looks as if it may prove equally fruitful in stimulating and guiding new lines of research."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p9 Ap 11 '52 800w

CARROLL, MRS RUTH (ROBINSON), and CARROLL, LATROBE. Salt and Pepper. 30p col il $2 Oxford

52-9427

Nonsense picture-story book which tells how Pepper, a little boy, lost his temper when his family moved from one home to another, and how Salt, Pepper's dog, helped to make things right and jolly again.

Bookmark 12:12 O '52 20w

Kirkus 20:548 S 1 '52 100w

"This is one of the authors' best stories. Recommended for young readers and to be read aloud to younger ages." D. M. Blasco

+ Library J 77:1519 S 15 '52 60w

"This bouncy little story skips along with lively words and phrases, repeated over and over into an almost chant-like rhythm. The illustrations, alive with frisking dogs and busy children, are carried out in the autumnal rusts and yellows and browns which blend nicely with the crispness of the story." M. L. Krupka

+ N Y Times p36 S 28 '52 170w

+ New Yorker 28:191 D 6 '52 50w

CARROLL-ABBING, JOHN PATRICK. Chance to live; the story of the lost children of the war; tr. by Carol della Chiesa. 216p il $3
Longmans

362.73 Children—Charities, protection, etc.
World war, 1939-1945—Children 52-5917

"An Irish priest describes the sufferings of the Italian people during the war and postwar period. In the course of his duties he ministered to the old, the dispossessed, the wounded, both civilians and soldiers, saw to the evacuation of orphans, and became more and more concerned with the plight of the homeless boys of Italy. With Boys' Town in the U.S. as a model, he established a community called Boys' Republic, which was the subject of a documentary film bearing the same title as this book." Booklist

Booklist 48:226 Mr 15 '52

Bookmark 11:153 Ap '52 40w

+ Cath World 175:159 My '52 160w

"A human interest story rather than a religious book—though it exemplifies religious faith translated into action."

Kirkus 20:37 Ja 15 '52 110w

Reviewed by J. E. Brown

Library J 77:529 Mr 15 '52 130w

"Poignant incidents are related with vividness and unflinching tenderness, in this story of a compassionate priest's efforts, to give Italy's 'lost children' a chance to live." Frances Witherspoon

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Mr 9 '52 550w

Reviewed by Fulton Oursler

N Y Times p16 Mr 9 '52 500w

San Francisco Chronicle p32 Ap 20 '52 200w

Reviewed by W. W. Brickman

School & Society 75:410 Je 28 '52 50w

Springf'd Republican p7D Ap 13 '52 200w

CARSON, RACHEL LOUISE. Under the sea-wind; a naturalist's picture of ocean life. 314p il $3.50 Oxford

591.9 [591.92] Marine biology 52-7613

"A reissue of the author's first book [Book Review Digest 1941] for the benefit of the readers of her second, 'The Sea Around Us.' This earlier effort consists of glimpses into the lives of animals, mostly of the sea, and unmistakably shows the mark of a powerful chronicler of nature." (New Yorker) Glossary.

Booklist 48:266 Ap 15 '52

Bookmark 11:205 Je '52 20w

Reviewed by Larry Rogers

Canadian Forum 32:94 J1 '52 130w

"'Under the Sea-Wind' deserves to triumph. It has the clearness and depth of uncontaminated ocean water. In all its parts it has a wealth of strange and wonderful creatures, even as much as the sea has." A. C. Ames

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ap 6 '52 500w

Reviewed by H. B. Ellis

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 10 '52 650w

Kirkus 20:175 Mr 1 '52 210w

"A very readable, interesting, and charming book." M. D. Read

+ Library J 77:733 Ap 15 '52 30w

Manchester Guardian p4 O 22 '52 80w

Reviewed by Gavin Maxwell

New Statesman & Nation 44:522 N 1 '52 340w

Reviewed by G. F. Whicher

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p33 My 11 '52 120w

"Its pages reveal the identical gifts that today have captivated readers: a scrupulous scholarship, a first-hand, warm, individual knowledge of the at least seven-story ocean, and a poetic sensibility." Harvey Breit

+ N Y Times p33 Ap 6 '52 200w

New Yorker 28:146 Ap 5 '52 50w

"Perhaps it is going a trifle too far to say that readers feel the fascination of Miss Carson's writing wholly because of this sense of interrelationship among all things that live, but I believe this is at least part of it. For the rest, it is sheer good writing that keeps the reader turning her pages, absorbing one fascinating bit of knowledge and color and atmosphere after another." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ap 4 '52 700w

"Mrs. Carson's new, or old, book is full of movement and action, as she clearly conveys a sense of the teeming, swarming, changing life in deep waters, and above the continental shelf and on the shore along the eastern coast." D. B. B.

+ Springfield Republican p10C My 4 '52 320w

CARSON, ROBERT. Magic lantern. 504p $3.95 Holt

52-9047

"This saga of the 'silent days' [of the movies] is told through the eyes of young Ellie Silversmith, son of Frank P. Silversmith, and while the father-son relationship is the wheel on which this book revolves, it is the elder Silversmith who powers that wheel." Sat R

"Ellie I find a little too precocious to be plausible, and his passions, Teddy and Honey, leave me cold—I find it hard to believe in their attractions. But Frank Silversmith, the elder, is a domineering character, and it is his drive and fever which gives such compulsion to the book. The technical scenes at the production end have the color and ring of authenticity, and not unnaturally, for Carson has spent most of his life in Los Angeles and has written screen plays for almost every major company in Hollywood." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic 190:90 D '52 330w

Booklist 49:141 D 15 '52

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 D 14 '52 350w

"Mr. Carson gets what appears to be the authentic flavor and atmosphere of Hollywood's so recent 'early days.' The story's weakness is its length and diffusiveness. An editor with some of Silversmith's ruthlessness would have helped it. Mr. Carson has produced a tale that is fairly absorbing, written with no great distinction of style." John Beaufort

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 D 18 '52 400w

Kirkus 20:665 O 1 '52 200w

"Unquestionably the best written novel about Hollywood and New York of the silent into sound film period. . . I frankly couldn't put it down because it was completely fascinating. Paid collections will want this novel. Highly recommended also for theatre and Cinema collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 77:1654 O 1 '52 60w

"Mr. Carson has scratched the surface of his rich material and made of it a documented and thoroughly interesting novel that takes its own comfortable time to tell its own well-upholstered story. And in doing so it pays its own tribute to the nameless pioneers, the cameramen and directors of those early days." James Hilton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 N 30 '52 700w

"Pretty dull. But the book's documentation of an industry's birth is better than its story or its style." Robert Lowry

N Y Times p46 N 30 '52 450w

"Mr. Carson's characters are hollow, but he keeps them talking and moving around, and his account of the early days of Hollywood is diverting reading."

New Yorker 28:178 D 13 '52 70w

"'The Magic Lantern' is so entertaining when it addresses itself to the actual function of film-making that one can't help wishing that its emotional line and its plot measured up to its knowledge of the subject-matter and its admirable intentions. . . There are times when one wonders whether this book has too much plot or not enough pages. . . We leave this novel with the sense that while we have enjoyed this cavalcade we have not been as deeply moved as we had expected to be during the early reels. But even aware of its shortcomings, you should enjoy 'The Magic Lantern' for its sound historical background and its evocation of the men and women whose daring and all-around skulduggery, vision, and domineering drive are already the stuff of legends." Budd Schulberg

+ Sat R 35:15 N 29 '52 1000w

Time 60:84 D 1 '52 300w

CARTER, JOHN. A B C for book-collectors. 191p $3 Knopf

010.3 Bibliography—Dictionaries. Book collecting 52-5667

The purpose of this work "has been to set down, and to define, and sometimes to comment upon, such words and phrases, commonly used in book-collecting, as would be likely to puzzle an educated reader faced for the first time by a bookseller's or an auctioneer's catalogue. . . Many such terms are borrowed from the language of bibliography, others from that of printers and publishers. But to both groups collectors, and the booksellers who serve them, have often given their own glosses and specialised connotations. The arrangement of entries is alphabetical, but groups of cognate terms have sometimes been combined under a single entry." (Pref)

Booklist 49:59 O 15 '52

Bookmark 12:29 N '52 30w

"Recommended." Herbert Cahoon

+ Library J 77:2067 D 1 '52 70w

"Mr John Carter's A.B.C. for Book Collectors should clear away a lot of nonsense from the book trade, hearten and enlighten the book-loving collector, and strike terror into those who mislead him and thrive on his ignorance. Provocative, witty, and sound, it is a book to cherish."

+ Manchester Guardian p4 S 19 '52 70w

"Mr. Carter has written a handful of biographical works, but none, I think, has provided such a suitable setting for his individual gift of succinct definition, which loses nothing of its clarity from being phrased elegantly and often epigrammatically as well." A. N. L. Munby

+ New Statesman & Nation 44:294 S 13 '52 650w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p25 S 22 '52 50w

"This book is more than just the latest specimen of Carterism. Indeed, I incline to regard it as the best Carter hitherto, because it most fully displays his varied qualities as an educator and as a writer on bibliographical themes." Michael Sadleir

+ Spec 189:370 S 19 '52 600w

"Mr. Carter's book is an answer to the book-collector's prayer. In alphabetical, dictionary form it interprets lucidly, authoritatively, wittily and not without the spice of personal prejudice, the jargon current among bibliophiles on both sides of the counter, and to some extent also, on both sides of the Atlantic, with an occasional glance across the Channel."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p604 S 12 '52 550w

CARUSO, DOROTHY PARK (BENJAMIN).
Personal history. 191p il $3 Hermitage
B or 92 52-8191

Reminiscences of the author's life written in an impressionistic manner. She recalls her unhappy childhood and young womanhood; includes the diary of her much-loved brother; and records her later days when she came under the influence of Gurdjieff. Includes very little about her marriage with Caruso.

Bookmark 11:153 Ap '52 40w

Kirkus 20:105 F 1 '52 130w

"Following her tender and absorbing Enrico Caruso; His Life and Death, 1945, this was perhaps bound to be something of a let-down. . . [It is] all set down in nebulous, fragmented fashion." C. K. Miller

Library J 77:362 F 15 '52 90w

"Biographical details are etched in so scantily as to leave obscure the day-by-day, year-by-year development of Dorothy Caruso's life. Rather, the total effect is that of the montage depicting a series of events molding, blending, and strengthening the evolution of a soul. . . This is an autobiography for the General Biography collection rather than for the Music Collection, because Dorothy Caruso herself is not a musician." Dorothy Linder

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 9:419 Je '52 230w

"With skill, charm and an undefinable nostalgia of the spirit, Mrs. Caruso surveys her own life in this book." Vincent Sheean

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Mr 23 '52 450w

"Mrs. Caruso writes with a sharp eye and a warm heart. She has deliberately centered this book on herself and her struggle for an acceptable way of life. The result is that the reader sees all the anguish without some of the facts to understand it." Howard Taubman

N Y Times p6 Mr 9 '52 650w

"The author of this book is very much interested in herself, but she has not succeeded here in passing along that interest. . . A large portion of the book is written in a sort of stream-of-consciousness style, which produces an impression of mindlessness."

— New Yorker 28:147 Ap 19 '52 160w

"Unfolding like a series of Monets 'Dorothy Caruso' has the delicate charm of the author's detachment. On both the artistic and the human level, this print of a pilgrim's remembrance is an even better—a far better—book than 'Enrico Caruso.'" A. F. Wolfe

+ Sat R 35:55 Je 7 '52 450w

Reviewed by Victor Prah

Springf'd Republican p7D My 18 '52 260w

CARY, JOYCE. Prisoner of grace. 301p $3 Harper

52-7281

A story of love and politics in the early decades of the twentieth century. The story is told by Nina, who at eighteen is in love with her cousin Jim but is married in haste to a man of lower birth, Chester Nimmo. Nimmo becomes a figure in politics, "a famous man" at least to his wife, but thru the years she deserts him, time and again, for Jim.

"The pattern of flight and recapture is repeated so often that the novel, in spite of shrewd analysis and some very funny episodes, becomes predictable, even a trifle monotonous." Edward Weeks

Atlantic 190:100 N '52 200w

Booklist 48:369; 49:48 J1 15 '52; O 1 '52

Bookmark 12:34 N '52 30w

"The charming matter-of-fact-ness with which Nina tells her story is recognizable as the manner of the immortal Sara Monday, of 'Herself Surprised'; and there has been nothing quite like it in the English novel since Defoe's Moll Flanders wrote her autobiography. Nina obviously differs from Sara in being a relatively cultivated person, able to express her self-revelations in more sophisticated terms, but she and Sara are sisters under their skins." Milton Crane

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 O 12 '52 400w

Reviewed by Ruth Chapin

Christian Science Monitor p11 O 23 '52 350w

"In Prisoner of Grace, Mr. Cary is at his impeccable best. . . He is, to begin, a virtuoso of prose; not Jamesian prose—that fine-grained tissue of symbol and image—but common language, shaped by main force into an instrument of remarkable power. Cary's power is narrative, and he puts it to multiple uses: it can encompass physical action of violence and extremity, and crises of moral sensibility subterranean in their reverberations. One is reminded, inescapably, of the architectural method: Cary sets words as skillfully as a mason: he builds character, lays out the patterns of life." Richard Hayes

+ Commonweal 57:42 O 17 '52 1150w

Kirkus 20:425 J1 15 '52 210w

Reviewed by Karl Brown

Library J 77:1654 O 1 '52 130w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Jenkins

Manchester Guardian p4 S 19 '52 180w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Stevenson

Nation 175:387 O 25 '52 600w

"The style is slow and prose-ridden and most of the narrative is given in summary, with few dramatic scenes; sometimes it is downright dull. . . Undoubtedly, his flair for English character and speech, for whimsy and humor of exaggeration appeals to some, and his part-time seriousness and even excellence as a writer takes hold of others—but this should not add up to a crowd." Isaac Rosenfeld

— + New Repub 127:27 O 20 '52 750w

"Mr. Cary is, however old his plots, always new in the speed and life of his narrative, the virtuosity of his hand-made prose, the unpredictable reality of his characters: a woman narrator has rarely been made so convincing and sympathetic by a male novelist. But towards the end Chester's tricks, Nina's adulteries and submissions, become wearisome." G. D. Painter

+ New Statesman & Nation 44:356 S 27 '52 420w

Reviewed by James Hilton

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 O 26 '52 600w

"Joyce Cary's eighth novel to be published here is full of that magnificent vitality which announced in 'Herself Surprised' and 'The Horse's Mouth' a new and absolutely individual talent. There is really no one like Mr. Cary writing today—no one who is at once so unsentimental, so rational and so perceptive; no one who can combine, as he does, the toughest-minded realism with mood and insight and character-drawing that is like a lightning flash." Elizabeth Janeway

CARY, JOYCE—Continued

+ N Y Times p5 O 12 '52 900w

"Though his narrator is addicted to incessant asides—fully a third of the book is between parentheses—'Prisoner of Grace' is remarkably lively reading. It is so full of life, indeed, that one wishes Mr. Cary had been less clever and more ambitious, and had provided an experience rather than a feat."

+ New Yorker 28:129 N 1 '52 160w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles

San Francisco Chronicle p20 N 2 '52 450w

"Just when one has come to wonder if the novel may not have become an outmoded and exhausted art form someone appears with a work of imagination that takes a stimulating thrust at the intelligence. The attitudes of Joyce Cary's 'Prisoner of Grace' are not strictly new; nor for that matter is the work itself. But there is enough freshness to its hearty cynicism to let a breath of air into the studio where so many young writers seem to lie huddled together in a state of lugubriously tranquilized self-pity." James Gray

+ Sat R 35:16 O 11 '52 600w

"It is hard to praise adequately the power, the understanding, and the degree of organization with which this rich, full story is told. Mr. Cary has the final virtue of humility before life's mysteries. At a time when so many novels are either slick and authoritative, or formless and without a coherent sense of values, 'Prisoner of Grace' faces human problems with wisdom, compassion and a craftsmanship unsurpassed in our time." L. A. G. Strong

+ Spec 189:374 S 19 '52 420w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn

Springf'd Republican p8C N 9 '52 400w

"Joyce Cary has something very different to say. What an extraordinary thing, he cries, life is! What a piece of work is man! It has not been said with such exuberance, or noted with such a roving, unblinking and delighted eye, since Dickens did it."

Time 60:118 O 20 '52 2900w

"The political side tends, as in so many novels, to become more than a little unreal. The urgency and rapid action of politics are never quite conveyed, simply because the picture of Nimmo, favourable or unfavourable, is always seen through his wife's eyes, reflecting merely the particular nostrum he is advocating at the moment: it is all rather like reading a leading article of years ago. All the same, Mr. Cary carries us on, even when his intention is obscure. He is a powerful writer who gets some of his effects crudely, but gets them all the same."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p609 S 19 '52 600w

"Joyce Cary has made a kind of literary career of women with a zest for life, and his latest book, if not up to the best of his novels of this kind, is a far from negligible achievement. . . . Perhaps because I read this book when questions of political sincerity were very much on my mind, I found it an extraordinarily perceptive picture of the politician in action. Yet it is not an altogether satisfactory novel." Paul Pickrel

+ Yale R n s 42:8 winter '53 700w

CASE, VICTORIA. Quiet life of Mrs. General Lane. 319p $3.75 Doubleday

Lane, Joseph—Fiction. Lane, Polly (Pierre)—Fiction 52-8753

Fictionized biography "of a woman who craved peace and instead became the wife of one of the leading figures in mid-nineteenth century America. Polly Pierre escaped down the Ohio River after Indians had massacred her family and found a home with the Kentucky Harts. Her desire for peace led her to marry Matt Hart to escape his commanding cousin Jo Lane, but after Matt's death a year later, she became Jo's wife, bearing him in time ten children, waiting for him to return home while he legislated in Indiana, fought as general in the Texan campaign, and acted as governor in Oregon. Settled at last in Oregon which partly through his efforts became a state, Lane at sixty retired at last to live peacefully with his wife." (Kirkus)

Booklist 49:32 S 15 '52

Bookmark 12:9 O '52 30w

"We have here the sad case of a worthy book, with much good human material, handled with hard work and loving attention, yet poorly conceived and essentially unsuccessful as a story." Edmund Fuller

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ag 24 '52 330w

"Essentially for feminine readers."

Kirkus 20:306 My 15 '52 160w

"Recommended." H. S. Taylor

+ Library J 77:1190 J1 '52 100w

"Victoria Case has taken her material from family notes on General Lane's career, and she has drawn largely on her imagination for the picture of Polly. She casts an interesting and bitter light on the life of this unknown woman. . . . Her writing is matter-of-fact and unvarnished and she does not probe below surface emotions, but it has merit because of the very freshness of its point of view." Anne Brooks

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 J1 27 '52 500w

"The author presents a good case for her colorful protagonist. Her background material is always fresh and pertinent and careful research stamps each page. Above all, there is a zestful appreciation of her gallant hero." Andrea Parke

+ N Y Times p14 Ag 17 '52 200w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ag 20 '52 600w

"Mrs. General Lane emerges as a soundly interesting creation, whose factual story has been garnished with an absorbing interpretation. The general, if not quite cut down to size, has quite a little of the glory rubbed off."

+ Sat R 35:12 Ag 30 '52 170w

CASEY, ROBERT JOSEPH. Chicago medium rare; when we were both younger; il. by Ann and John Groth. 347p $3.50 Bobbs

977.311 [917.7311] Chicago—Social life and customs 52-10688

A veteran Chicago newspaperman recalls the life in his city from the 1890's to about 1910.

Booklist 49:87 N 1 '52

"His touch is light, his vein of nostalgia is gay, and his whimsical treatment of the Chicago epic will appeal to merry young twerps as well as sober old gaffers." Charles Collins

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 S 28 '52 420w

"Mr. Casey had the perfect equipment for the definitive story—an imaginative mind, an authentic love and knowledge of the city, its customs, its culture and its people, and a sense of humor to complement his sparkling writing talent." L. P. Carroll

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 D 14 '52 700w

"Mr. Casey's book is a pleasant, if casual, collection of nostalgia which, not unsurprisingly, will accommodate the reminiscent mind as far West, I should say, as San Francisco and as far East as Portland, Me. Not everything worth remembering was confined to Chicago, circa 1900. Mr Casey only makes it seem so." David Dempsey

+ N Y Times p34 O 19 '52 350w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p19 N 4 '52 290w

Reviewed by Nelson Algren

Sat R 35:34 N 1 '52 600w

CASEY, ROBERT JOSEPH, and BORGLUM, MARY (MONTGOMERY). Give the man room; the story of Gutzon Borglum. 326p il $4.50 Bobbs

B or 92 Borglum, Gutzon. Mount Rushmore national memorial 52-5804

Biography of a famous American sculptor, whose popular fame rests chiefly on his portraits of four presidents carved out of a mountain face in the Black Hills of South Dakota. The biography is the work of his widow in collaboration with a well known writer of biographies.

Booklist 48:337 Je 15 '52

"It is impossible to say that this biography does even fractional justice to its colorful subject. Admirers of the great Robert J. Casey of 'I Can't Forget' will find it hard to believe that he is an author of so perfunctorily written a book as this. The central character never becomes much more than a card-board figure, and his family and associates remain shadowy. The biography evidences no emotional involvement of the writer with his subject." Edward Barry

— Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Ap 27 '52
290w

Reviewed by R. E. Donlon

Christian Science Monitor p7 Ag 14 '52
600w

"The man is gone and we shall not see the like of him again. He had his shortcomings, to be sure, but some of the most important elements of greatness were his. Whatever time may do with his carvings, and it will take a couple of eternities to erase his great heads, of one thing we may be certain. He made of sculpture both a spiritual force and a stupendous symbol of democratic ideals. . . Such is the story as told by Robert Casey with sweeping narrative skill and colloquial ease, with Mary Borglum at his elbow to keep the facts straight." Thomas Craven

+ N Y Herald Tribune BK R p1 Je 22 '52
1500w

"Mrs. Borglum and Casey do reveal some skimpy details of Borglum's first marriage and quote a few extracts from his diaries as a young artist, but the whole Borglum never emerges from these pages. One suspects Mrs. Borglum would have been better advised had she written her own loving, intimate story of her marriage—of the fun and grief, thrills and frights that come with living on the tail of a human comet." Samuel Lubell

N Y Times p12 Ag 10 '52 300w

"The book is entertaining and timely but . . . appears to be neither a critical biography nor a comprehensive study of Gutzon Borglum's sculpture. It does serve, however, as an adequate introduction to the man and his works." R. H. Dillon

+ San Francisco Chronicle p11 Je 29 '52
320w

.Wis Lib Bul 48:171 J1 '52

CASPARY, VERA. Thelma. 342p $3.50 Little 52-9079

Character study of a woman, who having spent her own girlhood immersed in a "Cinderella" dream, tries to manipulate her daughter's life to that end—and fails.

Kirkus 20:516 Ag 15 '52 130w

"The author's writing is uneven and mediocre. The central character is far from masterfully developed. Yet, the story will no doubt appeal to many female readers." C. J. Roth

Library J 77:1654 O 1 '52 50w

"Vera Caspary calls this story a semi-autobiographical one. She is obviously the 'I' who tells of her friend Thelma. And it is clear that the proud, beautiful Polish girl who was a high-school friend and who lived to achieve such tragic emptiness is a real person. Perhaps because of this, Miss Caspary assumes too much familiarity with her character. Her own inner comprehension of Thelma is not sufficiently transferred to the reader. If her character had been more completely fictitious, Miss Caspary might have made us see her more clearly." Anne Brooks

+ N Y Herald Tribune BK R p13 O 5
'52 400w

Reviewed by Evelyn Eaton

N Y Times p23 N 2 '52 370w

"Miss Caspary has handled her material solidly and with sensitivity. She doesn't add much new to her theme but what she has to say she says well and persuasively. Occasionally, in her role as narrator, she explains too explicitly a point that has already been made dramatically; but generally she is content to let the facts in her well constructed story make the point for her." E. J. Fitzgerald

+ Sat R 35:17 N 15 '52 210w

CASSELMAN, PAUL HUBERT. Cooperative movement and some of its problems. 178p $3
Philosophical lib.

334 Cooperation 52-7947

"A professor of economics at the University of Ottawa analyzes, in simple terms, the basic problems of cooperatives and discusses the social and economic benefits of the movement to both consumer and producer. References, bibliography, index." Bookmark

"This is a much needed and useful analysis of the consumer co-operative movement. Consumer co-operative literature is remarkable for its enthusiasm and for its dearth of critical evaluation. Through the first nine chapters the author, a professor at the University of Ottawa, Canada, demonstrates a fine objectivity, but in his final chapter his restrained enthusiasm is revealed." L. J. Gordon

+ Ann Acad 282:149 J1 '52 440w

Booklist 48:258 Ap 15 '52

Bookmark 11:154 Ap '52 40w

"The greatest usefulness of this book will doubtless be in affording guidance to co-operative educational leaders." C. E. Warne

+ J Pol Econ 60:454 O '52 260w

CASSIRER, ERNST. Philosophy of the enlightenment; tr. by Fritz C. A. Koelln and James P. Pettegrove. 380p $6 Princeton univ. press

190 Philosophy, Modern. Enlightenment

51-14310

"This volume is a translation of the author's Die Philosophie der Aufklärung, which appeared in 1932. . . [It is] an attempt to trace the main lines of European thought in the eighteenth century. Its subject is divided into ideas on nature and natural science, psychology and epistemology, religion, historiography, political science, and aesthetics, all prefaced, however, with a chapter on 'the Mind of the Enlightenment.'" J Philo

"An excellent translation that calls for high praise." Leo Gershow

+ Am Hist R 57:930 J1 '52 1050w

"A work of erudition in the highest degree, comprising an enormous amount of philosophical study." J. L. Jones

+ Crozer Q 29:235 Ap '52 500w

Reviewed by G. W. Cunningham

Ethics 63:72 O '52 180w

"The translation appears accurate and indeed surprisingly elegant. And the translators have had the grace to add to their translation the original of most of the Latin, German, and French quotations in which style might be of interest." George Boas

+ J Philos 49:244 Mr 27 '52 1500w

School & Society 75:110 F 16 '52 30w

"As a good translation of an important and difficult work this book is to be welcomed." Alfred Cobban

+ Spec 189:406 S 26 '52 600w

CASTRO, JOSUE DE. Geography of hunger; foreword by Lord Boyd-Orr. 337p $4.50 Little 338.1 Nutrition. Food supply 52-5012

An analysis of the causes of hunger—in which term the author includes both starvation and malnutrition—throughout the world and in all times, with suggestions for solving the problem by social and economic as well as scientific means. Bibliography. Index.

"This book will be of great interest to the nutritionist in public health, because of the wealth of geographical detail on specific hun-

CASTRO, JOSUE DE—Continued

gers. . . Although the book has faults, the author deserves commendation for accomplishing such a difficult task as successfully as he has." J. M. Henderson

+ — Am J Pub Health 42:1009 Ag '52 410w

"Professor of nutrition and head of the Nutrition Institute, University of Brazil; Chairman of the Executive Council, FAO; and author of several books on nutrition, de Castro is on the face of it an honored and established scientist. But his Geography of Hunger, intended for the general public, cheats in every way possible." Kingsley Davis

— Am Soc R 17:500 Ag '52 650w

Booklist 48:212 Mr 1 '52

"Stimulating, authoritative volume."

+ Bookmark 11:154 Ap '52 40w

Reviewed by C. L. Stewart

Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Ap 27 '52 430w

Reviewed by Mary Hornaday

Christian Science Monitor p9 Ap 12 '52 270w

"This is an essay in opinion which provides surprisingly little factual description to back up its heated declarations. . . The Geography of Hunger seems a discouragingly mixed-up tract to be written by the Chairman of the Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) of the United Nations. It does, however, provide a charge of energy through its hot message about the almost infinite possibilities for bettering the hunger map of the whole world—if the will and mind were mobilized." Philip Burnham

— + Commonweal 56:21 Ap 11 '52 290w

Foreign Affairs 30:670 Jl '52 20w

Kirkus 19:723 D 15 '51

Reviewed by Paul Bartolini

Library J 77:429 Mr 1 '52 100w

Manchester Guardian p4 F 19 '52 150w

Reviewed by Barbara Cadbury

Nation 174:254 Mr 15 '52 700w

"This book is full of controversy and wide open to criticism by experts in the fields of population problems, nutrition, conservation and birth control. Because de Castro sees the main outlines of the 'forest,' I look on The Geography of Hunger as deserving of the widest possible distribution even though he may not be too familiar with the growth of some of the 'trees in the forest.'" H. A. Wallace

New Repub 126:19 Ap 7 '52 750w

Reviewed by Walter Elliot

New Statesman & Nation 43:278 Mr 8 '52 750w

"Exciting and beautifully written book. . . Dr. de Castro is a Brazilian medical man and geographer, who for years, in his native land, dealt with questions of hunger and malnutrition, broadly, directly, as social phenomena and problems. . . He is today Executive Chairman of the United Nations' Food and Agricultural Organization and a member of the Brazilian Institute of Education, Science and Culture, which is affiliated with the UNESCO. He is also an omnivorous scholar with a tremendous erudition, and a man with a fine command of language." E. P. Hanson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Mr 2 '52 1600w

"Josué de Castro seems to know a lot about nutrition, especially about deficiency diseases caused by malnutrition, but he is weak on scientific agriculture and agricultural geography. . . In a curious and opposite way, de Castro's wrongness is very like Vogt's wrongness. Vogt refused to admit that the proper social measures (from irrigation systems to land tenure reform) can increase man's food supply. De Castro refuses to admit that any action is necessary to avoid over-population. He not only does not recognize the real and serious danger of [over] population. Without giving a shred of evidence, he denies that it exists. That is why his book is only half a book on the food-and-population problem." J. N. Leonard

+ — N Y Times p3 Mr 9 '52 1100w

"A clear and reasoned book, and obviously an important one."

+ New Yorker 28:142 Ap 5 '52 230w

Reviewed by A. Sauvy

Pacific Affairs 25:298 S '52 500w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p22 Mr 14 '52 700w

"The Geography of Hunger is a brave book, strikingly and hopefully written, and a needed makeweight to prevailing lamentations and prophecies of doom." Russell Lord

+ Sat R 35:19 Mr 22 '52 480w

"This is a strange book. There is much to admire in it. . . But when the reader turns to Mr. de Castro's individual theory of fertility and population growth—the feature of the book that gives it originality and uniqueness—he can only be appalled by the author's disregard of the basic canons of scientific procedure. . . There are other instances of careless or inconsidered statements in the book. . . The unfortunate consequences of so many errors and flaws in procedure is to create in the reader a lack of confidence in the entire book. This is not to say that none of the book is credible—far from it. There is an enormous mass of useful material here. But one can not be quite sure what to accept on the face of it. That is too bad." H. P. Fairchild

+ — Social Forces 31:82 O '52 1300w

Springf'd Republican p10D Ap 6 '52 220w

"This magnificently angry book is an accounting to the stockholders of management's stewardship of the food resources of the earth." Norman Jolliffe

+ Survey 88:136 Mr '52 2100w

"As chairman of the executive of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations Dr. de Castro has access to great stores of information about food production and consumption over more than half the world. Unfortunately he seems to have no access to authoritative histories of the development of the British Commonwealth or to accounts of the various underlying policies, and the result is a number of serious misstatements that shake the reader's confidence in much of the rest of the book."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p127 F 15 '52 500w

Wis Lib Bul 48:91 Mr '52

CATLING, PATRICK SKENE. Chocolate touch; il. by Mildred Coughlin McNutt. $5p $2.50 Morrow

52-5929

John Midas was usually a nice small boy, but he was so greedy for chocolate that he went to any lengths to get it. This story describes what happened when he found a strange coin, spent it for chocolate, and discovered that everything he ate or touched turned to chocolate.

Reviewed by M. F. Kieran

Atlantic 190:101 D '52 70w

Booklist 49:18 S 1 '52

"The author's tricks with alliteration, funny names and recognizable childhood experiences save this from being preachy."

+ Kirkus 20:369 Jl 1 '52 140w

"The bit of magic is pretty awful for John, and perhaps a cure effected by magic will prove a more memorable lesson than any in real life. It is one of those books that seems too far-fetched to an adult, but it has already proved a hilarious success with children."

L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 S 14 '52 90w

"The author has deftly given a modern twist to the old, much-loved story of King Midas. Younger readers enthusiastically approve the humorous situations, the slight build-up of suspense and the clever pencil drawings." Jeanne Massey

+ N Y Times p48 O 19 '52 110w

"It is told with an engaging humor that the younger boys and girls will instantly discover and approve. The pencil drawings that illustrate it are just exactly right." M. G. Davis

+ Sat R 35:47 S 20 '52 140w

CATTON, BRUCE. Glory road; the bloody route from Fredericksburg to Gettysburg. 416p maps $4.50 Doubleday

973.7 U.S.—History—Civil war 52-5538

This is the second volume of the author's history of the Army of the Potomac, following his Mr Lincoln's Army (Book Review Digest 1951). "Glory Road" recounts the short and unhappy commands of Burnside, Hooker, and Meade, highlighting the fierce encounters at Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, and Gettysburg." (N Y Times)

"Gripping story of the Army of the Potomac. . . Whereas this is primarily a story of the campaigns of late '62 and early '63 as seen through the actions of the Army of the Potomac, no one should make the mistake of assuming that this book is a partisan history. Mr. Catton has been completely objective and has thoroughly digested the varying interpretations of the many authors who have reviewed the events of this period. As a result we are rewarded with a sound, vivid description, not only of these campaigns but also of the internal upheaval of the North at war." W. H. Hebert

+ Am Hist R 58:143 O '52 450w

Booklist 48:244 Ap 1 '52

"If you like military history, here it is at its best. . . From letters and diaries, official reports and expanding recollections, Bruce Catton has come remarkably close to catching the feelings and reactions of citizen soldiers with a disagreeable job on hand. He imparts an air of reality to camp and battle and his soldiers are real persons." Avery Craven

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Ap 20 '52 450w

Reviewed by Denham Sutcliffe

Christian Science Monitor p7 Ap 14 '52 460w

"Readable and another gold mine for students of military strategy."

+ Kirkus 20:26 Ja 1 '52 110w

Reviewed by Herbert Cahoon

Library J 77:528 Mr 15 '52 130w

+ Nation 174:436 My 3 '52 60w

"This second installment of the saga of the Army of the Potomac is better even than its predecessor, 'Mr. Lincoln's Army,' and that is high praise. . . Once again regimental histories furnish the raw material, but they are richly supplemented by the Official Records and other sources; once again there is close attention to the hours, the days, the weeks, not given over to fighting, and the material here is fresh and alive; once again Mr. Catton lays about him unsparingly, but there is more depth, more understanding, less cocksureness and cleverness." H. S. Commager

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Ap 13 '52 1700w

"'Glory Road' is the dramatic and absorbing biography of any army." David Donald

+ N Y Times p7 Mr 16 '52 950w

"This, like all of Mr. Catton's works to date, shows an unusual literary talent and a great regard for research; but with this book there comes to mind just one question: Why? . . . All this is not to take away from the intrinsic worth of Mr. Catton's book. Judged alone it is remarkably good; but books cannot always be judged alone. Coming as it does in the midst of many parallel works, one feels that its main value will be found mainly by Civil War scholars who are interested in minute data. The general picture of these battles has been offered so many times before." Keith Kent

San Francisco Chronicle p22 Mr 9 '52 250w

Reviewed by J. G. Randall

Sat R 35:38 Mr 22 '52 600w

Spring'd Republican p10D Ap 20 '52 350w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:153 Je '52 170w

CAVAFY, CONSTANTINE P. Poems; tr. into English with a few notes by John Mavrogordato; with an introd. by Rex Warner. 199p $3.25 Grove 889.1

Poems by a modern Alexandrian Greek poet, who was born in 1863 and died in 1933. His work was first introduced to English readers thirty years ago by E. M. Forster but this is the first complete volume in English translation to be published.

"Cavafy derives his principal inspiration from Hellenistic culture and writes lyrics which in these good translations retain a feeling of sensitivity and a nostalgic learning which remind one somewhat of the German poet, Stefan George." Herbert Cahoon

+ Library J 77:1513 S 15 '52 50w

"Cavafy is most interesting in his detached yet sympathetic, ironic but delighted, view of the Alexandrian culture, whether contemporary or ancient; his tone can express, sometimes in the same poem, both resignation and affirmation. His frankly homosexual love poems are not, anyway, mincing. The translations by Mr. Mavrogordato are excellent." Rolfe Humphries

+ Nation 175:217 S 13 '52 200w

"E. M. Forster, who has long been Cavafy's leading British advocate, writes that this is 'the most valuable book of the year' and, whether or not it is that in the United States, its publication might well start the formation of a Cavafy cult here." John Brooks

+ N Y Times p11 Ag 31 '52 500w

CAVANAUGH, FRANCES. They knew Abe Lincoln; a boy in Indiana; il. by Harve Stein. 255p $2.50 Rand McNally

B or 92 Lincoln, Abraham—Juvenile Literature 52-7106

"Lincoln's life from his birth to the departure of the family for Illinois, when he was 21; chronological, but each story is a separate entity as it is based on recollections of the friends and neighbors who knew him at the time." Bookmark

Booklist 48:252 Ap 1 '52

Bookmark 11:162 Ap '52 70w

"Told in dramatic story form with the generous use of conversation, real and imagined, it should bring both young Abe and his times even closer to today's children." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p18 Mr 16 '52 250w

"Pioneer backwoods life, real people and events are presented with flavor and humor from the author's research in original sources and recollections of those who knew Lincoln." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 28:242 Ag '52 80w

Kirkus 20:127 F 15 '52 130w

"These stories are graphically and interestingly told. The use of dialect is realistic but may be a deterrent to some readers. Useful to supplement other biographical material." L. E. Cathon

+ Library J 77:539 Mr 15 '52 70w

"Good for grades 4 to 6. Pictures by an able artist could have been better. It all makes good background reading and a pleasant addition to the Lincoln shelf." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 My 11 '52 140w

New Yorker 28:205 D 6 '52 40w

CAVANNA, BETTY. See Headley, E. C.

CAVE, HUGH BARNETT. Haiti, highroad to adventure; with photographs by the author. 306p $5 Holt

972.94 [917.294] Haiti—Description and travel 52-10296

The author, a magazine writer, spent several months on Haiti three years ago, exploring the country. With him were his wife, their two sons, and their jeep. They explored back-country roads, met the people, and investigated voodoo. Now he has written a combination guide book and descriptive history of Haiti. Glossary of Creole terms. No Index.

CAVE, H. B.—Continued

Booklist 49:87 N 1 '52

Bookmark 12:52 D '52 30w

"'Haiti: Highway to Adventure' is more than a glorified guide book. Cave covers town and country, tells what he saw and how he got there, records Haitian menus and recipes, and administers history in pleasant doses." Mason Warner

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 O 26 '52 130w

Christian Century 69:1503 D 24 '52 130w

Kirkus 20:540 Ag 15 '52 100w

"Highly recommended." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 77:2180 D 15 '52 100w

"An agreeably entertaining tale of personal experiences ranging from housekeeping to cave explorations (no pun intended), from mountain trails to voodoo." P. J. Seales

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 N 30 '52 360w

Reviewed by Paul Friedlander

N Y Times p29 O 26 '52 290w

"There are fascinating accounts of voodoo and kanzo, a ceremony involving purification by fire. There are sober words of caution, too, for the arrogance of some American tourists who tend to minimize the local culture. But while invaluable for the Haiti-bound traveler, Mr. Cave's work is better yet—a sensible, undramatic insight to the strange African ways of the spectacular republic." H. S.

+ Sat R 35:39 N 15 '52 170w

CAVERLY, DONALD PHILIP. Primer of electronics and radiant energy. 2d ed 343p il $5.50 McGraw

621.34 [621.38] Electronics. Radiation 52-5328

"This book is not a first-time presentation of new facts or developments in the fields of electronics and radiant energy and is not intended as a finished and complete treatise on the various subjects discussed. It is, rather, a digest of the very basic principles involved in the study of how electrons, protons, neutrons, and other composite atomic particles behave and are controlled and how the radiant energy attending their release or disturbance in atoms is utilized." (Pref) For first edition see Book Review Digest 1944. Index.

Booklist 48:380 J1 15 '52

"The book is easy to read and interesting to anyone whose curiosity about electronics has been aroused." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 77:1308 Ag '52 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 37:55 J1 '52

CAWLEY, ROBERT RALSTON. Milton and the literature of travel. 158p $3 Princeton univ. press

821 Milton, John 51-14465

"The geographical allusions in Milton, always a matter of devoted editorial annotation, are here comprehensively studied for their relation to seventeenth-century travel literature and for their function in Milton's poetry. Mr. Cawley distinguishes three overlapping stages in Milton's knowledge and use of this material: a first period when his geographical information is Biblical and classical; a middle period when it shows the effect of his travels, his official duties, and his reading in the new geographies; a final period when it is assimilated in his major poems. Six chapters define and illustrate these three stages, with special emphasis on Milton's use of Peter Heylyn's Cosmographie and on Milton and Russia." U S Quarterly Bk R

"The geographical allusions in the poems properly hold most of Prof. Cawley's attention.

His exhaustive explorations in this field will win grateful recognition from every Miltonian."

W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 69:497 Ap 23 '52 150w

"The importance of the book to Milton scholarship cannot be overestimated, for it organizes a field of study hitherto treated only in fragments. The two chapters on the crucial passages of geography in Paradise Lost and Paradise Regained offer particularly valuable insights into Milton's use of such lore in his poetry."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:22 Mr '52 130w

"The study enhances both Milton and the voyagers and makes possible a more scholarly reading of the text by those who choose so to read it." J. H. Hanford

+ Yale R n s 41:634 summer '52 170w

CAZAMIAN, LOUIS FRANCOIS. Development of English humor. 2pts 421p $6 Duke univ. press

827.09 Humor. English literature—History and criticism 52-9795

"In this volume Professor Cazamian continues the study of the development of English humor which he began more than twenty-five years ago. In 1930 he published a history of English humor from the earliest times to the Renaissance, [Book Review Digest 1930] and the present book incorporates this previous volume and his 'L'Humor de Shakespeare' (Paris, 1945) and carries the study down to the Restoration." (Sat R) Index.

Booklist 48:317 Je 1 '52

"Cazamian's book has many virtues, but it frequently suffers from the author's too comprehensive definition of his subject. Nor does the book develop as fully as one might wish the distinction which it draws very early between the popular and the sophisticated elements in English humorous literature." Milton Crane

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Ag 10 '52 180w

"Not the least of the book's values is its continual digressions on humor itself. Indeed, it is to be wished that Professor Cazamian would do a short essay on this subject alone." Bergen Evans

+ Sat R 35:10 Ag 2 '52 600w

CENTER, STELLA STEWART. Art of book reading. 298p $3.50 Scribner

428.4 Reading 52-9060

"The author, director of the Reading Institute of New York University (1936-50) presents a method of approach to the problem of reading critically and well based on her experience in teaching people of all ages to read. She feels that reading is the most important weapon in the battle against ignorance, a point with which all librarians will agree. . . . Reading material is divided into type classes, i.e. essays, plays, poetry, etc. with excellent examples and frequent uses of glosses to show how to read." Library J

Booklist 48:205; 274 Mr 1 '52; My 1 '52

Bookmark 11:180 My '52 20w

"Inherent common sense commends Dr. Center's guide to better reading. The book will comfort everybody who has skipped paragraphs of a heavy editorial to keep from disclosing to others how slowly he has to read." L. T. Heron

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 My 18 '52 200w

Reviewed by W. L. Caswell

Churchman 166:12 S '52 110w

"To this reader the text seemed at times outweighed by the selections, but perhaps this is desirable, for this book is truly a work-book for anyone who wishes to further himself in the art of reading. Suggested readings, in each field, admittedly sketchy, but well chosen, are included."

+ Kirkus 20:177 Mr 1 '52 240w

"Recommended to those not looking for short cuts." H. L. Roth

+ Library J 77:714 Ap 15 '52 140w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 J1 13 '52 350w

"For a highly intelligent discussion of the whole business of reading well, you will find 'The Art of Book Reading' about the best thing of its kind anywhere." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 My 12 '52 800w

"What strikes the present reviewer as most remarkable is the general soundness of Miss Center's approach to the problem and her refusal to dodge the fact that genuine learning often must be a somewhat arduous process. . . Similarly, on a somewhat higher level, she realizes that the proper way to meet vocabulary difficulties is to teach more words. . . Perhaps there is nothing radically new in all this. . . But the unfamiliar emphasis is now fresh again." J. W. Krutch
+ Sat R 35:9 Ag 2 '52 700w

Wis Lib Bul 48:166 J1 '52

CESPEDES, ALBA DE. Best of husbands; tr. from the Italian by Frances Frenaye. 343p $3.75 Macmillan

52-13391

A novel of marriage, the scene of which is Italy before, during, and just after World war II. The story is of the marriages of a mother and her daughter, both ending in tragedy.

Kirkus 20:520 Ag 15 '52 160w

"In spite of the unpromising title this [is] a very well done story about marriage. . . The book will be enjoyed by women. Unfortunately it's not a man's book although men should read it." C. J. Roth

+ Library J 77:1654 O 1 '52 50w

"This tale of an unresigned Cinderella, flowingly translated into effortless English, moves toward its climax of violence with emotional power and a certain genuine sensitivity. But the climax itself is somehow incredible. The lament for wives which underlies the story and appears to justify it is somehow absurd and immature." Virgilia Peterson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 N 2 '52 600w

"This is a simply told, straightforward novel, too well done to be categorized merely as lending library fiction yet lacking that necessary awareness which would make it a candidate for a higher category." Frances Keene

+ N Y Times p22 N 2 '52 550w

"This childish, petulant book owes any merit it has to the light hand of its translator, Frances Frenaye."

+ New Yorker 28:186 N 15 '52 100w

"A novel of substance and feeling, fully up to the high standards set by her masculine compatriots. Frances Frenaye, the translator, has as usual done a first rate job." T. G. Bergin

+ Sat R 35:52 N 8 '52 380w

Springf'd Republican p5C D 21 '52 70w

Time 60:70 D 29 '52 370w

"The Best of Husbands is an extraordinarily convincing picture of a woman's attitude towards marriage; through the device of suggesting what the husband might have said, but did not say, at various points in the story, it also attempts, though less successfully, I think, to give the man's attitude. It is a novel that deals seriously with fundamental relationships." Paul Pickrel

Yale R n s 42:6 winter '53 320w

CEZANNE, PAUL. Paul Cézanne; text by Meyer Schapiro. (Library of great painters) 126p col pl $12.50 Abrams

759.4 Paintings, French

Fifty reproductions in full color of Cezanne's paintings, with an introduction by Meyer Schapiro, of the Department of fine arts and archeology, Columbia University.

"For the text alone, this is outstanding in this series. . . Too often the text is slighted in a portfolio of painting reproductions. This text merits the reader's attention, if appreciation of the paintings is to be as rich as it may be."

+ Kirkus 20:737 N 15 '52 60w

"Meyer Schapiro has written a powerful introductory essay on Cézanne as well as an analysis of each of the 50 paintings which make up this volume. His criticism is remarkably tough and detailed, addressed directly to the works themselves." Kermit Lansner

+ New Repub 127:30 D 8 '52 60w

"It is not a 'technical' book, but there is no painter or art historian who could not learn a great deal from it." Alfred Frankenstein

+ San Francisco Chronicle p3 N 30 '52 110w

CEZANNE, PAUL. Paul Cézanne sketch book; a facsimile reproduction, by Carl O. Schniewind. 2v 30p 100pl $12 Valentin

741.9 Drawings

52-1411

"Two small volumes (five by eight and three-quarter inches), one a page-by-page reproduction in full size of a fifty-page notebook that Cézanne used for his sketches between 1870 and 1885, and the other containing Mr. Schniewind's introductory essay and analysis of the notebook's contents. The notebook pages are crammed with landscape motifs, random portrait studies (mainly of Cézanne's family), figure compositions, and so on. . . Cézanne [also] used the book occasionally for his memoranda; interspersed with the sketches one finds jottings of daily expenditures, drafts of letters, what appear to be shopping lists, and such—even, here and there, childish scribbles and drawings by the artist's son Paul." New Yorker

Reviewed by Edward Barry

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Mr 2 '52

90w

+ New Repub 125:21 D 10 '51 130w

Reviewed by Howard Devree

+ N Y Times p13 D 23 '51 140w

"The two volumes together give one an intimate glimpse into Cézanne's everyday life—a rare thing with a man of such austerity of character."

New Yorker 27:177 D 8 '51 170w

"The reproduction of the drawings has the impeccable quality which no color prints can attain; it is reserved for plates from black-and-white works, rendered in the exact size of the originals, as these are. The comment, by the curator of prints and drawings at the Chicago museum, is most helpful in its scholarly excellence." Walter Pach

+ Sat R 35:38 Ja 5 '52 800w

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p88 F 1 '52 550w

CHABER, M. E. Hangman's harvest. 211p $2.50 Holt

52-724

Detective story.

Kirkus 20:15 Ja 1 '52 70w

Reviewed by James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Mr 16 '52 140w

"Sentence by sentence, this is a strongly readable novel; but its story (the imported detective cleaning up municipal corruption in Southern California) is a meticulous collection of every overworked device in the field, made notable by the most unbelievable recovery yet from a protracted professional beating and by singularly open reproduction of several motifs from 'The Maltese Falcon.'" Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p24 Mr 9 '52 90w

"Character cliches pretty well avoided; action cliches present in full force. Writing lifts this a notch above the usual level. C plus." L. G. Offord

CHABER, M. E.—Continued

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p24 Mr 9 '52
70w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff
Sat R 35:45 Mr 22 '52 30w

CHALMERS, MRS AUDREY. Birthday of Obash; story and pictures. 55p $2 Viking

52-8183

Obash was the baby hippopotamus at the zoo. When his birthday came around nobody seemed to take any interest in it, so Obash had to find his own way of celebrating.

Bookmark 11:236 J1 '52

Reviewed by E. C. Ince
Christian Science Monitor p9 My 15 '52
40w

"It is good to have this old friend back again, for both story and pictures have life and humor." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 28:182 Je '52 50w

"This story has lots to recommend it, but it is much too long for the age at which it is aimed."

+ Kirkus 20:69 F 1 '52 90w

Reviewed by M. G. Davis
Sat R 35:48 My 10 '52 170w

CHALMERS, GORDON KEITH. Republic and the person; a discussion of necessities in modern American education. 270p $4 Regnery 370.973 Education—Aims and objectives.
Education—U.S. 52-13102

"Author is today one of the outstanding American college presidents. Kenyon has acquired under his leadership an enviable reputation especially in the field of English literature. Present volume ranges over whole field of higher education and Chalmers offers pertinent comment on every aspect." (Library J) Index.

"A spirited and controversial book about education in America." A. C. Ames
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 D 21 '52
360w

"The Christian and the believer in a republican form of government will find a very present help in this book, for this educator, an outstanding scholar in his own right, makes clear that the youth of the nation are not helped by the caricature of education that passes for the real thing in our schools today. Dr. Chalmers does not compromise. It is intellectual training and training in divine studies that he has in mind as the prime emancipating agent for our citizenry." Anthony Harrigan

+ Christian Century 69:1408 D 3 '52 550w

"One wishes he could recommend Dr. Chalmers' book without reservation; but this reviewer can not do that. The first trouble is that the author continually digresses into subjects only imperfectly related by him to his main thesis. This confuses and distracts. Secondly, he too constantly quotes other people, often at length. . . . Despite faults, this is a notable book by a man of integrity and ideas." B. L. Bell

+ Commonweal 57:202 N 28 '52 800w

"Essential for all college and university libraries." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 77:1646 O 1 '52 60w

"The proffered solutions are in the conservative tradition, but they do not rely on tradition to validate them. The book is not light reading, but it is never ponderous. It is highly rewarding and will surely be on the list of 'required assignments' for those professional educators and educated nonprofessionals who are trying to define and defend the value of liberal education." M. M. Horton

+ N Y Times p5 D 28 '52 600w

Reviewed by G. A. Panichas
Springfd Republican p13C D 14 '52
400w

CHAMBERLAIN, LAWRENCE HENRY. Loyalty and legislative action; a survey of activity by the New York state legislature, 1919-1949. 254p $4 Cornell univ. press

323.4 Civil rights. Communism—New York (state). New York (state). Legislature 51-14490

"The Dean of Columbia College, Lawrence H. Chamberlain, has added this volume to a series dealing with the impact of government programs on civil liberties, made possible by a grant from the Rockefeller Foundation. . . . The present work, more specialized in scope, treats investigations by the New York State Legislature in the field of subversive activities, from the end of the first world war to 1950. . . . The book becomes, in substance, a study and comparison of the two most active periods of legislative investigation—the Lusk committee formed in the excited era following the first world war and the Rapp-Coudert committee of the early '40s." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) Index.

Foreign Affairs 31:156 O '52 50w

"The book deserves the attention of thinking Americans." J. E. Brown

+ Library J 76:1558 O 1 '51 140w

Manchester Guardian p4 J1 8 '52 40w

Reviewed by August Heckscher
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 F 3 '52
600w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:69 Mr '52 220w

CHAMBERLAIN, SAMUEL, II. Beauport at Gloucester. See Hollister, P. M.

CHAMBERLAIN, SAMUEL, and FLYNT, HENRY NEEDHAM. Frontier of freedom; the soul and substance of America portrayed in one extraordinary village, Old Deerfield, Massachusetts; II. by Samuel Chamberlain. 154p $6 Hastings house

974.42 Deerfield, Massachusetts 52-9645

A history in prose and photographs of the seventeenth century Massachusetts village of Old Deerfield.

"The material presented is of absorbing interest, and the superb photography even more generous than usual in Mr. Chamberlain's always distinctive and beautiful books." O. D. Hormel

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 J1 3 '52
30w

San Francisco Chronicle p10 J1 6 '52
250w

"A picture-book extraordinary, the volume is outstanding both as a historical record and as an exhibition of artistic photography." R. S. Brooks

+ Springfd Republican p8D My 11 '52
350w

CHAMBERS, WHITTAKER. Witness. 808p $5 Random house

B or 92 Communism—U.S. Hiss, Alger
52-5149

Whittaker Chambers' own account of his life, his connection with the Communist party and his repudiation of it, and of the Hiss-Chambers trial. Index.

Booklist 48:319 Je 1 '52

"A sensitive and perceptive observer, with a rare writing gift, was placed close to the heart of the soviet conspiracy in the United States for 13 years. This man was equipped with an understanding of spiritual values which eventually tore him from the grasp of the plotters. Then he was enveloped in a public drama which attracted international attention. The combination guaranteed the ingredients of a best seller. But much more has evolved. Before many pages have been turned, the reader realizes that he, too, is a witness—to the emergence of a new author of great talent, master of an unhurried, limpid style, whose phrases sink softly into the mind, there to linger with a strange persistence. There is a constant temptation to read passages aloud, to savor the rhythm of prose which never sacrifices simplicity to eloquence." Willard Edwards

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 My 25 '52 650w

Reviewed by Paul Hutchinson
Christian Century 69:700 Je 11 '52 2250w

Reviewed by S. R. Davis
Christian Science Monitor p11 My 22 '52 1000w

"The most disturbing thing in Chambers' book is his apparent belief that the ordinary people of America can't see through Stalinism, and that we are on the edge of intellectual defeat. Countless people will read this book, and find in it much to help them get perspective. They will be glad, like the present writer, that it was put before them. But most will go on, let us hope, seeing straighter than the book itself." Devere Allen

+ — Churchman 166:6 J1 '52 1050w

Reviewed by John Cogley
Commonweal 56:176 My 23 '52 1450w
Current Hist 23:61 J1 '52 60w
Foreign Affairs 31:156 O '52 50w
Kirkus 20:243 Ap 1 '52 480w

Reviewed by R. S. Taylor
Library J 77:888 My 15 '52 130w

"'Witness' is a fascinating grab-bag: autobiography, account of underground work, religious tract, attempt at an explanation of Stalinism. As confession, it has an almost classical stature; whatever opinions Chambers may now superimpose on his memory, the narrative itself demands the attention of anyone interested in modern politics. As autobiography, the book is embarrassing: Chambers' memoir of his family seems a needless act of masochism while the portrait of his adult self suggests a man whose total sincerity is uncomplicated by humor, irony, or persuasive humility." Irving Howe

Nation 174:502 My 24 '52 3400w

"Witness is undeniably important; it cannot be ignored, though it is often an unbelievable book, frequently a boring book, vastly overwritten and sometimes sickening, and nearly always a terrifying book. But not in the way Mr. Chambers intended: it does not reveal new information or interpretation of the Hiss-Chambers case, or of the alleged existence of a tiny but supposedly effective espionage ring in Washington during the thirties." Merle Miller

New Repub 126:19 My 26 '52 1200w

"Whatever one's opinion may be, there will be fairly wide agreement on one point. The man can write. His prose is swift, powerful at times, deft always. He has written an autobiography the like of which has not been seen. . . . He is an emotional man, as he acknowledges. His book is the apology of a soul that has struggled for serenity, has seldom found it, has suffered agonies in the search. His analysis of himself may not be satisfying in every respect, but it is nevertheless fascinating." Marcus Duffield

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 My 25 '52 2050w

"The name of the author, the theme of his work, the nature of our times all conspire to make this volume one of the most significant autobiographies of the twentieth century. It is not among the hundred great books. . . . Chambers' book will be widely read and deservedly so. That is why it seems to me all the more necessary to conclude by saying that in the war for human freedom the twice born life of Whittaker Chambers is a tragic casualty. Instructive to the last about the mortal threat of the Communist movement, for which we should be deeply grateful to him, it does not offer us an intelligent guide to victory or even survival." Sidney Hook

N Y Times p1 My 25 '52 2450w

"It is a story that contains every element of a major confession, and our first impulse on finishing 'Witness' is to ask why, after all, it isn't a major confession. What has kept us from being more than grimly astonished and sickened by an account so circumstantial and unflinching of the wreck of promising lives? . . . We are told that he has had it; in a sense, it is what the book is about. And yet we are not persuaded. This failure is not one of literary talent, of which the author has some, or of craftsmanship, of which he has a good deal. It is one of spirit. It is one of lone. From the opening section of the book . . . to a three-page coda, the tone of 'Witness' jars. The reason it jars may be that while Chambers has seen himself as a man telling his great tale humbly, under the aspect of eternity, what comes through to us is a piety as rigid and obtuse as the godless Communist piety he has abjured." Brendan Gill

New Yorker 28:133 My 24 '52 1100w

"Long, detailed and brilliantly written story." C. W. Weinberger

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 My 18 '52 1200w

Time 59:104 My 26 '52 3600w

"Impressively well-written in spots, in others badly overwritten."

+ — U S Quarterly Bk R 8:232 S '52 320w

"No other book about the great case is likely to be so widely read or long remembered. It is written with extraordinary intensity and power. It is filled with the drama of action, scene, and soul. It contains passages of rare eloquence. Dealing with the raw stuff of history and the mounting crisis of our times, it offers a challenge to the Western world to find in its own freedom and faith a reason to live and a reason to die at once more valid and more potent than the Communist's." H. P. Stokes

+ Yale R n s 42:123 autumn '52 1000w

CHAMBRUN, CHARLES ADOLPHE DE PINETON, marquis de. Impressions of Lincoln and the Civil war; a foreigner's account; tr. from the French by Aldebert de Chambrun, 174p $2.75 Random house

B or 92 Lincoln, Abraham. U.S.—History
—Civil war—Personal narratives 52-9815

"Gen. de Chambrun relates in his preface how, 'only two years ago,' he found among his sister's papers these letters written by his father to his mother, from Dec. 20, 1864, to June 23, 1865. During these months, as representative of the French minister of foreign affairs, the marquis had entree to the White House and other high political scenes. He wrote regularly to his wife, giving his impressions of men and events. The passages concerning Lincoln are penetrating, but no more so than those in which the marquis analyzes his friend, Sen. Sumner, and other notables." Chicago Sunday Tribune

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo
Atlantic 190:95 D '52 30w

Booklist 49:87 N 1 '52

"Not many of Lincoln's contemporaries were so indelibly impressed upon first meeting the President, and few commentators have given us more entertaining vignettes of the Civil war area." R. P. Basler

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 O 26 '52 160w

Kirkus 20:540 Ag 15 '52 120w

"It is a source book and is recommended for American History collections." Herbert Cahoon

+ Library J 77:1804 O 15 '52 40w

Reviewed by Oscar Handlin

+ Nation 175:470 N 22 '52 190w

"De Chambrun was present at the funeral in the East Room of the Executive Mansion and rode with the cortege as far as the Capitol. . . . Already [he] realized, as he wrote, that 'Lincoln is now the greatest of all Americans.' And those who concur will agree that De Chambrun's superb impromptu have graven a durable portrait of the triumphant hours, unlikely to be surpassed." D. C. Mearns

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 O 26 '52 1500w

"These letters give a fresh and authentic glimpse of Washington problems and personal-

CHAMBRUN, C. A. D.—Continued
ities during the last days of the Civil War and the early weeks of the Reconstruction era."
David Donald

+ N Y Times p4 N 9 '52 550w

Reviewed by Austin Blair

San Francisco Chronicle p16 N 9 '52
100w

"Chambrun's letters constitute the primary record made by a close and sensitive observer who was at Lincoln's side on several especially dramatic or revealing occasions. As such they will have some attraction for any reader of history, and will appeal especially to the many whose major enthusiasm is for the life of Lincoln and the story of the Civil War." D. M.
Potter

+ Sat R 35:19 N 8 '52 490w

Time 60:134 N 10 '52 40w

CHAMPION, FREDERICK ALFRED. Corrosion testing procedures. 369p il $6.25 Wiley 620.172 [620.1122] Corrosion and anti-cor-rosives. Metals—Testing [52-11475]

"A reference book addressed primarily to scientists and engineers who are concerned with corrosion-testing of metals in connection with the design of processing equipment and the control of corrosion problems which have developed in equipment in service. Generally speaking, tests and testing equipment are described in sufficient detail to enable the plant metallurgist to determine whether a particular test is applicable to his problem. A literature reference then serves as a guide to a fuller discussion of the procedure. A wide range of tests and related matter is thus covered." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

"While a more critical appraisal of the merits of particular testing techniques would have been welcomed as a guide to which type of test is likely to be most useful for a particular purpose, this book can be recommended to all who seek guidance in carrying out the kind of test they may decide to use, or may be instructed to undertake." F. L. LaQue

+ Chem & Eng N 30:3974 S 22 '52 290w

N Y New Tech Bks 57:76 S '52

CHAMPION, SELWYN GURNEY, and SHORT,
MRS DOROTHY DUDLEY (FIELD), comps.
Readings from world religions. 336p $3.75
Beacon press

208.2 Sacred books. Religions [51-4279]

"This book is intended to be an introduction to the eleven living religions of the world. . .
The aim has been to present them all simply and with an equal lack of bias, as though for the information of someone newly come to the question of religion." (Foreword) For each religion there is an introduction with verses from the Scriptures and readings from the Scriptures. Contents: Hinduism; Shintoism;
Judaism; Zoroastrianism (Parseism); Taoism;
Confucianism; Jainism; Buddhism; Christianity;
Islam (Muhammadanism); Sikhism. Glossary.
Bibliography.

Reviewed by J. F. Nims

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Mr 2 '52
200w

"The book will be an admirable supplement to—and in some cases may be a substitute for —any of the more elaborate works on the world religions." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 69:371 Mr 26 '52
110w

"The introductions seem to me, so far as I can judge them, to be honest attempts to give a fair picture of each religion; and the selections certainly show each religion in a favourable light. This is partly, I think, because a good deal of emphasis is laid on the moral teaching of the several faiths; and there is a very remarkable amount of agreement among them on ethical ideas and the pursuit of virtue." T. W. M.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Je 11 '51 240w

"The late Dr. Champion possessed both the necessary scholarship and an appreciation of the nature of the religious spirit of man to equip him to ascertain the sacred writings which best introduce the newcomer to the essence and spirit of the religions presented.

No scholar will be completely satisfied with all selections for he will be aware that there are further riches not brought to view in this book, and it is to be hoped that the non-scholar will gain an appreciation of the religions which will lead him to seek further knowledge." P. H. Ashby

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Mr 9
'52 450w

CHAN, SOU. House of Chan cookbook; drawings by Sui Lan Loh. 190p $2.50 Doubleday 641.5 Cookery, Chinese 52-5543

"Recipes for delightful dishes in all categories from appetizers to desserts that have proved to be favorites of this New York restaurateur's patrons. Most of them are easy to make and can be prepared from materials available in neighborhood stores." Booklist

Booklist 48:260 Ap 15 '52

Reviewed by Morrison Wood

Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 Jl 13 '52
20w

"Here's a book I want to own."

+ Kirkus 20:61 Ja 15 '52 120w

"Chan, the well known New York restaurateur has made a delightful little book of his rather simple and delectable recipes." K. T.
Willis

+ Library J 77:1202 Jl '52 30w

"Will be welcomed by people who have enjoyed Chinese food either in China or in the better Chinese restaurants here in the states."
Charlotte Turgeon

+ N Y Times p30 My 25 '52 40w

CHANDLER, LESTER VERNON, and WAL-LACE, DONALD HOLMES, eds. Economic mobilization and stabilization; selected materials on the economics of war and defense. 610p $6; text ed $4.50 Holt

355.26 War—Economic aspects. U.S.—Economic policy 51-7043

"How can we mobilize the nation economically and at the same time prevent the inflation that threatens to accompany the mobilization process. A group of economic advisers, tax experts, and university professors probe into the many aspects of this urgent question." (Sat R) Bibliography. Index.

"A judicious selection of readings, knit together skillfully by essays written by the editors. . . The first and major part of the volume is directed to the experience of World War II, in which the reader is given an excellent picture of the development of wartime mobilization controls." Benjamin Caplan

+ Am Econ R 42:668 S '52 1050w

"This should prove a very valuable textbook for mobilizers of the future." C. D.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 Mr 23 '52
200w

Sat R 35:43 Ja 19 '52 40w

CHANDOHA, WALTER, ed. All kinds of cats; with photographs by [the editor]. 85p $3 Knopf

636.8 Cats 52-6395

The first part of this book is a brief anthology, appropriately illustrated, of poems and folklore about cats. Part two describes and illustrates various breeds of cats.

"The young, as well as cat lovers not so young, will find this collection a delight." Leon Harpole

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 N 16 '52
50w

Commonweal 57:170 N 21 '52 10w

Kirkus 20:655 O 1 '52 100w

"This book is made up of outstanding photographs by an expert in the art. . . Not a little child's book, but will be appreciated by cat lovers of any age as well as those interested in photography. Excellent paper and print." E. E. Frank

+ Library J 77:2014 N 15 '52 40w

"The author writes knowingly, and is obviously as fond of one sort of cat as of another, and knows his cats as individuals. His sensitiveness to their special qualities is revealed both in his brief suggestions and facts, and in the charming choice of verses. . . The photographs, some of which are already famous among photographers, are stunning." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p3 N 16 '52 130w

"There is a little bit of everything in this fascinating potpourri. . . But the real distinction of the book is in the many dramatic photographs. Mr. Chandoha presents his cats with dignity and imagination rather than the coyness that appeals to many illustrators." M. L. Krupka

+ N Y Times p24 D 14 '52 120w

CHANDOS, DANE, pseud. of PETER LILLEY and ANTHONY STANSFELD. Journey in the sun. 278p $3 Doubleday

946 Spain—Description and travel. Portugal —Description and travel 52-5771

A travel book about a trip thru Spain and Portugal, which is set within the frame of a fictional narrative.

Booklist 48:295 My 15 '52

Bookmark 11:230 Jl '52 20w

Reviewed by H. L. Johnson

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Je 29 '52 500w

"In 'Journey in the Sun' Spain emerges as a land of inexhaustible interest and its author as a man fully capable of enjoying and recording those characteristics which have caused so many travelers to speak of Spain with love and longing." J. G. Harrison

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 Je 2 '52 110w

"The whole is thoroughly entertaining travel talk rather than a bluebooking of routes and stopping places on a currently fashionable tourist country."

+ Kirkus 20:178 Mr 1 '52 210w

Reviewed by W. K. Harrison

Library J 77:900 My 15 '52 70w

Reviewed by Kimon Friar

New Repub 127:18 Jl 28 '52 330w

Reviewed by Honor Tracy

New Statesman & Nation 43:740 Je 21 '52 300w

"The places of this travelogue are real, its history straight out of the guide books. It carries the armchair traveler through Spain, in and out of Portugal, observing ancient architecture, enjoying a bullfight, and eating abundantly, and better than most travelers in Spain. . . Authors who give the impression that automobile travel in Spain is easy if only one has money incur a certain responsibility. . . Yet it is not fair to be too critical. The book leaves the reader with the feeling that he knows Spain and Spaniards well, and indeed the chief characteristics are set forth. Only the old Spanish hand concerned with darker and deeper problems will complain about this type of popular treatment." Mildred Adams

+ N Y Times p20 Ap 27 '52 470w

"The feel of the Iberian Peninsula is in this book. . . The author, a cultivated and amiable guide has a sharp eye for the characteristics of the places and people he sees, and speaks with charm and enlightenment of a part of the world that Americans seem destined, to know much better in the next few years."

+ New Yorker 28:147 My 17 '52 110w

"If you like pleasant travel writing which is more factually informative than most such, then this book is for you. Anyone planning to visit Spain or Portugal by car (or even otherwise) will find it an excellent supplement to the formal guide-book of fact." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ap 25 '52 600w

Sat R 35:36 Je 21 '52 270w

"Clearly, a book of the scope of this one cannot rival the studied refinement and breadth of culture of Mr. Sacheverell Sitwell, the penetration and literary acumen of Mr. Gerald Brenan, or the realism and political conviction of Mr. Arturo Barea. But the author is a cultured, sensitive person who understands Spain, and who has the literary equipment to convey his sane impressions in prose which neither bores nor irritates."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p399 Je 20 '52 700w

CHANG, FA-SHUN. Until the phoenix. (Asia bk) 310p $3.50 Day

52-9614

Novel of present-day China and Formosa. Lee Ho was only seventeen and had just been married when the Communists took his village and conscripted him. He escaped to Shanghai with his young wife, and later to Formosa. The story is of their experiences in learning to exist under new and strange conditions.

Booklist 49:67 O 15 '52

"The artless simplicity of the characters, and the tranquil tenor of their world, as they endure displacement and disruption, is affecting in human rather than propagandist terms."

+ Kirkus 20:470 Ag 1 '52 180w

"It is probably inevitable in a story of this sort that the author's eye seems often to be less concerned with his narrative than with its background. One feels throughout the awareness of political implication, especially in the closing scenes on Formosa. . . It should be mentioned that Mr. Chang has visited Formosa, among other places, to get material for his novel—'Until the Phoenix' stands as one of the first attempts to trace in fiction the influence of the Communists on the average Chinese person's life and on the political consciousness of an entire people waiting for the phoenix's renewal of life." J. J. Espey

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p33 O 12 '52 750w

Reviewed by Mai-Mai Sze

N Y Times p23 N 2 '52 220w

"Written in a simple, flat prose, this novel has occasional glints of humor." J. F. Rooney

Springf'd Republican p9D S 28 '52 50w

CHANG, TSE-CHUN. Cyclical movements in the balance of payments. 223p $3.75 Cambridge

380.1 Balance of trade 51-7046

"This study presents the results of a statistical survey of the balance-of-payments data of different types of country in the period 1924-38. Its purpose is to show the pattern of cyclical behavior particular to each type of country; and to suggest, in the light of the Keynesian theory of employment, a possible explanation for the general nature of the equilibrating process in the balance of payments." Pref

"The volume undoubtedly contains a wealth of useful information. The author has set himself the arduous task of grinding out estimates of several hundred structural parameters of one kind or another. Unfortunately, a certain amount of scepticism is justified, in this reviewer's opinion, concerning the validity of some of the results. Without much preliminary discussion either of the statistical or economic problems involved, Dr. Chang embarks upon the process of estimation. As a consequence, he leaves the reader in some doubt as to the appropriateness of his estimation methods." Svend Laursen

+ Am Econ R 42:195 Mr '52 600w

Foreign Affairs 30:331 Ja '52 30w

Reviewed by H. P. Minsky

J Pol Econ 60:164 Ap '52 800w

CHANSIOR, TORREY (HOOD). Saturday night is my delight, by Torrey Hood, pseud. 245p $3 Putnam

52-9837

"Tells of [an Irish] family, who lived in Meriden, Conn., before the turn of the century.

CHANSLOR, T. H.—Continued

It is particularly the story of Katy, as warm and charming and light-hearted a girl as ever had the whole crowd over every Saturday evening." N Y Times

Booklist 49:32 S 15 '52

Kirkus 20:469 Ag 1 '52 160w

Library J 77:1759 O 15 '52 40w

"Torrey Hood's novel of an Irish family at the turn of the century is slight but attractive. She has a flair for recreating the period, and she brings alive the '90s from the minute details of dress and furniture to the conventions by which a warm, happy, normal family lived."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 S 14 '52 280w

"Miss Hood has added substance and flavor to what might have been a routine period piece. Saturday Night Is My Delight is a delight indeed." Jane Cobb

+ N Y Times p28 S 14 '52 250w

"An affectionate genre piece, eminently readable and frequently moving." E. J. F.

+ Sat R 35:34 S 27 '52 180w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal

Springf'd Republican p9D S 28 '52 130w

CHAPELLE, HOWARD IRVING. American small sailing craft; their design, development and construction. 363p il $7.50 Norton

623.822 Sailing vessels. Boat building 52-6157

"Plans and full descriptions of more than 100 sailing craft under 40 feet deck length are the basic ingredient of Mr. Chapelle's newest documentary. The book begins with colonial boats and moves through the various types to the modern V-bottom." San Francisco Chronicle

Booklist 48:167 Ja 15 '52

"Valuable for historical reference. Recommended." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 77:440 Mr 1 '52 50w

"Here is a great deal of practical information for the would-be boat builder." S. N. + San Francisco Chronicle p24 F 17 '52 100w

CHAPIN, HENRY, and SMITH, FREDERICK GEORGE WALTON. Ocean river. 325p il maps $3.50 Scribner

551.46 [551.471] Gulf stream 52-12093

A popular study of the Gulf Stream dealing with the scientific and geological aspects, the mythological (there is a chapter on the Atlantis theory) and the sociological and historical influences it has had on mankind. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 49:27 S 15 '52

Bookmark 12:32 N '52 20w

"The book is closer to Van Loon or Gamow than to Carson. Its pace is fast, its rhetoric heady, only occasionally lapsing into clichés, and it packs an education between its handsomely decorated covers. The interior illustrations—maps and line drawings—are excellent." Fritz Leiber

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 S 14 '52 550w

Reviewed by T. M. Longstreth

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 D 18 '52 600w

Kirkus 20:337 Je 1 '52 280w

Reviewed by M. D. Read

Library J 77:1828 O 15 '52 40w

"This is a difficult book to review in detail, both because of its compactness, covering an extremely wide scope, and because of its uniformly high level of balanced excellence." William Beebe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 S 14 '52 1050w

"In a year marked by a number of good books about the sea, the authors have added another well worth reading and one marked by a fresh approach." Gilbert Klingel

+ N Y Times p20 S 14 '52 900w

"An absorbing book."

+ New Yorker 28:145 S 13 '52 200w

"Mr. Chapin is a historian-anthropologist with a talent for illustrating the eternal connection between nature and Man; Mr. Smith is one of the world's foremost oceanographers and marine biologists. The team works smoothly together, and between them the two members have written an exceedingly interesting book." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 S 11 '52 850w

Reviewed by J. S. Douglas

Sat R 35:21 S 27 '52 700w

Wis Lib Bul 48:212 S '52

CHAPMAN, JANE A. Girl's book of sewing; diagrams by Walter Chapman; il. by Jeva Cralick. 95p $2 Greenberg

646.21 Sewing—Juvenile literature 52-8124

After collecting necessary tools, this book for girls of ten and up, begins right away with instructions for making a scarf. In the course of making each article suggested, the beginner learns about fabrics and cutting, various types of stitches, pressing, using the sewing machine, using commercial patterns, etc.

Booklist 49:37 S 15 '52

Reviewed by M. C. Skinner

Library J 77:1664 O 1 '52 30w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 O 19 '52 20w

CHAPMAN, JOHN ARTHUR, ed. Best plays of 1951-1952; and the Year book of the drama in America. (V35) 387p il $4 Dodd

808.82 Dramas—Collections

Contains abridged versions of: Mrs. McThing, by Mary Chase; The shriek, by Joseph Kramm; I am a camera, by John van Druten; The fourposter, by Jan de Hartog; Point of no return, by Paul Osborn; Barefoot in Athens, by Maxwell Anderson; Venus observed, by Christopher Fry; Jane, by S. N. Behrman; Gigi, by Anita Loos; Remains to be seen, by Howard Lindsay and Russel Crouse. Indexes.

Booklist 49:121 D 1 '52

Reviewed by Edward Wagenknecht

Chicago Sunday Tribune p21 N 16 '52 350w

"Highly recommended." George Freedley

+ Library J 77:2178 D 15 '52 40w

CHAPMAN, SYDNEY. Earth's magnetism. 2d ed rev 127p $1.50 Wiley

551.16 [538.7] Magnetism, Terrestrial 51-12043

"A short but solid account of the current knowledge of the earth's magnetism and current methods of observing it. The exposition includes little mathematics; nevertheless, the reader will need a fairly good knowledge of basic physics. The first edition was published in 1936. In this edition the work has been thoroughly revised." N Y New Tech Bks

"A compact, authoritative presentation. . . Physicists, meteorologists and radio engineers are some of the obvious readers of the book." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 76:1707 O 15 '51 140w

N Y New Tech Bks 36:73 S '51

CHASE, MRS MARY (COYLE). Mrs McThing; a play; il. by Madeleine Gekiere and Helen Sewell. 141p $3 Oxford

812

52-12703

"Mary Chase, author of the fabulously successful 'Harvey,' has written another fantastic comedy. . . It is a fairy story about a rich mother and a small boy who wanted to be a gangster, and a little girl whose mother is a witch. Because the rich mother would not let her son play with the little girl, the witch mother takes revenge by spiriting the boy away and leaving a snivelling changeling in his place. As in 'Harvey' there is underlying human warmth in the preposterous goings-on and the preposterous and often very funny people involved." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 49:101; 111 N 15 '52

Bookmark 12:52 D '52 50w

"I joyfully announce that Mary Chase's Mrs. McThing lives in a book with humor, wonder, wisdom and a true sense of childhood. I am thankful it was not made over into narrative form. 'The play's the thing' for child or adult and the stage directions for this one are as fascinating to read as the play itself." A. C. Moore

+ Horn Bk 28:310 O '52 50w

"No one who has spent an enchanted evening with Helen Hayes in Mrs. McThing can fail to rejoice that this charming play is now made available in such an attractive book for the enjoyment of all imaginative boys and girls and grownups." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 28:418 D '52 120w

"Every community theatre will want to produce it, so all libraries serving them will want to purchase. Recommended for general circulation as well as drama and theatre collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 77:1814 O 15 '52 40w

"Mrs. Chase, for all her pixie humor, has a heart in the right place. She also has considerable theatrical skill, and the good luck to get Helen Hayes for a leading lady. The printed text is illustrated with quaint line drawings, but they are not so rewarding to look at as Miss Hayes." W. P. Eaton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 O 5 '52 140w

"The bookmaking seems to us freshly imaginative and truly in the mood of the text. And the play will make good reading for any one over twelve, even those who didn't think they liked witches on the stage." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 N 23 '52 120w

New Yorker 28:194 D 6 '52 20w

"It is exciting to find how the charm and originality of 'Mrs. McThing' come out in the printed play almost as vividly as they do on the stage with the expert playing of Helen Hayes and the other members of the fine cast. Here is a fantasy that is, too, convincing realism."

+ Sat R 35:50 N 15 '52 150w

CHASE, MARY ELLEN, ed. Readings from the Bible. See Bible. Whole. Selections

CHASE, RICHARD VOLNEY. Emily Dickinson. (American men of letters ser) 328p $4 Sloane

B or 92 Dickinson, Emily 51-14929

"Mr. Chase has not attempted an original contribution to biography. His main ambition—and achievement—has been a fresh and plausible reinterpretation of the poetry against the poet's personal, social and intellectual background. Thus after a concise survey of her life up to about 1862, when she may be presumed to have written some of her major verse, he devotes the core of his book (nearly half of the space) to a rigorous analysis of the themes, ideas, imagery and structure of the poems themselves. This accomplished, he returns to strict biography in the final chapters." (N Y Times) Index.

Booklist 48:184 F 1 '52

Reviewed by Katherine Brégy

Cath World 175:319 J1 '52 50w

"What Richard Chase has done has been to write the first full, penetrating, wholly helpful, just account of this remarkable woman's remarkable poetry. Like all the volumes in Sloane's excellent series of revaluations, 'The American Men of Letters,' this one throws on its subject a steady and honest illumination." Paul Engle

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ja 6 '52 390w

Reviewed by Vivian Mercier

Commonweal 55:379 Ja 18 '52 390w

Kirkus 19:601 O 1 '51 240w

Reviewed by David Daiches

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Ag 26 '52 270w

"This newest volume in the American Men of Letters Series is without a doubt one of the best. Mr. Chase is a critic who is not carried away; in fact he makes a distinct point of not being carried away. The result is a critical biography that is reasonable and readable. . . This is not a whole biography. One must still turn to George Whicher's 'This Was a Poet' for a dependable account of Emily Dickinson's life. Mr. Chase has given us instead an account of the New England predicament in the last century, a study of the struggle—largely unrealized, and for that reason singularly desperate, in the case of Emily Dickinson—against incoherence, incommunicability, and madness." Hayden Carruth

+ Nation 174:456 My 10 '52 750w

New Statesman & Nation 44:272 S 6 '52 200w

"Mr. Chase has made some wise and penetrating comments on the poet; if he has not achieved the final critical interpretation he has at least laid a solid groundwork for others to build on." Delancey Ferguson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 D 30 '51 1100w

Reviewed by G. W. Allen

+ N Y Times p4 D 30 '51 650w

"A slight touch of fashionable academic theory-spinning is noticeable in Mr. Chase's critical method, but on the whole he comes through with solid results."

+ New Yorker 27:111 F 16 '52 100w

"Mr. Chase's book can scarcely be judged on the basis of being greater or lesser than existing works on Emily Dickinson. It will have an important place in Dickinson bibliography. Perhaps its chief contribution is a new evaluation of her work, especially as it attempts to explore the substance of her intellectual life. Anyone who is interested in a better understanding of Emily Dickinson's poetry will profit by reading the book." Ann Comfort

+ San Francisco Chronicle p11 Ja 27 '52 450w

"Mr. Chase's conclusions strengthen this reviewer's suspicion that critical heavy-artillery, no matter how impressive, might be more profitably trained on metaphysical and modern ambiguous poets than on Emily." Siegfried Mandel

Sat R 35:42 Je 21 '52 500w

"There are a number of fascinating threads, influences social, personal, religious, creating what in modern jargon are called 'tensions', propitious to the creation of poetry. Mr Chase elucidates these admirably, if sometimes a little repetitively, throughout his study, with an understanding, a sympathy and a historical perspective which makes his book more than a guide. It releases the imagination. Nor are his discussions of her poetry any less stimulating, though the reader might do well to have his salt-cellar by him while going through the pages." Bonamy Dobrée

+ Spec 189:165 Ag 1 '52 1000w

"Mr. Chase is neither overpowered nor dimmed, though he is in the presence of greatness. He has written a book that takes criticism to the roots without denigration."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p528 Ag 15 '52 350w

CHASE, STUART, and TYLER, MARIAN (MRS STUART CHASE). Roads to agreement; successful methods in the science of human relations. 250p $3.50; college ed $2.75 Harper

301 Psychology, Applied

51-3307

For descriptive note see Annual for 1951.

"The book should really be three or four separate volumes—each integrated and clarified—each demonstrating the logical or scientific method of the new social science that Chase has so persistently supported and so wordily interpreted. . . The book is really a compendium of ideas and methods; and so it lacks the 'integration' that is its declared purpose and central, reiterated advocacy." F. D. Tyson

CHASE, STUART—Continued

Ann Am Acad 279:217 Ja '52 450w
Foreign Affairs 30:330 Ja '52 20w

"A highly useful and literate effort at translating the findings of modern social science for general and business use. Mr. Chase throws new light on many of the current problems which beset both management and labor in their efforts to work out a mutually harmonious relationship." R. C.

+ Sat R 35:53 Ja 19 '52 50w

"This book ought to be used in many a high school and college. Mr. Chase has done well to show how conflicts can be resolved and transmuted, to draw attention to valuable researches, projects, and experiments, and to interpret some of the important things being done in social science so that the wayfaring man or Congressman can understand." L. M. Brooks

+ Social Forces 30:351 Mr '52 600w

Reviewed by F. S. Klein

Social Studies 43:257 O '52 460w

"I wish this book could be in the hands of every member of Congress and every state legislator in the land. As a member of a typical American legislature, I know that Stuart Chase is right when he says that many desperate controversies, seemingly rooted in high principle, actually grow only out of 'human cussedness.' This book could be a fine political Thoreau to lead our warring statesmen beside still waters." R. L. Neuberger

+ Survey 88:184 Ap '52 500w

CHASTAIN, MADYE LEE. Bright days; il. by [the author]. 178p $2.25 Harcourt

52-10063

Eleven-year-old Marcy was feeling very lonely and unhappy one rainy day when, looking out of the window, she saw movers coming and a large family entering the deserted old house next door. The Fripseys were gay and lively and that was the beginning of an eventful year in Marcy's life.

Booklist 49:51 O 1 '52

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 16 '52 90w

Horn Bk 28:410 D '52 70w

Kirkus 20:451 Ag 1 '52 160w

"A delightful story of everyday life of two twelve-year-old girls at home and at school. The conflicts caused by Gwynn, the leader of a rival group, will hold the interest of readers in grades five and six. The antics of haughty General Custer, the cat, add extra chuckles. Author's illustrations reflect the humor of the story. Recommended." Helen Perdue

+ Library J 77:1664 O 1 '52 40w

Reviewed by S. C. Gross

+ N Y Times p32 S 21 '52 140w

"This is an exceptionally fine story—one that girls of a wide age range will enjoy. As in all her books, Madye Lee Chastain had added to its value with her attractive drawings."

+ Sat R 35:56 N 15 '52 160w

Springf'd Republican p8C N 9 '52 80w

CHAVCHAVADZE, PAUL. Mountains of Allah. 287p $3 Doubleday

52-5114

An adventure story of the mountainous country of the Caucasus in the 1850's. During a fight between Russians and Turks, the women and children of a Russian noble household were taken as hostages by the Turks. Among them was Zoë, a young French widow, the children's governess. In the Turkish stronghold Zoë survives many perils before she is finally liberated.

Booklist 48:153; 185 Ja 1 '52; F 1 '52

"'The Mountains of Allah' follows the stock pattern of such novels except for the locale and the obvious background of the author." R. L. Blakesley

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 F 10 '52 140w

"A story with a far away fascination which is partially authentic and wholly absorbing." + Kirkus 19:665 N 15 '51 180w

Reviewed by Frances Gaither

N Y Times p21 Ja 20 '52 450w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 Ap 13 '52 450w

CHEEVER, DANIEL SARGENT, and HAVILAND, HENRY FIELD. American foreign policy and the separation of powers. 244p $3.75 Harvard univ. press

327.73 Separation of powers. U.S.—Foreign policy 52-5390

"Emphasizing the position of world leadership held by the United States, authors present a study of the mechanics involved in the creation and support of foreign policy. . . Detailed administrative suggestions for means of eliminating conflict between the Administration and Congress are presented, and add to the final conclusion that what is needed is a greater feeling of mutual trust." (Library J) Index

"The weakest part of the book is to be found in its earlier chapters dealing with American diplomatic history. The authors are not experts in this subject and rely upon the books of a few text writers. . . These faults to the contrary notwithstanding, the book contains much valuable information and will no doubt make its contribution, insofar as it is read, toward altering basic political attitudes." R. W. Van Alstyne

+ Ann Am Acad 284:167 N '52 470w

Booklist 49:42 O 1 '52

Current Hist 23:191 S '52 80w

"An especially useful study at this time." Donald Wasson

+ Library J 77:1186 Jl '52 90w

"This book deals with an important contemporary theme and performs a significant public service. . . It seems to the reviewer particularly fortunate that Messrs. Cheever and Haviland, students of political science as they are, have been captivated by the idea of mechanisms." Dexter Perkins

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Jl 20 '52 1100w

Reviewed by Quincy Howe

Sat R 35:15 Ag 30 '52 210w

CHELLIS, ROBERT DUNNING. Pile foundations; theory, design, practice. 681p il $12.50 McGraw

624.15 Piles and pile driving. Foundations 51-13293

"Pile foundations are widely used under tall buildings and other structures constructed on soil that has low bearing capacity. In most cases the piles are driven down to rock or at least to firm soil. In this thorough book authentic, practical information is included on pile driving, driving equipment, spacing and other aspects of pile foundation design, types of piles, preservation of piles and causes of failures of pile foundations. Many tables of engineering data, typical specifications, and an extensive classified bibliography." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

"A chapter that departs from the main subject, but which is a valuable addition, is one on solidification of soils by both physical and chemical means. About one third of the book is given over to tables and appendices, which includes complete information concerning the characteristics of all the available type of pile hammers, details of all the major formulas, test data comparing eight of these formulas, and standard specifications for piles."

+ Eng N 147:43 N 22 '51 400w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 76:2118 D 15 '51 70w

"A practical book which contains so much information that it is in effect an engineering handbook. It will be useful not only in understanding and designing pile foundations but also in building them and protecting them after they are built."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 36:91 N '51

"Not intended for the novice, this handbook should be of invaluable assistance to the practicing engineer in his encounters with the mysteries of the foundation art."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:98 Mr '52 170w

CH'EN, SHOU. See Chan, S. *

CHENERY, WILLIAM LUDLOW. So it seemed. 300p $4 Harcourt

B or 92 Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 52-6437

Autobiography of an American newspaperman who served as editor of Collier's for eighteen years, and seven more years as publisher. In covering his own varied career the author gives a survey of the history of this country from 1900 to date. Index.

Am Pol Sci R 46:582 Je '52 10w

Reviewed by F. E. Merwin

Ann Am Acad 284:184 N '52 470w

Booklist 48:246 Ap 1 '52

Bookmark 11:154 Ap '52 40w

Reviewed by R. L. Blakesley

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Mr 9 '52 480w

Foreign Affairs 31:158 O '52 10w

Kirkus 20:105 F 1 '52 190w

"Highly recommended for all libraries." E. M. Lilley

+ Library J 77:428 Mr 1 '52 130w

"If Chenery is impressed by the profound changes of his four decades, he indicates it only casually. His autobiography is a sober, externalized report of what he saw and did. Some of the things he leaves out or skims over are more interesting, to me, at least, than what he includes. I should have liked to see much more about the problem of the big-circulation magazine which tries to combine simultaneously some degree of social usefulness, enough entertainment to get and hold a big audience, and large profits based on a heavy volume of advertising." Bruce Bliven

New Repub 126:21 Mr 24 '52 550w

"Without either heroes or personal devils, serene, cheerful and highly civilized, it is a book that arouses envy less of the author's story or of his style than of his philosophy. But that is enviable indeed." Gerald Johnson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Mr 16 '52 750w

"Wise and engaging autobiography." S. T. Williamson

+ N Y Times p12 Mr 9 '52 800w

"Despite an avowed distaste for gossip, [the author is] a shrewd and not overindulgent evaluator of character, and his accounts of his set-tos with some of his employers—the late Frank Munsey, the great eliminator of newspapers, and Joseph Palmer Knapp, formerly the controlling stockholder in the Crowell and Collier publications, for instance—make very diverting reading."

+ New Yorker 28:135 Mr 22 '52 160w

"Autobiographies are the stuff of which much of history is made. Even those which include all too much hearsay and conjecture have a certain value; but when one is written by an actor as well as an eyewitness, the result is not only compelling in its interest but has importance as a historical document. This is why Bill Chenery's book is quite likely to become a best-seller, for in his report on the major events of the last half century you have no gaping bystander or mere chronicler, but one who was never far from the heart of things." George Creel

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Mr 2 '52 1200w

Reviewed by F. L. Mott

Sat R 35:18 Mr 8 '52 700w

"Mr. Chenery writes in the crisp, direct prose characteristic of the old-time newspaperman; his thoughtful and interesting reminiscences are not so much nostalgic as they are modestly hopeful for the future."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:114 Je '52 230w

CHENEY, SHELDON WARREN. The theatre; three thousand years of drama, acting and stagecraft. rev & enl ed 592p il $8 Longmans 792.09 Theater—History. Drama—History and criticism 52-12933

"Minor revisions throughout and complete rewriting of the last 50 pages of the previous edition with additional 30 pages of material to cover the subject to the 1950's." (Booklist) For first edition see Book Review Digest 1929.

Booklist 49:107 N 15 '52

"Revision and additions have made this in many ways a new book. It is much more than a history of drama as a form of literature. That is an important part of it, of course, but much attention is also paid to what might be called the sociology of drama, to its place in the stream of culture, to the theater as an institution, to architecture and other arts related to drama."

+ Christian Century 69:1322 N 12 '52 260w

Reviewed by George Freedley

Library J 77:2178 D 15 '52 40w

"This comprehensive historical manual has enjoyed eight reprintings, the most recent in 1949. A book twenty-three years old with so high a capacity for survival, particularly a book concerned with an activity as fluid as the drama, can obviously profit by revision." J. T. Winterich

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p28 N 23 '52 130w

Reviewed by David Dempsey

N Y Times p25 N 2 '52 20w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 N 9 '52 70w

CHESNUTT, HELEN MARIA. Charles Waddell Chesnutt, pioneer of the color line. 324p $5 Univ. of N.C. press

B or 92 Chesnutt, Charles Waddell 52-10239

Biography of a pioneer in the field of Negro education. He was born a few years before the Civil war and died in 1932. Early in his career he became a school teacher, and later studied law and wrote several successful books. The author of the volume is his daughter. Index.

"The nation has gone a long way in understanding since Charles Waddell Chesnutt was born, and a large debt of gratitude is due him for much of that understanding. The book is a living memorial to his life; as such, it stands as a continuing challenge to all who strive for equality in human relationships." Elizabeth Yates

+ Christian Science Monitor p5 Jl 31 '52 450w

Reviewed by David Tilden

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p26 N 16 '52 360w

"This story of [Chesnutt's] life, written by his daughter, is a warm and intimate family portrait told with tenderness and honesty." Bucklin Moon

+ N Y Times p4 Je 29 '52 600w

"The first American Negro to receive any real critical notice as a literary figure, Charles Waddell Chesnutt is the subject of this significant biography. Consisting chiefly of correspondence with a running commentary contributed by his daughter, it affords a sympathetic and sensitive appraisal of a brilliant, socially conscious artist and a public-spirited man."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:233 S '52 250w

CHESSER, EUSTACE. Cruelty to children. 159p $3.75 Philosophical lib.
362.74 Children—Charities, protection, etc. [52-23415]

An English doctor investigates the problem of cruelty to children "from the point of view of the cause and the remedy. His researches bring him to the conclusion that children are most often ill-treated because their parents do not want them." (Publisher's note)

"The author believes that many of the artificialities in our neurotic civilization can be eliminated. The book should be helpful in producing these results." G. B. Mangold
+ Ann Am Acad 283:219 S '52 500w

Reviewed by E. P. Nichols

Library J 77:1072 Je 15 '52 90w

Manchester Guardian p4 F 19 '52 150w

"Dr. Chesser goes to work more simply, quietly, and indeed kindly, relying for his shock effects on the horrifying newspaper stories of cruelty to children with which, relevantly or otherwise, he heads each of his chapters. . . . He is a long way ahead of most people in urging that, when we begin to keep records showing the effect of punishment on cruel or neglectful parents, we shall need to record also its secondary effect on their victims." C. H. Rolph

+ New Statesman & Nation 43:532 My 3 '52 360w

"Dr. Chesser's book has a theme near the public conscience. And even a detached reader could not fail to be moved by the Press reports of individual cruelties quoted at the beginning of each chapter—reports that arouse pity as no statistics can do. There are a number of good points about the book. It is written in the simple style of popular journalism, with short jaunty paragraphs, but is easily readable. It shows that the problem is deep-seated. . . . It is a pity that the book in other ways is careless and misinformed. A Press report is quoted at length giving a totally erroneous account of the present responsibility of certain Government departments. A discussion in Parliament of 1945 is mentioned, but not those of 1949 and 1950, nor the subsequent memorandum to local authorities. . . . More, too, might perhaps have been made of recent psychological pronouncements of the need to keep parent and child together. But the book is obviously more of a sermon than a survey, and in 150 pages makes no claim to cover the subject. It is rather a book with a message, which is repeated many times—that we are all responsible for cruelty and its everybody's business to end it." Gwendolen Freeman

+ Spec 188:154 F 1 '52 650w

CHESTER, GIRAUD. Embattled maiden; the life of Anna Dickinson. 307p il $4 Putnam

B or 92 Dickinson, Anna Elizabeth 51-13934

The life story of Anna Dickinson, the Quaker girl who in 1864 at the age of 22 addressed a joint meeting of Congress with President Lincoln and his Cabinet in attendance. Her gift for oratory she later used in her career as lecturer, actress, and playwright. Her dramatic life also included a commitment to an insane asylum. This Joan of Arc of the Civil war, so-called, died a forgotten woman in 1932. Brief bibliography. Index.

"Giraud Chester has performed an excellent service in exhuming Anna Dickinson, washing her free of the dross accumulated during the tragic latter half of her life, and giving the general reader a lively account of her extraordinary career. He relied mainly on contemporary sources and the Dickinson Collection in the Library of Congress, and on the whole uses his material skillfully. If the book is somewhat wanting in depth and perspective, it is because the author is more successful in projecting Anna Dickinson against the colorful background of her parasitic family and political friendships than the larger political background which gives permanent significance to her life." L. M. Young

+ Am Hist R 58:136 O '52 600w

Booklist 48:170 Ja 15 '52

Kirkus 19:470 Ag 15 '51 150w

"A well-written and carefully documented life of Anna Dickinson."

+ Nation 173:484 D 1 '51 170w

"Mr. Chester is repetitive at times, and he gives too few dates. Moreover, he belongs to the imaginary-conversation school of biographers. Nonetheless, this is the story of a talented woman whose decade of extraordinary success ruined her life, who spent her energies in trying to keep up with her earlier triumphs, and whose unhappy life made a mockery of those brief, wonderful years. Yet by living her life in her own way, unrewarding as it was and now unremembered, she doubtless made a contribution to the life of freedom which American women enjoy today." E. B. Schlesinger

+ New Eng Q 25:117 Mr '52 700w

"Mr. Chester's book is well planned, and the wealth of documents at his disposal has enabled him to restore Anna Dickinson to life. His own style is pedestrian and more alert editing would have caught two or three boners, such as 'sanguinary' where 'sanguine' is meant, and 'biography of his life.' But Anna's personality triumphs over her biographer as in her prime it triumphed over her audiences." Delancey Ferguson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 D 16 '51 800w

Reviewed by H. F. Graff

N Y Times p9 D 23 '51 500w

"Mr. Chester admires the lady and makes out a case for her, but her shrill brand of feminism and her predilection for bringing lawsuits make her sound a little trying."

New Yorker 27:74 Ja 5 '52 200w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles

San Francisco Chronicle p22 D 2 '51 70w

CHEYNEY, PETER. Dark omnibus; containing three complete novels. 224,222,181p $3 Dodd

52-11866

Three spy stories. Contents: The Stars are Dark, The Dark Street, and Sinister Errand.

Bookmark 12:57 D '52

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p26 S 21 '52 60w

"The late Peter Cheyney in his 'Dark' novels achieved an effect no one else has ever quite equalled, in telling the immensely complicated and thrilling saga of a British spy ring."

L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ag 31 '52 40w

"Worthy memorial volume." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 35:38 S 20 '52 30w

CHEYNEY, PETER. Urgent hangman. 247p $2.50 Dodd

Detective story.

"One of the late Peter Cheyney's earliest stories deserving, because of its smoothly geared technique, of this republication." Drexel Drake

Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 Mr 9 '52 70w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p12 F 3 '52 50w

"Total effect is confused and dull." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 F 10 '52 60w

CHIANG, YEE. Chinese childhood [il. by the author with 8 pt. in col. and 100 il. in the text]. 393p $5 Day

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. China—Social life and customs

The Chinese author-artist, who has produced books on New York, Edinburgh and the Lake District, here writes and illustrates the story of his own first fifteen years. As a member of a large family of fairly well-to-do artists and land owners, he admits his life may not be typical, because habits and customs differ, but it is at least typical of certain aspects of Chinese life.

Bookmark 12:30 N '52 20w

"Chiang Yee writes not so much with nostalgia as with acceptance, with the meticulous documenting of the scene that is his special gift. His prose is almost as charming as the many pictures in color and little line drawings of the people and the festivals he delights to recall. . . The whole book is human, gossipy, tolerant, humorous, and full of happiness." Ernestine Evans

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 O 19 '52 750w

"Through it all one follows the growth of the artist-author whose clear eye records and interprets the Chinese scene." J. J. Espey

+ N Y Times p22 N 16 '52 390w

"The book chronicles a delightful upbringing in a family devoted to the Confucian ideal of moderation. . . The whole is enhanced by a hundred pen-and-ink drawings and eight colored illustrations, all by the author."

+ New Yorker 28:132 N 1 '52 120w

"What Chiang's readers like best about his books is the unaffected sincerity of every word he writes. He has humor; he is a sharp observer; he has the artist's eye for form and color. Many have been pleased by these qualities in his other books and will welcome them again in this one." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 O 6 '52 750w

CHIARI, JOSEPH. Contemporary French poetry. 180p $3.75 Philosophical lib.

841.09 French poetry—History and criticism [52-10178]

"Four aspects of French poetry are especially emphasized. Paul Valéry, first, as representative of the ideals of Mallarmé and the symbolists. . . M. Chiari pays considerable attention to the poets representing 'The Christian Myth.' He sees Paul Claudel as best illustrating the orphic conception of the poet, as the sufferer possessed by a god. . . The surrealists form a third group. Eluard is chosen for an extended analysis. The remaining poets considered by M. Chiari might be classified as independents." N Y Times

Booklist 48:375 J1 15 '52

Nation 175:365 O 18 '52 90w

Reviewed by Rudd Fleming
New Repub 127:20 Ag 18 '52 450w

"What is remarkable about his book as a whole is the wide scope of his comprehension and sympathy." Michael Hamburger

+ New Statesman & Nation 43:710 Je 14 '52 480w

"This book—just published in England and this country—will serve as a useful guide to all interested in contemporary poetry in France; the many quotations in the book are given in the original language." Wallace Fowlie

+ N Y Times p5 Je 22 '52 400w

New Yorker 28:203 N 22 '52 150w

Times [London] Lit Sup p579 S 5 '52 900w

CHICAGO, UNIVERSITY. Committee on human development. See Havighurst, R. J., and others. American veteran back home

CHICAGO, UNIVERSITY. Law School. Defense, controls and inflation. See Director, A., ed.

CHILD STUDY ASSOCIATION OF AMERICA, INCORPORATED. Holiday storybook; il. by Phoebe Erickson. 373p $3 Crowell

394.2 Holidays—Juvenile literature 52-8652

An anthology of stories and a few poems, about holidays and special days celebrated in the United States. Includes stories for Purim, Passover, Shrove Tuesday, and Rosh Hashana.

Booklist 49:74 O 15 '52

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 16 '52 130w

Kirkus 20:450 Ag 1 '52 110w

"This rich collection of stories about children's celebrations of various American holidays and festivals fills a real need for read-aloud material in the lower grades." N. S. Zipf

+ Library J 77:1661 O 1 '52 100w

"It will find a permanent place on school and library shelves, and children themselves will read aloud from it with pleasure." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p4 N 16 '52 80w

"Large injections of humor and imagination would have lifted the monotony and cheered every reader. Although the book is attractively printed, it seems to be designed more for reference than holiday reading." Irene Smith

N Y Times pt2, p38 N 16 '52 110w

CHILD STUDY ASSOCIATION OF AMERICA, INCORPORATED. Our children today. See Gruenberg, S. M., ed.

CHILDE, VERE GORDON. Social evolution. 184p $3 Schuman

573.3 Evolution. Society, Primitive. Man, Prehistoric 52-6740

Dr Childe is professor of prehistoric archaeology at the University of Edinburgh. In this series of lectures, first delivered at the University of Birmingham in 1947-48, he studies the differences between biological and social evolution, and discusses the views of early sociologists such as Herbert Spencer and Lewis Morgan on evolution. Index.

"Childe's contribution is a notable one. . . The marshalling of archeological data is, perhaps, the major contribution of this book, but other points are of equal interest." J. S. Ellsworth

+ Am Soc R 16:878 D '51 1100w

Reviewed by H. J. Fleure

Manchester Guardian p4 Je 15 '51 200w

"Professor Childe has cast the net of his learning deftly over history and caught what he intended to catch, yet when all value, all the glitter of existence, slips through the meshes one wonders whether the haul was worth while." Jacquetta Hawkes

New Statesman & Nation 41:570 My 19 '51 750w

"The book is rather scholarly, but the general reader as well as the specialist will find a lot of stimulating material on culture change." I. B.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p27 F 17 '52 110w

"Anything that Professor Childe writes is bound to be interesting, for he is the most widely informed and the ablest of archaeologists. . . Both the student and the general reader will find what Professor Childe has to say informative, illuminating, and stimulating. . . Professor Childe's reanimation of prehistoric cultures and his sociological interpretation of the archeological data are fascinating, but the learned Professor occasionally nods when he refers to matters of physical anthropology." Ashley Montagu

+ Sat R 35:35 Ap 12 '52 700w

Times [London] Lit Sup p241 Ap 4 '52 550w

CHILDS, MARQUIS WILLIAM. Farmer takes a hand; the electric power revolution in rural America; introd. by George D. Aiken. 256p il $3.50 Doubleday

338.39 Rural electrification. Electricity in agriculture 52-5629

An account of the work of the Rural electrification administration from its establishment in 1932 to the present. The author is a newspaperman who writes a column: Washington Calling, which appears in some 150 United States newspapers. No index.

CHILDS, M. W.—Continued

Reviewed by M. H. Morse
Ann Am Acad 232:146 J1 '52 410w
Booklist 48:258 Ap 15 '52
Bookmark 11:230 J1 '52 20w

"Mr. Childs sides candidly with the co-ops, but his well written book clarifies issues for the reader." L. T. Heron

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ap 27 '52 160w

Commonweal 56:374 J1 18 '52 90w

"The book is repetitive, uneven in the telling. But it has so much to say, that perhaps he is stumbling over his own words. Anyhow, it is worth reading."

Kirkus 20:61 Ja 15 '52 240w

"An informative presentation of a controversial subject." J. E. Brown

+ Library J 77:429 Mr 1 '52 110w

"An excellent chronicle." R. L. Neuberger

+ Nation 174:586 Je 14 '52 750w

"In 'The Farmer Takes a Hand' we have an able description of a progress so speedy and 'electric' that it created tension and pressure which ultimately reached as far afield as the international scene." Susannah Coolidge

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 My 25 '52 450w

Reviewed by Russell Lord
N Y Times p13 Ap 13 '52 360w

"This book is the story of a fresh, vital force that has entered American farm life in the last two decades and wrought a little-realized change which is all to the good." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 Je 23 '52 650w

Reviewed by E. W. Lehmann
Sat R 35:17 My 3 '52 1000w

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:153 Je '52 160w

CHITTENDEN, FREDERICK JAMES, ed. See Royal horticultural society. Dictionary of gardening

CHIVERS, THOMAS HOLLEY. Life of Poe; ed. with an introd. by Richard Beale Davis; from the manuscripts in the Henry E. Huntington Library, San Marino, California. 127p $5 Dutton

B or 92 Poe, Edgar Allan 52-5295

"The text of this first complete printing of a brief biography of Poe by the Sweet Singer of Georgia is 'an assemblage, an arrangement, and a pruning' from several manuscripts among the Poe-Chivers Papers in the Huntington Library, San Marino, Calif. Some garbled extracts were published by George Woodberry in the Century Magazine for January 1903." Library J

"The general reader may find Chivers' over-rhetorical style and Mr. Davis' highly complicated scholarly apparatus a little annoying at times. But the lover of Poe will find an interesting insight into the man." Walter Harding

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Mr 16 '52 210w

"Of good value to students and fanciers of Poe and American literature."

+ Kirkus 19:723 D 15 '51 220w

Reviewed by E. F. Walbridge
Library J 77:141 Ja 15 '52 100w

Nation 174:533 My 31 '52 160w

"Mr. Davis has done a good job which needed to be done and every student of Poe will want to have the volume." J. W. Krutch

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 S 7 '52 500w

Reviewed by A. C. Gordon
N Y Times p4 Je 22 '52 400w

"Mr. Davis has diligently preserved every slip of Chivers' pen, every misspelled word, every balled-up repetitious passage, but he has thought it proper to omit some of the newspaper clippings included by Chivers, as well as parts of the manuscript that deal with Nathaniel Parker Willis, Griswold, and James Russell Lowell, which would be far more interesting to the reader."

New Yorker 28:119 S 27 '52 230w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 Ap 13 '52 110w

"Professor Davis's excellent edition of the fragmentary manuscript is both valuable and highly amusing. Poe was associated in real life with a number of characters who seem to have wandered out of the pages of fiction. . . In spite of his aureate language, Chivers seemed to understand Poe." Scully Bradley

+ Sat R 35:15 My 31 '52 650w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:132 Je '52 130w

CHRISTENSEN, ASHER NORMAN, ed. Evolution of Latin American government; a book of readings. 747p $4.50 Holt

342.8 Latin America—Politics 51-6744

"Believing that the facts or the crude data on government in Latin America are already well known, Professor Christensen has been at pains to explain why Latin American governments all have certain common characteristics. In this excellent book of annotated readings, he and others analyze (1) the factors which 'have conditioned Latin American political organization so that one encounters, almost everywhere, and at any time, strong executives, weak congresses and courts, and little or no local home-rule;' (2) the directions in which government in present day Latin America is travelling, and the significance of the new trends." Am Soc R

Am Pol Sci R 46:260 Mr '52 20w

"We have been waiting a long time for a volume such as this." John Biesanz

+ Am Soc R 17:126 F '52 220w

"This valuable book of readings fulfills a vital need for anyone attempting to get a detailed, accurate and interpretative picture of our neighbors to the South."

+ Current Hist 22:167 Mr '52 300w

CHRISTENSEN, CLYDE MARTIN. Molds and man; an introduction to the fungi. 244p il $4; text ed $3 Univ. of Minn. press

589.2 Fungi 51-13547

Story of the life cycle of the fungi, which describes the effects of fungi upon man and plants. Chapter bibliographies. Index.

"The layman, the amateur botanist, or the serious student of mycology will find delightful reading and valuable information in this book." R. H. Benham

+ Am J Pub Health 42:462 Ap '52 220w

Booklist 48:95 N 15 '51

"'Molds and Man' is no ordinary textbook for it is written in a spirited, conversational style which frequently does violence to approved syntax but never ceases to entertain the reader. . . The reviewer, as an interested layman, would have appreciated a little more on the history of mycology. A few mistakes can be found, such as the misspelling of Fleming's name, but most of them are of the sort that everyone makes when he strays from his own field." M. A. Spielman

+ Chem & Eng N 30:272 Ja 21 '52 550w

CHRISTIAN HERALD (periodical). Fifty years of Christmas; ed. by Ruth M. Elmquist; introd. by Daniel A. Poling. 300p $3 Rinehart

394.26 Christmas 51-14315

An anthology of stories, poems, and short pieces, selected from issues of the Christian Herald during the period 1901 to 1950.

Booklist 48:114 D 1 '51

"A well-rounded anthology."

+ Bookmark 11:56 D '51 20w

"A good gift for a church-going friend or favorite minister."

+ Kirkus 19:600 O 1 '51 140w

"Readers of the older generation who have not developed modern literary tastes will enjoy the book. But public libraries which choose their Christmas anthologies carefully will not need it." L. R. Miller

Library J 76:1926 N 15 '51 160w

Reviewed by George Conrad

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 D 23 '51 180w

CHRISTIE, AGATHA (MILLER) (MRS M. E. L. MALLOWAN). Mrs McGinty's dead. 243p $2.50 Dodd

52-6875

Detective story.

Booklist 48:230 Mr 15 '52

"There is a fascination of reality in the story's people and their multiple troubles. Nevertheless, readers who rejoiced in the lavish color and stealthy connivance and tense crisis of last year's 'They Came to Baghdad' may consider 'Mrs. McGinty's Dead' a let down to prosaic and patterned detective story craftsmanship." Drexel Drake

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Mr 9 '52 200w

"Except for a three-quarters-time sag this is sound Christie and expert distraction on all scores." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 F 24 '52 110w

"This first Poirot novel in almost four years is the best Poirot since such pre-war classics as 'Cards on the Table' (from which it revives the amusing mystery novelist Ariadne Oliver and her great Finnish detective). The premise (what becomes of the living people once involved in celebrated murders?) is a fascinating one; a very large cast is deftly sketched and adroitly handled." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p25 F 10 '52 100w

"The author's formula hasn't changed perceptibly since she wrote 'The Mysterious Affair at Styles,' in which Poirot made his memorable first appearance, but it is still as sound and expert as any that has been invented subsequently."

+ New Yorker 27:112 F 9 '52 120w

"The plot may not scintillate like some other Christies but it's perfect—and the characters are wonderful." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 F 17 '52 80w

"Not among her best." Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 35:55 F 16 '52 30w

CHRISTIE, AGATHA (MILLER) (MRS M. E. L. MALLOWAN). Murder with mirrors. [Eng title: They do it with mirrors]. 182p $2.50 Dodd

52-9955

Detective story.

Booklist 49:69 O 15 '52

"Stilted characters in listless tale strikingly inferior to Agatha Christie's long established level." Drexel Drake

— Chicago Sunday Tribune p18 S 14 '52 100w

"Mrs. Christie is, here as before, a contenting craftsman. Her capacities for legitimate misdirection are meticulously founded upon incident and upon what she has chosen to suggest of character. And she has a sharp ear for the diversities of tongue and tone to mark her creatures out neatly." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 S 28 '52 120w

"Slight disappointment, on the one hand, because it is more conventional than Mrs. Christie's fine last two novels; high gratification, on the other, because so few writers are producing the pure puzzle-novel, and no one on either side of the Atlantic does it better." Anthony Boucher

+ — N Y Times p41 S 28 '52 60w

"The author's style is as brisk and persuasive as ever, but the plot this time may be a bit too intricate for all but the most confirmed addicts"

+ — New Yorker 28:147 S 13 '52 120w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p22 S 28 '52 50w

"Clever character alignment, good suspense, but ending a mite contrived." Sergeant Cuff

+ — Sat R 35:38 O 4 '52 20w

CHRISTON, CAROLINE. We mustn't upset the staff. 283p $3 British bk. centre

647.94 Hotels, taverns, etc. [51-37222]

"[Account] of a middle-class family's experiences in running a small English country inn. Starting with no experience, they learned the job the hard way. Among their many difficulties was that of acquiring, running and retaining a staff." Library J

Booklist 48:139 D 15 '51

"This is a light, and for the most part, entertaining account... But it does not furnish the kind of advice that either an American hotelier or an American hotel employee would want to take very seriously. A consoling bit of occupational information." D. K. Oko

+ Library J 77:56 Ja 1 '52 90w

"This is a very amusing story of life in post-war England, told with vivacity and charm, and with sharp portraits of guests, ordinary and extraordinary, as well as a keen appreciation of the great possibilities inherent in stories of hotel life." C. W. W.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p26 Mr 9 '52 170w

CHRISTOPHE, HENRI, king of Haiti, and CLARKSON, THOMAS. Henry Christophe and Thomas Clarkson; a correspondence, ed. by Earl Leslie Griggs, and Clifford H. Prator. 287p il $4 Univ. of Calif. press

B or 92 Haiti—History 52-901

Collection of letters and documents which bring to light many hitherto unknown facts about the self crowned King of Haiti, Henri Christophe, and the revolt which ended it. Many of the letters are to Thomas Clarkson, the English abolitionist who not only helped the king, but gave asylum to the king's wife and daughters in England after Henri had committed suicide. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 48:264 Ap 15 '52

"This volume, for specialized collections, ought to encourage the writing in English of a large-scale, scholarly and long-due biography of the remarkable Christophe who rose from slave to ruler." Joseph Borome

+ Library J 77:593 Ap 1 '52 140w

Reviewed by Asa Briggs

Manchester Guardian p4 O 22 '52 230w

Nation 175:18 Jl 5 '52 80w

"With impeccable scholarship and a sympathetic understanding of the world in which King Henry played so masterful and tragic a role, [the editors] have centered their study in the rich, untapped source of the Clarkson papers in the British Museum... This is the tragic history, the perennial legend, documented at long last." Selden Rodman

+ N Y Times p4 Ap 13 '52 750w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:114 Je '52 230w

CHUDоба, BOHDAN. Meaning of civilization. 314p $4 Kenedy

261.6 Civilization—Philosophy. Civilization, Christian 51-14962

"My aim in writing the first part of this book, bearing the title 'The Creative Activity of Man,' was to restate, in a general way, the Christian concept of history, so much neglected in our times... The second part, 'The Ancient Background,' aims at a survey, not of the events which preceded the birth of Our Lord, but of the values which, directly or indirectly, have been inherited from the various ancient civilizations by our own civilization. . . The third and main part of this book, "Aspects of Christian Culture," is perhaps nearer to the ideal unity obtainable only in a purely narrative work through the temporal sequence of events." (Foreword) No index.

CHUDOBA, BOHDAN—Continued

"All in all, it is a well thought out thesis, but dated, despite the fact that it is a completely legitimate Christian solution to the problem of modern society and modern progress. The work suffers occasionally from grammatical but harsh phraseology; and it lacks an index, an insufferable omission in a book of its kind." F. X. Murphy

+ — Cath World 175:156 My '52 300w

"The author knows well that the meaning of true civilization is the Christianization of the life of men in society. But, alas, he is hardly able to offer the reader a system of propositions which would make this thesis clearer and better founded than it was for the reader prior to study of the book." N. S. Timasheff

Commonweal 55:500 F 22 '52 450w

CHURCH, RUTH ELLEN. See Lovrien, R. E.

CHURCHILL, WINSTON LEONARD SPENCER. In the balance; speeches, 1949-1950; ed. by Randolph S. Churchill. 456p $5 Houghton 940.55 Great Britain—Politics and government. World politics 52-5251

"The speeches contained in this volume were delivered in 1949 and 1950. . . The outstanding events of this two-year period were the devaluation of the £ sterling, the General Election of February 1950, the outbreak of the Korean war, the establishment of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, and the immense rearmament programmes of the United States. These events constitute the background against which these speeches were made." Intro

Booklist 48:278 My 1 '52

Bookmark 11:180 My '52 20w

Reviewed by J. H. Thompson

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 My 18 '52 150w

"Here again is that sonorous roll, that matchless polish, that hammerlike impact and that bird-winged wit, which make him the greatest living orator. To sit with this book for an evening is to share in the making of history." J. G. Harrison

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Ap 22 '52 800w

Foreign Affairs 30:681 Jl '52 10w

"Four hundred and fifty-six pages of speeches, even Mr. Churchill's, might be expected to contain some dull passages. And there are such. They are few, however, and 'In the Balance'—a rather pompous title which it is doubtful Mr. Churchill himself selected—is a necessary addition to the shelf of Churchill books and a useful record of international affairs during two years of our times." Foster Hailey

+ N Y Times p3 Ap 27 '52 600w

New Yorker 28:145 Ap 19 '52 150w

Times [London] Lit Sup p717 N 9 '51 360w

CHURCHILL, WINSTON LEONARD SPENCER. Second World war; v5: Closing the ring. 749p maps $6 Houghton

940.53 World war, 1939-1945. World war, 1939-1945—Great Britain (48-2880)

For descriptive note see Annual for 1951.

Reviewed by Preston Slosson

Am Hist R 57:652 Ap '52 900w

"There is one serious omission in Mr. Churchill's narrative. From beginning to end he does not refer once to that power which has survived the rise and fall of Empires throughout the centuries, and yet obviously the Holy See is closely concerned with all the events chronicled here. There is no reason to think that Mr. Churchill is deliberately ignoring the Vatican. He merely reflects a contemporary perspective of history—essentially false—because it loses sight of that most important historical fact, the enduring spiritual power of the Vicar of Christ. If the statesmen of the world would readjust their historical perspective in that direction they might be more successful in constructing a permanent framework of future peace." Robert Wilberforce

Cath World 174:474 Mr '52 500w

"A fascinating panorama of total war, written in the prose for which Mr. Churchill is noted."

+ Current Hist 22:36 Ja '52 180w

Foreign Affairs 30:497 Ap '52 70w

Reviewed by R. H. S. Crossman

New Statesman & Nation 44:268 S 6 '52 1500w

"It is a volume devoted to the preparation of the greatest event of the war and with certain and penetrating skill the author describes the formidable task that had been undertaken and traces the course of events as they impinge upon the setting forth of the great armada. . . Even with [its] excellent qualities it must be admitted that Closing the Ring seems to fall a bit off the pace of the earlier volumes. One wonders if the author's interest in his arduous task is beginning to flag or imagines that the changing nature of the war—the long pull up is over, the crest has been past, and the struggle is now running downhill—has loosed the tautness and dramatic intensity that were so evident in the previous books." J. L. Godfrey

+ Social Forces 31:85 O '52 700w

"Mr. Churchill deserves well of his readers for setting out in full an interchange throwing so honourable a light on the character of the late Sovereign. But of course, he deserves well of his readers throughout." Wilson Harris

+ Spec 189:303 S 5 '52 1650w

Times [London] Lit Sup p575 S 5 '52 1250w

Wis Lib Bul 48:32 Ja '52

CHUTE, VERNE (DUSTIN C. SCOTT, pseud). Return of Mojave Joe; il. by Charles H. Geer. 164p $2.50 Knopf

Coyotes—Legends and stories 52-6389

A sequel to Mojave Joe under Scott, Book Review Digest 1950. The intrepid coyote is back in California with his mate and a family. The story is of sixteen-year-old Mel Brant's efforts to save the coyote family from the hands of Red-hair the trapper. For ages 10 to 14.

"Good natural history literature."

+ Kirkus 20:506 Ag 15 '52 120w

"Ranch life in California, a feeling for the hunted coyote, thrills, excitement, and suspense combine to make this as popular as the first book about Mojave Joe. Recommended for libraries needing more animal stories and for remedial reading." Harriet Morrison

+ Library J 77:1524 S 15 '52 70w

"The villains are the trappers who create plenty of excitement; they almost get the baby coyotes and also the gold bars in their den before Mel does. Their actions and revenge on the Brants seem overdone, as does the wisdom of the coyote. However, it is far above the average western, for many boys over twelve."

L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 S 21 '52 110w

"The way in which the boy and the coyote help each other is well handled, happily free of the fantastic or sentimental episode that so often mars wild animal stories." M. P. Allen

+ N Y Times p30 S 14 '52 100w

CIARDI, JOHN. From time to time. 84p $2.50 Twayne

811

51-8821

The fourth volume of poetry by a young Harvard professor. "Although many of his poems are quite explicit studies of a limited number of recurring subjects—death, the father, birth—one is always aware of the particularity and immediacy of the experiences that inspired these poems." (N Y Times)

Reviewed by Gerald McDonald

Library J 76:2114 D 15 '51 40w

"The sense of excitement that is communicated stems from the naturalness and effortlessness with which Mr. Ciardi's imagination moves from these experiences to large and complex artistic statements." Milton Crane

+ N Y Times p27 My 25 '52 280w

"He is a very versatile fellow. Yet it is precisely in the awareness of both his native and foreign roots that the American writer has always to discover his own identity and ours. Actually, John Ciardi has this awareness to an outstanding degree." Lawrence Ferling

+ San Francisco Chronicle p27 F 3 '52 100w

CILETTI, LUCIAN JOSEPH, ed. Youth on trial; a collection of high school essays and selected supplementary material. 254p il $3.75 Better the world press, Washington, Pa.

301.153 Social problems 52-205

"The essays of 153 high school students in Pennsylvania are brought together in this book by a World War II veteran who has invested his savings to set up the Better the World essay contest, finance the prizes, and publish this collection of student essays... These youngsters have attempted to explain how young people can better the world of tomorrow, and that is no mean assignment for anyone." Library J

"Interesting volume." Nancy Larrick

+ Library J 77:1044 Je 15 '52 150w

"Excellent. Yet the reader could have desired more diversity from the pattern, and this without doubting the sincerity of the essayists or forgetting their youth." Frances Witherspoon

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Je 29 '52 240w

"Brief and direct, the essays stress the importance of honor and integrity in personal, national and international affairs, of education, morality and religious faith. These themes are not new, but they are fundamental. The result is an attractive, well-printed volume that will interest teen-age readers and be useful in classroom and school library." N. K. Burger

+ N Y Times p28 Ja 27 '52 210w

CLAGETT, JOHN. Cradle of the sun. 304p $3 Crown

52-10771

The adventures of Juan de Moncada, officer in the army of Spain in the 16th century. Juan escapes the Inquisition and goes first to Santo Domingo, and then to the Mayas of Yucatan. In Yucatan he becomes a Mayan and a leader against the Spanish invader.

Kirkus 20:569 S 1 '52 140w

"First novel obviously after some of the Frank Yerby market. Though Mr. Clagett does not have Yerby's skill with the pen, he does have the proper number of nude women, love affairs, sword fights and battle charges to make it successful if not good. There isn't much else here." M. S. Byam

— Library J 77:1809 O 15 '52 50w

"Here, as with so many of the better historical novels of today, one is impressed more with the background than with the incident or plot... Mr. Clagett has told a good story, but best of all he has made us familiar with an ancient and fascinating life."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 N 2 '52 250w

"Richly caparisoned as a costume narrative, 'Cradle of the Sun' is occasionally marred, particularly in the earlier passages, by crudities of the love scenes. This discordant factor is but a mild one, however, and serves as only a momentary deterrent in the reading of an otherwise intensely interesting book." H. C.

+ — N Y Times p23 N 2 '52 450w

CLAPP, ELSIE RIPLEY. Use of resources in education [introd. by John Dewey]. 174p $4 Harper

370.19 Community and school 51-11894

"A report on the means employed by teachers in two rural public schools, in Kentucky and West Virginia, to utilize and develop the personal and community resources which children and their families use in daily living." (Publisher's note) Index.

Booklist 48:311 Je 1 '52

School & Society 75:285 My 3 '52 10w

"The general data compiled by Miss Clapp with painstaking accuracy... should be extremely helpful and encouraging to persons working under conditions that parallel those in those two communities. For any area where the school is a directive of community enterprise this study has much to offer in the way of concrete, specific suggestion, and it includes a useful subject index." Mildred Prince

+ Springfield Republican p9C Je 8 '52 140w

"For all who are concerned with modern elementary education, this important pioneer work with community schools will be of great interest."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:277 S '52 200w

CLARK, MRS ANN (NOLAN). Looking-for-something; il. by Leo Politi. 53p $2.50 Viking

52-7598

Picture-story-book about a little gray burro which lived in Ecuador. For ages four to eight.

Booklist 48:236 Mr 15 '52

Bookmark 11:186 My '52

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Je 1 '52 140w

Reviewed by E. C. Ince

Christian Science Monitor p9 My 15 '52 60w

Commonweal 57:171 N 21 '52 10w

"Well worth an adult's reading aloud, this is also good for children who have difficulty with their own reading and are attracted by short lines of text." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 28:96 Ap '52 90w

"This is one of those exquisite poetic stories, enchantingly illustrated by Leo Politi, that librarians and teachers, and most parents, will welcome, but that children rarely accept spontaneously as their own."

+ Kirkus 20:123 F 15 '52 110w

"Colorful Politi pictures enhance this story told in short sentences. Much information about life and industry in Ecuador can be gleaned from this picture book... Recommended for picture-book age and second-grade reading." Juanita Walker

+ Library J 77:725 Ap 15 '52 70w

"Miss Clark writes in a simple, primer style... This style grew because some of her books were written with the Indian children, for them to use. It means that many second or third graders will be able to enjoy it who otherwise might not tackle Ecuador. Besides, they will be lured by Mr. Politi's delightful pictures, luckily twenty of them in full color, many others in the pleasant gray-brown of the text." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 My 11 '52 170w

Reviewed by Irene Smith

N Y Times p22 Ap 13 '52 90w

New Yorker 28:192 D 6 '52 40w

San Francisco Chronicle p20 My 11 '52 70w

"The story of this little burro in Ecuador is illustrated with some of the most appealing pictures in color that Leo Politi has drawn... We know of no picture book that gives little children the feeling of one of the South American countries with such color and realism. Both text and pictures are exceptionally good." M. G. Davis

CLARK, S. A.—Continued

+ Sat R 35:48 My 10 '52 170w
U S Quarterly Bk R 8:259 S '52 70w
Wis Lib Bul 48:174 J1 '52

CLARK, MRS ANN (NOLAN). Secret of the Andes; with drawings by Jean Charlot. 130p $2.50 Viking

52-8075

Story of a little Peruvian boy who has spent his early days in a hidden valley in the Andes. He goes down into the lowlands searching for something, but eventually thru wisdom gained by experience he returns and finds in the lonely valley the truth concerning his inheritance and its meaning.

Booklist 48:268 Ap 15 '52

Bookmark 11:211 Je '52

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Je 22 '52 220w

Commonweal 57:176 N 21 '52 40w

"From a hidden mountain valley of Peru is drawn this rarely beautiful and subtle story of Cusi, a shepherd boy of today who is taught to fulfill the sacred tradition of his Incan ancestors." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 28:174 Je '52 100w

Kirkus 20:70 F 1 '52 160w

"Recommended." A. B. McCreary

+ Library J 77:799 My 1 '52 70w

"In another of her thoughtfully deeply felt books, giving children a sympathetic sense of faraway Indian life, Miss Clark takes us to Peru. Her tone here is one of beauty and mystery, of the elation of living alone in very high places, of passing along through the centuries of the two ancient Inca treasures, their llamas and their hidden gold." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 My 11 '52 220w

Reviewed by Irene Smith

N Y Times p22 Ap 13 '52 140w

New Yorker 28:198 D 6 '52 60w

"The working of Ann Nolan Clark's stories has always a certain dignity and integrity. It is particularly true of this one. . . Jean Charlot's drawings, washed in color, give the book added distinction. Boys and girls will enjoy it for the character of Cusi and for his favorite black llama, Misti."

+ Sat R 35:61 Ap 12 '52 180w

"Mrs. Clark's style is striking; she often quotes ancient songs and prayers. The book's distinction is enhanced by Charlot's pictures, few in number but powerful in effect."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:259 S '52 110w

Wis Lib Bul 48:175 J1 '52

CLARK, ELEANOR. Rome and a villa; drawings by Eugene Berman. 315p $4 Doubleday 945.6 [914.56] Rome (city)—Description

52-5770

Not a guidebook but a series of sketches and articles recording the author's impressions of Rome today and yesterday and a thousand years ago—its people and streets, buildings, art and culture.

Booklist 48:279 My 1 '52

Bookmark 11:205 Je '52 20w

Reviewed by Seymour Korman

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ap 13 '52 470w

Reviewed by J. G. Harrison

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 17 '52 350w

Kirkus 20:113 F 1 '52 160w

Reviewed by W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 77:900 My 15 '52 80w

"The lovely presentation of this book is integral to its charm. Doubleday has done a stunning but unpretentious job. The pages are handsome, the Eugene Berman drawings and jacket are evocative and right, even the endpapers, a warm Pompeian red, are chosen with taste. Physically, as well as in the head, a thoroughly distinguished job." Frances Keene

+ Nation 174:384 Ap 19 '52 950w

Reviewed by Harold Clurman

New Repub 126:23 My 12 '52 800w

"Witty without being flippant, unhurried without being slow, informative without being pedantic, contemplative and poetic without heaviness or affectation, Eleanor Clark's book about Rome is, of course, a book about human destiny. To be as good as it is, it could not simply be about the buildings of Rome. . . A book about Rome, if it is to be good—and this one is very good—has to deal somehow with the past. . . It is achieved perhaps by recognizing that the past can be recreated only in the mind—of an artist—and only as an hypothesis. The past can never be a literal fact." Gouverneur Paulding

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Ap 20 '52 1050w

"I feel strangely to praise a good artist for qualities one might expect to be taken for granted at a certain level of being; it is a little like being called 'honest.' But this faculty of discrimination is extremely highly developed in Miss Clark, and the great distinction and worth of this book is based firmly on it. It is in the immensely bold use of language: she is not afraid of it, she picks up a word where she finds it and uses it to her purpose. . . This whole book is the distillation of a deep personal experience; it is autobiography in the truest sense, in terms of what outward impact set the inner life in motion toward its true relation to the world." K. A. Porter

+ N Y Times p3 Ap 13 '52 1850w

"Miss Clark is full of talent, as well as of intelligence and knowledge, and these essays gather up Rome and hold it before us, bristling and dense and dreamlike, with every scene drenched in the sound of fountains, of leaping and falling water."

+ New Yorker 28:147 My 17 '52 140w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles

San Francisco Chronicle p20 My 4 '52 600w

"A work that is rather special, certain to excite those who excite readily about Italy, certain to pall on those who don't care a fichi d'India about it." H. S.

Sat R 35:42 My 3 '52 460w

"Rome and a Villa is a brilliant piece of traveler's impressionism, written with verbal polish. Though it will mean more to people who visited Rome, the book can still excite those who have not; it summons up, like a good translation, the spirit of the original."

+ Time 59:120 Ap 14 '52 450w

"Two essays on persons, the Roman patois poet, Belli, and the Sicilian bandit, Giuliano, are accurate and incisive, although the latter is scarcely relevant. The central essay, about Hadrian's Villa at Tivoli, is, however, masterly; in it, Miss Clark recreates from the ruins the gigantic past reality of the place and the lofty, if decadent, personality of the emperor. For this essay alone, the book is memorable."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:247 S '52 240w

"This book is a new and very sophisticated view of certain aspects of the city of Rome and its history. . . The book presupposes information, and some of its keenest remarks are hints given to a knowing and conditioned reader. The fact that the book has been a success is therefore a matter for special rejoicing." P. M. Pasinetti

Yale R n s 42:118 autumn '52 750w

CLARK, ELMER TALMAGE. Album of Methodist history. 336p il maps $7.50 Abingdon-Cokesbury

287.09 Methodism—History 52-5733

The history of Methodism from the ancestors of John Wesley in 18th century England to the present world wide organization, told largely in pictures. The volume contains reproductions of hundreds of old prints, portraits and modern photographs. Includes approximate membership statistics of Methodists all over the world.

Christian Century 69:878 J1 30 '52 100w

"This is a book which will be prized for years to come by all of those who are interested in the historical backgrounds of the largest Protestant denomination, the Methodist Church."

+ Kirkus 20:344 Je 15 '52 180w

"Most interesting are the early prints and pictures of Methodist beginnings. . . . And the many pictures of Methodist schools and colleges remind us of the long, close association of religion and education in this country." N. K. Burger

+ N Y Times p13 Je 29 '52 200w

CLARK, FREDERICK LE GROS, and PIRIE, NORMAN WINGATE, eds. Four thousand million mouths: scientific humanism and the shadow of world hunger. 222p $3 Oxford

338.1 Food supply 52-6239

"Thirteen British thinkers working in the fields of nutrition, biochemistry, agricultural physiology, plant pathology, marine life and statistics, have contributed to a symposium on the problems of food and fecundity." Canadian Forum

Reviewed by Kingsley Davis

Am Soc R 17:501 Ag '52 290w

Reviewed by Blodwen Davies

Canadian Forum 32:19 Ap '52 550w

Reviewed by Mary Hornaday

Christian Science Monitor p9 Ap 12 '52 270w

Foreign Affairs 30:670 J1 '52 30w

"A little book so honest and sensible, so full of solutions which mean hard work but are deduced from scientific facts, and so lacking in appeals to fear, greed, and prudery, that it is unlikely to be paid the slightest attention." Barbara Cadbury

+ Nation 174:330 Ap 5 '52 650w

Reviewed by E. J. Russell

New Statesman & Nation 42:596 N 24 '51 700w

"This valuable book represents one of the best contributions of recent times. The conclusion seems irresistible that much more food could be produced, but the authors insist on the need for a slowing down of the rate of population increase if there is to be enough to go round. Here we can agree with Dr. de Castro that an improvement in the standard of living would achieve this end."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p127 F 15 '52 900w

CLARK, JAMES ANTHONY, and HALBOUTY, MICHEL THOMAS. Spindletop. 306p il $3.95 Random house

622.338 Petroleum—Texas 52-7149

"In the annals of oil production, Spindletop is one of the major landmarks, and this book tells the Spindletop story. The Spindletop field is at Beaumont, Tex. It was brought in with the first American gusher in 1901. . . . Spindletop, opening as it did the great Texas Gulf oil fields, had important effects on business and industry. . . . This book deals with these matters only obliquely. Its primary interest is in what happened at Beaumont in 1901 and the years immediately after, and in the various major oil companies either founded there or greatly expanded there." N Y Times

Booklist 49:61 O 15 '52

"Spindletop was a great and exciting episode in American history. Its significance is not lost in this able telling." Russell MacFall

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 S 28 '52 130w

"A vast amount of research work must have gone into this book, for the story checks well with facts recounted last year in the Golden Anniversary number of the Oil and Gas Journal." H. B. Nichols

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 O 4 '52 600w

Kirkus 20:337 Je 1 '52 220w

"Although poorly organized and painfully repetitious, the first half of the book has drama and general interest. . . . Texans and oil people in general will find hundreds of familiar names and incidents; and some of them will sharply disagree with the authors' judgments. For the general reader, however, most of the interest ends in the middle of the book." Hal Borland

+ N Y Times p32 S 28 '52 350w

Reviewed by Ruth Teiser

San Francisco Chronicle p8 D 21 '52 410w

CLARK, SIR KENNETH. Leonardo da Vinci; an account of his development as an artist. 2d ed 203p 68pl $7 Cambridge

B or 92 Leonardo da Vinci

New edition of a book which first appeared in 1939.

Booklist 49:70 O 15 '52

"Sir Kenneth Clark has written a book on Leonardo's development as an artist that should rank high among the steadily growing critical literature on that painter. The intensive research that went into the writing of this study has, under Sir Kenneth Clark's facile pen, become transmogrified into graceful and sparkling prose. Never does excessive scholarship obscure the artist and his work." V. J. Papanek

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 J1 20 '52 270w

"A beautiful book, a worthy embodiment of the best study—according to many authorities—of Leonardo's art." B. R. Redman

+ Sat R 35:22 Ag 9 '52 60w

Spec 188:686 My 23 '52 50w

"When Sir Kenneth Clark's monograph on Leonardo da Vinci was first issued its merits were widely recognized, and there will be general satisfaction that a new edition of the book has been issued in connexion with the fourth centenary of Leonardo's birth. . . . The volume remains not merely (as its publishers claim) 'the best single book about Leonardo extant,' but the best single book on Leonardo. Originating in the Ryerson Lectures given at Yale University, it is written in a style which retains the vividness and fluency of the spoken word, and its pages contain a penetrating and often profound analysis of the creative processes of Leonardo the artist."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p448 J1 11 '52 950w

CLARK, SYDNEY AYLMEY. All the best in the Mediterranean; with il. and maps. 372p $4 Dodd

940 [914] Mediterranean sea 52-6487

"Here are included more than twenty countries and islands of the 'Inland Sea' area, from Spain, Portugal and Tangier in the West to Israel in the East, and from Algiers in North Africa to the French and Italian Rivières. The author has covered practical information on travel, customs, money and similar details, in addition to presenting the life, culture and scenes." (Publisher's note) Index.

Booklist 48:194 F 15 '52

"This volume has the rewarding values of an encyclopedia without being an encyclopedia, in its wealth of details. . . . A travel book should, among other things, be a complete job of reporting of conditions and things as they are, as they were, and, perhaps, as they might be in the travel seasons ahead. Clark's book meets these requirements, and with the added bonus of literary workmanship." Frank Cipriani

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 F 10 '52 500w

Reviewed by J. G. Harrison

Christian Science Monitor p15 Mr 20 '52 420w

CLARK, A. N.—Continued

"A fine addition to the 'All the Best' series." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 76:2117 D 15 '51 70w

"If you're doing the whole Mediterranean on one trip, this is the book for you, although the author sometimes lets his enthusiasm get out of hand."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 My 18 '52 140w

"A valuable book for the potential tourist and the stay-at-home reader." P. F. C. Friedlander

+ N Y Times p20 F 10 '52 100w

New Yorker 28:140 My 3 '52 30w

"The whole Mediterranean from Gibraltar to Israel, which Mr. Clark tries to cover in this, his newest travel book, has proven a large mouthful, unwieldy to chew, difficult to digest. I say this in the light of Mr. Clark's lengthy list of previous books, which have been excellent out-and-out guides. This one proves more of a book for reading than a guide for consulting. . . Those who are content to read for background, for pleasure, or to warm over an old memory, however, will do well to start out with 'All the Best in the Mediterranean.'" H. S.

Sat R 35:34 F 9 '52 230w

CLARK, THOMAS CURTIS, and CLARK, HAZEL (DAVIS), eds. Christ in poetry; an anthology. 412p $3.49 Assn. press

821.08 Jesus Christ—Poetry. Poetry—Collections 52-7048

Poems about Jesus Christ are arranged under the headings: Nativity; In Nazareth; The man Christ Jesus; The way of The Cross; The continuing Calvary; Resurrection; Come, follow me; The continuing Christ; The revolutionist; The lost Christ; The triumphant Christ. Most of the poets are English or American and predominantly modern. Indexes of authors and of titles.

Booklist 48:309 Je 1 '52

Reviewed by J. F. Nims

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Mr 2 '52 60w

"Mr. Clark's skill, experience and success as an anthologist are well known. Besides having served The Christian Century as its poetry editor (and in other capacities) for about 35 years prior to his retirement two or three years ago, and besides being the author of eight or ten volumes of poems, he has edited many anthologies. . . Ministers will find this volume of poems about Christ useful in ways that will be immediately obvious, but I would hate to think that its circulation would be confined to the clergy or that it would be regarded as only a piece of professional apparatus to be used for reference and quotation." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 69:249 F 27 '52 450w

"A charming gift, a useful bedside companion." M. L. Eglinton

+ Churchman 166:17 Ap 1 '52 80w

"A good reference book for ministers."

+ Kirkus 20:118 F 15 '52 170w

"This is not a collection of the great poetry, but it is sincere, generally quite well written, and it has the common touch. It will be particularly useful for those who seek good religious recitations or need passages for quotation." G. D. McDonald

+ Library J 77:532 Mr 15 '52 70w

Reviewed by Lawrence Ferling

San Francisco Chronicle p23 Mr 9 '52 140w

Wis Lib Bul 48:89 Mr '52

CLARK, WILLIAM HORACE. Gardening the small place; with drawings by Helge Sahlin. 247p $3 Little

635 Gardening

52-5866

Compact guide for new home owners with plots of from 10,000 to 25,000 square feet. Gives advice on planning, choice of trees, flowers, vegetables, lawns and tools. Monthly schedules. Table and drawings. No index.

Booklist 49:43 O 1 '52

Bookmark 12:4 O '52 20w

"Excellent."

+ Kirkus 29:397 Jl 1 '52 190w

"The author offers little information of a highly original nature. Nevertheless, the book is packed with sound advice. . . A useful addition to any gardening collection." J. E. Brown

+ Library J 77:1395 S 1 '52 50w

CLARKE, ARTHUR CHARLES. Exploration of space. 199p il $3.50 Harper

629.14353 [629.1388] Interplanetary voyages 52-5430

"Arthur C. Clarke, chairman of the British Interplanetary Society, presents the basic facts, probabilities, and possibilities concerning space travel. Since the book is written for the non-scientific layman, the technical aspects, which constitute most of the problem, are presented in such a fashion as to be easy reading for anyone who reads The Saturday Review." (Sat R) Index.

"An exceptionally lucid job of scientific exposition for the layman; one that offers non-space-conscious adults an opportunity to remedy, in a few agreeable hours, their ignorance of a new science, astronautics, to which the small fry have been hep for quite some time." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 190:83 Jl '52 450w

Booklist 49:6 S 1 '52

Bookmark 12:4 O '52 20w

"The author, who is chairman of the British Interplanetary society, has done a magnificent job in this scientifically accurate treatment of space travel. . . What gives the book such charm and magnetism is Clarke's ability to reduce complex subjects to simple language and his steadfast avoidance of fantasy as a substitute for factual narration." Roy Gibbons

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Jl 13 '52 290w

"Amid the speculation and the theories, the author has caught the true import of the conquest of space." R. C. Cowen

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 Jl 3 '52 500w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Horn Bk 28:343 O '52 20w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 77:1515 S 15 '52 90w

"In between the guesswork of fiction and the truth of unpublizable classified fact lies the realm of speculative factual writing; and Mr. Clarke's new book will serve as the most important yet published in its field. Not that it says much that is new; . . . but because it is precisely calculated to bring our present knowledge of space travel before a whole new public which has hitherto known only the distortions of comics and television." H. H. Holmes

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Jl 13 '52 850w

"This book's intention is to make the reader realize that human history has just begun and that the great future is still ahead. In this it succeeds. And if the vistas opened should come as a shock to pessimists, fine." Willy Ley

+ N Y Times p1 Je 22 '52 1150w

New Yorker 28:84 Jl 19 '52 220w

Reviewed by Don Fabun

San Francisco Chronicle p16 Je 22 '52 1150w

"Mr. Clarke is well qualified for his task. He has a good basic scientific training, has been engaged actively in scientific matters for the British government, and has devoted a great deal of time and thought to the general problems of space travel. . . In view of Mr. Clarke's boundless enthusiasm for his subject, he succeeds extremely well in holding to this difficult resolution, at least for almost all of the first fifteen chapters. It is not surprising that finally in the last three chapters his imagination sometimes overwhelms his good resolve, causing him to stray from the narrow path of scientific probability." F. L. Whipple

+ — Sat R 35:13 J1 5 '52 1250w

Reviewed by Ethel Dexter
Spring'd Republican p4C Ag 31 '52
250w

Times [London] Lit Sup p633 O 5 '51
260w

Wis Lib Bul 48:212 S '52

CLARKE, ARTHUR CHARLES. Sands of Mars. 216p $2.75 Gnome press

[52-31010]

Science-fiction novel.

Booklist 48:361 J1 1 '52

Bookmark 12:57 D '52

Reviewed by Mark Reinsberg
Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 S 7 '52
140w

Kirkus 20:238 Ap 1 '52 80w

"One of the best possible novels for the novice, and so beautifully detailed that even the Old Mars Hand will find freshly revealing light cast upon familiar subjects." H. H. Holmes

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Je 15 '52
200w

"Written with a quiet realism, Mr. Clarke's novel reads more like true history than fiction." J. F. McComas

+ N Y Times p33 S 14 '52 210w

Reviewed by Don Fabun

San Francisco Chronicle p9 J1 6 '52 20w

"This is what science fiction can do when a real writer who is also a real scientist gets hold of it." Fletcher Pratt

+ Sat R 35:34 Ag 2 '52 40w

CLARKE, CYRIL, ed. Composer in love. 177p il $3.50 Roy pubs.

927.8 Musicians [51-2930]

"One each of the love stories of seven composers make up this slender volume. Those of Mozart and Schumann are told through their letters; of Berlioz and Wagner through their autobiographies; of Beethoven and Tchaikovsky through their letters plus standard biographies; and of Chopin through a variety of sources including writings of George Sand herself." Library J

"No more apt way could have been chosen to point up the differences in outlook and temperament of the seven. Their music is not more unlike. Easy reading." C. K. Miller
Library J 76:2114 D 15 '51 80w

"For presenting these predominantly autobiographical glimpses of his subjects, Cyril Clarke must be judged as a compiler and not as a writer. He does not succeed overly well. . . The sketchiness of the selections and the scarcity of background material presuppose a familiarity with the lives of these composers not reasonably to be expected of the average layman." Marianne Singard

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 9:290 Mr '52
270w

CLARKE, URANA. Heavens are telling; the story of the sky; il. by Michael Chanwick. 128p $2.95 Acorn house, box 84, Riverdale 71, N.Y.

520 Astronomy 51-14468

"Starting with 'What is the Sky?' each of the thirty-seven very brief chapters answers one of the questions most frequently put to the author as she lectured on astronomy. The queries relate to the universe, Milky Way, planets, stars, meteors, sun, moon. An unusual feature in this type of book is the information on weather, tides, time, and navigation. Brief biographies of famous astronomers are included." Library J

Booklist 48:186 F 1 '52

"Information is accurate and up to date. . . For good readers of high-school age and adults." M. I. Ross

+ Library J 77:69 Ja 1 '52 100w

CLAUDEL, PAUL, and GIDE, ANDRE PAUL GUILLAUME. Correspondence, 1899-1926; introd. and notes by Robert Mallet; prefaced and tr. by John Russell. 299p $4 Pantheon bks.

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc.

"When the first letter in this extraordinary exchange was written by Paul Claudel to André Gide, in 1899, Gide was thirty, Claudel twenty-nine. . . Here, one might think, was the beginning, under the best of auspices, of a friendship that would endure. The fact is that with that first letter the two men were entering upon a relentless struggle that they would sustain for a full quarter of a century. For it was not until 1926 that the Catholic poet wrote his last letter, made his final plea—and abandoned his attempt to win Gide to Catholicism." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) Indexes.

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo

Atlantic 190:96 D '52 230w

"An important, illuminating and dramatic document." Martin Turnell

+ Commonweal 57:284 D 19 '52 1600w

"These are not on the whole great letters—their interest is too much in literary shop (interesting for the student) when they are not philosophic or dramatic. But they cast in so extreme a form and so typically the raging ethical conflict of this century—the appeal of authority and the appeal of self—that their shortcomings simply as letters are of only secondary importance. Mr. Mallet's notes and introduction are excellent. Mr. John Russell's translation is generally good but has several errors." L. F. Duchene

+ — Manchester Guardian p4 N 7 '52 420w

"The publication of these letters in an excellent English translation is indeed a welcome event, and not only for those with a special interest in Gide or Claudel." Joseph Frank

+ New Repub 127:18 D 15 '52 600w

"In the original text they certainly make good reading. They are beautifully written: Claudel's with a kind of rough, bluff lyricism, Gide's with lots of feints and silkiness. . . A list of thirty-four misprints is included in the book, but even this is incomplete. Gide and Claudel, both so meticulous about style and presentation, could hardly have been worse served than by this deplorable version." J. G. Weightman

+ New Statesman & Nation 44:425 O 11 '52 600w

"Robert Mallet's introduction, notes, bibliography and index greatly help to situate the letters in a lost and fascinating period of French life—to which they are an essential contribution. No one who has any interest in Gide, or Claudel can afford to miss them. John Russell's translation is excellent." Gouverneur Paulding

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 N 30 '52
550w

"[Gide] comes out of this long interchange of letters as by far the greater man of the two. Some of his pronouncements on the Greeks, on the Bible, on Poe, Dostoevsky and Pascal (Claudel is one of the few Frenchmen who bitterly maltreated Pascal) alone would make this book worth while. It is very intelligently prefaced and translated." Henri Peyre

+ N Y Times p5 N 30 '52 600w

Reviewed by Maurice Cranston

Spec 189:440 O 3 '52 650w

Time 60:86 D 1 '52 600w

CLAUSER, H. R. Practical radiography for industry. 301p il $7.50 Reinhold

620.112 X-rays—Industrial applications

52-6113

"The use of X-rays and gamma rays in the inspection of manufactured articles is presented in this book for metallurgists, inspectors and other technical personnel directly concerned with radiographic inspection. The two background chapters are short, and most of the space is given to descriptions of techniques and equipment. Technical terminology, such as a person engaged in radiographic inspection would have to be familiar with, is used freely, but otherwise the presentation is simple and eminently practical. The discussions are generously supplemented by graphs and pictures. Fairly extensive lists of references accompany the chapters." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

CLAUSER, H. R.—Continued

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 77:1209 J1 '52 40w
N Y New Tech Bks 37:45 My '52

CLAYTON, JOHN BELL. Six angels at my back. 200p pa $1.50 Macmillan 52-2073

"A nineteen-year-old boy named Ed Greaver, who lives in a small town in Florida tells how he gets involved, along with his best friend and his friend's wife, in a swift progression from petty thievery to murder. The predicament of these three young delinquents, Mr. Clayton intimates, can be attributed chiefly to the exhibitionistic behavior of Northern tourists, the sordidness of professional criminals and politicians, the evils of the Florida penal system (the boys get thrown in the jug for a while), and an apparently incurable shortage of ready cash." New Yorker

Atlantic 190:86 Ag '52 140w

"A first novel of real talent." Fanny Butcher
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Je 29 '52 410w

Kirkus 20:288 My 1 '52 250w

"Excellent first novel. . . Surely for all fiction collections, but not for the easily offended." Margaret Eliason

+ Library J 77:1191 J1 '52 140w

"This is one of those rare books in which there seems not one word too many and hardly one which could easily be changed for the better. Dialogue and description are put on paper with the most scrupulous craftsmanship. But to write well is not necessarily to write a good novel. Plot and tension and extended characterization are quite different things in a novel and in a short story. Mr. Clayton here demonstrates that he has mastered the special requirements of the novel no less thoroughly than he has those of the short story." Coleman Rosenberger

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Je 29 '52 900w

"This tautly constructed first novel is a story of Florida. Its chief merit is the flint-hard style of the writing, so suited to the level of the characters' minds that the reader agrees irresistibly to the truth of it all. One believes that 19-year-old Ed Greaver, narrator and chief protagonist, never has a chance from the start." Henry Cavendish

+ N Y Times p5 Je 29 '52 280w

"The thesis, while undoubtedly sound enough, requires a rather more thorough treatment than it gets here."

New Yorker 28:90 Je 28 '52 120w

"Purely as a yarn, this is good, if rough entertainment. But many readers will conclude that Mr. Clayton can do more solid fiction than this—and hope that he will." J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p11 J1 3 '52 750w

"This is the first novel of an experienced and deft writer. It is very, very good." Pat Frank

+ Sat R 35:11 Je 28 '52 600w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn

Springf'd Republican p6D J1 27 '52 430w

CLEARY, BEVERLY. Henry and Beezus; il. by Louis Darling. 192p $2.50 Morrow

52-5930

Sequel to Henry Huggins (Book Review Digest 1950). This time Henry gets into a good many difficulties in his efforts to earn a bicycle. Helped by his friend Beatrice (called Beezus) and hampered by Beezus' small sister Ramona and Henry's dog Ribsy, Henry finally gets his prize.

Booklist 49:19 S 1 '52

"About as entertaining and lifelike a small boy as we've met in many a day." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 S 28 '52 160w

"A worthy sequel to Henry Huggins and just as hilarious. Henry is a real boy." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 28:317 O '52 40w

"There's the kind of adventure with which any small boy could identify himself; there's humor and a basic understanding of children."

+ Kirkus 20:370 J1 1 '52 160w

"Recommended for home, school, and public libraries." M. J. Meade

+ Library J 77:1821 O 15 '52 40w

"It is small-town stuff put down with a loving pen and a keen ear for small boys' ways. Overflowing good humor pervades all three of the Henry books and you can read them in any order. The pictures are exactly right for ages eight to ten." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 O 12 '52 150w

"It is all very funny and as true to life as Henry's 'genuine Daniel Boone coonskin cap with the snap-on tail.' So are Louis Darling's illustrations." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p30 S 14 '52 150w

New Yorker 28:196 D 6 '52 70w

"Beverly Cleary, with understanding and humor, has written another cheery story of the boy down the street."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p5 N 16 '52 300w

+ Sat R 35:58 N 15 '52 30w

Springf'd Republican p10D O 5 '52 60w

Wis Lib Bul 48:218 S '52

CLEARY, JON. The sundowners. 290p $3 Scribner

52-7811

A story of one year in the life of a nomadic family in Australia. The chief characters are Paddy Carmody and his wife, Ida, and their fourteen year old son, Sean. The year saw ups and downs in their fortunes, hard times and good times, and the growth to maturity and understanding of the young boy.

Booklist 48:247 Ap 1 '52

"It isn't every week in these fiction-poor times that you come upon a novel so sturdy and fine and human that you read the final page with genuine regret. 'The Sundowners' is such a book. I enjoyed every word of it." V. F. Hass

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ap 13 '52 300w

Kirkus 20:46 Ja 15 '52 170w

"The jacket blurb states that it was Mr. Cleary's intention 'to write a novel in which the people weren't troubled by neurosis and didn't blame the world for their own shortcomings.' In this he largely succeeded. 'The Sundowners' has a nostalgic warmth that makes it out of the ordinary for these times, especially since the author's restraint never allows the book to become overly sentimental. Nevertheless, what conflict there is in Mr. Cleary's novel is created by Paddy's neurotic fear of adult responsibility. . . But the book is notable not so much for the action it develops as for the human qualities it depicts. It's just as well that 'The Sundowners' ends with its hero heading toward another horizon, his obsession still unresolved. Paddy Carmody has an abundance of raffish charm which would certainly be dimmed if he ever got the kinks in his psyche ironed out." Martin Levin

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 Mr 16 '52 500w

"No matter what critical yardstick is employed, 'The Sundowners'—Jon Cleary's second novel to reach us from down under—is a thoroughly satisfying job." William Du Bois

+ N Y Times p4 Mr 9 '52 450w

"The opening and the closing of 'The Sundowners' are weak. . . But the bulk of the book lying between is fine, true, and moving. I wish the novel were all middle with no beginning and end." Edmund Fuller

+ Sat R 35:20 Mr 15 '52 550w

Times [London] Lit Sup p389 Je 13 '52 150w

CLEAVELAND, MRS AGNES (MORLEY). Satan's Paradise; from Lucien Maxwell to Fred Lambert; with decorations by Fred Lambert. 274p $3 Houghton

978.9 Cimarron, New Mexico. Frontier and pioneer life—New Mexico 52-8271

"Agnes Morley Cleaveland belongs to the old Southwest. Her father at one time managed the fabulous Maxwell land grant, later had a major part in bringing the Santa Fe Railway through the mountains. She herself grew up in and around that section of northeastern New Mexico commonly known as 'the Cimarron Country.' 'Satan's Paradise' is a collection of short, non-fiction pieces, beginning logically with Lucien Maxwell and his grant. . . After dealing in brief and lively fashion with notable characters of an earlier time, it treats of Clay Allison, whose life overlapped the author's and for whom she has a special feeling—he was shooting up the town the night she was born." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 49:45 O 1 '52

"The book is full of new stories about western worthies. . . We find much intimate lore of the range, tales of buried treasure, mysterious sealed packets, blackmail, gambling, jail breaks, and lynchings, and the strife between cattlemen and sheepmen. Here is a piece of genuine southwestern Americana, not merely a chronicle, but an interpretation." Stanley Vestal

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p18 O 5 '52 380w

"For the Western fan, the real stuff, and for the readers of her previous No Life For a Lady (1941) there's still the same sparkle and warmth."

+ Kirkus 20:361 Je 15 '52 180w

"'Satan's Paradise' is full of the old, true, untamed Southwest. The presentation is not worthy of the material, but the material is so rich that most of the time it overcomes the author's faults." Oliver La Farge

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 S 21 '52 700w

Reviewed by J. F. Dobie

N Y Times p10 S 21 '52 400w

San Francisco Chronicle p21 N 30 '52 300w

"Some of the stories are grim and some are funny, but they are all characterized by the rugged individualism of a country which stamped the men, good and bad, who chose to live there, and who forced the laws to change, in some cases, rather than conform." Pamela Taylor

Sat R 35:42 O 25 '52 260w

CLELAND, ROBERT GLASS. History of Phelps Dodge, 1834-1950. 307p il $4 Knopf 338.74 Phelps Dodge corporation 51-11981

History of the origin and development of the Phelps Dodge company, which began in a saddle-making shop in Hartford in 1834. An appendix gives lists of officers, directors and partners of the firm and its constituents acquired by merger thru its long history. Index.

"The book was apparently designed as an appreciative volume for a commemorative or public relations purpose, and as such it is of a quality well above the average." H. M. Larson

+ Am Hist R 58:195 O '52 300w

Booklist 48:241 Ap 1 '52

Kirkus 19:721 D 15 '51 160w

"It is an intensely interesting story told with economy of phrase and grasp of increasing complexity." J. E. Cross

+ Library J 77:593 Ap 1 '52 100w

"Mr. Cleland has written [this history] in relatively brief compass and yet quite completely. The precise details an economic historian would want are not always available. Sometimes, as in this book, this is a gain. What one sees is the extraordinary picture of American enterprise, boldly venturesome and socially creative. Works of this kind, if carefully pondered, will help in overcoming the anti-capitalist bias that is only too common among American historians and moralists." L. M. Hacker

+ N Y Times p21 Ap 13 '52 1150w

San Francisco Chronicle p8 O 19 '52 140w

"Although scholars will wish for more extensive footnotes and more data to buttress the sound generalizations, the book is a good and useful account of this corporation."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:153 Je '52 280w

CLEMENS, SAMUEL LANGHORNE (MARK TWAIN, pseud). Report from paradise; with drawings by Charles Locke. 93p $2.50 Harper 817 52-7304

"This Mark Twain item will be ignored by no collector, for it contains matter never before published in book form. It is in fact two items: 'Captain Stormfield's Visit to Heaven,' enlarged from the edition of 1909 so that for the first time the full text becomes available, and 'Letter from the Recording Angel,' hitherto known only to readers of 'Harper's Magazine' for February, 1946. [There is an] introduction by the late Dixon Wecter, who as literary executor of the Mark Twain estate had access to the pertinent manuscripts." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 49:102 N 15 '52

"Why Mark Twain should have thought 'Stormfield' such a dangerous piece is difficult to understand today, for it is a tender thing, for all its talk of 'light years,' with no real irreverence in it. For the burlesque is all directed against man's ludicrously limited conceptions of the spiritual world, not against paradise itself, and not against the pitiful longings and aspirations of the heart." Edward Wagenknecht

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 S 7 '52 330w

Kirkus 20:394 Jl 1 '52 130w

"An unusually charming volume." H. N. Smith

+ Nation 175:275 S 27 '52 150w

"Though on a grand scale, the over-all effect is that of a prank which, in spite of its high humor, was not entirely motivated by a goodnatured love of fun." Isaac Rosenfeld

+ New Repub 127:18 D 1 '52 950w

"It is the work of a village philosopher who has read a few scientific books and thinks he is free. Of course it is a vigorous work, and sometimes it is amusing; but mildly so at best, and for the most part it has the feel of being forced. The 'Letter' that follows takes the hide off of Mrs. Clemens' uncle, a coal dealer of Buffalo; it is more successful, being more limited in its aim; and still it will never be one of the immortal works." Mark Van Doren

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 S 7 '52 280w

Reviewed by Delancey Ferguson

N Y Times p12 S 7 '52 500w

New Yorker 28:132 N 1 '52 170w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p17 O 9 '52 500w

+ Sat R 36:14 Ja 10 '53 250w

Springf'd Republican p26A S 21 '52 280w

CLEMENS, SAMUEL LANGHORNE (MARK TWAIN, pseud). Richard Brown and the dragon. See Bright, R.

CLEWES, HOWARD. Long memory. 256p $2.75
Doubleday

52-5879

A novel of revenge in which the central characters are a man who had been sent to prison for twenty years for a murder he did not commit, and the important police official who had married the prisoner's mistress. When the twenty years was over the first man was determined to avenge himself; the police official was equally determined to protect his wife. The struggle of the two for their own ends makes the story.

Booklist 48:321 Je 1 '52

Reviewed by Milton Crane

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Jl 27 '52
360w

Kirkus 20:94 F 1 '52 170w

"A few more books like this would re-establish murder as a serious literary activity." Norman Sharpnel

+ Manchester Guardian p4 O 5 '51 70w

"The relationships of time and place like those of the people, have all been arranged for a maximum of suspense, and if the calculation is pretty palpable it's also pretty effective." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p30 My 11 '52 250w

"This book by the author of 'The Mask of Wisdom' and 'Thus Am I Slain' is an above-average British thriller—which means, when it is measured by an international yardstick, that it is superior entertainment indeed." John Brooks

+ N Y Times p23 Je 8 '52 550w

"In spite of the crowded and rather untidy story, Mr. Clewes has turned out an unusually well-written and exciting melodrama."

+ New Yorker 28:143 My 10 '52 160w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p23 My 11 '52
70w

"Mr. Clewes is at his best with ominous scenes in a sleazy waterfront pub, encounters with knowing journalists, meetings between badgered police officials, and blunt physical love. . . In short, 'The Long Memory' seems certain to make new friends for Clewes on this side of the Atlantic." James Kelly

+ Sat R 35:17 Ap 26 '52 700w

Reviewed by R. D. Charques

Spec 187:486 O 12 '51 100w

Springf'd Republican p9C Je 8 '52
100w

"Novelist Howard Clewes' writing is clean as a whistle, economical without being starved for words. He can get suspense without straining for it, because it is less the product of plot mechanics than of atmosphere and contending personalities. . . The real kick for the reader comes not from the smooth, credible unravelling of the case, but from the tensions that mount as Author Clewes unlocks the hiding place of human guilt."

+ Time 59:112 My 5 '52 400w

"If The Long Memory were offered to us simply as a thriller it might, oddly enough, seem more credible; but Mr. Clewes, who uses a pen heavily weighted with moral responsibility, quite fails to make his characters acceptable as real people."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p673 O 26 '51
410w

CLINARD, MARSHALL BARREN. Black market; a study of white collar crime. 392p $5
Rinehart

338.526 World war, 1939-1945—Economic aspects 52-5609

"An intensive examination of the World War II black market, with special emphasis on the black market in meat, gasoline and rent. The study analyzes the extent of the black market, problems of control and enforcement, public attitudes, and underlying causes. The author, now a University of Wisconsin sociologist, was with the Enforcement Department of OPA for nearly three years." (Am Pol Sci R) Bibliography. Index.

Am Pol Sci R 46:898 S '52 40w

Booklist 48:372 Jl 15 '52

Reviewed by J. E. Cross

Library J 77:2000 N 15 '52 50w

CLINE, CLARENCE LEE. Byron, Shelley, and their Pisan circle. 263p il $5 Harvard univ. press

B or 92 Byron, George Gordon Noël Byron, 6th baron. Shelley, Percy Bysshe 52-11264

A detailed description of the lives of Byron and Shelley during the two years they lived in Pisa, with their attendant ladies and Trelawny, the Williamsses, and the Irish dilettante Taaffe. The central factor in the book is a fracas involving a dragon. Index.

"None of it is very important, but since it includes a number of new Byron letters (and Byron was almost incapable of writing a dull letter except to his mistresses) it is welcome. Professor Cline's scholarship is of the kind that leaves no stone unturned or unreported."

+ Manchester Guardian p4 My 30 '52
120w

Reviewed by D. J. Gordan

New Statesman & Nation 44:358 S 27
'52 390w

"Mr. Cline has discovered scores of new, or incompletely published, letters by Byron, along with a mass of other material relating to Shelley and his associates. The result is fresh light on the last two years of Shelley's life and the rewriting of an eventful chapter of Byron's." Delancey Ferguson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ag 3 '52
850w

Reviewed by L. A. Marchand

N Y Times p59 N 9 '52 500w

San Francisco Chronicle p23 Ag 24 '52
200w

"Mr. Cline very skilfully brings his circle together, explodes in their midst the affair with the dragon, and then ushers them out. As a segment of Byron's biography—which is all he modestly claims for his book—it is also an interesting record of some pungent personalities."

+ Sat R 35:33 Ag 2 '52 260w

Reviewed by Edmund Blunden

Spec 188:620 My 9 '52 900w

"The author succeeds very well in threading his discoveries upon a continuous and readable narrative. The background to the life in Pisa is fully rendered with careful scholarship, but it is only fair to judge the book as a strictly supplementary study, a microscopic rather than a general view of this important and ill-fated period in the poets' lives."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p388 Je 13 '52
650w

CLOETE, STUART. The curve and the tusk; a novel of change among elephants and men. 272p $3 Houghton

52-8272

The jungle of Mozambique is the scene of this novel of primitive people, caught between their tribal customs and the ways of the white man, and of the white man attempting to solve his problems in the jungles. It is the story of an aged British hunter who came back to Mozambique for one more try at the killing of a rogue elephant he had wounded some sixty years before and what came of it.

Booklist 49:105 N 15 '52

Bookmark 12:56 D '52 30w

"His book is a well-intentioned ground plan for the novel his admirable, but undisciplined, zeal prevented him from writing." Riley Hughes

Cath World 176:233 D '52 300w

Reviewed by V. P. Hass

Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 N 23 '52
360w

"Cloete has made himself one with the jungle and the veldt, the native kraals, the wild bush, and he shares its primeval quality, its majesty, its beauty, its fascination, its wisdom. He has studied the ways of the elephants, for this is their story, particularly two ancient ones who were killers. . . . It is not a story for everyone, but for those who want more than just the drama of plot and character, here is a book that opens a new page, and gives an old one deeper meaning."

+ Kirkus 20:475 Ag 1 '52 290w

"Cloete's love for the native and his concern for them leads to some editorializing but despite this, the novel is a winner all the way." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 77:1401 S 1 '52 80w

"This is a book of considerable stature, fine narrative, and little actual plot, which is all to the good in an opus of such a nature." Ivan Sanderson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 O 19 '52 650w

"Artistically, Mr. Cloete might better have cut his conversational safaris into philosophy shorter, junked his obtruding introduction and appendix and stayed hotter on his fictional trail. But the heartbeat of his loose-jointed book is as strong and sweet as life." Robert Lowry

+ N Y Times p4 O 19 '52 550w

"A complicated and highly fascinating tale."

+ New Yorker 28:169 N 8 '52 60w

"In preparation for this novel Cloete went to considerable trouble to familiarize himself with the lore of these ponderous beasts and the culture of the native tribes of Portuguese East Africa. And yet, with all his study and all his thought upon it, it is as though he never got around to writing his novel. 'The Curve and the Tusk' reads like a series of excerpts from some much longer book." D. W. San Francisco Chronicle p20 N 30 '52 320w

"At the very end the author writes 'In life there is no beginning or no end.' But a novel demands a beginning and an end and in the life and death of his black lovers and of his two brother leviathans of the jungle he has managed to create both." Harrison Smith

+ Sat R 35:20 N 8 '52 550w

CLOSE, PAUL DUNHAM. How to insulate homes and farm buildings. 204p il $3 Am. tech. soc.

691.9 Insulation (heat) 52-2806

"A practical book addressed to homeowners and farmers rather than to architects and contractors. Adequate descriptions of the types and varieties of insulating materials are given. Methods of application are also described, and in most instances the descriptions are detailed enough to serve the needs of readers who intend to apply the insulation themselves. . . . The book contains little if any information that has not been published before, but it is a handy compilation for its intended readers." (N Y New Tech Bks) The content of this book is adapted from sections of the author's book Building Insulation, fourth edition.

Booklist 49:34 S 15 '52

N Y New Tech Bks 37:73 S '52

CLOUGH, SHEPARD BANCROFT. The rise and fall of civilization. 291p maps $4.50 McGraw

901 Civilization—History. Economic conditions 51-12730

For descriptive note see Annual for 1951.

"Professor Clough succeeds in presenting an admirable short and succinct history of the socio-economic development of the ancient Mediterranean civilizations and the Western world building upon their cultural achievements. In form, selection of data, and clarity of presentation, it is a masterly performance, and its orientation in pointing up social and economic relations rather than political events and the rôle of military heroes is perhaps best exhibited by glancing through the entries in the useful index." B. F. Hoselitz

Am Econ R 42:416 Je '52 900w

Reviewed by J. W. Swain

Am Hist R 57:718 Ap '52 360w

"Let it be said at once that his work has the great merit of lucidity and directness. He refuses to deal with the spongy essences and mystiques which have lately become the stock-in-trade of the religious and nonreligious alike. It is also a pleasant experience to be put once again in touch with something as straightforward and substantial as the economic conditions of human advancement. . . . Regarded as a descriptive history, Clough's volume is a very considerable achievement. . . . The chief difficulties, at least in this reviewer's mind, proceed from the author's effort to go beyond description and insight and to seek verification of certain 'hypotheses.' In sum, this work, excellent as it is, would have benefited greatly had he omitted altogether the unconvincing framework of hypothesis and verification and been content with the narration which he does so admirably." R. A. Nisbet

+ Am J Soc 57:524 Mr '52 1200w

"In the opinion of the reviewer, it is more instructive and fruitful than a library full of such books as those by Toynbee and Sorokin, with their singletrack mysticism, or even of books like Brooks Adams' The Law of Civilization and Decay, which overworks an equally unilateral materialistic interpretation of history. Professor Clough's broad approach and his theory of multiple causation are more in accord with the facts and more entitled to respect." H. E. Barnes

+ Ann Am Acad 279:209 Ja '52 700w

Reviewed by Melchior Palyi

Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 Ja 20 '52 370w

Foreign Affairs 30:329 Ja '52 20w

Reviewed by W. C. Scoville

J Pol Econ 60:175 Ap '52 700w

Sat R 35:48 Ja 19 '52 50w

"Professor Clough's dynamic little book, so coherent and precise, is a direct and insistent challenge to the theses of Professor Toynbee. It expertly reveals an anatomy of facts that cannot be evaded either by lively imagination, subtle argument, or the construction of intellectual concepts not tied to the realities of the past and present." Goldwin Smith

+ Social Educ 16:134 Mr '52 450w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:53 Mr '52 220w

Reviewed by George Soule

Yale R n s 41:314 winter '52 900w

CLUNE, FRANK. Somewhere in New Guinea [a companion to Prowling through Papua] il. by Syd Miller. 356p maps $4.50 Philosophical lib.

995 New Guinea 52-2588

In 1940 the author went to New Guinea in search of the facts concerning the Australian and German gold discoveries of the preceding forty years. This book begun in 1940 was not completed until 1951.

"Mr. Clune's world is a world of heroes and good fellows and it is pleasant, and most instructive, to join him in looking at it. He is a prolific writer, completing approximately one book annually, and if his writing is not polished, there is a certain stilted vividness which gets his ideas across even if a faint whiff of perspiration accompanies the victory." Lawrence Griswold

+ New Repub 127:19 S 1 '52 250w

"An informal and engrossing book."

+ New Yorker 28:130 S 20 '52 120w

"His style is chatty and discursive, but he has gathered a great store of facts and stories. The drawings of the New Guinea natives, by Syd Miller, are so highly authentic that they capture everything but the smells of the inhabitants and the country itself." C. W. W.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p25 S 28 '52 160w

CLUNE, HENRY W. By his own hand. 586p
$3.95 Macmillan

52-14108

"A novel which pictures the development, over thirty years, of a city [called] 'Minerva.' More specifically, it is the story of Alan Wesley, an industrialist who had started as a poor boy, became known throughout the world, and in the end held Minerva by the nose." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 49:105 N 15 '52

Reviewed by V. P. Hass

— Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 N 30 '52
290w

Kirkus 20:612 S 15 '52 230w

"Good novel whose characters and concerns engrossed this reader. Recommended for small library purchase." F. A. Boyle

+ Library J 77:1896 N 1 '52 50w

"Mr. Clune writes straightforwardly, without special distinction but with mastery of the setting, situations and characters of his novel. 'By His Own Hand' is a substantial achievement as a recreation both of a period and segment of American life and of an individual." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 N 23 '52
650w

"There are wooden and wordy moments in 'By His Own Hand,' but the over-all effect is vital enough to sustain the interest through a very long book. Saturated with the 'props' and manners of yesteryears, it is more solid than brilliant, more dramatic than penetrating. It will rouse economic dispute and moral passion as it offers an enigmatic character, by turns dull, vicious, noble, insipid, inspiring, contemptible, pathetic, and complex." Charles Lee

+ — Sat R 35:18 N 29 '52 400w

CLYMER, ELEANOR (LOWENTON). Thirty-three Bunn street; il. by Jane Miller. 152p
$2.50 Dodd

52-8637

Emily, her small brother, and her parents, moved into a new house and for the first time Emily found she had a room of her own. The little details of Emily's life, her kitten, her friendship, and her happy homelife, make up this story for ages 6 to 10.

Booklist 48:324 Je 1 '52

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 My 18 '52
180w

Horn Bk 28:174 Je '52 90w

"Recommended for fourth- and fifth-grade girls." F. M. Hensley

+ Library J 77:602 Ap 1 '52 50w

"A very readable every-day story, done with true understanding of girls around ten years old. The home life is delightful, and the rather lengthy realism gradually builds real characters." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p24 My 11
'52 50w

"Although it is written for a slightly younger age group, this book as a quality reminiscent of Eleanor Estes' much-loved stories of the Moffatt family. Eleanor Clymer, too, knows how little girls think and act, how they yearn in secret for things they think the family can't afford. There is an undercurrent of wistfulness here which makes the fun and the ultimate happiness all the more satisfying." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p32 Ap 27 '52 150w

Wis Lib Bul 48:176 J1 '52

COATES, ADRIAN. Prelude to history: a study of human origins and palaeolithic savagery; with a foreword by Glyn E. Daniel. 289p il maps $4.75 Philosophical lib.

571.1 Man, Prehistoric

[52-3197]

A non-specialist, writing for others like himself, describes the pre-history of man. He bases his work on a study of anthropology, paleontology, and allied sciences. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by J. J. Honigmann

Ann Am Acad 283:207 S '52 230w

Booklist 48:373 J1 15 '52

Christian Century 69:1161 O 8 '52
200w

"A book which provides a sound account of the first enormous phase of our history as it is now known. Mr. Coates is not only concerned with the physical and cultural history of the palaeolithic hunters, but also shows an unusual interest in the undeveloped psyche and the language in which it attempts to express its intuitions. His chapters on Primitive Mind and Primitive Society have obviously interested him more than any others in his book and as a result are the most readable."

+ New Statesman & Nation 42:542 N 10
'51 280w

"Perhaps the more weight attaches to the argument of the book from the very fact that it is based on lean and logical thinking to the exclusion of imaginative feeling. But the absence from the book of the latter is very perceptible to the reader. It is introduced by a foreword from Dr. Glyn E. Daniel, a pleasant gesture of welcome from the professional to the free-lance." H. J. Massingham

+ Spec 187:889 D 28 '51 800w

"The general reader seriously interested in these subjects should be grateful to Mr. Coates for providing a conscientious, critical summary of this work of the archaeologists and palaeontologists. He is not a professional of either science, but he has a very solid knowledge of their findings; perhaps he does not state the challenge of outstanding problems quite so sharply as an active research worker might do, but on the other hand he is in a position to write with proper detachment and a sense of proportion. . . In spite of a few criticisms, he has done very well indeed in his effort to fulfil this exacting programme."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p708 N 9 '51
750w

COATES, WILLIAM PEYTON, and COATES, MRS ZELDA (KAHAN). Soviets in Central Asia. 288p il map $4.75 Philosophical lib.

958.4 Asia, Central. Communism—Asia,
Central 51-14930

"British politician and his wife travelled in 1947 through little-known Soviet republics. After giving interesting historical review they deal with each republic separately describing increase in population and progress in agriculture, industry, transportation, health, welfare, education and culture. Copious figures are given to support what is undeniably a tremendous advance under the Soviets." Library J

"This book is written in the same uncritical, admiring vein as all the other books by the principal champions of Anglo-Soviet friendship, but contains a sprinkling of useful information on Kazakhstan, Kirghizia, Tadzhikistan, Turkmenistan and Uzbekistan." F. T. E.

Am Pol Sci R 45:916 S '51 30w

"The authors of this book seem very close to the Soviet scene; in fact they are so close that not a critical word is mentioned regarding Soviet policy or the method by which it is implemented. . . Soviets in Central Asia adds very little to what is already available in Soviet propaganda literature." J. E. Williams

Ann Am Acad 28:259 My '52 480w

Current Hist 22:103 F '52 100w

Foreign Affairs 30:680 J1 '52 10w

Kirkus 19:428 Ag 1 '51 170w

"Authors would have been more convincing had they not painted such a rosy picture, and had used their critical faculties instead of giving so many lengthy quotations of Soviet officials. . . Recommended for collections with special reader interest in Central Asia." H. H. Bernt

Library J 76:1326 S 1 '51 120w

Reviewed by G. F. Holmes

Pacific Affairs 25:316 S '52 200w

"The present work is part geography, part history, part travel book, and nearly all of it in one way or another propaganda. Within these limits, Soviets in Central Asia is not without merits as a work of popularization. It is readably written, it is illustrated by agreeable photographs, and it contains basic facts about the Kazakh, the Uzbek, the Turkmen, the Tadzhik, and the Kirghiz Soviet republics. . . Mr. and Mrs. Coates, however, are content to describe without asking questions, and apparently without even realizing that there are questions to be asked."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p303 My 18 '51 600w

COATSWORTH, ELIZABETH JANE (MRS HENRY BESTON). Boston bells; pictures by Manning DeV. Lee. 64p $2 Macmillan

52-13238

A few days in the boyhood of John Singleton Copley provide the background for this story for ages 6 to 10. It was in the days of the Knowles Riots, when the British press gangs came into Boston itself. John's widowed mother's shop was on Boston's Long wharf, but luckily the nine-year-old boy was not among those impressed for service in the British navy.

Booklist 49:144 D 15 '52

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 N 30 '52 120w

"Recommended for all libraries." M. M. Gantt

+ Library J 77:2012 N 15 '52 60w

"This author's practiced skill makes a single incident, in a short book, carry a revealing weight of historic significance. Whatever quaintness of detail there is, is left to Mr. Lee's excellent pictures. The text is all action." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p10 N 16 '52 140w

Springf'd Republican p5C D 21 '52 120w

COBLENTZ, EDMOND DAVID, ed. William Randolph Hearst, a portrait. See Hearst, W. R.

COCCIOLI, CARLO. Heaven and earth; tr. from the Italian by Frances Frenaye. 318p $3.50 Prentice-Hall

52-1989

"This work by a young Italian novelist whose star is just ascending over the American horizon is an account of the last sixteen years in the life of Don Ardito Piccardi, parish priest. A tripart narrative dealing with his first charge, his work as leader of youth clubs and popular lecturer, and execution by the Germans, it is written in the form of extracts from letters, journals and reports, and contains some inaccurate theology and heretical elements of Jansenism and Manichaeism." Library J

Booklist 49:12 S 1 '52

"Although the author's elaborate method achieves verisimilitude for the varied reactions of the persons who come into contact with Don Ardito, the priest himself remains somewhat obscure as a character. . . Nonetheless, Heaven and Earth is a remarkable novel." Riley Hughes

+ — Cath World 175:472 S '52 500w

"It is a remarkable book, seriously written, and charged with a heavy load of implications, not all of which come clear at first reading." Richard Sullivan

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 J1 20 '52 280w

"The novel performs the remarkable feat of failing on three levels—the artistic, the intellectual, and the spiritual—and yet attracting a certain serious audience because of the cosmic pretension with which it fails. But, having read Heaven and Earth, I shall reread, with new gratitude, The Diary of a Country Priest." W. P. Clancy

— Commonweal 56:513 Ag 29 '52 1050w

Kirkus 20:266 Ap 15 '52 340w

"Distinctly in the tradition of Mauriac, Bernanos and Bloy, this work resembles them also in absorption with evil, suffering and poverty. Not for devotees of Graham Greene. Nature of story will restrict its appeal to the special reader and make it marginal for Catholics." R. J. Hurley

Library J 77:1011 Je 1 '52 130w

"I am both irritated and pleased by it, irritated because it is a long, maundering near-classic of a book no word of which you can miss without loss, and pleased because Coccioli can frame a story of spiritual malaise, can place a portion of today's struggle, as sharply, as fiercely, and as intemperately as does the priest about whom he writes." Frances Keene

+ — Nation 175:75 J1 26 '52 650w

"Heaven and Earth is an interesting novel, and deserves the attention it has had, if not, to my mind, quite all the praise. It represents a serious attempt to capture something perfectly real; it simply does not do so in the end." S. M. Fitzgerald

+ — New Repub 127:21 Ag 25 '52 900w

"The shape of Don Ardito's inner conflict is not made clear to us, his inconsistencies confuse us, and the situations into which he is thrust seem contrived, not to say melodramatic. The book would be more persuasive if Don Ardito, who, on the word of the author, is a saint, could make us believe as well that he is a real flesh-and-blood man, living in our own and not a synthetic world." T. G. Bergin

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 J1 13 '52 400w

"The story is a simple one; it is the depth of Carlo Coccioli's intelligence which makes it complex. Through a handful of average people and one extraordinary priest he has dramatized modern man in terms of every man who has ever lived, in terms of the continuous challenge of life." Thomas Sugrue

+ N Y Times p4 J1 13 '52 750w

New Yorker 28:71 Ag 30 '52 70w

"The novel does not come off. If biographies of historical saints often cannot climb out of a morass of banality, slickness, and insincere emotionalism, it is no surprise if a biography of a fictitious saint runs into similar difficulties. Not that this novel falls into the phony ineffable or plaster of paris school of sanctity. Quite the contrary." Serge Hughes

— Sat R 35:11 J1 26 '52 470w

Springf'd Republican p8D S 7 '52 140w

Time 60:78 J1 28 '52 650w

CODEx THEODOSIANUS. Theodosian code and novels; and, The Sirmondian constitutions; a tr. with commentary, glossary, and bibl. by Clyde Pharr, in collaboration with Theresa Sherrer Davidson and Mary Brown Pharr; with an introd. by C. Dickerman Williams. (Princeton univ. Corpus of Roman law) 643p $20 Princeton univ. press

349.37 Roman law—Sources

"First translation in any language of the Code, the Sirmondian Constitutions, and the Novels of the Theodosian Corpus. This is the first volume in an extensive project for the collection and translation of all the source material of Roman law." Am Pol Sci R

"The historian will find here rich material for study or for browsing. . . This is an achievement in which all who participated may take justifiable pride, and for which all who use the book will be duly grateful." Naphtali Lewis

+ Am Hist R 57:1015 J1 '52 350w

Reviewed by H. E. Barnes

Am J Soc 58:220 S '52 470w

Am Pol Sci R 46:603 Je '52 20w

"It is ungracious to criticize such a monumental work, but several weaknesses became apparent as I read through the mass of laws. The notes are too brief and their intricate numberings become confusing. Many laws need more historical explanations to make them fully intelligible. The valuable glossary at the end contains pertinent definitions and a mass of information, but a more extensive use could have been made of the great 'paratitla' of Jacobus Gothofredus, the first modern editor of the Code and founder of modern Theodosian scholarship. . . . These shortcomings, however, are trivial in light of the sound, exact, scholarly translation of this great legal code. The book, even though it costs a good deal, is worth any other ten volumes a social scientist could possibly have on his shelves." O. G. Darlington

CODEx THEODOSIANUS—Continued

+ Ann Am Acad 281:212 My '52 1000w

"A good and usable translation. . . . The English style is fully as objectionable as that of the original, but it is clear, and the style used is a matter of deliberate choice. The introductory material is thin and not very valuable. The Glossary and the Index seem good." J. A. O. Larsen

+ J Pol Econ 60:361 Ag '52 450w

COE, CHARLES FRANCIS. Ashes. 312p $3
Random house

52-7128

Story of crime and intrigue with political overtones.

Kirkus 20:330 Je 1 '52 200w

"A thriller with a novel's pretensions and price, set down in dialogue oddly mumbled from the archaic and the improbable." James Sandoe

— N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 S 14 '52 120w

"Mr. Coe is a competent story teller, but it seems quite needless to have included Book Three, a sort of epilogue describing the sentimental reflections of some of the principals twenty years later. Doubtless intended as a concession to the movie-minded public, the novel is better off without it." John Cournos

+ N Y Times p10 Ag 31 '52 220w

"There's an interminable trial scene in which the cheap crooks sound real. All the rest is stiff cardboard. C minus." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p26 S 14 '52 80w

"Before the forces of virtue triumph there is a murder and a somewhat better than routine trial scene. The novel as a whole, however, is not much better than routine and you'll just have to close your eyes going around some of the twists and turns in the plot."

+ Sat R 35:36 Ag 23 '52 240w

Reviewed by Ethel Dexter

Springf'd Republican p9D S 28 '52 220w

COGGINS, MRS CAROLYN ALTA (SIMPSON).

Successful entertaining at home; a complete guide for informal entertaining; il. by H. W. Doremus. 383p $4.95 Prentice-Hall

642 Cookery. Entertaining 52-8689

Suggestions and menus for every kind of entertaining from a kitchenette breakfast, to cocktail parties for forty, and elaborate dinner parties. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 48:313 Je 1 '52

"The career girl or the bride or the experienced homemaker who gets this 383 page book will be planning a party by the next morning. The menus sound so appetizing, the decorations so attractive, and the labor so easily managed that only an antisocial drone could resist. . . . Comprehensive as it is, the book is well organized with an index and is quite explicit. The author's style is conversational." F. D. Heron

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Ap 13 '52 70w

"There are loads of suggestions for special holidays and special kinds of parties; there's a judicious scattering of suggestions for games. This should be a standard in its field."

+ Kirkus 20:142 F 15 '52 200w

Reviewed by K. T. Willis

Library J 77:1202 J1 '52 80w

COGGINS, HERBERT LEONARD. Busby & co; pictures by Roger Duvoisin. (Whittlesey house publication) 96p $2.25 McGraw

52-6010

Busby, short for Busybody, was a beaver. Jerry found him with his foot caught in a trap, freed him, and took him back to camp as a pet. Busby was a fine pet in the wilderness, but back in town things were not so easy to manage. For ages 7 to 10.

Booklist 48:324 Je 1 '52

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin
Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Je 15 '52 150w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Yates
+ Christian Science Monitor p10 My 15 '52 70w

"Great fun to read aloud." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 28:171 Je '52 90w

"Though full of amusingly expressed animal lore, this is lacking in the character development portrayed in a story like Barbara Reynolds' Pepper, but Roger Duvoisin's well known drawing style does lend additional charm to an already nice account of a boy and a beaver."

Kirkus 20:189 Mr 15 '52 130w

"Duvoisin's black-and-white illustrations add much to this humorous story which may be read to first-third graders, while advanced third-, fourth-, and slow fifth-graders will read it themselves. Recommended." F. M. Hensley

+ Library J 77:1017 Je 1 '52 80w

"Beaver stories are rare, and very welcome." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 My 11 '52 160w

"Mr. Coggins knows a lot about beavers and about people, and writes this amusing story in a straightforward way. 'Busby & Co.' a reasonable fiction, sounds all the way through as if it might have happened, and Roger Duvoisin's drawings are as funny and easygoing as the story." Marjorie Fischer

+ N Y Times p29 Je 8 '52 150w

"Herbert Coggins' entertaining story is his first in the children's book field. One hopes there will be many more, for it is the kind children and their elders will enjoy equally. Roger Duvoisin's light hearted illustrations complement the cheerful mood of the tale."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 My 11 '52 230w

Sat R 35:28 Je 28 '52 140w

COHEN, FRANK J. Children in trouble; an experiment in institutional child care; ed. by Hermine I. Popper. 251p $3.50 Norton

364.72 Juvenile delinquency. Reformatories 52-7415

"This book [has been] prepared by the director of Youth House, New York City's detention home for the temporary care of delinquent boys. Based on training courses given for child-care workers, it sets forth the program, organizational steps and staff work necessary to make 'a healthy institutional atmosphere for the rehabilitation of damaged children.'" N Y Times

Reviewed by Jessie Bernard

Am Soc R 17:653 O '52 420w

Booklist 48:222 Mr 15 '52

"This book seems to be head and shoulders above other books on child training. The author is the executive director of Youth House, New York, and consequently has had to apply his knowledge and methods under multiple pressures, yet he comes through with his warm understanding unimpaired and his faith and hope in children and human society flying high." Marie Miller

+ Churchman 166:17 My 1 '52 160w

"The author has given an effective demonstration of how enlightened treatment can help delinquents. But, regrettably, he has omitted any general discussion of the causes of delinquency and techniques for its prevention." Margaret Naumburg

+ — N Y Times p24 My 11 '52 300w

Reviewed by W. W. Brickman

School & Society 75:409 Je 28 '52 100w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:308 S '52 200w

COHEN, I. BERNARD, and WATSON, FLETCHER GUARD, eds. General education in science [papers presented at the Workshop in science in general education, held at the Harvard summer school, July 1950] with a foreword by James Bryant Conant. 217p $4; text ed $3 Harvard univ. press

507 Science—Study and teaching 52-5026

"The 15 papers comprising this volume were presented at a symposium held at Harvard in 1950, at which the various aspects of science teaching in General Education programs were explored by leading educators. They represent the studied opinion of such science teachers as Edwin Kemble of Harvard, Sidney French of Colgate, Paul Sears of Yale and Edwin Fuller of Champlain, all of whom are unanimous in their belief that science courses are essential in General Education programs." Library J

Booklist 48:193 F 15 '52

"Stimulating reading for teachers and interested laymen." J. E. Brown

+ Library J 77:208 F 1 '52 130w

N Y New Tech Bks 37:79 S '52

San Francisco Chronicle p32 F 24 '52 110w

School & Society 75:79 F 2 '52 10w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:150 Je '52 220w

COHEN, KARL PALEY. Theory of isotope separation as applied to the large-scale production of U²³⁵; ed. by George M. Murphy. 165p $2 McGraw

541.23 Isotopes 51-14580

"The major portion of this book develops the mathematical theory of cascades in a general manner to permit application to a variety of separation problems. Specific applications of the theory to the centrifuge, two-phase separations including chemical exchange and distillation, thermal diffusion, and some aspects of separation of deuterium complete the work." U S Quarterly Bk R

"The book contains over 400 equations, and omission of a nomenclature table is a serious lack. The entire terminology is foreign to chemical engineers; so that the material, to be of general use, will need translation and amplification. Already the theories of the familiar unit operations are being merged into a general theory of separations, and Dr. Cohen's results will certainly accelerate and broaden this development." Theodore Vermeulen

Chem & Eng N 30:2028 My 12 '52 210w

"The book does not make for easy reading. Its mathematical detail and complexity make it suitable primarily as a theoretical handbook for someone already deeply immersed in the problems of isotope separation. Most chemical engineers would find the terminology and methodology quite different from that to which they are accustomed." A. L. Levy

Chem Eng 59:342 Ag '52 350w

"The only comprehensive treatment of the theory of cascades, the book will be of interest primarily to development engineers and others interested in the mathematical theory of isotope separation."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:99 Mr '52 120w

COHEN, LOUIS HAROLD, and others. Murder, madness and the law; introd. by Jerome N. Frank. 173p $3.50 World pub.

364.15 [364.38] Insane, Criminal and dangerous. Criminal psychology 52-8441

Seventeen case histories about murders and murderers, by a legal psychiatrist. "Drawing on a long and thorough experience with the Cains of our own time, Dr. Louis H. Cohen tells us how they fare in our courts when, accused of murder, they plead the defense of insanity." (N Y Times)

"The book is, from the first page to the last, not only easy but fascinating in its flow of circumstances and ideas. The fascination performs has something morbid about it. . . In fact, our nervous susceptibility to these case histories would discomfort us if Dr. Cohen's sympathetic and rational commentary did not continually return to the page and provide liberation. His analysis intervenes like the touch of a cool and practiced hand." Edmond Cahn

+ N Y Times p34 N 30 '52 550w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p19 N 14 '52 550w

COKER, MRS ELIZABETH (BOATWRIGHT). Day of the Peacock. 320p $3 Dutton

52-5302

A story of a textile manufacturing town in South Carolina, of rivalry between leading families, and of more serious conflicts between labor and the owners of the mills.

"A rather synthetic alignment of familiar faces, pertinent pressures and predictable situations."

Kirkus 20:44 Ja 15 '52 150w

"Mrs. Coker has undertaken to fashion a novel about the rise of industrialism in the South. The subject could provide genuinely dramatic material, but unfortunately neither her characters nor the incidents in which they become involved seem at all credible." Coleman Rosenberger

— N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Mr 30 '52 400w

"Mrs. Coker's first novel, 'Daughter of Strangers,' dealt in colorful detail with the problems of a near-white mulatto in the antebellum South. In the present book, it is evident once again that she is writing from an intimate knowledge of both her cast and her milieu. . . Readers who enjoy a happy ending and don't mind the use of deus ex machina will find 'The Day of the Peacock' very satisfactory reading." F. G. Fellowes

+ — N Y Times p23 Mr 16 '52 400w

"The novel is broad in its scope, and Mrs. Coker's descriptive skill makes up for deficiencies in subtle character delineation." J. F. Rooney

+ — Springf'd Republican p10D Ap 20 '52 80w

COLBERT, EVELYN (SPEYER). Left wing in Japanese politics. 353p $4.50 Inst. of Pacific relations

952 Japan—Politics and government 52-9711

This book, which concentrates on Japan, "traces left-wing developments from the 1918 Proletarian Movement to pre-war exile activities in China, post-surrender revival, and finally the 1950 purge." (Library J) The author is a State Department research analyst in Japanese politics and government. Index.

Booklist 48:318 Je 1 '52

Reviewed by E. W. Harris

Churchman 166:17 O 15 '52 180w

Foreign Affairs 31:167 O '52 30w

"Highly recommended as a source book by an intelligent, thoughtful scholar." H. P. Linton

+ Library J 77:1075 Je 15 '52 150w

Reviewed by J. B. Cohen

Sat R 35:28 O 4 '52 650w

"General readers as well as specialists will find the book rewarding. For those who wish to understand and assess the postwar labor and left-wing activities and their effects, both immediate and long term, on Japanese politics, the book is required reading."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:282 S '52 240w

COLBY, ANITA. Beauty book; il. by the author. 258p $4.95 Prentice-Hall 646.7 Beauty, Personal 52-7768
Rules, regulations, and suggestions for those desirous of beauty, charm, and glamour. Includes chapters on how to be a good hostess and a good guest. Index.

Booklist 48:224 Mr 15 '52

Reviewed by Eleanor Nangle
Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 Ap 6 '52
200w

"This book could well be called 'Let's Make a Star Out of you.' It is full of all the beauty secrets and formulas that delight teen-age girls. Illustrations are eye-catching, style is highly informal, and the whole is just the kind of fluff that most girls love." M. D. Read

Library J 77:733 Ap 15 '52 50w
Springf'd Republican p21A Mr 23 '52
100w

COLBY, MRS JEAN (POINDEXTER). Children's book field [designed and il. by Greta Franzen]. 246p $3.50 Pellegrini & Cudahy

028.5 Children's literature. Publishers and publishing 52-5921

Based on a series of articles which the author wrote for Junior Reviewers. Covers all phases of juvenile publishing, from writing techniques to evaluation of the finished work. Bibliography. No index.

Booklist 49:84 N 1 '52

Bookmark 12:77 Ja '53 30w

"This might well be required reading for aspiring writers, illustrators and editors of children's books."

+ Kirkus 20:529 Ag 15 '52 130w

"The section on publishing becomes a textbook on the planning and physical production of books, of value to beginning editors. The stress on such personal activities as 'Junior Reviewers' detracts from the objectivity of the book but may be a minor fault in a book so full of information to the outsider 'wanting in,' in writing and publishing." S. M. Andrews

+ Library J 77:1497 S 15 '52 100w

"With courage, vigor and an excited enthusiasm, Mrs. Colby writes a book which will be welcome to a wide audience; would-be authors and artists of children's books, would-be employees in this field of publishing, other publishers, and her own following of readers of 'Junior Reviewers.'" L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 D 28 '52
550w

COLE, RICHARD D., and STARR, MRS PEG B. Making pottery for profit [il. by Richard Correll]. 183p $2.95 Sterling

738.3 Pottery 51-14672

Advice for the beginner in pottery making. Stresses the planning of a studio, finding a market, choosing a specialty, operating a ceramic supply shop, and other aspects of the business side of pottery making. No index.

Booklist 48:156 Ja 1 '52

Bookmark 11:130 Mr '52 20w

COLEMAN, LONNIE. See Coleman, W. L.

COLEMAN, MRS SATIS NARRONA (BARTON). Dancing time; music for rhythmic activities of children; il. by Vana Earle. 32p $2.25 Day

372.21 Musical meter and rhythm—Juvenile literature 52-5373

Fourteen piano arrangements to accompany rhythmic activities of children, such as cowboys on ponies; Indians creeping thru the forest; hammering to build my house; the farmer hoes his garden, etc.

Booklist 48:236 Mr 15 '52

Reviewed by Elizabeth Yates
Christian Science Monitor p7 Ag 14 '52
70w

"Nursery, kindergarten and lower elementary grade children can have real fun with the tunes and rhythmic activities presented in this attractive volume by a well-known teacher of creative music and music education at Columbia." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 28:183 Je '52 80w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Je 29
'52 100w

COLEMAN, WILLIAM LAURENCE. Clara.
285p $3 Dutton

51-14964

Character study of a selfish, determined Southern woman, beginning in the 1920's and ending thirty years later. Lillian married Carl Sayre and continued the tactics begun by his domineering mother, until she drove him to drink and to the affair with their Negro servant, Clara.

Booklist 48:196 F 15 '52

Reviewed by Riley Hughes
Cath World 175:231 Je '52 220w

Reviewed by Chad Walsh
Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Ja 20 '52
430w

Kirkus 19:644 N 1 '51 130w

"Recommended for large fiction collection." H. R. Forbes

+ Library J 77:48 Ja 1 '52 80w

New Repub 126:22 Ap 7 '52 80w

"Extraordinarily fine novel." Coleman Rosenberger

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Ja 13 '52
900w

"The material is here in plenty and has its own effectiveness, regardless of execution. I feel merely that it could have been worked into a richer and more solid book by use of another viewpoint and style." Hubert Creekmore

N Y Times p20 Ja 20 '52 410w

"A fuzzy tale of petty lives. . . Their wretched longings and jealousies, and their equally wretched resignations at the end of it all, make poor reading, and Mr. Coleman's sticky writing does nothing to improve their cause."

— New Yorker 28:109 F 23 '52 110w

"'Clara' is the best Mr. Coleman has yet written. It calls, as any really good novel does, for some response from the reader; as was said long ago, it takes two to make a book—the man who writes it and the one who reads it. But any piece of fiction which sets out to be anything more than straight yarn requires this effort on the reader's part. In Mr. Coleman's case, he is novelist enough to make it no strain." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ja 23 '52
750w

"The mob scene and death by violence have been too much used in Southern stories. It was a disappointment to come on them again, especially here where the contest between the two women was already sufficiently dramatic and absorbing. It was a satisfaction, however, to find that in a time when many novels dealing with race problems are too heavily sociological, Mr. Coleman has given us characters who are first of all human beings. He has written an excellent novel." C. R. Sumner

+ Sat R 35:11 F 9 '52 450w

"Like so many unsuccessful books, Clara is interesting and sympathetic reading." Marghanita Laski

Spec 189:170 Ag 1 '52 180w

"While readable, the plot labors towards an illogical and seemingly forced ending. It is difficult to determine whether Mr. Coleman has penned a protest against racial intolerance or has, instead, presented a sometimes lagging case history of the fruits harvested by the selfish Lillian." B. F. K.

Springf'd Republican p4D Ja 27 '52
180w

"In Clara, Southern Novelist Lonnie Coleman has handled a potentially messy theme with uncommon dignity. His story, in other hands, might have become a staring-eyed study of miscegenation. Author Coleman uses it to show that the color line in the South can sometimes follow a route as uncertain as the wanderings of human emotion."

+ Time 59:101 Ja 21 '52 460w

COLEMAN-NORTON, PAUL ROBINSON, and others, eds. Studies in Roman economic and social history, in honor of Allan Chester Johnson. 373p il $5 Princeton univ. press

330.937 Rome—Economic conditions. Johnson, Allan Chester 52-6257

"A dedicatory offering of twenty-three articles on subjects more or less related to the work in which Professor Johnson has been engaged—constitutional history, papyrology, economic and social studies, Professor Johnson, for thirty-seven years a beloved teacher and scholar at Princeton University, is still resident at Princeton." Am Hist R

"Every one of the contributions has something fresh and new for the student of antiquity." A. A. Boyce

+ Am Hist R 57:943 Jl '52 550w

School & Society 75:237 Ap 12 '52 20w

"Of particular interest among the economic studies is M. P. Charlesworth's reappraisal of Roman trade with India from evidence found at Arikamedu. . . Important, also, is Lily Ross Taylor's suggestion that Caesar's land bill of 55 B. C. was concerned in the first instance with problems engendered by implementation of his measure of 59 B. C. . . Numismatists will find six fine studies, especially one by Harold Mattingly entitled The Clash of the Coinages Circa 270-296. Professor A. E. R. Boak contributes an excellent papyrus study which indicates that the Tesserarii were civilian officials who collected military imposts, the evidence does not reveal the functions of the subordinate Quadrarii."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:154 Je '52 240w

COLERIDGE, SAMUEL TAYLOR. Letters; selected and with an introd. by Kathleen Raine. 280p $3.50 British bk. centre

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc.

"As the editor points out, [Coleridge] wrote many wonderful letters which 'reach an incandescence of thought, and energy of language that characterizes his finest prose and verse.' One hundred and forty-one of them, all previously published, are in this volume of selected letters. They reflect more of a record of mental experience than of events, and show flashes of poetic vision." N Y Times

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ag 10 '52 30w

Reviewed by Ruth Chapin

Christian Science Monitor p11 S 4 '52 270w

Nation 175:158 Ag 23 '52 240w

"A far more effective outline of Coleridge than we had had before or at any rate, a more feeling portrait, at once nobler and more abased. For the reader's comfort, rather more editorial comment might have been given, for Coleridge is not a diverting letter-writer for the lazy reader; these Letters give the matter of a life; what our eyes wander away for, is the plot, but of that—with some force—Miss Raine thinks we have had quite enough in the past." V. S. Pritchett

+ New Statesman & Nation 43:676 Je 7 '52 1600w

"This volume will serve very well as an introduction to a great poet and critic, and to one of the most tragic of lives in English letters." H. F. West

+ N Y Times p6 Jl 20 '52 550w

"These letters are the best introduction to Coleridge's mind and more formal writings. The gloom of the wood is often dissipated by the bright light of a powerful intelligence and by darting rays of humor." B. R. Redman

+ Sat R 35:27 Ag 2 '52 160w

"While so much is out of print or not yet in it, a selection of this poet's letters is 'not a bad thing to have about a house.' I was almost going to say that any selection of two or three hundred pages would do, but Miss Raine has made a really good one. It contains the principal materials for a general acquaintance with Coleridge's personality, genius and performance; and, in spite of what has been said in dispraise of him by those particularly with tidy minds and serious faces, Coleridge ought not to be missed by any enthusiast for human life." Edmund Blunden

+ Spec 188:447 Ap 4 '52 650w

"It is not for Coleridge to be the model letter-writer any more than the model poet, philosopher or theologian; his genius is too broad and his vision too varied. That his polygonal personality comes through Miss Raine's selection is enough to recommend this to the general reader, who will find, besides, a minimum of distracting commentary."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p342 My 23 '52 850w

COLES, MANNING, pseud. of ADELAIDE FRANCES OKE MANNING and CYRIL HENRY COLES. Alias Uncle Hugo. 191p $2.50 Doubleday

52-10398

Tommy Hambledon, British foreign agent, goes behind the Iron Curtain to rescue a small boy, the future king of a small European country.

Kirkus 20:383 Jl 1 '52 50w

Library J 77:1760 O 15 '52 20w

"Spoilsports who regard this sort of thing as less than sidesplitting may not care to read more than the opening sequence. If they do they will discover that Tommy's old ingenuity is rarely called into play. He slips through every dilemma with tame insouciance, greased by his authors, who help him to every good thing as if he'd never lifted a finger for himself." James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 S 28 '52 90w

"Mr. Coles, who never made the common fictional error of underestimating the Nazis, is less complimentary to the Russians, and makes the whole mission so ridiculously easy that it will add little to Hambledon's reputation—or to the reader's enjoyment. There's only a glimpse or two of Tommy's humor and ingenuity, and a minimum of suspense as pure dumb luck comes to his rescue in every tight spot." Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p16 S 14 '52 60w

"The adventures are strange, wonderful, and as funny as any Coles has ever invented. It's oddly easy to condone the numerous killings and to believe this lovely foolery. B plus."

L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p25 S 21 '52 50w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 35:40 S 13 '52 20w

COLES, MANNING, pseud. of ADELAIDE FRANCIS OKE MANNING and CYRIL HENRY COLES. Night train to Paris. 192p $2.50 Doubleday

52-5534

Detective story.

Booklist 48:322 Je 1 '52

Bookmark 11:159 Ap '52

"This yarn moves at terrific pace from episodes of torture and brutality to sparkling interludes of ingenious skill and deception." Drexel Drake

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p18 Mr 16 '52 110w

Kirkus 20:48 Ja 15 '52 80w

Reviewed by James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Mr 30 '52 160w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p27 Mr 23 '52 140w

COLES, MANNING—Continued

"All chalked up in Coles' best style. B plus."
L. G. Offord
+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 Mr 23 '52
80w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff
Sat R 35:36 Ap 5 '52 30w
Springf'd Republican p7D My 18 '52
50w

COLETTE, SIDONIE GABRIELLE. Gigi;
Julie de Carneilhan [and] Chance acquaintances [tr. by Roger Senhouse]. 315p il $3.50
Farrar, Straus 52-13845

"Three novellas; one of them already famous in this country as a play; the others less renowned but equally piquant. Especially Julie de Carneilhan which tells of a much married aristocrat down on her luck, who agrees with an ex-husband to blackmail his present wife and split the gain. The other story concerns Madame Colette at a country lodge, and her part in the amorous schemes of the visitors." Library J

"While only Gigi is close to representing Colette at her best, the other two novelettes bear witness to her extraordinary gifts. . . There is wit in the work and a sense of fun; and she brilliantly renders the world of the senses. Her celebrated style—Maugham once said no one in France wrote better—inevitably loses in translation. But even in the English it conveys with economy no end of subtle nuances, and it retains considerable charm." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 191:84 Ja '53 220w

Kirkus 20:611 S 15 '52 30w

"The translation is smooth as silk. Highly recommended." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 77:1900 N 1 '52 50w

Reviewed by Patricia Blake
N Y Times p6 N 2 '52 320w

"These three short novels do not represent Colette at her best, but they all bear distinct traces of her wisdom, her incomparable style, and her humor."

+ New Yorker 28:172 N 8 '52 80w

"As always the style in all three is sprightly, full of sly malice, occasional flashes of brilliant insight, grace, and a decided aura of decadence. The translations transmit the special flavor admirably though Mr. Fermor occasionally stumbles into awkwardness." E. J. F.

+ Sat R 35:37 D 6 '52 240w

"These three stories are only minor Colette, but each possesses the curiously feline ferocity which is her stock in trade in the sophisticated sex jungle which she pictures. Her style is intensely and fervently feminine." L. S. Munn
Springf'd Republican p13C D 14 '52
200w

COLETTE, SIDONIE GABRIELLE. Gigi;
dramatization. See Loos, A.

COLETTE, SIDONIE GABRIELLE. Short novels; with an introd. by Glenway Wescott. 733p $5 Dial press

51-13864

Contents: Chéri; The last of Chéri; The other one; Duo; The cat; The indulgent husband.

"This wonderful book is for everyone interested in fiction." Paul Engle
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ja 6 '52
240w

Reviewed by Richard Hayes
Commonweal 56:536 S 5 '52 2150w

Reviewed by Ernest Jones
Nation 174:40 Ja 12 '52 750w

Reviewed by Robert Phelps
New Repub 126:21 Mr 10 '52 390w

Reviewed by G. F. Whicher
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 F 17 '52
100w

"The important thing to read in this collection is Glenway Wescott's introduction. It is a labor of love, affectionate but unblinded; a deserved tribute to a most lively genius, full of Wescott's wry judgments—all well seated in a long knowledge of all the works, in French—possibly the only language that can ever really contain them—and a true introduction. This long study, or meditation, on the life and writings of Colette does his dear author the justice to tell the new reader who is depending on translations that these short novels, for all their varying brilliancy, are not her best work." K. A. Porter

+ N Y Times p5 N 18 '51 900w

"Colette's writing is ripe, open, and without shame, and it is self-intoxicated in a way that is sometimes disconcerting, because it is humorless. She has plenty of humor, but of the deadly, malicious, witty sort that flourishes best in society, or against society. . . It is a pity that the people who put together the new collection called 'Short Novels of Colette' were content to do such a haphazard job, because, although they have included 'Chéri' and 'The Other One,' both among her best novels, they have also given space to some much less important stories, which could well have waited till a later date." Maeve Brennan

+ New Yorker 27:69 Ja 5 '52 1900w

"All [these short novels] exhibit Colette's special ability to write, even more than her countrymen and countrywomen, about love and sex with a combination of the sensuous and a sense of fun. And all show her well disciplined elegance, clarity, and forcefulness. . . This selection, well made and thoroughly representative of her work, may well bring her fiction—and perhaps some of her very personal, autobiographical non-fiction writing—to the attention of many a new reader. If it does, much of the credit must go to Mr. Wescott for his sensitive, precise, and clear introduction to one of the notable women writers of her time anywhere." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 D 27 '51
800w

Reviewed by J. M. Brown
Sat R of Lit 34:32 D 15 '51 700w

Reviewed by B. R. Redman
Sat R 35:34 F 9 '52 260w
Time 58:120 N 19 '51 800w

COLLIER, EDMUND. Cowman's kingdom; il.
by Tom Sinnickson. (American heritage ser)
191p $1.75; school ed $1.59 Aladdin 52-11851

Western story for young readers.

Kirkus 20:556 S 1 '52 50w

"Characters are contrived, and youngsters carry too much weight. However, action as well as the many illustrations will appeal especially to upper-grade boys who are slow readers. Recommended for remedial reading with this group." F. M. Hensley

+ Library J 77:1664 O 1 '52 40w

"It has the gunmen and the girl and other elements of the grade B movie." L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 S 28
'52 20w

"A western that pulls no punches." M. R. Allen
+ Sat R 35:45 O 11 '52 20w

COLLIER, SARGENT F., and HORGAN, THOMAS PATRICK. Mount Desert, the most beautiful island in the world; photographs by Sargent F. Collier; introd. by Ben Ames Williams. 106p $5; pa $2 Houghton
974.145 Mount Desert island, Maine 52-10372
Photographs of the various aspects of Mount Desert scenery and life, and text describing its history, social life and industries.

Booklist 49:46 O 1 '52

Reviewed by L. T. Heron
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ag 10 '52
60w

Reviewed by Edith Prudden
Christian Science Monitor p7 Ag 7 '52
70w

COLLIER'S encyclopedia; with bibliography and index; Frank W. Price, editorial director; Charles P. Barry, editor-in-chief; Louis Shores, lib. consultant and advisory ed; Arthur N. Hosking, art ed; associate eds: Alfred L. Hall-Quest [and others] Miles Lawrence Hanley, consultant on pronunciation. 20v il col pl maps $179; to libs $149 Collier

031 Encyclopedias and dictionaries 50-13391
 "Subscription Books Bulletin, July 1950 [Book Review Digest 1950], carried a preliminary review of the first six volumes of Collier's Encyclopedia. The present review is a new one based on the complete set of twenty volumes. The Foreword states that this is 'an entirely new encyclopedia'. . . . The contents of each volume is indicated on the spine by the first three letters of the first and last entry, in capitals, and the complete first and last entry, in smaller type. . . . The publishers state that the volumes of this set 'systematize all of the knowledge significant to the English-speaking peoples. But it undertakes to do this for the layman rather than for the specialist'. . . . 'Memorandum for Librarians. Indicative of the comprehensive scope of the encyclopedia, main entries consist of general topics, specialized terms, titles (plays, poems, novels, paintings, sculpture, etc.), geographical place-names, and personal names (ancient, modern, biblical, literary, and mythological). Although both ancient and modern civilizations are treated, emphasis is on the Western world of the modern age.' Subscription Bks Bul

"Collier's Encyclopedia is, as the publishers claim, a new reference set. It is a major reference work, making accessible to the layman and student recent and authoritative material in readable style. It is recommended for high school, college and university, and public libraries and for home use."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 23:32 J1 '52 2750w

COLLINS, JAMES DANIEL. Existentialists; a critical study. 268p $4.50 Regnery

111 Existentialism 52-8886

"Most accounts in English dealing with existentialism have been rather slight and superficial. Here is a substantial work, which emphasizes the existentialist rather than existentialism. After an analysis of the work of Sartre, Jaspers, Marcel, and Heidegger, five special features of existentialism are discussed." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

"A carefully thought out, straightforward analysis of existentialism, the most discussed and controversial of the philosophies of the 20th century. It should be of value to all who are interested in modern philosophy."

+ Kirkus 20:145 F 15 '52 170w

"The exposition is scholarly and impartial. The point of view is Thomistic and critical, especially of Sartre. . . . Will be useful in many public libraries and most colleges and university libraries." A. D. Osborn

+ Library J 77:587 Ap 1 '52 130w

"Mr. Collins discusses the contemporary Existentialists on the basis of a more traditional variety of Existentialism deriving from the philosophy of St. Thomas Aquinas. Yet he does not allow his Thomism to get in the way of faithful exposition, and one of his best chapters is a very sympathetic summation of the atheistic Existentialism of Heidegger." William Barrett

N Y Times p11 Je 1 '52 400w

Reviewed by Charles Frankel

Sat R 35:14 O 11 '52 550w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:263 S '52 200w

COLLINS, NORMAN. Bat that flits. 246p $2.75 Duell; Little

52-9776

A Top Secret laboratory in a remote part of Cornwall is the scene of this novel of suspense.

Bookmark 12:57 D '52

Kirkus 20:575 S 1 '52 60w

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge

New Statesman & Nation 43:740 Je 21 '52 30w

"The facetiousness wears pretty thin before it faces the final lethal menace, but the general effect is refreshingly candid and amusing in a day of eager jitters." James Sandoe

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 N 2 '52 120w

"Put on the debit side a fortuitous 'solution' and the incredible dialogue imposed on an American scientist (do we ever write British characters quite so badly as English authors write Americans?); the balance is still more than satisfactory." Anthony Boucher

+ — N Y Times p27 N 2 '52 100w

"Background is unusual and good. Hudson's narration is consistently flippant, which may tire you somewhat, but the humor holds up all right and the writing is beautifully clear." L. G. Offord

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p25 N 9 '52 60w

"Good." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 36:62 Ja 3 '53 20w

COLLISON, ROBERT LEWIS. Bibliographies; subject and national; a guide to their contents, arrangement and use; foreword by Lawrence C. Powell. 172p $3 Hafner pub. co., 31 E. 10th St, N.Y. 3

016.016 Bibliography—Bibliography 51-13288

"Divided into two parts: Subject Bibliographies—Universal and National Bibliographies. Within the first part, division is by subject groups in Dewey sequence. The second part divides into: Universal bibliographies, and bibliographies of bibliographies—national bibliographies—serial publications—further reading. For the major subject fields, charts show the related bibliographic apparatus and the relation of one tool to another. There is a subject index." Library J

Booklist 48:207 Mr 1 '52

"As a ready reference handbook, or a beginning text in the field, this is excellent. It seems essential for all reference and cataloging collections. The compiler suggests that bibliographies make excellent reading. This one certainly does." R. E. Kingery

+ Library J 76:1698 O 15 '51 180w

"The tendency to note only the American subject bibliographies which are particularly valuable on British subjects deters one from recommending the work as a text for courses in bibliography in American universities and colleges. In spite of its readability and other attractive qualities, it is somewhat too narrowly British in point of view to serve as anything but a supplementary text in this country. A second edition, somewhat more liberal in including bibliography on American subjects, might gain many additional readers here." R. B. Phelps

+ — Library Q 22:152 Ap '52 900w

"A concise handbook, obviously intended for the non-specialist bibliographer, librarian, or research student." William Lichtenwanger

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 9:129 D '51 360w

COLUMBIA Lippincott gazetteer of the world; ed. by Leon E. Seltzer, with the geographical research staff of Columbia university press, and with the cooperation of the American geographical society. 2148p $50 Columbia univ. press

910.3 Gazetteers 52-9199

"The last world gazetteer in English was published by J. E. Lippincott & Co. in 1905, and has not been in print since 1938. Even at that time it was hopelessly out of date. A great many new countries had come into existence and old ones had disappeared. Columbia inaugurated the present project in 1944, when it took over the Lippincott copyright. Additional financial help was provided by the Kresge Foundation." (N Y Times) "Some statistics will suggest the scope: over 2,100 pages; 130,000 articles, and 5,500,000 words. The articles go into great economic and historical

COLUMBIA Lippincott gazetteer.—Continued
detail, as well as topographical. Variant spellings and careful transliterations from non-Latin alphabets add to the value of the work. Every incorporated place in the United States is entered, every French village over 2,000 in population, each of the 2,000 county seats in China." (Chicago Sunday Tribune)

"This will long be a standard reference in the field of geography." Stanley Edvan
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 My 11 '52 130w

"An indispensable reference work for Americans, be they literary, commercial, professional or unclassifiable in their pursuits." H. S. Taylor

+ Library J 77:1014 Je 1 '52 260w

"The Columbia Lippincott is an imposing edifice of cooperative scholarship. More than 150 persons worked for five years on the new gazetteer whose 2,148 pages carry a clearly-printed three-column freight of five-and-a-half million words; 130,000 articles and 30,000 cross-reference 'listings'. It is a strongly made volume, uniform in format with the Columbia Encyclopedia, thumb indexed and generally designed for hard, frequent use. . . I salute two notable books. My heartfelt tribute and a sentimental tear for the veteran, and my very good wishes to the newcomer." J. R. Newman

+ New Repub 126:20 My 12 '52 950w

Reviewed by David Dempsey
N Y Times p34 Ap 27 '52 850w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Je 30 '52 600w

"Immediate reference is provided through the use of a single alphabetical listing. All entries have been painstakingly checked."

+ Special Libraries 43:271 S '52 50w

"The work should become an essential tool to all those whose duties and interests demand a comprehensive listing of geographical places accompanied by concise and essential data."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:340 S '52 350w

COLVIN, IAN GOODHOPE. Master spy; the incredible story of Admiral Wilhelm Canaris, who, while Hitler's chief of intelligence, was a secret ally of the British [Eng title: Chief of intelligence]. 286p $3.50 McGraw

B or 92 Canaris, Wilhelm, World war, 1939-1945—Germany 51-12555

Admiral Wilhelm Canaris was chief of the intelligence section of the German general staff from 1935 to 1944. He was arrested in July, 1944, after the unsuccessful attempt on Hitler's life, and was hanged on April 10, 1945. "In this biography Ian Colvin, a former Berlin correspondent of The London News Chronicle, places emphasis on Canaris' opposition to Hitler. His thesis is that the false and inadequate information often supplied by German Intelligence to the Fuehrer was a calculated part of Canaris' effort to sabotage the war." (N Y Times) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by F. L. Ford
Am Hist R 57:1037 J1 '52 490w

Booklist 48:169 Ja 15 '52

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ja 13 '52 460w

"In 'Master Spy,' Ian Colvin, an English newspaperman, has tried to penetrate the deep mystery that still surrounds the activities of Canaris. Though he writes in a rather pedestrian manner, and leaves some of the major puzzles unsolved, the author deserves thanks for calling attention to one of the most fascinating personalities of our time." E. S. Pisko

Christian Science Monitor p9 Ja 11 '52 750w

Kirkus 19:691 D 1 '51 160w

"Nothing that Mr Colvin writes—and he draws on plenty of hitherto unpublished material, which he has subjected to his own penetrating scrutiny—suggests that Canaris was other than an intelligent German, of the political Right wing, who sought in his own way to serve his country's interests." T.C.F.P.

Manchester Guardian p4 My 22 '51 550w

"This book, with all its air of intimate and secret knowledge, is better read as ingenious fantasy. Baron Corvo was a much more interesting figure: there was more to find out about him, and it was found out, too." A. J. P. Taylor

New Statesman & Nation 41:573 My 19 '51 260w

"The book is a highly speculative one, and on many important subjects Mr. Colvin admits that he is merely guessing; but it is also one which should appeal to any one who is interested in the cloak-and-dagger diplomacy. . . Mr. Colvin's description of the way in which Canaris hoodwinked Heydrich and eluded Kaltenbrunner is the most interesting part of his book; and it appears that, even after the slippery Admiral had been arrested and condemned to death, he had covered his tracks so well that there was no reliable evidence of his guilt." G. A. Craig

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ja 27 '52 750w

"Much of the author's evidence is of a circumstantial and speculative nature, and the true figure of Canaris, continuously torn between his duties as a German officer and his awareness that Hitler's aggressive war must end in miserable failure, never fully emerges from the book. Altogether the author adds little to what is already known of Hitler's Intelligence Service. He does contribute, however, an interesting insight into the reluctance and suspicion with which most responsible British officials viewed the German officers' anti-Nazi movement. His question as to why a more encouraging attitude toward this group was never adopted is certainly a valid one." J. H. Lichtblau

N Y Times p7 Ja 27 '52 450w

"This is one of the best documented and most exciting stories to come out of the last war. Unfortunately, the political conclusions of Mr. Colvin must be accepted with strong reservations. The thesis he tries to prove is as false as it is dangerous." Leo Lania
+ Sat R 35:14 F 9 '52 1050w

Springf'd Republican p4D Ja 27 '52 140w

Times [London] Lit Sup p353 Je 8 '51 700w

COLWELL, ERNEST CADMAN. What is the best New Testament? 126p $3 Univ. of Chicago press

225.5 Bible. New Testament—Versions 52-8690

Study of New Testament textual criticism, expanded from the James W. Richard lectures in Christian religion, delivered by the author at the University of Virginia in 1947. Index.

Booklist 48:309 Je 1 '52

Christian Century 69:434 Ap 9 '52 180w

COMMAGER, HENRY STEELE. Chestnut Squirrel; with pictures by Lisl Weil. 122p $2 Houghton

52-7193

Stories of a little-boy squirrel and his pranks and escapades which usually turn out happily enough. For children four to eight.

Bookmark 11:134 Mr '52

"It took a distinguished mathematician to give us 'Alice in Wonderland.' It is now the lot of a distinguished historian [for adults] to give us Chestnut—a 5 year old squirrel with a distinct personality. By turns lovable and naughty, smart and mischievous, Chestnut with his lively escapades is sure to endear himself not only to 4 to 8 year olds, but to the parents who read aloud to them—this time happily." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 Mr 9 '52 170w

Kirkus 20:29 Ja 15 '52 100w

"The squirrel, his family and home, are made very human, and there is a humor in this which may please small children at the listening age. They will laugh when Chestnut is carried away by his balloons, and when he ruins a dinner party. But on the whole, the tales lag a bit, being neither 'quiet' reading-aloud for bedtime nor exciting enough for the age that can read alone." L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Mr 23 '52 190w

"Although Chestnut is a squirrel, he wears clothes, lives in a house, strays regularly into mischief and in general behaves exactly like any 5-year-old boy you know. . . No boy, however, could quite duplicate Chestnut's experience when he acquired twenty-five balloons and suddenly took off into the wild blue yonder. Young children, who see nothing incongruous in animals behaving like human beings, ought to enjoy Chestnut immensely. Lisl Weil contributes to the general gaiety with many amusing illustrations." E. L. B.
+ N Y Times p22 Mr 9 '52 150w

COMMAGER, HENRY STEELE, and others.
Civil liberties under attack. See Swarthmore college. William J. Cooper foundation

CONANT, PAUL. Dr Gatskill's blue shoes. 216p $2.50 Wyn

52-6925

Detective story.

"Lieutenant Peter Hanley, Homicide, suffers from a psychic block and this has allowed Mr. Conant to construct one of those repetitive, hashlike tales made up of assorted bits of the victim's past glued together by a good deal of recapitulation. The block in question, when explained, is totally unconvincing and a good many of the bits of reminiscence have only the most perfunctory connection with the central issue." James Sandoe
— N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Je 1 '52 100w

"Manages to make the stale amnesia-gambit plausible, with a homicide lieutenant who may be his own chief suspect; but the amount of literary allusion is somewhat trying, and the case seems hardly worth all the trouble. A few characterizations, however, and the quality of Mr. Conant's own non-allusive prose mark him as a first novelist whose second may be worth watching for." Anthony Boucher
N Y Times p14 Ag 10 '52 40w

"Background reportedly authentic, story well done but thoroughly predictable. C plus." L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p18 Je 15 '52 40w

CONDER, ALAN, ed. & tr. Treasury of French poetry; with intrs. by Walter De La Mare and Louis Cazamian [Eng title: Cassell's anthology of French poetry]. 388p $3 Harper
841.08 French poetry—Translations into English 51-13448

"A selection from many translations made in the course of thirty years by Alan Conder, which presents in English dress a representative succession of poets from Charles d'Orleans to Paul Valery and Guillaume Apollinaire." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 48:81 N 1 '51

Reviewed by Paul Engle
Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 N 25 '51 200w

"All of the poems were translated, as well as selected, by Alan Conder, and it must be added that no one man can possibly respond to every poet in this diverse assembly and communicate the spirit of his work with equal success. But the general level of his equivalent renderings is high." Gerald McDonald
+ Library J 76:2114 D 15 '51 90w

"If the style makes the man, one man remaking by translation the style of 63 can hardly do justice to the diversity of their achievement. In the nature of things Mr. Conder, who has attempted in his 'Anthology of French Poetry' to span a whole literature, was bound to find himself swimming in deep waters. Then his own style is Georgian, derivative, and almost too full of the splendid echoes of a very different—the English—tradition. . . But once this is granted it must be admitted that Mr Conder has done a very good job." L. F. D.

+ — Manchester Guardian p4 Ap 21 '50 250w

"Those who recoil from poems in a foreign tongue may find consolation in this volume of well chosen and highly expert recastings." G. F. Whicher

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p24 O 28 '51 60w

"It is the finest collection of its kind that I have seen." B. R. Redman
+ Sat R 35:34 F 9 '52 100w

"It is a pity that Mr. Conder's particular merits are obscured by the general demerits of his anthology. For this mediocrity, the entertaining and informative introductions by Walter de la Mare and Louis Cazamian serve to compensate in some measure, and some pertinent advice to translators can be gained from them."
— + Spec 184:700 My 19 '50 270w

"In spite of the general apologiae which introduce it, this is a disappointing anthology. The fault lies particularly in the choice of English idiom."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p312 My 19 '50 340w

Wis Lib Bul 47:250 N '51

CONDIT, CARL W. Rise of the skyscraper [the genius of Chicago architecture from the great fire to Louis Sullivan]. 255p il $5 Univ. of Chicago press

725.2 Architecture—Chicago. Architecture, Modern. Chicago—Buildings. High buildings 52-6468

A study of the achievements of those men who, given the task of rebuilding Chicago after the Fire of 1871, were largely responsible for new developments in building. Contents: Architecture in the nineteenth century; Chicago: 1871; New forms in traditional materials; Jenny and the new structural technique; Burnham and Root; D. H. Burnham and company; Holabird and Roche; Adler and Sullivan; In the wake of the pioneers; Hotels and apartments; The Chicago school in the twentieth century. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 48:225 Mr 15 '52

"It is a thrilling story well told and a real contribution to the history of the midwest's metropolis." Rexford Newcomb

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 F 10 '52 370w

"The book is more than just a history of building construction in Chicago. It is also a collection of philosophies; with the discarding of the falsities of Victorian style, the buildings reflected the personalities of the architects."

+ Eng N 148:74 My 15 '52 140w

"Mr. Condit has assembled, obviously with devotion, much obscure and fascinating material. But his critical insights are not always satisfactory, and even the most appalling defects of Chicago's buildings do not dampen his otherwise admirable enthusiasm." Arthur Drexler

+ — N Y Times p6 F 10 '52 450w

Reviewed by Wayne Andrews

Sat R 35:48 Ap 5 '52 300w

"At once a well-written history of the Chicago school of architecture and a convenient reference work on the individual buildings and their designers, this book is more comprehensive and more fully illustrated than any previous work on the subject."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:124 Je '52 220w

CONDOIDE, MIKHAIL VLADIMIR. Soviet financial system: its development and relations with the western world. 230p $4 Ohio state univ. Bur. of business res.

332 Finance—Russia. Russia—Economic policy 52-11

"An analysis of the operations of the Soviet financial system and its place in the Soviet economy as a whole. There are chapters on foreign trade and foreign economic policies. The author, born and educated in Russia, is an economist at Ohio State University." (Am Pol Sci R) Bibliography. Index.

CONDOIDE, M. V.—Continued

Am Pol Sci R 46:588 Je '52 30w

"If the reader is innocent of any knowledge of the Soviet financial system, he might read Mr. Condoide's book with some profit to his general education. But to the serious student of the Soviet financial system this book has nothing to offer." Alexander Baykov

Ann Am Acad 283:226 S '52 280w

"This book will be of interest to some readers because of its thorough presentation of Russian stereotypes on finance, appendixes containing the text of the currency reform and other post-war financial decrees, and chapters on international finance which contain some material I have not seen collected elsewhere. It must be used carefully, however, because there are many errors of fact and emphasis as well as important omissions." F. D. Holzman

+ — J Pol Econ 60:351 Ag '52 650w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross

Library J 77:438 Mr 1 '52 130w

CONE, CARL B. Torchbearer of freedom; the influence of Richard Price on eighteenth century thought. 209p il $3.75 Univ. of Ky. press B or 92 Price, Richard 52-5902

Biography of an eighteenth century dissenting preacher whose political writings had a great influence on the American and French revolutions; and whose interest in mathematics led him to a study of population and mortality tables, which helped lay the foundations of life insurance. Index.

"Professor Cone uses materials not to be found in the two previous studies of Price, written in England. It should do much to put Price back where he belongs as an important and lovable figure among the eighteenth-century leaders who sought to better the lot of mankind." Merrill Jensen

+ Am Hist R 57:1024 J1 '52 320w

Am Pol Sci R 46:602 Je '52 30w

"Dr. Price would probably be completely forgotten today if he had not been the subject of Burke's attack in his Reflections on the French Revolution. We are therefore indebted to Professor Cone for resurrecting the memory of an important eighteenth century character." E. A. Beller

+ Ann Am Acad 282:169 J1 '52 390w

Reviewed by R. M. Saunders

Canadian Hist R 33:297 S '52 140w

"The essential facts about Dr. Price's career are carefully documented in this volume. Perhaps, however, too little effort has been made to relate them to the contemporary events in England which inspired and shaped the minister's life work."

+ — U S Quarterly Bk R 8:115 Je '52 240w

CONFERENCE ON SCIENCE, PHILOSOPHY AND RELIGION IN THEIR RELATION TO THE DEMOCRATIC WAY OF LIFE, 11th, New York, 1950. Foundations of world organization: a political and cultural appraisal; eleventh symposium; ed. by Lyman Bryson [and others]. 498p $4 Harper

341.11 International cooperation

"Published under the auspices of the Conference on Science, Philosophy and Religion, this volume covers the wide scope of attempts at international cooperation by governments and private organizations. Men prominent in their fields examine such factors as religion, education, social welfare, economic cooperation, public opinion, in short, anything which has a bearing on the achievement of a peaceful world community." Current Hist

Am Pol Sci R 46:588 Je '52 40w

Booklist 48:336 Je 15 '52

Current Hist 22:379 Je '52 40w

School & Society 75:207 Mr 29 '52 10w

"While scholastic in tone and perhaps unlikely to have any very wide popular appeal, this book offers serious-minded readers some important new perspectives on one of the most vital and difficult problems of our times." H. H. + Springf'd Republican p7D Ap 27 '52 120w

"So various are its contents that there is something in this book for practically everyone interested in the problems of world organization."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:140 Je '52 240w

CONFUCIUS. Great digest; and Unwobbling pivot; stone text from rubbings supplied by William Hawley; a note on the stone eds, by Achilles Fang; tr. and commentary by Ezra Pound. 187p $3.50 New directions 181.1

"When a poet of major status thus points the way to a body of philosophy or poetry that he believes to have relevance to his own period, the issue is of more than academic interest. Mr. Pound's work on Confucius has introduced a new element into the literary context of our time. As with Chapman's Homer or Dryden's Virgil, Pound's Confucius is to be read as much in relation to its translator as to its original author: it is a twentieth-century reading of Confucius—a contemporary work to be considered not in the context of ancient China but along with Pound's Cantos, the writings of Eliot and Yeats, and in the light of current social theories." New Repub

Reviewed by Kathleen Raine

New Repub 126:17 Mr 24 '52 1000w

"The contents are absorbing and have that detached style that is yet warm and moving and disarming and sagacious all together." Harvey Breit

+ N Y Times p29 F 3 '52 180w

"A delightful book, which continually alternates between sound common sense and the most delicate kind of metaphysical ideas."

+ New Yorker 28:98 My 31 '52 110w

Reviewed by Hugh Kenner

Poetry 81:127 N '52 350w

Reviewed by Lawrence Ferling

San Francisco Chronicle p27 F 3 '52 230w

CONGRESSIONAL QUARTERLY; a service for editors and commentators. Library rate $50 a year for Congressional quarterly almanac and Congressional quarterly log weekly reports; $25 for Almanac alone. Congressional quarterly, 1156 19th st, N.W., Washington 6, D.C.

328.73 U. S. Congress

"The Congressional Quarterly services were first reviewed in the Subscription Books Bulletin for July 1947. The present review is primarily concerned with the changes in the services since that time, and is based upon examination of the annual volume for 1949 (Almanac, volume 5) and the weekly service (Log) for 1950. . . . The material is now presented in two services instead of the three previously examined by the Subscription Books Committee. The present services are the Log and the Almanac. The weekly issues of the CQ Log are paged continuously and are to be kept in spring-back covers supplied by the publishers, two such binders containing the year's accumulation. The CQ Almanac is an annual volume which replaces the issues of the Log, and reorganizes the material by subject." Subscription Bks Bul

"Despite their declared primary intent to serve as a source of information for editors and broadcasters, and despite their seemingly high cost, the Congressional Quarterly Almanac and Log are recommended for medium-sized and large public libraries, college and university libraries, and special libraries having need for a comprehensive summary of legislative activities at the national level."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 22:67 O '51 750w

CONKLIN, GROFF, ed. Invaders of earth. 333p
$2.95 Vanguard

Short stories—Collections 52-6778

An anthology of stories of invasions from outer space. Among the authors are: Theodore Sturgeon; A. E. Van Vogt; Katherine MacLean; Margaret St. Clair; Murray Leinster; Frederic Brown; Eric Frank Russell; Anthony Boucher.

Booklist 48:282 My 1 '52

Kirkus 20:97 F 1 '52 100w

Reviewed by E. F. Walbridge

Library J 77:432 Mr 1 '52 140w

"In his seventh anthology, Groff Conklin holds to two noble (and rare) editorial principles: All the stories, with one justifiable exception, appear for the first time in book form; and they illustrate a pattern which makes the book as a whole add up to more than the sum of the individual items." H. H. Holmes

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 My 4 '52 150w

Reviewed by Fletcher Pratt

N Y Times p19 J1 13 '52 100w

Reviewed by Don Fabun

San Francisco Chronicle p25 Ap 20 '52 250w

"Usual smooth Conklin job." Fletcher Pratt

+ Sat R 35:44 My 24 '52 20w

CONNETT, EUGENE VIRGINIUS. Small-boat skipper and his problems; with an introd. by William H. Taylor; il. by Darrell McClure and Hervey Garrett Smith. 213p $3.50 Norton

797.1 Sailing. Boats and boating 52-6755

"A collection of facts that have been learned the hard way about small cruising boats and how to enjoy them." (Subtitle) Index.

Booklist 48:225 Mr 15 '52

"His book offers solutions to nearly every problem from choosing and caring for a boat to finding clams in shallow waters. And the seemingly trivial problems he deals with are those that plague small boat owners most." Richard Philbrick

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 F 17 '52 120w

"Mr. Connnett writes most specifically of Long Island—he sails out of Bellport—but his experiences and observations will interest and inform small-boat cruisers everywhere. . . There is no fanciness or glitter in his writing, but what he has to say is as sound and as satisfactory as the kind of craft he recommends." C. B. Palmer

+ N Y Times p20 Mr 30 '52 360w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Mr 16 '52 80w

CONRAD, BARNABY. Matador; il. by the author [Eng title: Death of a matador]. 213p $2.75 Houghton

52-10142

Pacote, a famous matador, is goaded into making one more appearance, altho he has announced his retirement. For some time he has been bolstering his courage with alcohol, and the early part of his last fight shows it. Then a newcomer enters the ring to show up the master, and stung into action Pacote makes a marvelous comeback. The scene is Seville.

"Like Tom Lea, the author of The Brave Bulls, Barnaby Conrad is a painter who can write, and he writes with the perspective and vocabulary of an artist—his imagination reaching for the most vivid detail and swatch of color." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic 190:81 Ag '52 390w

Booklist 48:329; 339 Je 15 '52

"The conclusion has the authority and inevitability of a painting by Goya. Mr. Conrad writes without bombast and in a spirit of scientific detachment. Not to every taste, this, and clearly a man's book." Riley Hughes

+ Cath World 175:473 S '52 290w

Reviewed by V. P. Hass

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Je 29 '52 470w

Reviewed by J. G. Harrison

Christian Science Monitor p13 J1 3 '52 420w

Kirkus 20:285 My 1 '52 260w

"The emphasis here is on fear. The novel has a pulsing drive and I feel communicates the raw drama and the brutal beauty of the bullfight to a greater extent than The Brave Bulls though the writing is not as distinguished. It builds up a crescendo of excitement to a peak which is almost unbearable. Highly recommended for all fiction collections." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 77:432 Mr 1 '52 150w

Reviewed by J. K. Hutchens

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Je 29 '52 600w

"It is all there, tense, accurate and exciting, the best novel on the corrida since 'The Sun Also Rises.' Olé Conrad!" Harry Sylvester

+ N Y Times p1 Je 29 '52 950w

"Mr. Conrad handles his opening passages with great assurance, and is especially good at sketching in, with considerable acerbity, the hangers-on who infest the life of a famous matador, and in this instance contribute to his destruction. Possibly because of the weight of literary tradition, however, Pacote changes in the course of the bullfight from a likable and pathetic human being into a stuffed matador of mock-heroic proportions." New Yorker 28:90 Je 28 '52 70w

"Readers will compare, of course, Tom Lea will be mentioned, no doubt, and Hemingway certainly. I do not believe that comparisons are to the point here. Mr. Conrad has written his own story in his own way, and with complete success." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 Je 26 '52 850w

"You don't have to accept bullfighting as heroic to find 'Matador' absorbing reading. And it is no diminution of Mr. Conrad's achievement to say that he writes from less esthetic conscience than Hemingway and Tom Lea. Story value, one suspects, counts for more with the author of 'Matador' than anything else. But it is good to have some novelists like that, or who will replace Maugham?" Lon Tinkle

+ Sat R 35:10 Je 28 '52 800w

"A novel about bullfighting fine enough to share the shelf with Tom Lea's The Brave Bulls."

+ Time 59:84 Je 30 '52 500w

"His book as might be expected, is authentic, convincing and exciting. It is economically and powerfully written, but somehow when it is all over, and the great matador has fought his last fight, it is of Mr. Hemingway's characters in The Sun Also Rises that a reader still thinks."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p641 O 3 '52 170w

"The extraordinary series of events in this tour de force, as well as the climax, are made credible through the author's ability to establish reader identification with his protagonist."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:253 S '52 210w

"Highly recommended for men readers especially."

+ Wis Lib Bul 48:172 J1 '52

CONRAD, EARL. Rock bottom. 320p $3.75 Doubleday

301.451 [325.26] Negroes—Moral and Social conditions 52-5763

Chronicles the life of an American Negro woman, Leeha Whitfield, from one sordid experience to another, in Mississippi, Florida, and New York.

Booklist 48:311 Je 1 '52

Kirkus 20:182 Mr 1 '52 240w

CONRAD, EARL—Continued

"As told by Mr. Conrad this story is poignant and horrible. Man's inhumanity to his fellow was never more apparent than in these pages, yet, there is a feeling that with the crusader's zeal the author has perhaps heightened some of the situations beyond the bounds of credibility. The language may be as shocking as some of the situations to the sensibilities of gentle readers." H. L. Roth

Library J 77:587 Ap 1 '52 150w

"No stranger to Negro problem writing, Mr. Conrad presents in 'Rock Bottom' a thoroughly discouraging book, a chronicle of all the wrongs in the Negro-white picture, a sorrow tale relieved by only a few gingerly balancing sentences here and there. . . The book is one long wail. There is no laughter in it, only now and then a sentence or a situation of wry or grim humor." Roy Wilkins

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 My 18 '52 750w

"The book fails, and somehow there is not enough in it to make one wish that it did not fail." J. S. Redding

N Y Times p14 Je 22 '52 240w

"'Rock Bottom' is not pleasant reading, but it is thought-compelling." S. M. Neal

Spring'd Republican p6D Ag 3 '52 160w

CONZE, EDWARD. Buddhism; its essence and development; with a pref. by Arthur Waley. 124p $6 Philosophical lib.

294.3 Buddha and Buddhism 51-14081

A statement of the fundamental principles of Buddhism, with a study of its historical development and of its various schools of thought. Index.

"This seems a remarkably clear and orderly statement." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 69:618 My 21 '52 200w

Reviewed by C. H. Hamilton

J Philos 49:653 S 25 '52 450w

"The author attempts to write a comprehensive and readable account of Buddhism in 212 pages. By necessity, he cannot do justice to all aspects of this complex religion, but the book is useful for those who wish to gain a bird's-eye view of Buddhism. . . Conze has many interesting but unsubstantiated theses. . . Nevertheless, readers will be grateful to the author for putting all this information in one package. The book contains some deep insights but, as a whole, is not well balanced and should be read with care." J. M. Kitagawa

+ J Religion 32:144 Ap '52 430w

"Arthur Waley writes in the preface: 'There is not at present in English or any other language so comprehensive and at the same time so easy and readable an account of Buddhism as is to be found in Dr Conze's book.' The tribute is fair. It would be hard to find a study of any religion which is at once so correct, scholarly, short, lucid, and readable." Guy Wint

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Ja 15 '52 130w

"A work so comprehensive in scope inevitably contains minor mistakes, which need not, however, impair its value as a popular survey. Thus: 'It is customary to reckon the sect of Nichiren as one of the school of Amidism.' But Nichiren was the firmest antagonist of Amidism in Japan, and denounced it explicitly. In general, the book is very good in its comparisons with Western religious thought and developments." Hajime Nakamura

+ Pacific Affairs 25:202 Je '52 550w

Reviewed by J. M. Cohen

Spec 188:342 Mr 14 '52 170w

"Dr. Conze presents the facts in such a way that they can be readily applied by our own intellects and judged by our own emotions. He has opened the stately grounds of scholarship to the public and has provided a guide so that nothing of value and interest shall be missed. His readers are given an opportunity to understand something that has hitherto been only a mystery."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p585 S 5 '52 500w

COOKE, ALISTAIR. One man's America [Eng title: Letters from America]. 268p $3.50 Knopf

973 U.S.—Social life and customs. National characteristics, American 52-7542

Informal essays, originally designed as talks over BBC, setting forth this Englishman's reactions to life and manners in the United States. Partial contents: The immigrant strain; My first Indian; What's the matter with America?; Damon Runyon's America; Joe Louis; Washington, D.C.; New York, New York; Moving a home; Margaret and Missouri; Six typical Americans; It's a democracy, isn't it?

"Mr. Cooke has not attempted to penetrate in depth our policy and institutions as did those two great Frenchmen, Alexis de Tocqueville and Raoul de Roussy de Sales; rather, it has been his aim to give a sane, vivid, and appreciative account of nature in America—human, that is." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic 189:77 Je '52 550w

Booklist 48:295 My 15 '52

Bookmark 11:206 Je '52 10w

Reviewed by A. C. Ames

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ap 27 '52 430w

Reviewed by Charles Marwick

Christian Science Monitor p11 My 1 '52 500w

"Gay and chatty, it is a more revealing collection of observations on America than many a sober, well-footnoted volume. No one could dismiss this country as a land of New York tycoons, Chicago gangsters, and Hollywood glamor girls—or as any other one-sentence generalization—after meeting the Americans in these pages." C. H. Weiss

+ Commonweal 56:300 Je 27 '52 650w

Foreign Affairs 31:157 O '52 10w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Horn Bk 28:342 O '52 40w

Kirkus 20:208 Mr 15 '52 170w

"Anglo-American relations will not be made or broken by this easily-read book, but all who recall Mr. Cooke's Generation on Trial will read it with interest. If the book fund is low, this may be skipped; if the general subject needs fortification, author's opinions and observations will add to the field. It may be recalled that Mr. Cooke has been a citizen of the U.S. for some years." K. T. Willis

Library J 77:715 Ap 15 '52 140w

"Parts of the book will probably leave some Americans cold. Why should a writer labour matters which are so everyday, so obvious, to us? Perhaps the answer is that we are ignorant of the subtle differences which divide the two peoples. What we Americans should give thanks for is that we have so witty, so keen, and so sympathetic a pleader to lay our case before our cousins overseas. If understanding between nations is the basis for friendship—a cliché the truth of which I sometimes doubt—then the author of 'A Generation on Trial' and this more modest but no less incisive book deserves decoration." Hamilton Owens

+ Manchester Guardian p4 N 27 '51 650w

Reviewed by Alastair Buchan

New Repub 126:20 My 5 '52 700w

Reviewed by R. H. S. Crossman

New Statesman & Nation 42:628 D 1 '51 600w

"It is frankly an ex parte statement—Cooke remarks that plenty of others are exposing the evils of America, so he has taken the good for his field. One may be chagrined by the admission, but it is true that a great many of us at home need information about the excellence of America as much as the British do." G. W. Johnson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ap 20 '52 700w

"All in all a very entertaining book and a shrewd one. There is only one reservation. This offering is too fragmentary by far." H. S. Commager

+ N Y Times p7 Ap 20 '52 1350w

"Readers on this side of the Atlantic will find Mr. Cooke's America an enthralling place, packed with quite a few surprises. Its general topography is familiar, to be sure, but the author has managed during his long residence here (since 1937) to explore it more thoroughly than nine-tenths of the natives. His report is detached, witty, and on the whole favorable, and shows no trace of the fish-eyed solemnity of the sociologist."

+ New Yorker 28:142 Ap 26 '52 260w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ap 18 '52 900w

"'One Man's America' proves on its every page that Mr. Cooke has given his best to his English hearers. His best is some of the best that radio has known anywhere. The pity is that Mr. Cooke is not heard in this country and that we are denied programs comparable to his in their high distinction and adult charm." J. M. Brown

+ Sat R 35:24 My 31 '52 1650w

Reviewed by D. W. Brogan

Spec 188:52 Ja 11 '52 450w

"His range of interests is just as wide as it should be to interpret America and Americans to us—and that is very wide. His language is a cogent mixture of the best American and the best English of our day. His sentences—his breathing—are all in the right places. One feels that as one reads these broadcasts, His book goes far to prove that good broadcasting perforce teaches the broadcaster and his listeners something of 'the best words in the best order.' But it also teaches us much of the land and people of his adoption."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p814 D 21 '51 250w

COOKE, COLIN ARTHUR. Corporation, trust and company; an essay in legal history. 206p $3 Harvard univ. press

658.1 Corporation law. Trusts, Industrial A51-9711

"An English work which traces the mingling of legal ideas and economic purposes to produce the modern joint stock company in England with limited liability and transferable shares. Through three hundred years of evolution, through enactment and interpretation, runs the concept that the corporate body is not regarded as persons acting together, but as persons acting as an entity." Library J

"The reader interested in the corporate form of business enterprise as well as in the broader relationship of law, economics and sociology, will find much material for thought and speculation in this book. For the legally minded reader there are full references and citations throughout the text to cases, Law Reports and statutes." J. A. Griswold

+ Am Econ R 42:463 Je '52 500w

"There is the constant interplay of legal and social concepts and of this the author takes full advantage to give a flavor of piquancy to a study of the philosophy of this branch of law." J. E. Cross

+ Library J 77:54 Ja 1 '52 100w

"It is a fascinating story well told; and what is most remarkable is the method Dr Cooke adopts in telling it. He is both jurist and economist. None but a trained lawyer could have handled so well and with such critical ability the mass of legal authorities which are cited in this work; and none but a trained economist could have explained so well the economic and social forces which caused the law to develop." R. A. Eastwood

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Ap 20 '51 260w

"Dr. Cooke's Corporation Trust and Company not only provides a much-needed synoptic view of the development of the law relating to corporations, but also adds considerably to the understanding of the changes and influences it discusses. Much detailed information is summarized and illuminated; and Dr. Cooke skillfully guides the reader through the mazes of legal and economic history in what he modestly calls 'An Essay in Legal History,' terminating with the Companies Act of 1862."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p454 J1 20 '51 900w

COOKE, DAVID COXE, ed. Best detective stories of the year, 1952. 252p $2.75 Dutton

Short stories—Collections (46-5872)

Contents: Where angels fear to tread, by Stuart Palmer; Total recall, by James Helvick; Night in the warehouse, by W. S. Peacock; The man with the sneer, by Roy Vickers; Once upon a crime, by O. R. Cohen; The smuggler, by Victor Canning; The kiss-off, by J. P. Foran; Goodbye forever, by Craig Rice; Kiss of Kandahar, by L. G. Blochman; The last day of my life, by A. V. Elston; Murderer's luck, by Cyril Hare; The emperor's dice, by Ellery Queen.

Booklist 49:126 D 1 '52

Kirkus 20:431 J1 15 '52 40w

Library J 77:1760 O 15 '52 10w

Reviewed by James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 O 5 '52 100w

"Roy Vickers, Stuart Palmer and Lawrence G. Blochman perform gratifyingly as they often have before; John P. Foran and Allan Baughan Elston present rather unusual plot-ideas competently; and the other seven are readable enough. . . In short, this is about on the level of a better-than-average issue of a magazine—perfectly enjoyable for the moment, a bit questionable for library permanence." Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p41 S 28 '52 140w

"Hardly anyone will have read all the magazines from which these stories are chosen, assuring some novelty to all readers, and genuine worth to most." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 O 12 '52 40w

"Nice sheaf." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 35:42 O 18 '52 30w

COOKE, DAVID COXE. Young America's aviation manual. 172p il $2.95 McBride co.

629.1 Aeronautics, Military 52-309

"Not a manual in the usual sense, but a book, by a recognized authority, on the history of military aeronautics, giving facts, comparisons, numbers and pertinent data on the air forces of this country and Russia, the B-36, and our research on aircraft, past and present, and on bombing. All material is in chronological order. Over 200 very fine photographs. No index." Library J

Booklist 48:200 F 15 '52

"Will interest all readers, especially junior high age and up." M. I. Ross

+ Library J 77:69 Ja 1 '52 80w

COOKE, DONALD EDWIN. Little Wolf Slayer; a story of Philadelphia's first Quakers; il. by Henry C. Pitz. 184p $1.50 Winston

52-5439

Story of the winter of 1682 and '83 when the Quakers settled on the present site of Philadelphia had to live in caves along the river. The hero is twelve-year-old Miles Townsend. Based on letters and diaries of the time.

Booklist 48:363 J1 1 '52

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Ag 3 '52 60w

Kirkus 20:261 Ap 15 '52 90w

"Recommended for grades 4-6." E. B. Mason

+ Library J 77:1080 Je 15 '52 40w

"It is well written to appeal to both boys and girls of ten to fourteen, with unhackneyed historical material well handled. The map here is Penn's own plan for his city." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 My 11 '52 50w

COOKE, D. E.—Continued

Reviewed by E. L. Buell

N Y Times p26 Je 8 '52 30w

Reviewed by Eleanor Breed

San Francisco Chronicle p3 N 16 '52
90w

Sat R 35:46 O 11 '52 10w

COOKE, HEDLEY VICARS. Challenge and response in the Middle East; the quest for prosperity, 1919-1951. 366p $4 Harper

309.153 East (Near East)—Economic conditions. East (Near East)—Social conditions 52-8467

A brief survey of the present economic, social, and political situations in Egypt, Saudi Arabia, Iran, Iraq, Israel, Jordan, Lebanon, Syria, and Turkey. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 49:4 S 1 '52

+ Bookmark 12:5 O '52 30w

Reviewed by J. G. Harrison

Christian Science Monitor p9 Ag 2 '52
200w

Foreign Affairs 31:165 O '52 30w

"Dr. Cooke combines his own considerable first-hand experience of the Middle East over a period of seventeen years with a survey of governmental, intergovernmental, institutional, and commercial reports on planning and performance in the Middle East. To these he adds a somewhat eclectic choice of newspaper dispatches of variable weight. The result is a cumbrously footnoted volume which nevertheless conveys a wealth of information and provides flashes of illuminating insight." Jack Winocour

Nation 175:114 Ag 9 '52 1100w

"The Arab world is a fluid world, especially in these days, and the basic worth of Challenge and Responses in the Middle East should make it invaluable."

+ New Repub 127:23 S 29 '52 230w

"Mr. Cooke addresses himself primarily to present and recent economic planning as well as to prospects in the foreseeable future. His study is dispassionate and well informed. By its emphasis on the economic factor it helps to correct the perspective which the prevailing accent on diplomatic and political development might tend to distort." E. A. Speiser

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ag 10 '52 480w

"Mr. Cooke's volume is not easy reading. It shoots far over par for even the academic course, because of inexcusably pedestrian writing, awkward structure and poor (or no) editing. He crams his text with lengthy citations from secondary sources, mostly in English. He shows no acquaintance with native written sources, or with live ones except in the sections on Turkey and Iran, which suggest some direct human touch with the peoples. His book is nevertheless a valuable compilation of pertinent evidence." Hal Lehrman

+ — N Y Times p3 Jl 27 '52 700w

Reviewed by Hans Kohn

Sat R 35:11 Ag 23 '52 750w

COOLIDGE, MRS OLIVIA E. Trojan war; il. by Edouard Sandoz. 244p $3 Houghton

883 Mythology, Classical 52-7194

"This volume, companion to Mrs. Coolidge's 'Greek Myths,' deals with the legend of the Trojan War as told in 'The Iliad,' 'The Odyssey,' and other accounts of the famous conflict. Beginning with the meeting of Paris and Helen, the story tells in sequence the familiar episodes leading to the war and to the wanderings of the Greek heroes on their way home from the long siege of Troy." N Y Times

Booklist 48:252 Ap 1 '52

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 My 18 '52 190w

Kirkus 20:31 Ja 15 '52 130w

"Fine addition to our hero tales, this is highly recommended for all libraries." C. A. Hulton

+ Library J 77:540 Mr 15 '52 70w

"This excitingly told, well connected story comes as a boon to a generation not brought up on the classics." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 My 11 '52 240w

"Mrs. Coolidge's important contribution to the story has been to establish the relationship among the many characters and to arrange their adventures as a coherent whole. Young people will be attracted to the book's red and silver binding, its uncrowded pages, and its bold illustrations. Between the covers they will find an age-old story retold in a style lively enough to hold their interest." Elizabeth Hodges

+ N Y Times p22 My 11 '52 140w

"Makes sense and exceptional reading for children over ten. A good-looking volume, too."

+ New Yorker 28:202 D 6 '52 50w

"In clear-cut, lucid, and entirely unadorned prose the author retells for children the epic of the Trojan War. Trimmed a bit here and there and tailored to meet the needs of those who have not yet gained familiarity with the old classics, this version displays a terseness and vitality that seem peculiarly suited to the heroes and events."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:259 S '52 140w

Wis Lib Bul 48:219 S '52

COOPER, CALMAN, defendant. Reader's digest murder case. See Oursler, F., ed.COOPER, GORDON. Dead cities and forgotten tribes. 160p il $4.75 Philosophical lib.

930 [913] Cities and towns, Ruined, extinct, etc. Society, Primitive [52-35078]

"A potpourri of wonders, comprising descriptions of some of the once flourishing but now uninhabited cities of the world, and some of the primitive people bypassed by history in Asia, Europe, Africa, and South America." (New Yorker) No index.

"All in all this is a book worth reading. It may even lead many explorers and anthropologists to many of the obscure places and peoples in search of fuller knowledge about them." F. L.-K. Hsu

+ Ann Am Acad 284:202 N '52 320w

Reviewed by R. C. Cowen

Christian Science Monitor p11 S 11 '52
350w

"Mr. Cooper has included certain parts of the world which he has not seen himself. Inaccuracies in these sections are inevitable. To include Shibam in the Aden Protectorate among 'dead cities' or its people among 'forgotten tribes' is ridiculous. It is a thriving market town of about 12,000 population. There are other similar instances. The chief value of the book is that it might whet the reader's appetite for other volumes dealing with this fascinating subject at greater length and in more scholarly fashion. Ralph Chapman

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Je 15 '52 160w

"The author, an English explorer—he is a former president of the Globetrotters Club—has visited most of the places and tribes he discusses and is able to give enough archeological and ethnographic information about them to make his book something more than a curiosity."

+ New Yorker 28:68 Ag 2 '52 150w

"Mr. Cooper writes clearly if not inspiredly about his extensive globetrottings. The book tends to be somewhat episodic, because it has no central theme and no logic of organization. But the material more than makes up for these deficiencies. It is impossible to see such sights, to explore the tombs and temples of times past, without being impressed—and the author succeeds in conveying his thoughts and feelings to the reader."

+ — Sat R 35:40 Ag 9 '52 330w

COOPER, MADISON ALEXANDER. Sironia, Texas. 2v 1731p $10 Houghton

52-9585

"It is the story of a town during the first quarter of this century, and of the interplay of the people of the town—white and Negro, old families and new families, the 'Quality' on the Hill and the 'trash' across the railroad tracks, and the people in between. It is the story of the lives of dozens of living and breathing individuals with passions and prejudices, dreams and ambitions, whose fortunes rise and fall in the great surge of the fluid society that is American life." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

"The author unquestionably has an exceptionally vigorous narrative gift—his interminable story just keeps rolling busily along; and his characterizations, though not notable for depth or finesse, usually have a solid reality about them. The net result is a huge canvas of small-town life done with a great wealth of vivid observation, but not with any real literary distinction." C. J. Rol

+ Atlantic 190:92 D '52 350w

"It is absorbing thruout the entire extent of its 1,731 pages. . . It isn't so much that these encomiums are given—by a reader deeply impressed—to a magnificent narrative that won for Texas born Madison Cooper the Houghton Mifflin Literary Fellowship award for 1952. It's rather that they are commanded by the author thru the sheer intensity of his dramatic power, the surpassing eloquence of his human appeal, the golden, glittering flair of his literary approach and treatment." Henry Cavendish

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 N 2 '52 430w

"The book will be read, for its vitality, its pace, and its dirt. Not for what it has to say, though the pattern of the disintegration of social mores of the South is implicit. Public Libraries, a warning. If you stock it, and most of you will, try to control its accessibility to adolescents."

Kirkus 20:665 O 1 '52 280w

"Readers having the time to tackle this novel will be impressed by the writer's ability to carry them through . . . this piece of excellent narrative writing." J. E. Brown

+ Library J 77:1809 O 15 '52 110w

"I think it's an extraordinary book—absorbingly interesting, exciting, and startlingly true. . . People who budget their reading time may well hesitate before using the time normally allotted to seven or eight novels to this one. I can only say that those who never attempt 'Sironia, Texas' because of its length will cut themselves off from a rich gold mine of entertainment and human understanding." Agnes Rogers

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 N 2 '52 1100w

"The story never lacks for action. It is always carrying the reader ahead, and it needs to, for otherwise he might linger over the novel's faults, which are many and for the most part old-fashioned. Like the second-rate Victorians, Mr. Cooper has no style but many mannerisms. . . Yet we go on reading. Part of the fascination, certainly, derives from one quality of the book that is not Victorian, the frankness with which Mr. Cooper describes the sex habits of all his characters." Granville Hicks

+ N Y Times p1 N 2 '52 900w

"All this is flung on the page in a folksy vernacular that has the cumulative effect on the nervous system of a water faucet in need of a new washer."

New Yorker 28:131 N 1 '52 240w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles

San Francisco Chronicle p17 N 9 '52 550w

"His narrative has tremendous drive and a kind of frenzied vitality that makes it highly readable. But his book fails of its purpose to recreate a Texas small town. This failure is largely one of creative imagination. . . In addition, he has been so busy rattling the innumerable skeletons in the closets of his families that he leaves the impression that Sironia was a town in which the principal industry was fornication, with a secondary interest in talking about it. Settle then for the fact that 'Sironia, Texas' is a big book, a readable one, with lots of dramatic incident and—except for its size—one of little importance." Martin Rice

— + Sat R 35:17 N 1 '52 480w

Time 60:106 N 3 '52 450w

COOPER, MIREILLE (BURNAND). Happy season; il. by Jocelyn Campbell. [Eng title: Swiss family Burnand]. 214p $3.50 Pellegrini & Cudahy

848 Switzerland—Social life and customs 51-12761

Reminiscences of the author's childhood vacation days when the whole family, father (a noted French-Swiss painter), mother, six boys and two girls, servants and governesses left their home in France and went to the ancient chateau in Switzerland, where the family had lived for many generations.

Booklist 48:293 My 15 '52

"Relaxed and relaxing, this is pastel tinted nostalgia."

Kirkus 20:181 Mr 1 '52 160w

"Mrs. Cooper writes with a leisurely warmth of the escapades of her large family, their friends and their relatives. . . What she records is uneventful—her family was neither eccentric nor humorous—but it is pleasant. But anybody who picks it up for a casual hour's reading will find it serene and likable."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Ag 10 '52 230w

COOPER, PAGE. Pat's Harmony; introd. by Cloud L. Cray; il. by Oliver Grimley. 212p $2.50 World pub.

Horses—Legends and stories 52-8424

Story for grades seven to nine, based on the actual experiences of a girl and her horse. Harmony was almost dead when he was found in the spring, but the girl Pat nursed him back to health and together they won many blue ribbons.

Booklist 49:51 O 1 '52

+ Kirkus 20:413 Jl 15 '52 120w

"This fine story is based partly on fact. Well-written, with understanding of both people and horses. Recommended for older girls of 11-14." D. M. Blasco

+ Library J 77:1520 S 15 '52 40w

"Excellent story." F. H. Chrystie

+ N Y Times p12, p16 N 16 '52 60w

COOPER, ROBERT ULSH. Investments for professional people. 342p $4 Macmillan

332.67 Investments 51-14083

Information on insurance, banking facilities, real estate, financial statements, stocks and bonds, income taxes, and other financial matters for the professional worker. The author is a Washington doctor who is also a bank director. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 48:165 Ja 15 '52

Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 S 14 '52 70w

"Clear, non-technical." J. E. Cross

+ Library J 76:1933 N 15 '51 100w

COOPER UNION FOR THE ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE AND ART. See Fairchild, J. E. ed. Women, society and sex

COPLAND, AARON. Music and imagination. 116p $2.75 Harvard univ. press

780.1 Music—Analysis, interpretation, appreciation. Creation (literary, artistic, etc). Imagination 52-9385

The Charles Eliot Norton lectures (Harvard, 1951-1952). The author is the well-known American composer. "He considers many of the problems of the contemporary composer in an unaffected, forthright manner: the qualities of the sensitive listener, the meaning of music, 'the sonorous image,' the creative mind and the interpretative mind, the pull of tradition and the attraction of innovation upon European composers of our day, the twelve-tone procedure, and distinctive contributions of American composers." (Library J)

COPLAND, AARON—Continued

Booklist 49:85 N 1 '52

Reviewed by Harold Rogers
Christian Science Monitor p11 N 6 '52
270w

"A serious, balanced, and stimulating presentation." C. K. Miller
+ Library J 77:1512 S 15 '52 130w

"Like most of Copland's literary work, this is a book of Causes. It pleads the cause of music as an art, an art in which composers formulate unique experiences otherwise lost to mankind, and through which the world 'discovers the very nature of its Being.' . . . Copland pleads these causes with the passionate logic of a humanitarian. But when the issues have less than this very broad, almost universal significance, he is content merely to give evidence." Lawrence Morton

Music Lib Assn Notes 10:95 D '52 500w

"All of his observations, even the most severe ones, are qualified by a reserved optimism which is the result of twenty-five years of hard work and attentive observation. . . . At a time when it is fashionable to grouse about the dreary aspects of our century, his attitude is singularly gratifying." Robert Evett
+ New Repub 127:22 O 27 '52 360w

"The book presents the lectures without printed musical illustration, and requires the reader either to summon to mind out of his experience the music that Mr. Copland mentions, or to produce it from the scores or from phonograph records. The reader who can do this will find his reading richly rewarding." B. H. Haggin

+ N Y Times p7 O 12 '52 800w
San Francisco Chronicle p10 D 21 '52
350w

"If their title suggests the rarefied and lofty, rest assured that Mr. Copland writes about his art with great warmth, intimacy, and liveliness. The composer of 'Appalachian Spring' and 'Billy the Kid' is talking here primarily to laymen—the lectures are not conspicuously technical—and, indeed, this reviewer has the temerity to approach the work only because Mr. Copland himself shows so much interest in 'the listener who intends to retain his amateur status.'" Wilder Hobson

+ Sat R 35:33 O 25 '52 800w

Reviewed by Victor Prahl
Springf'd Republican p5C D 21 '52 250w

COPLESTON, FREDERICK CHARLES. Medieval philosophy. 194p $2.75 Philosophical lib.
189 Philosophy, Medieval

A study of medieval philosophy, covering the principal thinkers from St Augustine to William of Ockham and Nicholas of Cusa. Bibliography. Index.

"Gives as much of the substance as can be compressed in so little space and makes the main lines clearer than they generally are in more pretentious and extended treatises." W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 69:973 Ag 27 '52 40w

"To cover in the space of 180 small pages the thought of ten centuries—dark though some of it may be—is clearly no light task and Father Copleston deserves great credit for undertaking it at all. Any criticism of his book must generously take into account the appalling difficulties which surely beset him at every stage in the writing of it. All the same, Medieval Philosophy is not an altogether successful essay in the writing of popular philosophy. The sketchiness is at times positively worrying. . . . This is, however, a careful and erudite book, full of patience and tolerance, catholic in every sense of the word."

New Statesman & Nation 44:51 J1 12
'52 290w

Times [London] Lit Sup p409 Je 20 '52
400w

CORBETT, ELIZABETH FRANCES. Richer harvest. 251p $3 Lippincott

52-5090

Novel of home life in a small Illinois town at the turn of the century. The hero is Charley Hinckley, a bearer of other peoples burdens, who eventually is able to live a life of his own.

Booklist 48:322 Je 1 '52

Kirkus 20:133 F 15 '52 150w

"Of all our popular novelists, Elizabeth Corbett has just about the friendliest way of turning America's album pages and bringing its nostalgic family groups to life. . . . Her story of a simple man's goodness is a toast—in sparkling fruit punch—to a sunnier era and the old-fashioned virtues that helped keep its sunshine bright." A. F. Wolfe

+ N Y Times p21 My 11 '52 200w
Sat R 35:29 J1 26 '52 240w

CORBETT, JAMES EDWARD. My India. 163p $3 Oxford

954 India—Social life and customs 52-6165

Personal sketches, eleven in number, showing the author's regard for the poor of India whom he has known intimately in his many years in India.

Booklist 48:295 My 15 '52

Bookmark 11:206 Je '52 20w

Reviewed by John Gruve
Canadian Forum 32:165 O '52 400w

"Perhaps some of the poignancy of these tales derives from the writer's obvious nostalgia for the old India which he knew so well, for he now lives in Nairobi, Kenya colony, East Africa. He must have a storehouse of reminiscences he still can call upon, and those who follow the writings of this gentleman undoubtedly hope that he will." Percy Wood

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 My 18 '52
220w

Reviewed by Anne Fremantle
Commonweal 57:44 O 17 '52 290w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
Horn Bk 28:256 Ag '52 50w
Kirkus 20:293 My 1 '52 150w

"A richly satisfying and illuminating group of portrayals presented in a simple appealing style. Excellent circulation item for young people and adults." J. W. Rogers

+ Library J 77:888 My 15 '52 100w

"The Man-Eaters of Kumaon were exciting personalities; so was the Leopard of Rudrapur, but these endless tales of anonymous pig and bear and leopard and tiger shots, of kills and drags and trails, have little interest. . . . These are tales, surely, to be told only while there is breath to kindle them, good tales for old men sitting in the sun, but not to be put in a book; . . . not in a book!" Rumer Godden

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Je 15
'52 650w

"We know that this great big game hunter can write thrillingly; now he also writes with charm and perception, in a simple, kindly style. There is more than one chapter that one can hardly close without mist rising in the eyes. One also finds in Jim Corbett's pages suspense and amusement. But I like the book because it gives the best idea I have come across yet of what kind of people make up this country that we love in spite of all it can do to us." Robert Trumbull

+ N Y Times p6 My 25 '52 900w

"The Colonel's writing, like his handling of a rifle, is straightforward and sure; it also contains a good deal of feeling."

+ New Yorker 28:139 My 24 '52 140w

"Corbett, through a lifetime of knowledge, came to know and cherish a deep affection for the people of India, and it is this that his book transmits with both vigor and charm."

J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 My 21 '52 500w

Reviewed by A. S. Lall

Sat R 35:12 Ag 23 '52 600w

Reviewed by Evelyn Wrench

Spec 188:584 My 2 '52 1100w

"Comparison can be only with Kipling, and the high praise of My India must be that the comparison can be sustained."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p418 Je 27 '52 360w

Wis Lib Bul 48:170 Jl '52

CORBETT, PERCY ELLWOOD. Law and society in the relations of states. 387p $4.75 Harcourt

341 International law. International relations 51-4385

For descriptive note see Annual for 1951.

"[In] the last part of his book Corbett deals with international organization which alone, so he says, can remove the causes of armed conflict and thereby prepare the way for a genuine order of world law. With the cool detachment which characterizes most of the book, Corbett appraises the United Nations and finds it 'legally powerless (in the case of conflict between the permanent members) to enforce its obligations.' He concludes that the United Nations as 'a society including the Soviet Union' has but marginal competence 'in the sense that it does not reach to the great issues dividing our world.' At this point, Corbett abandons the sober judgment which has guided him so far in the study and proposes to base a more effective organization on 'the international protection of the individual,' that is, on an international guarantee of human rights. He seems to be unaware of the fact that this is a matter in which even the federal government of this country finds it unwise to assert its might against dissident regional convention." Gerhart Niemeyer

+ Ann Am Acad 279:183 Ja '52 800w

Foreign Affairs 30:494 Ap '52 60w

"The greater part of the book is taken up with a review of the main areas of contemporary International Law. The author's purpose, which seems fully achieved, is to document his thesis that it is misleading to call international usages International Law... There will be grave doubts about many aspects of Corbett's position... But however liberals may resolve these underlying problems, they should give this book their careful attention. On the whole, they have ardently supported the attempt to formulate and obtain the ratification of a covenant on human rights. Corbett's position that real progress is impossible unless the efforts to promote human rights internationally are drastically circumscribed must be squarely faced." J. D. Hyman

+ New Repub 126:20 F 18 '52 750w

Reviewed by B. E. Brown

Pol Sci Q 67:287 Je '52 380w

U S Quarterly Bk R 7:384 D '51 230w

CORNELL, KENNETH. Symbolist movement. 217p $3 Yale univ. press

841.09 Symbolism in literature. French poetry—History and criticism 51-13940

"The purpose of the author is to trace the development of the symbolist movement from its sources during the last 20 years of the Nineteenth Century. His position is that of chronicler rather than critic... Such names as Baudelaire, Rimbaud, Verlaine, Mallarmé and Valéry are placed in their proper relationship to the multitude of minor poets who were nonetheless necessary to give the movement body and direction. The importance of the numberless 'little magazines,' with their squabbles, esoteric theories and high mortality rate, is carefully illustrated." San Francisco Chronicle

"Mr Cornell is objective, factual and comprehensive in his approach; his classification is terse and effective, and his book, though scholarly, is readable and interesting... The book should prove a very important reference tool for those interested in criticism and modern poetry." C. H.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 F 10 '52 320w

"The author's recovery of much obscure and fugitive material will prove extremely useful for those who seek information, and his index and bibliography are excellent. Unfortunately for those who seek interpretation, he has not explored the influence of this important Franco-Belgian movement abroad, especially in Germany and Russia, nor its relationship to the contemporary trends in music and the fine arts."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:23 Mr '52 330w

CORSON, JOHN JAY. Executives for the federal service; a program for action in time of crisis. 91p $1.50 Columbia univ. press

353.1 [351.1] Executives. U.S.—Officials and employees 52-11057

"A persuasive statement of the critical problems arising out of the present shortage of top caliber executives in government positions. The author examines the reasons why it has become increasingly difficult to recruit able executives for government service. He then discusses several remedies for the 'executive crisis,' and outlines programs for immediate action and for long-term improvement." Management R

Booklist 49:4 S 1 '52

Management R 41:556 Ag '52 30w

CORTOT, ALFRED. In search of Chopin; tr. by Cyril and Rena Clarke. 268p il $3.50 Abelard

B or 92 Chopin, Frédéric François

52-12542

"A penetrating portrait of Chopin the man by an admittedly partial admirer, the French pianist who has made the interpretation of his works the study of a life-time. He turns all possible sources to his use: Chopin's own words (written or otherwise), accounts of contemporaries, pictures, sculpture, and so on. Includes a very interesting section entitled 'Chopin's Debt to France' as well as the expected bibliography and discography." Library J

Booklist 49:46 O 1 '52

Kirkus 20:524 Ag 15 '52 130w

"Altogether, a sensitive and tasteful document." C. K. Miller

+ Library J 77:1512 S 15 '52 50w

"The material is very readably presented, but there is little revealing or new in it. The most valuable chapters are those on Chopin's works in the light of his correspondence, and on his concerts. The rest is mostly on his physical appearance, his personal relations with people around him, and his love affairs." C. M.

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Ja 8 '52 140w

Reviewed by Abram Chasins

N Y Times p6 N 30 '52 750w

"The first few chapters of this book, which deal with rather special Chopin lore, seem disconnected and a little jerky. Farther on, the chapters grow longer and the aspects of Chopin they discuss grow more important, and the early ones become more meaningful in retrospect. Altogether, the book is a convincing and lifelike view of virtuoso, teacher, composer, and man."

+ New Yorker 28:182 D 13 '52 110w

San Francisco Chronicle p11 O 19 '52 300w

"Like most fine pianists Cortot has enough imagination and sensitivity to supplement the work of the scholar. 'In Search of Chopin,' first published in Paris about three years ago, may have defects in scholarship and organization, but it is a fascinating collection of odds and ends... It can also be said, in sorrow, that the book has been scandalously edited." H. C. Schonberg

CORTOT, ALFRED—Continued

+ — Sat R 35:35 O 25 '52 450w

"Admirable and intriguing book... Of M. Cortot's book much might be said, for it is not merely a 'musician's book about a musician' but a work of considerable literary art. Yet as there is such a thing as damning with excessive praise, which is almost worse than damning with faint praise, I will merely say that, biased as I am where reading books on music and musicians are concerned, once having started in Search of Chopin I became so engrossed that I was reluctant to put it down. The very excellent translation added to my enjoyment." Cyril Scott

+ Spec 188:52 Ja 11 '52 800w

Times [London] Lit Sup p107 F 8 '52 300w

CORYELL, HUGH. Terry and the mysterious monkey; il. by William Ressler. 116p $2 Winston

Monkeys—Legends and stories 52-5482

The adventures of Terry who was almost always in trouble until he met the mysterious monkey, who disappeared when he took off his coat. For ages 8 to 12.

Reviewed by E. C. Ince

Christian Science Monitor p9 My 15 '52 40w

"The blend of humor, fantasy and imaginative handling of realism that make Mary Poppins a 20th century classic find echo in the liveliness of narration, saltiness of humor, economy of expression in this delectable book."

+ Kirkus 20:226 Ap 1 '52 250w

"Most of the incidents are amusing, and the action is swift with enough conversation to make it useful with younger boys and slow readers. The caricature of the old-fashioned 'shushing' librarian is unfortunate and seems forced. Recommended for limited purchase." Anne Izard

Library J 77:1017 Je 1 '52 80w

"Gay, amusing book... Since this is Hugh Coryell's first book, future readers and this reviewer will join in the pious hope that there will be many, many more." L. R. Davis

+ N Y Times p14 Ag 3 '52 120w

COSSERY, ALBERT. Lazy ones; tr. by William Goyen. 157p $2.75 New directions

52-13223

"Three brothers living in their father's house on the outskirts of an Egyptian city are so addicted to sleep that they rouse themselves only to eat... A diversion is created by their aged father's announcement that he intends to marry a young girl." New Yorker

"Some, at least, of the grim scenes in the novel are undoubtedly only too completely realistic. In this respect, a comparison with Peer Gynt seems apt, for that was also in part a satirical, nightmare-embellished portrait of mid-nineteenth century Norway. Yet the value of Peer Gynt as a work of art lies entirely outside its particular application to a particular situation, and so, I think, it is with this novel. (It is a slighter work, of course, than Peer Gynt, but no less a work of art.)" J. F. Sullivan

Commonweal 57:123 N 7 '52 650w

Reviewed by J. H. Raleigh

New Repub 127:28 D 8 '52 70w

"M. Cossery has fused two cultures, and knows his countrymen both from outside and within; he views the land of the Arabian Nights like a far-sighted muezzin on the spire of Saint-Germain-des-Prés." G. D. Painter

New Statesman & Nation 44:192 Ag 16 '52 120w

"An Egyptian writer, Albert Cossery explores in his short second novel a rich, essentially comic level of Egyptian life; this is a preposterous yet spell-binding tale of a house that went to sleep and took its inhabitants with it. Mr. Cossery creates an exotic and subtle society immersed in ancient wisdoms and matter-of-fact satisfactions. It is, of course, alien to Western eyes, this passive acceptance of awareness, of the purely physical pleasures of existence, and one that is apt to be as disturbing as it is fascinating." John Nerber

+ N Y Times p23 D 14 '52 400w

"The flat irony of Mr. Cossery's writing suits his subject—certainly one of the oddest in some time—very well, but his book is too pointless to do justice to even these pointless lives."

New Yorker 28:171 N 8 '52 120w

Sat R 35:46 O 25 '52 100w

"The author's intention does not often emerge clearly. He is not helped by the translation, which offers a confusing proliferation of pronouns on the first page and reads awkwardly throughout."

Times [London] Lit Sup p481 J1 25 '52 40w

COSTAIN, THOMAS BERTRAM. Silver chalice. 533p $3.85 Doubleday

52-8754

The silver chalice was a frame meant to hold the sacred cup from which Christ drank at the Last Supper. This novel, based on legends of the years following Christ's crucifixion, describes the life of Basil, the artisan, who fashioned the silver chalice. The scenes are laid in Antioch, Rome and Jerusalem.

Booklist 49:12 S 1 '52

Bookmark 12:9 O '52 30w

"Mr. Costain is timid to the point of secretiveness on the matter of just what being a Christian means. The glimpses he permits his readers are exceedingly hazy. Nero, on his good days, may be a Christian, for all one could tell from The Silver Chalice. But the real business of the novel is its derring-do... As fast-moving, innocuous entertainment The Silver Chalice, a Literary Guide choice, is a decided success." Riley Hughes

+ — Cath World 176:70 O '52 230w

"Costain paints a tremendous canvas filled with warm color and life... As those know who have read his many vigorous re-creations of the past, Costain has a magnificent talent for breathing life into history... But over and above this the novel does something else. It will make real for thousands, perhaps for the first time, the whole world of the New Testament." J. H. Jackson

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 J1 27 '52 650w

"This book will have an amazing sale because the author has chosen a high theme—the Holy Grail. Although hardly in the company of the great Grail tales, it does give a picture of the feeling of early Christians for the sacred cup. Moreover, it presents an interesting story. Readers may not find a 'swash-buckle' on every page nor streams of blood running between the lines, yet the book sustains their interest. Even lukewarm Christians will read it because it tells the story of early Christian tribulation." F. E. Luchs

+ Christian Century 69:1126 O 1 '52 750w

"With 'The Silver Chalice,' Thomas B. Costain has brought a sacred subject to general secular attention in a novel of gripping interest. He has described in intimate and wholly delightful detail a reverent conception of the making of the Holy Grail. The reader is left with the feeling that the author knew whereof he wrote, for his theme is presented with an assurance and sweetness that is refreshing in a great novel of today." R. E. Donlon

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 J1 24 '52 480w

Reviewed by W. P. Sears

Churchman 166:13 N 15 '52 80w

"Frankly I found the story long, but the details of setting and background as well as the romantic love between Basil and Joseph's daughter seem to have holding power for the teen-agers who are reading it with zest." M. C. Scoggin

+ — Horn Bk 28:426 D '52 70w

"Mr. Costain's best book of fiction, and one that will put out a strong bid to rival The Robe in success with that market."

+ Kirkus 20:303 My 15 '52 420w

Library J 77:1753 O 15 '52 50w

"The story of Basil himself plus the adventures of the silver chalice . . . provide an excellent narrative frame for the novel. And Mr. Costain, with his usual skill, clothes it sumptuously with the domestic and political customs of the period. In addition he gives some fascinating insight into what might have gone on in the minds of such men as Paul and Joseph of Arimathea and even so humble a novice Christian as Basil the sculptor, in the latter years of the first century A. D." F. H. Bullock

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 J1 27 '52 700w

"It is good to see Mr. Costain back at the old stand again and with so excellent a book. 'The Silver Chalice' is an outstanding historical novel. Its theme alone marks it as different and original. Never a man of timid fancy, Mr. Costain has now dared to deal with one of Christianity's most hallowed legends. . . That it is full of action and adventure goes without saying. But it is also well stocked with well-drawn characters." T. C. Chubb

+ N Y Times p4 J1 27 '52 700w

New Yorker 28:66 Ag 2 '52 100w

"As those know who have read his many detailed reconstructions of the past, Mr. Costain has a fine talent for dramatizing history; read here, for example, the taut scene in which Simon Magus destroys himself in his madness while the Roman mob watches. Over and above the tightly managed narrative and the bright, shifting hues of the setting, which together make this a costume-piece in the author's best vein, the novel accomplishes something else. It will make real, perhaps for the first time for thousands of readers, the world of the New Testament." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 J1 25 '52 650w

"Unhappily, I found 'The Silver Chalice' largely disappointing. It is a good story. Mr. Costain is much too able a teller of tales for it to be less than that. He is one of our leading practitioners of the historical novel, with emphasis on color and pageantry. He builds a book carefully and always supports it with a rich, convincing background. Yet this theme invited and demanded so much more than he has given it." Edmund Fuller

+ — Sat R 35:18 Ag 2 '52 550w

— Time 60:76 J1 28 '52 500w

COSTUME of the western world; 6v; v3, Fashions of the renaissance in England, France, Spain and Holland, by James Laver [and others; ed. by James Laver]. 390p pl $12.50 Harper

391.09 Costume

"Development of fashion from 1485 to 1650 as the Middle Ages were giving way to the Renaissance, when dress was becoming less regional and more subject to the same influences throughout the civilized Western world. Historical background is sketched in a brief text by a different authority for each of six periods: Early Tudor, by James Laver; The last Valois, by André Blum; Elizabethan and Jacobean, by Graham Reynolds; the dominance of Spain, by Brian Reade; The great age of Holland, by Frithjof van Thienen; Early Bourbon, by André Blum. There are 370 illustrations, including photographs of famous paintings, of drawings and brass rubbings, 48 in color, with descriptions of style, materials, and accessories. This is one of six volumes planned for the series." (Booklist) Bibliographies, Index.

Booklist 48:223 Mr 15 '52

"It is recommended that the present volume and those to come be acquired by libraries, large and small." A. S. Plaut

+ Library J 77:1193 J1 '52 150w

Manchester Guardian p4 Je 15 '51 170w

"The completeness of its text, the high quality of its illustrations and the excellent bibliography for each section make this a volume for the general public as well as for the specialists in the various fashion fields, artists, historians, librarians, stage-designers, hair-dressers, etc." E. J.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Mr 2 '52 150w

"This is a splendid book, and better still, there are five more to come. . . All the chapters are good, all the plates interesting. The volume would appeal to any person of taste. It will be of use to many industries, trades, and professions beyond that of costume design. But here is one costume designer who can hardly wait for the next volume." Millia Davenport

+ Sat R 35:56 Mr 1 '52 550w

"Now that fashion is recognized as a social study by scholars and historians, this volume edited by James Laver becomes an essential for anyone interested in the visual arts. It is likely that this project, of which the first volume is subtitled 'Fashions of the Renaissance,' when completed, may take its place alongside of that unrivaled classic, J. R. Planché's Cyclopaedia of Costume, published in 1876." Richard McLaughlin

+ Theatre Arts 36:4 Ap '52 260w

COTSAKIS, ROXANE (MRS JOHN FITZPATRICK). Wing and the thorn. 356p $3.75 Tupper 52-7546

"John Pantellis was one of the thousands of young Greeks who emigrated to America in the early part of the twentieth century. He came of peasant stock but he was intelligent and energetic and he managed to make a lot of money. What he also made was a Greek world of his own, lapped on all sides by Americanism, but stoutly defended. Through the years, however, his children rebelled against him, and although they loved him, he could not subdue them. He returned to his homeland, only to find that the Greek culture he had worked so hard to preserve in America had disappeared from Greece itself." N Y Times

"Miss Cotsakis has written a persuasive novel, honest, passionate, significant in theme. She has told her story with directness, at the same time weaving into it a variety of detail concerning the customs and manners of the Greeks. But it is from her characterizations that 'The Wing and the Thorn' has its main strength, for her people, from John Pantellis to relatively minor figures in the book, almost without exception, are immediately and vividly alive. Though she has designed her novel skillfully, Miss Cotsakis has sometimes allowed her design to become transparent, so that here and there the reader is able to anticipate too clearly the turns of the story." Gene Baro

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Ap 6 '52 650w

"This is an old theme and it has had many variations, but Roxane Cotsakis tells it with an inside viewpoint which lifts it above its stereotyped plot. . . 'The Wing and the Thorn' is altogether an excellent novel, written with knowledge and compassion, as well as skill." Jane Cobb

+ N Y Times p4 Mr 30 '52 280w

"Her prose is serviceable rather than distinguished, but she has brought her considerable gallery of characters, their costumes, customs, and conceits clearly before us."

Sat R 35:46 My 24 '52 160w

COUGHLAN, ROBERT. Wine of genius; a life of Maurice Utrillo. 112p il $2.50 Harper

B or 92 Utrillo, Maurice 51-11895

A brief biography and appreciation of the French artist, Maurice Utrillo, with some material on his artist-model mother, Suzanne Valadon. No index.

COUGHLAN, ROBERT—Continued

Booklist 48:142 D 15 '51

"The 'wine' Coughlan presents is so heavy and condensed that Utrillo himself appears almost as a caricature. Mme. Utrillo appears as an impossible caricature, the type of cheapest comédienne. Coughlan should have written a book on Utrillo's mother, the well-known Suzanne Valadon. The pages about her, her life, and her art show warmth and understanding. When Coughlan writes about her, he is an interpreter. When he leaves her, he is a mere journalist." F. K. Richter

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ja 20 '52
230w

"A must for art libraries."
+ Kirkus 19:525 S 1 '51 120w

Library J 77:51 Ja 1 '52 140w

"This small book is a good bit too scant in documentation and too discursive in style to justify so positive an appellation. In a sense, though, it's something more than a biography, for essentially it's an attempt, and a generally successful one, to analyze and understand not Utrillo's artistic career but Utrillo himself."
New Yorker 27:177 D 8 '51 120w

COUGHLIN, WILLIAM JAMES. Conquered press; the MacArthur era in Japanese journalism. 165p $3 Pacific bks.

079.52 Press—Japan. Japan—History—Allied occupation, 1945-1952. Liberty of the press 52-9658

A study of the Japanese newspapers under the MacArthur regime. The author served in the Pacific as a fighter pilot in World War II, and has covered the Pacific as correspondent for United Press. Index.

Reviewed by J. E. Gerald
Ann Am Acad 283:234 S '52 440w
Booklist 48:330 Je 15 '52

Reviewed by Gordon Walker
Christian Science Monitor p9 Ag 13 '52
650w

"Recommended." H. L. Roth
+ Library J 77:1075 Je 15 '52 140w

COULSON, CHARLES ALFRED. Valence. 338p
$5 Oxford

541.3 [541.39] Valence (theoretical chemistry) [52-10351]

"An analytical study of the current knowledge of chemical valence, written from the standpoint of wave mechanics." N Y New Tech Bks

"When one of the acknowledged leaders in any field writes a book dealing specifically with that field, the reader can usually expect to find an authoritative and stimulating exposition of the subject. In this respect, 'Valence' by C. A. Coulson measures up to all reasonable hopes. If, in addition, such an author can express the fundamental ideas so simply and so clearly that they can be readily grasped by a person who is not himself an expert in the field, then the reader should be doubly grateful. In this respect also, the book by Professor Coulson can be highly recommended." G. W. Wheland

+ Am Chem Soc J 74:5810 N 20 '52 450w

"It is probable that few types of readers will be wholly satisfied. The tyro may be discouraged by the technical vocabulary and mathematical symbolism, the intermediate reader could be disappointed by the omission of detailed directions for making simple calculations, and the expert may find too many shortcuts and oversimplifications. Nonetheless, the book is recommended by the reviewer as an aid to understanding and using theories of valence." J. D. Roberts

+ — Chem & Eng N 30:5189 D 8 '52 220w

"The book is primarily for graduate chemists and graduate students." R. R. Hawkins
+ Library J 77:1308 Ag '52 50w
N Y New Tech Bks 37:80 S '52

COULSON, JOHN (JOHN BONETT, pseud), and CARTER, FELICITY WINIFRED (MRS JOHN COULSON). Not in the script [Eng title: Banner for Pegasus]. 187p $2.50 Doubleday

52-301

Detective story.

Bookmark 11:134 Mr '52

Kirkus 19:648 N 1 '51 50w

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge
New Statesman & Nation 43:76 Ja 19 '52 90w

"A rather pleasing amalgam of good-natured satire and romance in which murder has somewhat the position of a marriage broker." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ja 6 '52
110w

"The love story, so often the bane of a detective story, is here one of its greatest charms. Unfortunately the mystery plot falls completely to pieces with its solution, chiefly because the authors have not taken the slightest trouble to make the murderer or his motivation plausible; but as a light novel, if not as a detective story, it's a pure joy." Anthony Boucher

+ — N Y Times p21 Ja 6 '52 130w

"This one shows an easy-going quality that gives new luster to the romantic subplot and makes the goofiest characters almost believable." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ja 13 '52

"Motive slightly cock-eyed, but setting and characters excellent; humor good; nice tone throughout." Sergeant Cuff

+ — Sat R 35:33 Ja 5 '52 30w

Spring'd Republican p8D F 3 '52 120w
Times [London] Lit Sup p761 N 30 '51
100w

COUNTRYMAN, VERN. Un-American activities in the state of Washington; the work of the Canwell committee. 405p $5 Cornell Univ. press

335.4 Washington (state). Legislature. Joint fact-finding committee on un-American activities. Communism—Washington (state)
51-14732

"Professor Countryman has divided his book into two parts: the first is a careful, complete, and objective presentation of the investigations, replete with excerpts from testimony, newspaper accounts, and reports of the consequences to the organizations and individuals involved; the second is a subjective evaluation of the premises, methods, and utility of the investigations." (Columbia Law R) Index.

"Part One enables the reader to make an independent appraisal of the procedures of the committee, the credibility of the witnesses appearing before it, and the probative force of the evidence produced. Professor Countryman's own evaluation effectively points up the essentially 'un-American' nature of the Canwell Committee itself. It also reveals an inherent weakness in the argument of those who would exclude Communist teachers from the schools on the ground that they are unable to exercise freedom of thought. The book is an excellent analysis of the vitiating effect on Anglo-American principles of jurisprudence produced by investigations such as that of the Canwell Committee."

+ Columbia Law R 52:440 Mr '52 220w

Foreign Affairs 31:156 O '52 50w

"Recommended for all libraries as an objective study of a primary problem in American politics—the Un-American activities committee." R. S. Taylor

+ Library J 76:1801 N 1 '51 100w

Manchester Guardian p4 J1 8 '52 90w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:163 Je '52 200w

COUNTS, GEORGE SYLVESTER. Education and American civilization. 491p $3.75 Teachers college

370.973 Education—U.S. U.S.—Civilization
52-9979

"This volume represents an effort to meet in the field of education the challenge of totalitarianism in its several forms. It represents an effort to develop a conception of American education which will support the values of free society in the present troubled age as effectively and vigorously as the educational conceptions of the totalitarian states support the purposes of despotism. The book seeks to achieve this end through an analysis in historical perspective of the broad features of our American civilization, an exploration of the dynamics of industrial society, an examination of the major realities of the contemporary epoch, and an affirmation of the values which should guide us in the rearing of the young in the coming years." (Pref) Index.

"Even those who will disagree with all or part of 'Education and American Civilization' will find it a generous work by a scholar of great goodwill who is clearly and deeply concerned with the future of freedom and humane civilization." S. K. Padover

+ N Y Times p11 J1 27 '52 700w

"'Education and American Civilization' is one of the really significant educational books in many years. It is scholarly without being pedantic, and it should be of interest and encouragement to those outside as well as inside the professional craft. While peripatetic professors of education at large may at points disagree with Professor Counts, even they must admit that this is a powerful book." E. W. Knight

+ Sat R 35:19 S 13 '52 380w

School & Society 75:319 My 17 '52 40w

"This book is recommended especially to those who are concerned with curriculum making at either the secondary-school or the college level." Newton Edwards

+ School R 60:499 N '52 500w

"The picture presented is, in the reviewer's opinion, a well-balanced and penetrating one. Particularly worthwhile is the discussion of values. Perhaps Dr. Counts might have given somewhat more attention to the changes in business and economic organization resulting from technological change and to the growth of such institutions as the school and the church." F. H. Stutz

+ Social Educ 16:394 D '52 360w

Spring'd Republican p6D Ag 10 '52 700w

"This is an able and stimulating contribution to the appraisal of American education as a reflection of American civilization."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:278 S '52 200w

COURNOS, JOHN, and COURNOS, HELEN SYBIL NORTON (KESTNER). Famous British novelists; il. with photographs. (Famous biographies for young people) 130p $2.50 Dodd

928.2 Novelists, English—Juvenile literature
52-10719

Brief summaries of the lives of some famous British novelists, with resumes of the plots of their best-known works. Included are: Sir Walter Scott, Jane Austen, William Makepeace Thackeray, Charles Dickens, The Brontës, George Eliot, Robert Louis Stevenson, Thomas Hardy and Joseph Conrad, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Rudyard Kipling. Briefer treatment is accorded a group of authors famous for one novel. For readers of 14 and over.

"Use will be chiefly for reference in high-school libraries and large YP collections. Format may count against it, as older children may think it a child's book. Good material, but type of YP collection and school curriculum will determine purchase." Eleanor Kidder

+ Library J 77:1018 Je 1 '52 100w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

N Y Times p12 Ag 31 '52 120w

"Its chief value may be as an incentive to read or reread the novels that made these writers famous." D. B. B.

+ Spring'd Republican p6D J1 27 '52 130w

COURNOS, JOHN, and COURNOS, HELEN SYBIL NORTON (KESTNER). Famous modern American novelists; il. with photographs. (Famous biographies for young people) 181p $2.50 Dodd

928.1 Novelists, American—Juvenile literature
52-7209

Twenty-five brief biographical sketches of American novelists. Contents: Booth Tarkington; Willa Cather; L. C. Douglas; Sinclair Lewis; K. L. Roberts; T. B. Costain; M. E. Chase, Edna Ferber; Hervey Allen; P. S. Buck; J. P. Marquand; M. K. Rawlings; F. S. K. Fitzgerald; Louis Bromfield; E. M. Hemingway; Margaret Mitchell; A. B. Guthrie, Jr.; John Steinbeck; W. D. Edmonds. Index.

Booklist 48:342 Je 15 '52

"Informal, tremendously interesting, critical biographies. . . Useful for reference and reading guidance in every library serving young people and adults." M. K. Walraven

+ Library J 77:910 My 15 '52 100w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

N Y Times p12 Ag 31 '52 120w

COURTIER, SIDNEY HOBSON. Gold for my fair lady. 370p $3 Wyn

51-14547

A story of life in Australia during its gold-rush days one hundred years ago. The chief character is Miriam Cary whose life story is followed through fifty years from her first husband's death to her own.

Kirkus 19:621 O 15 '51 160w

"Those who enjoy stories of Australian life of a comparable period will be equally entertained with this absorbing narrative. Recommended for public libraries." H. R. Forbes

+ Library J 76:1703 O 15 '51 80w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Mr 2 '52 180w

Reviewed by John Cournos

N Y Times p12 D 30 '51 260w

COURTIS, STUART APPLETON, and WATERS, GARNETTE. Courtis-Watters illustrated golden dictionary for young readers; il. by Beth and Joe Krush. 544p $3.95 Simon & Schuster

423 English language—Dictionaries 51-14297

"This is another 'picture dictionary,' the pictures abundant and done in color. It is designed to come between the authors' earlier Picture Dictionary for Children, and perhaps the Thorndike Junior, and is done in the same style. The more than 7,500 basic words plus 10,000 variants are defined in simple terms, with meanings given that children of third and fourth grade are most likely to encounter. There are more than 2,100 pictures, maps, and diagrams included with the definitions." Christian Science Monitor

Bookmark 11:85 Ja '52

"This 544-page volume, in its colorful board covers, should prove a useful self-help tool for young children. The print and color work are good, but the paper is not top grade. The vocabulary and definitions have been put to the most thorough tests by the educator-authors."

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 5 '52 130w

Kirkus 19:679 D 1 '51 180w

"Simple, attractive dictionary. . . Syllabification and pronunciation are simply indicated. Definitions are given in clear, easy-to-understand terms and sentences." Eleanor Alexander

+ Library J 77:66 Ja 1 '52 100w

COURTIS, S. A.—Continued

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Ja 27 '52 260w

"The book is attractive in appearance and easy to use, though disappointing in color reproduction and quality of paper. The authors, both experienced educators, have tested their material in several schools to make sure that it suits the needs and abilities of children in the elementary grades. The result is a book which admirably bridges the gap between the introductory dictionaries used in primary grades and the more conventional juvenile dictionaries." Elizabeth Hodges

+ N Y Times p20 D 16 '51 140w

Springf'd Republican p8C D 16 '51 170w

COUSINS, MARGARET. Ben Franklin of old Philadelphia; il. by Fritz Eichenberg. (Landmark bks) 184p $1.50 Random house

B or 92 Franklin, Benjamin—Juvenile literature 52-7231

The story of Benjamin Franklin told for grades 4 to 9. Index.

Booklist 49:160 Ja 1 '53

Reviewed by C. I. Judson

Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 N 16 '52 40w

"A felicitous writer makes the grand old man of American diplomacy, invention, and common sense, and orderer of the nation's business into a living friend."

+ Commonweal 57:175 N 21 '52 10w

"As a sympathetic, conversational account of Benjamin Franklin's life, this is a lively catalog of his remarkable inventions as well as an appraisal of his stature as an editor and statesman."

+ Kirkus 20:457 Ag 1 '52 180w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p11 N 16 '52 30w

New Yorker 28:205 D 6 '52 40w

COUSINS, MARGARET. Christmas gift. 219p $2.75 Doubleday

52-11012

A collection of Christmas stories selected from those published in magazines during 1941 to 1951. Contents: The homemade miracle; Inconstant star; The white kid gloves; The poor black sheep; Small world; Santa Claus and the Tenth avenue kid; The fifty-dollar bottle; A baby sitter for Christmas.

Booklist 49:125 D 1 '52

Reviewed by Richard Sullivan

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 D 14 '52 60w

Kirkus 20:571 S 1 '52 120w

"Recommended only for large collections and to people seeking new material for Christmas programs." R. P. Tubby

Library J 77:1809 O 15 '52 40w

"'White Kid Gloves' has a sort of O. Henry flavor. . . Rewarding not only as a holiday story but as a piece of short fiction which encompasses within its narrow framework the life of a town is 'The Homemade Miracle.'" Rose Feld

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 D 14 '52 120w

San Francisco Chronicle p10 N 30 '52 20w

"All are of the type which every editor of a mass-circulation magazine prays for when it comes time to make up his December issue. In each the miracle of Christmas works the expected transformation in the hearts or circumstances of the characters. . . Those who can weep at each rehearing of the 'Christmas Carol' will undoubtedly enjoy these though they are not quite up to the level of that masterpiece." E. J. Fitzgerald

Sat R 35:37 N 29 '52 90w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal

Springf'd Republican p13C D 14 '52 70w

COWLES, MRS FLEUR (FENTON). Bloody precedent. 270p $3 Random house

982 Argentina—Politics and government. Perón, Juan Domingo. Perón, Eva (Duarte). Rosas, Juan Manuel José Domingo Ortiz de 52-6130

An American woman journalist examines the present regime in Argentina and compares it with the rule of a nineteenth century dictator, Juan Rosas.

Booklist 48:183 F 1 '52

Reviewed by J. F. Rippey

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Ja 20 '52 350w

"In spite of very dramatic subject matter, Mrs Cowles' writing is characterized by a serious lack of organization in parts, particularly in the first half. In this section dealing with the Rosas, the thread of her narrative gets bogged down at times because of her tendency to jump from event to event and period to period in a confusing manner. But on balance her book must be credited as a solid contribution to understanding of the Argentina of today and yesterday." R. M. Hallett

+ — Christian Science Monitor p9 Ja 14 '52 850w

Commonweal 55:382 Ja 18 '52 40w

Kirkus 19:674 N 15 '51 230w

"Uneven in quality, the section on Rosas gives this work its only true historical value, the one on Peron being filled with too much chit-chat for serious history. An interesting, stylish, if not completely convincing, parallel in history. Recommended." M. S. Byam

+ — Library J 77:45 Ja 1 '52 130w

Manchester Guardian p4 Ag 22 '52 300w

Nation 174:161 F 16 '52 50w

Reviewed by Norman McKenzie

New Statesman & Nation 44:190 Ag 16 '52 390w

"Fleur Cowles has told a readable story. And, just as important, she has placed in vivid juxtaposition, the two first ladies of those strong men, Doña Encarnación and Doña Evita. No historian, no matter how he might argue with Mrs. Cowles on some details of fact and interpretation, has done a sounder job of explaining the current embarrassment of good Argentines." Hubert Herring

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Ja 13 '52 950w

"The more interesting half by far of 'Bloody Precedent' is that dealing with the present dictatorship. Here is perhaps the most perceptive and accurate picture of Evita published to date, with illuminating details which only Mrs. Cowles could provide since they are the fruit of a personal visit. . . One could wish that the writing throughout 'Bloody Precedent' were less slipshod. . . Also, the great number of small errors tend to diminish the sense of authenticity." V. L. Warren

+ — N Y Times p12 Ja 13 '52 700w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p14 F 21 '52 800w

"It is hardly worth being plunged into a morass of unexplained Argentine revolutions and political intrigues to come out with so little. 'Bloody Precedent' itself, indeed, is something of a morass of sloppy writing, unchecked factual statements, non-sequiturs, and catty feminine judgments; but written with enough of the zest peculiar to cantankerous ladies to make a lousy book hot reading." Duncan Alkman

— Sat R 35:28 F 9 '52 1400w

Times [London] Lit Sup p607 S 19 '52 700w

COX, WARREN EARLE. Lighting and lamp design; 300 il, sketches, etchings, diagrams and photographs of interiors and lamps, by Ethelyn C. Stewart and the author. 179p $5 Crown

621.32 Electric lighting. Electric lamps 51-12005

"The work provides information on the manifold aspects of lighting for the home, offices, shops, factories, museums, churches, etc. It is for artists, decorators, architects, all who wear glasses, use 'health lamps,' work in fluorescent light, watch television sets—for everyone, professional or amateur, who is interested in the best lighting." Publisher's note

Reviewed by Anne Douglas
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ag 10 '52
60w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 77:1209 J1 '52 50w

COXE, GEORGE HARMON. Never bet your life. 211p $2.50 Knopf 52-10615
Detective story.

Booklist 49:15 S 1 '52
Kirkus 20:386 J1 1 '52 60w

"This cliché of the inadvertent but stubborn detective is underscored by Mr. Coxé as blandly as if it were brand new and made sense and he calculates all of the proceedings around it. His deftness brings it off and the consequence is neat and wily and as easy to take as to forget." James Sandoe
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ag 24 '52 160w

"There is nothing markedly subtle or surprising about Never Bet Your Life; but, as always with Coxé, there is pure pleasure in watching a first-rate craftsman at work." Anthony Boucher
+ N Y Times p19 Ag 24 '52 80w

"Mr. Coxé seems abundantly familiar with his material, and though things get a little out of hand at the end, when a great deal is explained with more rapidity than logic, his book is for the most part a pretty satisfactory study in violence."
+ New Yorker 28:148 S 13 '52 80w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ag 31 '52
60w

"Good." Sergeant Cuff
+ Sat R 35:35 Ag 30 '52 20w

COY, HAROLD. First book of presidents; pictures by Manning DeV. Lee. 68p $1.75 Watts, F.
923.1 Presidents (U.S.)—Juvenile literature
52-11165

A short book about the presidency and the men who have held it, written for ages six to ten. Includes information on duties and responsibilities of the presidents, brief biographical data about each of our presidents, some interesting informal items, and an index.

Booklist 49:51 O 1 '52
Christian Science Monitor p4 Ag 30 '52
40w

Horn Bk 28:332 O '52 80w
Kirkus 20:191 Mr 15 '52 60w

"Excellent material for younger children. Also an easy interesting book for retarded readers. Recommended." G. M. Shakin
+ Library J 77:1310 Ag '52 30w

"A handy reference book to have around, at home or at school." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 O 5 '52
80w

COY, HAROLD. Real book about Andrew Jackson; il. by Frank Nicholas. 192p $1.25 Garden City bks.

B or 92 Jackson, Andrew—Juvenile literature
52-12498

A biography for young people, partly fictionalized, which presents a balanced portrait of the man, as soldier, frontiersman, and president, not overlooking his weaknesses, but showing, too, his greatness and services to his country.

Booklist 49:111 N 15 '52

Kirkus 20:372 J1 1 '52 120w

"Very readable. . . Recommended." L. E. Cathon
+ Library J 77:1664 O 1 '52 30w

COY, HAROLD. Real book about George Washington; il. by Ellinore Blaisdell. 191p $1.25 Garden City bks.

B or 92 Washington, George—Juvenile literature
52-8113

A portrait of George Washington for grades four to seven. Chronology. Index.

Booklist 48:268 Ap 15 '52
Kirkus 20:190 Mr 15 '52 120w

Reviewed by E. C. Alexander
Library J 77:727 Ap 15 '52 70w

"Extremely readable." M. E. Martignoni
+ N Y Times p18 Je 29 '52 90w

CRABB, ALFRED LELAND. Home to Tennessee; a tale of soldiers returning. 299p $3 Bobbs 52-6804

A tale of Civil war days in Nashville, Tennessee with some of the same characters who appear in Dinner at Belmont, Supper at the Maxwell House, etc.

Booklist 48:214 Mr 1 '52

"It is a grim tale of fratricidal warfare, of armies digging in and armies on the march, of spies passing thru the lines and hiding in secluded caves. But always there is a leavening of the grimness, brought about by the author's eternally effervescent strain of humor." Henry Cavendish
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p16 My 25 '52
450w

"Crabb has grown grimmer, as he follows the fortunes of the Army of Tennessee. Gone are the frolics of 'Dinner at Belmont' or the cops and robbers episodes of 'Lodging at the Saint Cloud.' In this latest book, he has practically provided a feast for all the military logicians who still analyze each southern campaign. There are no fair ladies in silks and satins, and no gallant gentlemen raising lances on high. Here is war, bloody, stupid war, the exemplar of all wars, and many sad and tragic men, making like Hood the final unnecessary blunder." Lorine Pruette
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 F 24 '52
800w

"As ever, Alfred Leland Crabb writes a comparatively simple story, of uncomplex people, emotions unprobed by psychiatry and such; and also as ever, he remains close to his factual ingredients. In this 'Tale of Soldiers Returning,' he achieves effects equal to those of the best of his earlier works and, perhaps, a greater maturity than he has yet shown his readers." H. T. Kane
+ N Y Times p25 Mr 2 '52 400w

Reviewed by E. J. Fitzgerald
Sat R 35:44 F 16 '52 130w

CRAIG, CLARENCE TUCKER. One church—in the light of the New Testament. 155p $2 Abingdon-Cokesbury 280 Church unity
51-12193

"A clergyman looks at the ecumenical movement and examines the factors that hinder the churches from achieving the unity so many of them believe desirable. Taking the New Testament conception of the Christian church as having one body, Spirit, hope, Lord, faith, baptism, and God and Father, he points out the major disagreements in regard to each of these qualifications, indicates without rancor which churches are too adamant on some one point to arrive at any agreement, but concludes that among Christian believers the realization of the essential oneness of the Christian church is growing." Booklist

Booklist 48:165 Ja 15 '52

Reviewed by J. H. Titus
Churchman 166:16 F 1 '52 110w

CRAIG, C. T.—Continued

"Dean Craig is a most courteous disputant, but he does not intimidate easily. In this small but meaty volume, after a general view of the crisis of a divided church, he discusses the limits, the form, and the continuity of the church; the conditions and ways of entrance into it; communion in it; the goals of the ecumenical movement, and the faith of a united church—all with close and constant documentation from the New Testament. This method may seem unconvincing, not to say irrelevant, to those who stress the 'testimony of history' as validating whatever the church has become in the historic process of its development. To others, as to this reviewer, it will appear that this return to the primary sources of our knowledge of the character and nature of the church is the only possible approach to agreement on the subject." W. E. Garrison

+ J Religion 32:131 Ap '52 350w

"Someday church union must get out of the conference stage and be made effective on the local community level where people live. Dr. Craig's book will be helpful in making church leaders see clearly what must be overcome if that is to come to pass."

+ Kirkus 19:606 O 1 '51 130w

Times [London] Lit Sup p617 S 19 '52 470w

CRAIG, HAZEL THOMPSON, and RUSH, OLA DAY. Homes with character [drawings by Roger H. Martin, jr.] 351p $3.60 Heath

640 Home economics. House decoration 52-7312

Textbook for high school students covering all phases of home-making, from decision to buy or rent, and choice of home site, to making draperies and selecting china, glass, and accessories. Illustrations include photographs, plans, and diagrams.

Booklist 48:234 Mr 15 '52

"The book is organized for easy, functional, and varied use. While maintaining the emphasis on how a family lives in a home, the authors approach housing problems from the point of view of satisfactions expected from a home, economic considerations at different stages of the family cycle, the aesthetic aspects of developing a home—all interspersed with practical illustrations." L. L. Lurry

+ J Home Econ 44:459 Je '52 250w

CRAIG, MRS MARGARET (MAZE). Julie. 247p $2.50 Crowell

52-8653

"Tells the story of Julie's year at a co-ed college. It is essentially a tale of young love in which Julie meets disillusionment, adjusts her sense of values, and turns to the man who is worthy of her." Sat R

Kirkus 20:413 Jl 15 '52 180w

"The highly keyed emotions of the college freshman seldom have been put down with such realism." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p24 N 16 '52 90w

"Despite some sentimentality, Mrs. Craig handles a familiar problem with frankness and a sensibility which comes from an understanding of teen-age emotions." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p26 O 12 '52 120w

Sat R 35:64 N 15 '52 30w

CRAIG, MAURICE JAMES. Dublin, 1660-1860. 362p il $10 Coward-McCann

941.83 Dublin—Social life and customs. Architecture—Dublin 52-11701

"By linking the architectural evolution of the city during this period with its social and political history, Mr Craig reveals how circumstances moulded Dublin into a Georgian capital with a character of its own; and how architectural tradition, town-planning schemes, eras of expansion and stagnation, were all intimately affected by human affairs. . . Most of the architectural masterpieces of Dublin have survived and Mr Craig relates how these and other buildings, not able for their beauty and their associations, came into being and how the birthplace of Swift, Steele and Sheridan became that of Shaw, Wilde and Joyce." (Publisher's note) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by J. M. Flynn

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 N 23 '52 260w

"One of the best books ever written about Ireland."

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Jl 4 '52 70w

"Mr. Craig's Dublin is a solid piece of scholarship for students of history and architecture but could also at moments entertain the general reader, as in its descriptions of eighteenth-century gamblers, 'pinkindies,' and Fellows of Trinity." Louis MacNeice

+ New Statesman & Nation 43:592 My 17 '52 170w

"Mr. Craig writes quietly well with a dry wit and a formality which gives his book a proper Augustan flavor." Horace Reynolds

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 O 19 '52 600w

"It is a very handsome book, beautifully bound and printed, with many photographs which, even if rather crowded together, include some rarely reproduced items. While having some of the air of a work of piety—Mr. Craig's Irish patriotism is almost as prominent in it as his respect for Dublin—it is full of entertainment, and worth reading by anyone who is willing to submit to the fascination of great cities." Walter Taplin

+ Spec 188:816 Je 20 '52 500w

Times [London] Lit Sup p327 My 16 '52 650w

CRAMER, CLARENCE H. Royal Bob; the life of Robert G. Ingersoll. 314p il $3.75 Bobbs

B or 92 Ingersoll, Robert Green 52-10691

Biography of Robert Ingersoll, the successful lawyer and unsuccessful politician, whose greatest claim to fame was his agnosticism, about which he lectured with great success. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 49:103 N 15 '52

Reviewed by Charles Collins

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 9 '52 220w

"Voluminous sources used, but book's organization and unselected detail make tiresome repetition. Flashes of excellent early Illinois humor. Style marred by bromides. Popularity will be limited because author establishes no viewpoint and proves nothing." Karl Brown

+ Library J 77:1804 O 15 '52 100w

"Dr. Cramer has written a readable biography that smoothly covers the surface but makes little attempt to penetrate beneath."

+ Nation 175:535 D 6 '52 90w

"Professor Cramer's emphasis on Ingersoll's relation to the society in which he moved makes this richly documented and workman-like biography a valuable source of insight into a period of American history that is less familiar than others more remote in time. In particular, the apt selections from contemporary newspaper comment and the many cartoons reproduced as illustrations reveal an unexpected verve and satiric edge in the journalism of our grandfathers' day." H. N. Smith

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 D 21 '52 800w

"A scrupulously documented biography that reflects the excitement of Ingersoll's life and identifies his ideas in accurate relation to the main intellectual currents of his time. One wishes that Mr. Cramer had been more generous in his excerpts from Ingersoll's speeches instead of simply tempting the reader with brief quotations." Giraud Chester

+ N Y Times p10 N 16 '52 390w

"Dr. Cramer, a professor of history at Western Reserve University, has brought to his task a sense of humor, a lively style, a sympathetic viewpoint, and a scholarly command of the history of Robert G. Ingersoll's times. The result is a timely and readable biography of an important and interesting figure." R. B. Nye

+ Sat R 36:19 Ja 10 '53 950w
Springf'd Republican p9C N 2 '52 200w

CRANE, CLINTON HOADLEY. Yachting memories [ed. by William H. Taylor; designed by Eugene V. Connett]. 216p $6 Van Nostrand

B or 92 Yachts and yachting 52-10478

As boy and man, as naval architect and sportsman, the author has spent his life building, racing, and sailing yachts.

"Clinton Crane's memory is a good one and he's done a splendid job making his recollections of former yachting days available for present day sailors." Al Chabre

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 N 23 '52 40w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson
Library J 73:63 Ja 1 '53 20w

"Thoroughly readable." T. C. Chubb
+ N Y Times p20 O 12 '52 280w

CRANE, MRS FRANCES (KIRKWOOD). Murder in Blue street. 248p $2.50 Random house 51-13907

Detective story.

"Eccentric characters in deeply snarled complications." Drexel Drake
Chicago Sunday Tribune p18 F 17 '52 90w

Kirkus 19:502 S 1 '51 60w

Reviewed by James Sandoe
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 D 16 '51 110w

"The murders and their solution, seem pointless, disjointed and unedited; but at least the book contains a good deal of first-rate talk about food." Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p54 N 25 '51 30w

"You may find the plot hard to follow, there's lots to be explained in the last chapter." L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p14 D 9 '51 60w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff
Sat R of Lit 34:45 N 24 '51 30w

CRANE, HART. Letters, 1916-1932; ed. by Brom Weber. 426p $5 Hermitage

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 52-12760

Some 400 letters to family and friends, written by this American poet who committed suicide in 1932. The volume serves as a companion to the biography of Crane, written by the editor of these letters, and published some years ago (Book Review Digest 1948).

Booklist 49:66 O 15 '52

Kirkus 20:482 Ag 1 '52 120w

"The letters give much insight into the life and work of one of America's most original 20th century poets, but rarely do any of them achieve literary excellence." Herbert Cahoon
Library J 77:1395 S 1 '52 70w

Reviewed by Allen Tate
New Repub 127:25 N 17 '52 700w

"The earthly path of Crane's journey has its record in his letters. There are some who may even now insist that Mr. Weber's work should have been reserved for future generations to read and understand—but why should posterity have all the privileges of reading what may well become an enduring contribution to American critical research and biography? Its importance cannot be denied." Horace Gregory

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 N 9 '52 700w

"It is the tragic conflict between Crane the artist and Crane the man, the embodiment of the neuroses of his time, that makes these letters so moving and dramatic. One could wish that the editor had introduced more of the correspondence of Crane's friends as clarification and continuity, but most of the correspondents are still alive and perhaps would not permit that. We should be grateful in any event for a fine preface and the 400 letters themselves, a rich contribution to literature." Selden Rodman

+ N Y Times p32 O 19 '52 650w

"There are abbreviations and disguises and anonymities [in the letters] which no doubt are necessitated by the dignity of persons still living. . . But these aside, too many names, incidents, interrelationships, are left hanging in the air. A reader familiar with the Horton and Weber biographies can frequently supply his own notes, but this should scarcely be left to him along with—furthermore—much of the proof-reading. If a 'Letters' can never have self-sufficiency, it should at least strive toward it." W. T. Scott

Sat R 35:27 O 18 '52 850w

CRANE, RONALD SALMON, ed. Critics and criticism, ancient and modern. 647p $6 Univ. of Chicago press

804 Literary criticism 52-7330

"A collection of twenty essays from the writings on critical theory and method of 'a group of friends who came to know one another at the University of Chicago in the middle thirties and who have since carried on, in numerous conversations, the exchange of ideas on these and related questions which began at that time': R. S. Crane, W. R. Keast, Richard McKeon, Noman Maclean, Elder Olson, Bernard Weinberg. Only six of the essays are new. . . Presents for the first time a complete picture of the 'Chicago school.'" New Repub

Reviewed by Rudd Fleming
New Repub 126:21 My 19 '52 750w

"Except for several solid scholarly pieces on such writers as Aristotle, Longinus, Castelvetro and Samuel Johnson, the virtues of this book lie in the opening series of polemical essays by R. S. Crane, Elder Olson and W. R. Keast. These essays, often cogent though seldom wholly circumspect, are attacks on five writers described as 'representative critics of the present day,' namely I. A. Richards, William Empson, Cleanth Brooks, Robert Heilman and Robert Penn Warren." Richard Chase

+ N Y Times p6 Ag 17 '52 700w

"This physically imposing book gives us our first full view of the 'Chicago School' of critics, sometimes called the 'Aristotelian' critics. It is not a perspicuous book, and that is unfortunate, because it is an important book. . . Between a formally questionable beginning and a McKeon middle which is at best out of all proper proportion, 'Critics and Criticism' obscures its subject in a very trying way. That these Aristotelian critics should have failed formally is ironic; more than that it is unfortunate, because they have something of genuine value to say and they have great abilities as critical theorists." Arthur Mizener

Sat R 35:57 Je 14 '52 950w

CRANE, STEPHEN. An omnibus; ed. with intro. and notes by Robert Wooster Stallman. 703p $5 Knopf

52-6416

"This new edition of Stephen Crane brings together for the first time his best works in a single volume: three of his novels [Maggie; George's Mother; Red Badge of Courage] ten of his short stories, and sixteen poems. The works are grouped according to their subject-matter or setting—very simply as Bowery Tales, War Tales, A Tale of the Sea, Western Tales, Whilomville Stories, and Poems. Crane's journalism is represented by four of his articles; each of the first three parts of this book concludes with one of these articles. In Part VII I have collected fifty-seven letters never before published, in addition to letters

CRANE, STEPHEN—Continued
reprinted from periodicals and books in which they first appeared." (Foreword) Bibliography.

Booklist 49:141 D 15 '52

Reviewed by Edward Wagenknecht
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 D 14 '52
300w

"Coming up for air, after a half day of Crane's truly poetic opening passages, and all the rest—this reviewer can say with a special feeling held for very few others, 'The man can write.'" R. R. Brunn

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 D 18 '52
500w

Kirkus 20:592 S 1 '52 160w

"As a labor of scholarship, Mr. Stallman's collection is admirable; he has given us virtually all of Crane that any one except specialists will want to read, and several things by Crane that not even specialists have seen before. . . I wish Mr. Stallman had not given us so many of the poems only as illustrations to his own commentary on the poetry; I could also wish that he had been less portentous about publishing 'The Red Badge' 'complete,' from the original manuscripts, and for the first time." Alfred Kazin

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 N 30 '52
1800w

"Mr. Stallman has done more than any other man to clarify our view of Crane's achievement as an artist; and he has defined the course which future Crane criticism must inevitably follow." J. W. Aldridge

+ N Y Times p22 D 7 '52 700w

"Stephen Crane is lively reading, and so too is Mr. Stallman. I want to say this without irony. Mr. Stallman is a critic to be reckoned with, and this particular book is an angry labor of love. He shows, in criticism, much of Crane's energy as a novelist. But of the two, the editor remains for me the more paradoxical and the more puzzling. . . After three readings I still cannot reconcile Mr. Stallman's striking account of Henry Fleming's spiritual change with his insistence on another page that Henry did not change. . . But no matter: the bewilderment Mr. Stallman created sent me back to Crane's great novel, and for this I send up thanks." A. J. Guerard

+ Sat R 35:27 N 15 '52 700w

CRANSTON, PAUL F. To heaven on horseback; the romantic story of Narcissa Whitman. 255p $3 Messner

Whitman, Narcissa (Prentiss)—Fiction
52-10011

A fictionized biography of Narcissa and Marcus Whitman, which ends before the massacre in which the Whitmans perished. Based on the letters and diaries of Narcissa Whitman.

Booklist 48:339 Je 15 '52

Kirkus 20:269 Ap 15 '52 250w

Library J 77:1758 O 15 '52 30w

"The excitement of the story is not so much the setting of the frontier, eventful as that was, as the warmth and courage and wholeheartedness that Mr. Cranston found in Narcissa through her actual letters and diaries. The book he did not live to see in print is an idyll of a woman who loved deeply and well." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Je 29 '52
600w

"The author, who unfortunately didn't live to see this first novel in print, apparently reconstructed the journey largely from a journal left by Mrs. Whitman. . . Mr. Cranston brings their adventures to vivid life." John Cournos

+ N Y Times p15 Je 1 '52 160w

"Although, to a man, her frontier companions fall under Narcissa's spell, very little of their color and independence emerges from a sketchy characterization. There is no mention of the fur trade which opened up the Northwest to people like the Whitmans. More interesting to most readers than the quite routine love story in pioneer dress will be Paul Cranston's feeling for it and the circumstances of its writing which, with prodigious effort, he was able to finish before his death." J. S. Bishop

+ Sat R 35:36 Ag 2 '52 280w

Spring'd Republican p8D Je 29 '52
50w

Wis Lib Bul 48:172 J1 '52

CRAVEN, THOMAS, ed. Treasury of art masterpieces, from the Renaissance to the present day. rev & enl ed 327p il col pl $12.50
Simon & Schuster

759 Paintings 52-13980

"This is a new and amplified edition of a work first published in 1939 [Book Review Digest 1939]. Of the 160 color reproductions, 22 are new and more than 40 have been remade. There are 489 black and white illustrations. Text and pictures together constitute a survey of painting from the Renaissance to the present day. Italy, Flanders, Holland, Germany, Spain, France, England, and the United States are represented." Chicago Sunday Tribune

Reviewed by Edward Barry

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 N 30 '52
50w

"Unfortunately the handsome full-page color plates no longer face the descriptive text but are grouped together in sections, while the commentary is accompanied by small black-and-white reproductions for quick visual reference. . . Readers familiar with Mr. Craven's earlier works are going to find some surprises in this new one. Reproduced with the text on Picasso, for instance, is that very portrait of Gertrude Steinh . . . which the author in his book 'Modern Art' dismissed as a 'fiasco.'" Emily Genauer

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 D 7 '52
360w

"Mr. Craven's text is still full of inverted sentences, occasionally surprising colloquialisms and impenetrable art phrases, but it does contain a wealth of information. One might well question the selection of certain paintings, the sloppy editing which leaves captions on colorplates incorrect, and the omission of certain artists in favor of others. But this is so ambitious a job, and so remarkable a buy that it behooves one not to quibble." David Dempsey

+ N Y Times p42 D 7 '52 130w

"Craven, or his publishers, have spoiled their book by trying to pack too much into it. The text, however, is an excellent general introduction to the history of Western painting, and the color reproductions are extremely good." Alfred Frankenstein

+ San Francisco Chronicle p3 N 30 '52
130w

"Mr. Craven's 'Treasury' is now improved by twenty-two new color plates, a number of black-and-white reproductions, and the deletion of most of the author's more ludicrous errors of fact. The plates vary in quality—some are excellent, most fair to good, some poor. Many are sloppily printed. The selection of pictures is conventional. As for the text, it is in Mr. Craven's well-known manner of simpering and fruity vulgarity." T. B. Hess

+ Sat R 35:12 D 20 '52 200w

CRAVENS, KATHRYN. Pursuit of gentlemen; il. by Jack Long. 307p $3.50 Coward McCann

51-6910

"Drusilla Allen cavorts through pioneer Texas and pre-Civil War New York City in her pursuit of the right Gentleman, while Miss Cravens follows her breathlessly from birth to altar. Drusilla kills rattlesnakes and traps Indians in Texas, falls in with a gambling man enroute to New York, battles with the rules of etiquette and her rich city aunt, is involved in a murder—but she finally gets her Gentleman." N Y Times

Kirkus 19:409 Ag 1 '51 130w

"When a book is called 'Pursuit of Gentlemen' and inscribed to sixty-six individually named representatives of the sex, you might have a suspicion that something a little unusual is coming off. . . Drusilla's story is, of course, frankly preposterous." Mary Ross

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 O 28 '51
550w

"Miss Cravens has supplied Drusilla with a fine set of subsidiary characters on which to practice her wiles, and the novel runs along at a fast clip. Yet Drusilla herself, a spiritual off-spring of those great Ladies, Serena Blandish and Lorelei Lee, just doesn't have their charm, their humor, or their devastating allure." Lily van Ameringen

N Y Times p37 O 14 '51 130w

"Drusilla's vigor and exuberance may prove somewhat fatiguing to the average reader and overpowering to the discriminating one." J. V. San Francisco Chronicle p23 N 11 '51
200w

CRAWFORD, JOHN EDMUND, and CRAWFORD, DORATHEA. Teens . . . how to meet your problems. 162p $3 Womans press

136.73 [301.1584] Personality. Conduct of life. Youth 51-14084

"This is not just another manners book. The authors, who are psychologists, use a new approach to teen problems. Actual cases dealt with by counselors are pointed directly to the adolescent and discussed in his own language. Serious personality and adjustment problems and the cases cited give young people an appreciation of the causes of behavior." Library J

"Every library will want this, though it will be recommended sparingly by librarians only to those who seek help. Deans of high schools and social workers will find it useful. Recommended." F. W. Butler

+ Library J 76:2015 D 1 '51 90w

"Dr. Crawford has written much for the 'High-road,' the Methodist magazine for youth, and his wife has worked on adolescent tests. It is a religious book, which could be heartening for many youngsters with troubles that seem overwhelming and unique." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ja 13 '52
90w

CRAWFORD, MARION. Elizabeth the Queen: the story of Britain's new sovereign. 236p $2.95 Prentice-Hall

B or 92 Elizabeth II, queen of Great Britain 52-8691

An unofficial biography of the new queen of England, from babyhood to the news of her father's death.

Booklist 48:264 Ap 15 '52

Bookmark 11:180 My '52 30w

Reviewed by Gwen Morgan

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ap 6 '52
260w

"Those who are looking for an objective characterization—or for bits of behind the scenes gossip—must seek elsewhere. This is a loving tribute to the young queen."

Kirkus 20:222 Mr 15 '52 180w

"Gone is the gay, charming and only occasionally temperamental Elizabeth Miss Crawford presented two years ago in 'The Little Princesses.' In her place stands a plaster saint unworthy of the young queen who charms the public and leaves it wondering about what she is really like. The fact that Miss Crawford has not lived in the Palace for four years has resulted in adulation rather than objectivity." Judith Crist

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 Mr 23 '52 550w

"It is clear from this latest book that a visit to Buckingham Palace for Prince Charles' christening on Dec. 15, 1948, was Crawfie's last personal contact with the members of the royal family. . . In spite of this handicap, 'Elizabeth, the Queen' is interesting, amusing and informative. The brief account, culled from newspapers, of Elizabeth's and Philip's visit to Canada and the United States falls rather flat, for Miss Crawford's special gift lies in recounting things seen and heard at first hand." Nancie Matthews

+ — N Y Times p20 Mr 16 '52 700w

"In a previous book, 'The Little Princesses,' Miss Crawford depicted the early development of her two young charges with a certain amount of roguish informality. . . In bringing the elder sister's record up to date, however, the author has sternly denied herself even the slightest twinkle of the eye, with the result that it is practically impossible to distinguish the young Queen's character and conduct from Elsie Dinsmore's."

— New Yorker 28:141 Ap 5 '52 120w

Reviewed by Whitney Balliett

Sat R 35:31 JI 19 '52 190w

Springf'd Republican p5D JI 20 '52
120w

CRAWFORD, RAYMOND MAXWELL. Australia. 203p $2.25; text ed $1.80 Longmans

994 Australia—History

"Begins with a chapter on the geography of the land itself and follows it with one on the aborigines and rounds the story off with discussions of the Australian legend and attitudes, Australia's part in the Commonwealth and her future." (Times [London] Lit Sup) Index.

School & Society 75:319 My 17 '52 20w

"A crisp social history."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p199 Mr 21 '52
700w

CREALOCK, WILLIAM I. B. Vagabonding under sail. 304p il $5 Hastings house

910.45 Content (cruiser). Voyages and travels 51-14136

A personal narrative account of the three years' voyage of the 40 foot cutter Content as told by the "skipper," one of four young Englishmen who threw up their office jobs and went adventuring on the high seas. Their itinerary took them to Spain, Portugal and the Canaries, across the Atlantic to British Guiana, thru the Caribbean and finally to New York.

Booklist 48:194 F 15 '52

"The log of the Content as translated by Bill Crealock . . . makes delightful reading. It's told with droll humor, a quiet, serene understanding of people, appreciation and calm acceptance of events no matter how bizarre, and a deep love of the sea. It is well illustrated." Al Chase

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ja 27 '52
280w

"The book is more than a chronicle of the voyage. It is spiced with people, ashore and afloat, bizarre incidents, and puns, plenty of 'em. . . What did they get out of it? Relief from office drudgery, new friends in every port, lasting memories." W. B. Hayward

+ N Y Times p14 F 24 '52 270w

Springf'd Republican p22A Mr 2 '52
250w

CREASEY, JOHN (ANTHONY MORTON, pseud). Books for the Baron. 249p $2.50 Duell; Little 51-10425

Detective story.

"Keeps itself moving with reasonable competence, but displays no feeling for either the people or the rare books with which it deals." Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p31 F 24 '52 80w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p30 F 24 '52
90w

"So-so." Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 35:48 Mr 15 '52 30w

CREEKMORE, HUBERT, ed. Little treasury of world poetry. 904p il $5 Scribner 808.81 Poetry—Collections 52-14424

An anthology of poetry in translation taken from the literatures of ancient Egypt, Babylonia and China, down thru the ages to the modern poets of Europe, Asia and South America. There are no poems in "original" English. Poems are arranged under language and chronologically by birth and death dates of the poets. Indexes of (1) authors and titles, (2) languages, (3) translators.

Booklist 49:153 Ja 1 '53

"Its principal merit is the familiarity of the human emotions evident thruout. Out of these very foreign times, places, and cultures, the lyric poets speak thru their translators in terms which appeal to our sense of beauty and which strengthen our awareness of the oneness of humanity." A. C. Ames
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p42 D 7 '52 170w

"A few of the languages are dead, but most of the poetry is living, in the sense of expressing human emotions which are as deathless as humanity itself. It is doubtless true that every translation of a poem is really a new and different poem, for, while ideas can be transferred from one language to another, the essential quality and personality of a poem are inseparable from the idiom in which it was created. However, the ideas are worth transferring, and something more comes with them."

+ Christian Century 69:1473 D 17 '52 110w

"The Editor, who includes some of his own renderings from Latin, Italian and French, says that the translation of poetry suffers from a permanent condition of failure; that the art of translation becomes an art of compromise. His collection does all that is possible to give the English reader a passport to realms without language barriers." G. D. McDonald
+ Library J 77:1513 S 15 '52 170w

"The collection is an admirable sampling of verse (English-language excepted) that takes in all the regions there are and all the time there has been. You can hardly beat that for coverage." J. T. Winterich
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 D 21 '52 190w

"There is much here to be thankful for, including a thoughtful introduction by the editor, Hubert Creekmore, and work by poets not easily available to the English-speaking reader. . . And there is much here by men whose distance from us in time and language has kept them strangers too long." David Dempsey
+ N Y Times p42 D 7 '52 180w

"Mr. Creekmore's introduction is an unusually winning prologue, explanatory without being apologetic, erudite but not academic. Moreover, it summarizes freshly the confusing and often contradictory problems of translation. . . Within [certain] limitations, Mr. Creekmore has made admirable choices. As might have been expected, he is most successful with the narratives, descriptions, meditations, ironies—those with the greatest amount of 'prose content'—and least felicitous when he comes to the pure lyric in which the original words are charged with musical overtones, verbal ambiguities, and implications beyond the mere meaning." Louis Untermeyer
+ — Sat R 35:19 D 27 '52 800w

CREIGHTON, LUELLA SANDERS BRUCE. High bright buggy wheels. 342p $3 Dodd 52-10157

Romance of a Canadian Mennonite girl, who renounced her faith to marry the man she loved. After a period of unhappiness she was forgiven by her understanding parents, and her happiness was restored. The scene is the country not far from Toronto, the time early in the twentieth century.

Booklist 49:32 S 15 '52

"We congratulate Mrs. Creighton for writing a strong story, a moving story, a first novel of warm wisdom and comprehension." M. B. Snyder

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 S 7 '52 350w

Reviewed by M. D. Read

Library J 77:1828 O 15 '52 30w

"Miss Creighton writes sensitively on an even, undramatic keel. She pictures the Mennonite people in so mellow a light that there is no conflict in her novel. Neither Tillie's defiance nor her parents' forgiveness are as effective as they might be if there were a sharper contrast between the two societies."

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 S 7 '52 280w

"The tale is the slight—not to say trite—old one of the struggle between the generations, changing values with changing times, etc. But Mrs. Creighton has written it with pleasing warmth and affection, enjoyable period touches, and occasional gentle humor." E. J. F.

+ — Sat R 35:38 O 18 '52 130w

CRESTON, DORMER, pseud. See Baynes, D. J.

CRICHTON, TOM. Sailboat tramp. 231p $3 Norton

910.4 Voyages and travels. Europe—Description and travel. Rozinante (sailboat)
52-8692

The author dreamed of cruising in a small boat while he was in an enemy alien camp in Japan. This is his account of a dream come true. In 1947 he bought a 25-foot sloop in Sweden, and for the next three and a half years he cruised, with very little money, and a changing crew. He saw something of Denmark, Germany, Belgium, Holland, England, France, the Mediterranean, and finally reached Israel.

Booklist 48:279 My 1 '52

"Readers will find appealing values in the colorful, fast-moving account of Mr. Crichton's lighthearted undertaking." Harlan Trott
+ Christian Science Monitor p9 O 11 '52 650w

"Mr. Crichton writes exceedingly well. His book cannot be rated among the sea epics, but it is diverting reading." C. B. Palmer
+ N Y Times p11 Je 15 '52 120w

"He writes easily and with a cheerful humor that must come naturally to one who leads such a charmed life."

New Yorker 28:142 My 10 '52 160w

"This is the story of a venture, not a voyage; of people rather than water and sails. It indicates that the life of a wanderer can be rich in varied human contacts and full of the memories of varied personalities." Scott Newhall

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 My 4 '52 130w

CRISP, FRANK. Haunted reef; il. by Richard M. Powers. 250p $2.75 Coward-McCann 52-7123

Mystery-adventure story for young readers, telling a tale of deep-sea diving and lost treasure in a South Sea island setting.

Booklist 48:236 Mr 15 '52

Bookmark 11:163 Ap '52 40w

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Je 1 '52 120w

"Detailed descriptions of diving operations and undersea life, together with a strange mystery, make this a book to please many boys, and men, too." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 28:109 Ap '52 100w

Kirkus 20:77 F 1 '52 150w

"Should be a welcome addition to YP collections. Recommended." Eleanor Kidder
+ Library J 77:540 Mr 15 '52 70w

"Readers over fourteen will find this excellent writing, with powerful, astounding descriptions of diving, deep-sea creatures, storms and ships in terrifying situations. The author is an Englishman whose travels on tramp steamers have given him a rare fund of material. The American illustrator has done a superb job." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 My 11 '52 280w

"Frank Crisp, who has followed the sea, tells a robustious yarn. His style is undistinguished, his characters two-dimensional, but his plotting is adroit, unexpected, and he makes you feel what it is like at the bottom end of a diver's line." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p26 Mr 2 '52 180w

"This is a lively, dramatic story."

+ Sat R 35:35 J1 19 '52 140w

CRONIN, ARCHIBALD JOSEPH. Adventures in two worlds. 331p $4 McGraw

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 51-13125

"After selling his medical practice, the noted Scottish author tried his hand at writing and this is the absorbing tale of his immediate success as a novelist, his travels, his understanding of people and spiritual faith." Bookmark

"He carries you forward in his recital not by any compulsion of style, wit, or originality but by his genuine interest in men and women whom he doctored as best he could and whose problems and heartaches will appeal to many." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic 189:79 Mr '52 550w

Booklist 48:189; 195 F 15 '52

Bookmark 11:104 F '52 40w

"It is difficult to recount one's own triumphs, small or great, with becoming modesty; but Dr. Cronin has succeeded admirably, focusing the reader's attention upon the drama, the pathos, and the glory of human existence as seen through the eyes of a doctor." B. J. Thompson

+ Cath World 175:76 Ap '52 370w

"A. J. Cronin's autobiography is packed with vital characters and thrilling episodes. How it stirs the heart and lifts up the spirit! Without question, here is one of the great books in the English language." A. C. Ames

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 F 24 '52 400w

"At moments there is an almost cloying tone, the overlay of adjective upon adjective suggesting an extended serial in a popular magazine. Everything is rounded off; the characters are meticulously balanced, the moral is artfully sketched in, the climax comes always at just the right place. And there is a certain amount of conscious self-depreciation which creeps in from time to time. . . These, however, may be minor considerations for many readers. Dr. Cronin has a warm spot in his heart for America. . . And unquestionably a large part of the American reading public still has a warm regard for him. . . He has no use for the narrow denominationalism. He is inclined to love the stranger at the door, regardless of his faith. For all of these qualities, he deserves our respect and admiration. The style is a little rich, but his heart is in the right place." Emmet Lavery

+ Commonweal 55:523 F 29 '52 650w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Horn Bk 28:256 Ag '52 60w

Kirkus 19:715 D 15 '51 250w

"Dr. Cronin's autobiography is not too well organized . . . but it is crisply told, always interesting, and tingling with life, like his fiction. . . A physician's as well as a writer's story, it will appeal to all kinds of readers." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 77:208 F 1 '52 110w

"Highly recommended for all young people."

+ Library J 77:1215 J1 '52 50w

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Mr 28 '52 200w

"The memoirs of A. J. Cronin, doctor and novelist, are unashamedly moral, sentimental, clean and hopeful. They are written with disarming simplicity." Gouverneur Pauldin

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 F 24 '52 950w

"Actually, the collection of incidents we have here is rather a mixed bag. The early ones . . . are the best. . . I find him less likable when he gets to London. He moralizes at the city too much for my taste; and while he had liked and respected his Scotch farmers and Welsh miners, he has very little use for London people. Without the warmth of friendship to give them a glow Dr. Cronin's stories get a little tricky and a little sticky too." Elizabeth Janeway

+ N Y Times p6 F 24 '52 1050w

New Yorker 28:95 Mr 1 '52 160w

"He writes simply, using the manner of a generation ago. His ear, you might say, is not geared to modern prose rhythms, yet his book will reach a wide audience, you may be sure. It is an entertaining piece of work, more entertaining than his last two novels, at any rate, and, as you may expect, it is a book with a message." Jane Volles

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Mr 30 '52 650w

Reviewed by F. G. Slaughter

Sat R 35:11 Mr 1 '52 550w

Springf'd Republican p219 Mr 23 '52 200w

Time 59:98 F 25 '52 1050w

Times [London] Lit Sup p219 Mr 28 '52 700w

Wis Lib Bul 48:92 Mr '52

CROSBY, JOHN CAMPBELL. Out of the blue. 301p $3 Simon & Schuster

792.94 [791.4] Radio broadcasting. Television broadcasting 52-13224

A book about radio and television based on the daily columns the author has written for the New York Herald Tribune during the last six years.

Booklist 49:85 N 1 '52

"Excellent radio and television criticism which is genuinely useful."

+ Bookmark 12:37 N '52 10w

"Many atrocious programs are treated in devoted detail. One of Crosby's tendencies is to think of a titillating headline, or at least a startling lead for a story, and then figure out a means of substantiating it. That isn't too hard to do in radio and TV. With the welter of stuff that pours out each day, you can take almost any position and prove that you are right. On the whole, tho, we think Crosby's appraisals are valid." Larry Wolters

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 O 26 '52 290w

"It has been fun to get to know Crosby through his syndicated newspaper column, in which he surveys radio and television with a wary ear and eye. The sampling of his work in 'Out of the Blue' provides a concentrated means of becoming acquainted with a provocative commentator on the youngest arts. For established Crosby fans, here are the pleasures of remembered merriment, as well as some of those efforts you missed the first time around." Rod Nordell

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 O 30 '52 180w

Kirkus 20:496 Ag 1 '52 130w

Reviewed by Bennett Cerf

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 O 26 '52 650w

"This is a delightful and quite worthwhile book, even if you may already have read most of the syndicated newspaper columns that make it up." Martin Codel

+ N Y Times p21 N 2 '52 220w

"On censorship, on the vagaries of research and polls, Crosby is as sound, serious, entertaining as when he writes about sponsored marriages, television detectives, and Kate

CROSBY, J. C.—Continued

Smith as an American institution. On the quality of commercials he is ferocious and funny. The more important the subject, the better he writes." Gilbert Seldes

+ Sat R 35:36 N 29 '52 450w

CROSS, HARDY. Engineers and Ivory towers; ed. and arranged by Robert C. Goodpasture. 141p $3 McGraw

620.4 Engineering

51-12937

"A series of informal essays on the subject of engineering and engineering education which give the author's views as gained in over thirty years' experience as an engineer and as a teacher of engineers. The essays presented in this book were collected and edited by Robert C. Goodpasture. The original material existed in magazine articles, society papers, transcribed speeches, longhand classroom notes, and graduate lectures." Chem Eng

"'Engineers and Ivory Towers' by Hardy Cross is a most unusual and interesting book, which reveals a most unusual and interesting man." B. K. McKee

+ Chem Eng 59:350 N '52 550w

School & Society 76:63 J1 26 '52 30w

CROSS, JEANNETTE WALLACE, and SAUNDERS, BLANCHE. Standard book of dog care; 1001 questions answered. 656p il $4.95 Greystone

636.7 Dogs

Agr52-445

"A handy reference book, arranged by sections on 'Care,' 'Training,' 'Breeding and Breeds' in question and answer form, covering in encyclopedic fashion all kinds of information the dog lover is likely to need. Dictionary of terms. Index." Library J

Booklist 48:374 J1 15 '52

"Dr. Elizabeth Collins, veterinarian, has written one of the most helpful chapters in the book on the common canine diseases and simple remedies for minor ailments. The novice dog owner is bound to profit by the abundance of practical information in this volume." Bob Becker

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 S 7 '52 110w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 77:1206 J1 '52 20w

CROSSMAN, RICHARD HOWARD STAFFORD, ed. New Fabian essays; pref. by C. R. Attlee. 215p $4 Praeger

335.04 Socialism in Great Britain

[52-2977]

"The original Fabian Essays (1889), edited by Bernard Shaw, had a sale so enormous as to astonish its seven contributors, members of the Fabian Society, an English association of non-Marxist and non-Utopian socialists. They advocated 'the inevitability of gradualism,' in the Sidney Webb's phrase, and some lived to see many of their theories embodied in a welfare state under a Labor Government. Since that is now in eclipse—temporary or not—eight members of the Society, revived in 1939, now attempt a 'radical re-assessment of Britain's role in the post-war world.' Best-known contributors are Margaret Cole, writing on education; John Strachey, former Labor cabinet member, advocating 'a publicly controlled and directed export of capital to the underdeveloped world (as in Point Four); and the editor, R. H. S. Crossman, who contends that the future of Britain depends not on imperial self-assertion, but on our powers of adaptation to the outside world." Library J

"The book is a valuable guide to the various schools of thought which are shaping the future of British Socialism."

+ Cath World 176:159 N '52 170w

Reviewed by Geoffrey Ashe

Commonweal 57:121 N 7 '52 1100w

Current Hist 23:394 D '52 120w

Kirkus 20:852 S 1 '52 150w

"Recommended." E. F. Walbridge
+ Library J 77:1646 O 1 '52 160w

"The stress on Oxford and Parliament gives the New Fabian Essays a certain one-sidedness, and, of course, this new volume is not for a moment comparable to the famous original. Yet the new selection has its significance and interest, above all in underlining the differences between 1889 and 1952." T. R. Fyvel
New Repub 127:19 J1 28 '52 2000w

San Francisco Chronicle p24 N 9 '52 120w

"The authors of this volume do their level best to strike hard. They have full command of the journalistic trick of beginning with an unexpected statement. Thus Mr. Crossman belies the whole cocksure attitude of the present Parliamentary Opposition by declaring that the Labour Party has lost momentum. . . Mr. Jenkins, in his plea for more equality, indicates that there is no need to rush matters. All this tends to catch the eye of the reader. So, on a much more sensible level, does the assumption in all the essays that in the past twelve years or so we have undergone a revolution which produced the present mixed economy, which nobody yet fully understands. But not one of them can keep it up." Walter Taplin
+ Spec 188:715 My 30 '52 750w

"The Fabian Essays, still readable after 50 years, were produced almost by accident, yet survived as the challenge to an age. The New Fabian Essays, self-conscious though they are, are unlikely to mark more than a phase of Labour Party introspection."

—Times [London] Lit Sup p423 Je 27 '52 1100w

CROUSE, WILLIAM HARRY. Everyday household appliance repairs. 295p il $4.95 McGraw 643.6 Household appliances

51-12660

"How the machines in your home are constructed, how they operate, and what is needed to keep them in good condition, lucidly explained by an expert. Numerous helpful drawings. Trouble charts and lists of points in taking care, index." Bookmark

Booklist 48:260 Ap 15 '52

Bookmark 11:154 Ap '52 30w

N Y New Tech Bks 37:37 My '52

CROWDER, DOROTHY E. Flying nation; the story of the bees; il. by Helen Haywood. 156p $2.50 Roy Pubs

595.799 Bees—Juvenile literature

"This importation from England tells the story of a year in the life of the bees. It characterizes the bees individually, showing how they divide the work, how they are governed, how they plan for the four seasons of the year." Sat R

"A humanized story of bees, about as bad as Maeterlinck's is good."

—Kirkus 20:73 F 1 '52 90w

"Fascinating new bee book." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p22 My 11 '52 160w

"The colored illustrations, the black and white drawings and the tale itself are pleasant enough. But today even little children are science-minded and want facts to answer their questions; so in spite of its virtues, this story seems out of date like the science books for children of twenty years ago." Phyllis Fenner

N Y Times p18 Ag 10 '52 140w

"The style in writing is a bit heavy and it has no humor. On the other hand, it gives an authentic picture of the year-round activities of a bee colony."

+ Sat R 35:63 My 10 '52 40w

CROWE, CHARLES MONROE. On living with yourself. 192p $2.50 Abingdon-Cokesbury

248 Christian life

52-5734

"The pastor of the Wilmette (Illinois) Parish Methodist church helpfully suggests 18 arts that lead to successful living with oneself and others." Bookmark

Bookmark 11:209 Je '52 20w

"The skeptic will find that the Rev. Mr. Crowe presumes a foundation of faith on which to build. The amateur theologian will find that the author has shunned those subtleties and abstrusities that titillate the speculative mind."

L. T. Heron

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 My 4 '52 160w

Reviewed by R. C. Batchelder

Churchman 166:18 O 15 '52 120w

CROWLE, PIGEON. Moira. Shearer; portrait of a dancer. 2d ed 95p il $4.50 Pitman

B or 92 Shearer, Moira

"Some new material has been added to cover the two-year period since the publication of the first edition. The text and many photographs follow Miss Shearer's career as a dancer." (Booklist) For first edition see Book Review Digest 1950.

Booklist 48:232 Mr 15 '52

"Miss Crowle's account of Miss Shearer is apparently biographically complete but unfortunately it is written in that coy variety of starry-eyed prose that makes the whole story sound as if both Miss Crowle and Miss Shearer were doing a pas de deux in a Christmas pantomime." R. H. Hagan

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ap 13 '52 40w

"The many pictures of Moira Shearer are a pleasure to look at; they catch more of her dainty elegance and charm than does the text."

Laura Clandon

+ — Sat R 35:66 Ag 30 '52 200w

CROY, HOMER. He hanged them high; an authentic account of the fanatical judge who hanged eighty-eight men. 278p il $4 Duell; Little

B or 92 Parker, Isaac Charles 52-6782

Biography of Judge Isaac C. Parker, who was at one time sole judge over Western Arkansas and the Indian Territory. In two decades Judge Parker sentenced 172 men to the gallows, altho he was no sadist. He said in his own defense, "I've never hanged a man. It is the law that has done it." The judge died in 1896, two months after his court was abolished. Index.

Kirkus 20:218 Mr 15 '52 170w

"The sheer narrative fascination of Judge Parker's career is enough to make 'He Hanged Them High' valuable and readable; however the heavy-handed, quid-in-cheek style of the book is unfortunate and the index and notes on sources have a folksy, I-ridden cuteness that is very hard to take." W. B. Bracke

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Je 15 '52 1100w

"Mr. Croy has caught the spirit of those rough . . . days. He has gathered together dozens of stories, each one a complete and exciting Western. They show good triumphant, as it should be, but with enough terror to satisfy the most bloodthirsty." T. S. Winslow

+ N Y Times p4 J1 6 '52 490w

"Though this is biography, it is also history, the kind of regional history which, when it is carefully documented as Mr. Croy has done the job, is the sort of thing to which the professional historians must turn when they write their more formal books. Meantime, it is good reading in itself, especially for anyone who would know more about what the frontier U.S. was like in its roaring heyday."

J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 My 29 '52 500w

"Homer Croy is alternately corny, coy, and the Authentic Historian." Meyer Levin

Sat R 35:21 Je 7 '52 370w

CRUIKSHANK, ROBERT JAMES. Moods of London; il. by Robin Ironside. 142p $2.50 British bk. centre

942.1 London—Description

[52-7769]

Essays on different aspects or "moods" of the city of London. Contents: Secret mood; Retrospective mood; Village mood; Mood of squares; Park mood; Clubland mood; Universal mood. Index.

Reviewed by W. K. Harrison

Library J 77:900 My 15 '52 30w

"It gets harder and harder to write a new refreshing book on London, but Mr. R. J. Cruikshank has done it handsomely."

+ Manchester Guardian p4 N 2 '51 490w

"Mr. Cruikshank is adept at presenting the pleasanter side of London, and if one is tempted to feel that the fashionable idolatry of the largest worst-planned and, in many ways, most wearing city ever to be constructed is slightly to be deprecated, then this book will bring one, at least for a time, to a happier frame of mind. Mr. Robin Ironside's illustrations fittingly decorate each Mood with a subdued charm."

+ New Statesman & Nation 42:572 N 17 '51 200w

"A delightful set of essays." C. W. W.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 My 18 '52 40w

"The illustrations, which have imposed fantasy on realism, exactly suit the material of the book. It is to be hoped that, in spite of the many books on London which have appeared this year, no one will miss this one. Those who do will miss having seen London with fresh eyes."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p840 D 28 '51 410w

CRUMP, IRVING. Our tanker fleet; il. with photographs. 244p $2.50 Dodd

623.824 Tank vessels. World war, 1939-1945—Naval operations 52-6488

Story of the ships that supply the world with oil, told for grades six and up. Describes the evolution of the tanker from the time when it was just a ship which carried liquid cargo to the present, when tankers are designed to service battle fleets in the ocean.

Booklist 48:217 Mr 1 '52

Bookmark 11:163 Ap '52 60w

"Useful as a career book, but will be widely read by boys seeking books on real, not make-believe, adventure." M. I. Ross

+ Library J 77:214 F 1 '52 100w

"In war and peace, many of us have had reason to say, 'Thank the tankers.' Especially dramatic was their contribution to our victory in the Pacific in World War II. Mr. Crump has written a book about them that is both informative and exciting."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Mr 2 '52 110w

Reviewed by Nathan Aleskovsky

N Y Times p24 F 10 '52 180w

CRUMP, LOUISE (ESKRIGGE). Helen Templeton's daughter. 246p $3 Longmans

52-8171

The time of this novel is 1910, the scene a Mississippi Delta plantation. Anne Templeton, who had hoped to escape the dull life of the plantation, had spent three years in Chicago, learning to paint. Called back home by the serious illness of her grandmother, she found herself unable to leave, and shortly was trying to manage the rundown plantation. With the help of a young man from the wrong side of the tracks she made a success of her management.

Booklist 49:32 S 15 '52

"Sensible and without sensationalism."

+ Kirkus 20:355 Je 15 '52 130w

CRUMP, L. E.—Continued

"A sympathetic picture of southern life with excellent characterization and well contrived plot. Recommended for public libraries." Harriet Forbes

+ Library J 77:1191 J1 '52 50w

"Mrs. Crump sustains her story to the end, and writes with warmth of the Delta life of a generation ago, aware of its virtues as well of its failings. In the final impression, however, the social problems remain clearer than the individual characters."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 S 21 '52 160w

"Where the plot is obvious and superficial, the author's knowledge of the Delta country is not. Her understanding of plantation life and the Negro worker's problems makes you wish she had forged a theme more worthy of her background material." Andrea Parke

+ N Y Times p10 Ag 31 '52 200w

"Her plot troubles apart, Mrs. Crump has a nice feeling for characters and an even nicer feeling for her Delta setting. She also brings in some thoughts on the economic condition of the South, and on the social and economic status of the Negro which, while not novel, add some solidity to her offering."

+ Sat R 35:12 Ag 30 '52 200w

Wis Lib Bul 48:215 S '52

CULSHAW, JOHN. Century of music. 231p $4 Roy pubs.

780.9 Music—History and criticism

[52-3936]

"Balanced, cultivated British author undertakes the hazardous attempt to 'present a coherent continuous account of what has happened in creative musical thought since about 1850.' He speaks in a direct, assured way to the knowing layman (who already understands the meaning of 'atonality,' 'recapitulation,' etc.) with the aim of explaining how contemporary music arose, not how to enjoy it." Library J

"[The author] avoids the fairly common error of judging the fruits of one school by the aims of another, presents his case with perspective and sanity, takes a constructive position throughout, and reports both past and contemporary criticism of composers and their major works. This is the most useful essay of its kind." C. K. Miller

+ Library J 77:1813 O 15 '52 120w

"Mr Culshaw's book is a refreshing sign of the way of the wind." Neville Cardus

+ Manchester Guardian p3 N 15 '52 390w

"At first glance 'A Century of Music' seems to present little more than a descriptive, though stimulating, study of the endeavor and achievement of the numerous compositional schools of our period. But in totality the book brings home to the understanding reader the innermost idea underlying the creative happenings of our time." Rudolph Reti

+ Sat R 35:36 O 25 '52 300w

CUMBERLAND, MARTEN. Fade out the stars. 189p $2.50 Doubleday

52-10050

Detective story.

"Keenly presented exploit of this engaging French sleuth." Drexel Drake

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 S 7 '52 50w

Kirkus 20:387 J1 1 '52 70w

"The case is conducted in a curious patter made from English designed to sound translated from the French and in unlikely scraps of American lingo. Mr. Cumberland invokes all of the judicial machinery he has established in earlier novels but nothing he does with them here makes this particular tale much of an evening's diversion." James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 S 14 '52 110w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p11 Ag 31 '52 30w

"Even if breathless suspense is sacrificed, Dax's unfurried attitude gives a peculiar charm to these 'romans policiers.'" L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 S 7 '52 40w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 35:38 S 20 '52 20w

CUMBERLAND, MARTEN. Grave consequences. 186p $2.50 Doubleday

52-5110

Detective story.

Bookmark 11:109 F '52

Kirkus 19:649 N 1 '51 50w

"Having found most of its predecessors conscientious but unwieldy it is agreeable to report that 'Grave Consequences' is the liveliest of the cases of Commissaire Saturnin Dax, deliberate still but teasing and nicely fleshed with incident." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ja 20 '52 130w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p20 Ja 13 '52 110w

"Brigadier Felix Norman is as delightful as ever, and so is the easy Cumberland style." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ja 27 '52 70w

"Plodding." Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 35:46 F 9 '52 30w

CUNNINGHAM, ALBERT BENJAMIN. Legacy for our sons, by Garth Hale [pseud]. 319p $3 Dutton

52-5291

"This follows Harrison [Day's] rise as a railroad; his marriage to Helen Brice and attainment of the 'good life' as they move into a more substantial home and sphere, anticipate college for their children, Barny and June. Controls hamper and harm them in their rental of a small cottage on their property; inflation devaluates the war bonds they have bought; the sale he makes of a small patent is taxed away to nothing; and Barny, his son, reflects the new attitudes of labor (even to the point of Communist influence and infiltration) and is involved in an act of sabotage against the railroad while Harrison, speaking his mind, loses his job as the government moves to take over the road." Kirkus

"The not so still, small voice of reaction, and the medium here lends no particular conviction to the protest."

Kirkus 19:709 D 15 '51 180w

"A well-written story with strong character study, but somewhat weakened as a novel by the occasional interludes of American economic history—factual chapters which by themselves would make an excellent summary of twenty years' steady trend toward socialism. Recommended." L. R. Miller

+ Library J 77:143 Ja 15 '52 190w

"The theme of 'Legacy For Our Sons' might have been most interesting as the tale of a typical nineteenth-century American business mind trying vainly to operate in the twentieth century. Unfortunately, the author, Garth Hale, has neglected his story and failed to use his obvious narrative skill, preferring to preach." E. L. Acken

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 F 24 '52 420w

"In much of 'Legacy for Our Sons' the plotting is as contrived as sin. Such dramatic impact as the book possesses stems from two main factors: the intense humanity—both in its good and evil aspects—with which the author has been able to infuse his characters, and the convincing way in which he has succeeded in portraying sociological transition." Henry Cavendish

N Y Times p25 Mr 2 '52 470w

Reviewed by E. J. Fitzgerald

Sat R 35:33 Ap 5 '52 180w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn

—Springfd Republican p10D Ap 6 '52 180w

CUNNINGHAM, ALBERT BENJAMIN. Strange return. 223p $2.50 Dutton

52-5299

Detective story.

Kirkus 20:16 Ja 1 '52 80w

"Cunningham writes from a rich and rather special knowledge of his remote American scene and its people. But too much of the time his prose moves between the suffused-descriptive and dialogue sorted from the cheaper journealese, as if his characters used headlines as their primers. He has written some much better books than this one."

James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Mr 30 '52 140w

"The plot offers Cunningham fine opportunities to make his invented territory more real than ever, with solid sketches of mountain people, memorable action scenes on the river, and an admirably chilling section on mountain folklore and superstition." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p27 Mr 23 '52 150w

"No other mysteries are quite like the Cunningham ones—nor, for that matter, is there another sleuth like backwoods Jess Roden. This has a fine Southern river flood as an opening scene. . . The solution is simple but inevitable, the narration unaffected as always."

L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 Mr 23 '52 80w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 35:36 Ap 5 '52 30w

"The background and characters are as excellent as usual in a Roden adventure, but the plot is very weak." R. F. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p10D Ap 6 '52 80w

CUNNINGHAM, JAMES VINCENT. Woe or wonder; the emotional effect of Shakespearean tragedy. (Books of the renaissance) 136p $2.50 Swallow, A.

822.33 Shakespeare, William—Criticism and interpretation 51-14759

"The classical intent of tragedy, it is said, was to induce the emotions of fear and pity in the spectators, but the Elizabethans had different words for it. . . In this useful little book, Professor Cunningham tries by quotation and paraphrase of the critics, dramatists, and rhetoricians from Aristotle to Sidney to discover the precise meanings of crucial terms in succeeding generations, and asks the pertinent question whether fear can be equated with wonder, and pity with woe." (U S Quarterly Bk R) No index.

"Recommended only for the largest Shakespeare collections." George Freedley

Library J 77:362 F 15 '52 20w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:23 Mr '52 190w

CURETON, THOMAS KIRK, and others. Physical fitness of champion athletes. 458p il $10 Univ. of Ill. press

796.4 Physical education and training. Anthropometry 51-14814

"A scientific study by Physical Fitness Research Laboratory, University of Illinois, to determine in what respects champion athletes vary from other athletes, how athletes in various types of sports differ, unusual characteristics, and physical requirements for particular events. Exhaustive experiments comparing champions in various fields. Conclusions and recommendations on each." Library J

"This is a valuable book for those scientifically interested in physical fitness. It should be a valuable reference book in departments of physical education in colleges and universities." G. T. Blydenburgh

+ Am J Pub Health 42:463 Ap '52 320w

"Important for reference libraries." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 77:440 Mr 1 '52 70w

"Students of human physiology or physical education will find this book almost indispensable as a source and reference work. In it are to be found details of innumerable observations, and an evaluation of their usefulness for judging physical fitness; in this respect, the book seems to lack nothing."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:30 Mr '52 260w

CURME, GEORGE OLIVER, and JOHNSTON, FRANKLIN, eds. Glycols; contributing authors: A. B. Boese, Jr [and others]. 389p $12 Reinhold

547.2 [547.3] Glycols 52-6112

"This book makes available to chemists a thorough treatment of glycols and their derivatives. The approximately 2000 references cited by the contributing authors, who are on the staff of the Carbide and Carbon Chemicals Co., attest to the comprehensive nature of their survey of the field." Chem & Eng N

"This monograph is an excellent review of technical information on the glycols. It contains considerable unpublished data derived from industrial laboratories. Unfortunately, but perhaps unavoidably, theoretical considerations received scant attention. However, this book should prove to be an extremely useful reference for industrial chemists engaged in such widely divergent fields as textiles, surface coatings, cosmetics, petroleum, and many others." Lloyd Osipow

+ Chem & Eng N 30:3976 S 22 '52 170w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 77:1515 S 15 '52 120w

N Y New Tech Bks 37:71 S '52

CURRIER AND IVES. Currier and Ives' America; ed. by Colin Simkin; a panorama of the mid-nineteenth century scene; eighty prints in full color; with an introd. and commentary by the editor [designed and produced under the direction of George Hornby]. $10 Crown

763 Lithographs 52-10768

This volume contains 80 large size reproductions of Currier and Ives prints, showing various aspects of American life in the mid-nineteenth century. There is an introduction by the editor, telling how the prints were made, and where and how they were sold. Size of plates 12 by 16 inches.

Reviewed by Edward Barry

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p21 N 9 '52 240w

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut

Library J 78:59 Ja 1 '53 140w

"Of all the revival services that have been conducted to make the last century live again, none has a more evocative charm than this."

J. K. Hutchens

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 D 7 '52 250w

"Mr. Simkin, a scholarly collector, has prepared an admirable, hard-headed introduction. . . Perhaps he goes too far in his caution when he ascribes to the prints no more than 'a certain decorative quality'—some, certainly, have the true charm of first-class popular art. Yet it is a relief to read an essay on these beloved symbols which does not imply that modern painters, whose pictures fail to resemble Currier and Ives, are unpatriotic and quite possibly subversive. Anyone who wishes to have, at a small price per print, a large collection of Currier and Ives should find this volume much to his taste." J. T. Flexner

+ N Y Times p22 N 23 '52 440w

"One of the handsomest of the numerous modern works on the famous nineteenth-century printmakers. . . The introduction, unfortunately, is a trifle cursory, and the attempt to arrange the prints so as to give a historical view of the life of the times falls a little short of the panoramic. But that hardly matters."

+ New Yorker 28:192 N 15 '52 60w

"The introduction comes under the heading of once over lightly, but [is] accurate, informative and well written." Alfred Frankenstein

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 N 2 '52 200w

Reviewed by Robert Halsband

Sat R 35:17 D 13 '52 50w

CURRY, MANFRED. Clouds, wind and water [photographs]. 100p $10 Scribner

779 Photographic books [52-29176]

"A beautiful quarto of photographs of the sea in many aspects, in a variety of weather conditions and cloud formations, with 18 pages of text on clouds and wind, and their effect on waves." Library J

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson
Library J 77:440 Mr 1 '52 30w

Reviewed by Tom Hopkinson
New Statesman & Nation 43:74 Ja 19 '52 180w

CUSACK, ELLEN DYMPHNA. Sun in my hands [Eng title: Say no to death]. 309p $3.50 Morrow

52-5058

A novel of Australia. Bart, just returned from the war, found himself falling in love with beautiful Jan, with whom he had had an affair. When tuberculosis struck Jan, it brought out the best in the cynical soldier, and after their marriage he struggled to help her regain her health. The lack of adequate hospitals in Australia contributed to the tragic ending.

Booklist 48:196 F 15 '52

Reviewed by Riley Hughes
Cath World 174:472 Mr '52 120w

"While there may be little literary virtue here, this—in its portrayal of the long travail of illness and the selfless devotion it elicits, is direct and touching in its emotional impact."

+ Kirkus 19:666 N 15 '51 200w

"While well-written in spots, with interesting local background, the book as a whole is over-sentimental and amateurish." Donald Wasson

Library J 77:48 Ja 1 '52 100w

"A touchingly human novel of personal suffering endured and difficult problems faced with fortitude. . . Miss Cusack's writing style is as serviceable, say, as a good pair of rubbers on a rainy day. The Australian idiom lends the novel an accidental piquancy to American ears, and its liberal and vivid reporting of life in the Australian capital and environs heightens its interest." F. H. Bullock

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 Ja 27 '52 460w

"In writing this novel, with its vivid scenic effects, careful dialogue, well-tailored plot and smooth sequences Dymphna Cusack has employed all her playwright's skill. She has created a number of attractive, likable characters, given them a tragic dilemma and moved them inexorably to a fine dramatic conclusion. The whole competent romance still seems, none the less, to call for a stage where the actors can be seen to be believed." Isabelle Mallet

+ — N Y Times p24 Ja 27 '52 310w

"Undeniably, she has a delicate sense of perception but she fails to give her novel variety or substance." J. V.

San Francisco Chronicle p24 F 17 '52 100w

"Except for occasional moments of sentimentality Miss Cusack writes with a clean, simple tenderness of the lives of human beings whose hopes center desperately around a fever chart and X-rays; with anger against the greed and inhumanity of private health institutions and with bitterness on the inadequacy of public care for those with little or no means. There are times, indeed, when Jan's story becomes a plea for the awakening of Australia's public conscience." R. C. Feld

Sat R 35:16 Mr 1 '52 420w

Springf'd Republican p10D Ap 6 '52 70w

CUSS, THEODORE PATRICK CAMERER. Story of watches. 172p il $7.50 Philosophical lib.

681.1 Clocks and watches 52-11321

"T. P. Camerer Cuss is the head of the London watch-making firm of that name, founded in 1788. In a simple style aided by abundant illustrations, he tells the story of the watch from its origin in the portable clocks of the fifteenth century down to the factory-made watch of to-day, tracing its development in all its aspects." (Publisher's note) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 77:1516 S 15 '52 30w
N Y New Tech Bks 37:69 S '52

"Mr. Cuss is philosophical about time, and some of his most interesting passages are on the human concept of it. He explains that the principal components of a watch are the escapement, the mainspring, and the motion work, and that 'to tell the story of their development is to explain them.' This turns out to be true only if you pay strict attention to Teacher, for the going gets a bit technical, but if you do pay attention, you will end with a new appreciation of the beauty of fine mechanics."

+ New Yorker 28:120 S 6 '52 140w

"The book is a valuable contribution to the slim collection of printed material on watches. . . Technical information is notable for its lucid presentation. A brief bibliography and an index make this unique book an extremely useful reference volume."

+ Special Libraries 43:418 D '52 90w
Times [London] Lit Sup p471 J1 18 '52 200w

CUSSLER, MARGARET. Not by a long shot; adventures of a documentary film producer [il. by Mary L. de Give]. (Banner bk) 200p $3 Exposition

792.93 [791.4] Moving pictures 51-11838

An account of the making of documentary films. "Whether it was a community survey of Bath, North Carolina, or an interpretation of the Rochester Public Library, the author and Mary L. de Give, researcher and photographer, blithely undertook new projects which resulted in unique achievements. Photographs." (Bookmark)

Booklist 48:80 N 1 '51

Bookmark 11:80 Ja '52 40w

"A personal memoir, which often turns an apt, amusing phrase."

+ Kirkus 19:592 O 1 '51 150w

"This is an extremely effective account. . . Well illustrated, it is an important addition to the literature on the subject. Recommended for cinema, theatre and readers' advisory services." George Freedley

+ Library J 76:1809 N 1 '51 30w

CUSSLER, MARGARET, and DE GIVE, MARY L. 'Twixt the cup and the lip; psychological and socio-cultural factors affecting food habits. 262p il $3.95 Twayne

394 Food 52-11550

Report on the investigations of two women sociologists on the eating habits of three Southern communities, one each in North Carolina, South Carolina, and Georgia. They discovered thru questionnaires that foodways and folkways were responsive to social status, income, occupation, race, etc. Tables. Index.

"The book appears to be well documented with empirical data and shows good workmanship, although in spots it becomes rather dull reading. There are excellent pictures and the field techniques and methods of analysis are easy to follow. It may perhaps be regarded as a suggested model for similar studies in other areas." L. W. Simmons

+ — Ann Am Acad 284:200 N '52 350w

Booklist 49:4 S 1 '52

Reviewed by D. S. Moschette
J Home Econ 44:735 N '52 200w

CUSTANCE, JOHN, pseud. Wisdom, madness, and folly; the philosophy of a lunatic; with a pref. by C. G. Jung; with a foreword by L. W. Grensted. 254p $3.75 Pellegrini & Cudahy

616.89 Manic-depressive psychoses 52-8340

"This book is an original document for psychiatry on the manic-depressive state, written by an 'ex-lunatic,' that is, by one who was a patient in a mental hospital." Library J

"The results of the Szondi and Rorschach tests make this valuable to professionals in the institutional and psychological fields, and to general readers with sufficient background and interest."

+ Kirkus 20:394 J1 1 '52 240w

"The book can have no practical value for public libraries for it is highly metaphysical, has peculiar (to the layman) sex fantasy, has very deep self-criticism probably beyond the grasp of the nontechnical reader, and may not prove interesting to the majority of public-library readers. This autobiography does have clarity of literary expression, reflects generalized education, wide reading and deep thought, but does not have the general interest of Beers' 1908 classic, A Mind That Found Itself." J. M. Scherr

Library J 77:1300 Ag '52 90w

"It is a curious experience to read a book by a man sane enough to write sometimes with great lucidity yet deranged enough to indulge at other times in what sounds to a 'normal' reader very much like gibberish. Impressive as a case history and sometimes interesting for flashes of what looks like genuine originality of thought."

Nation 175:179 Ag 30 '52 220w

"The general reader will be most interested in the many incidental discoveries he made during his manic periods. . . He has come back safe from the most perilous trip of all, and he has a travel tale to tell that will rank with the best." Gerald Sykes

N Y Times p7 S 7 '52 550w

"Custance holds the attention even though the writing is not always as smooth as it could be; he does, however, present a unique account, written with erudition. The result is fascinating, especially because it was largely written during periods of confinement. It will be of great interest to psychiatrists, psychologists and persons interested in 'The Philosophy of a Lunatic.'" S. R. A.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p27 S 14 '52 230w

CUTHRELL, FAITH (BALDWIN). See Baldwin, F.

CUTTS, NORMA ESTELLE, and MOSELEY, NICHOLAS. Better home discipline. 314p $3.50 Appleton

649.1 Children—Management 52-10224

"More than 6,000 families shared with the authors their experiences in dealing with problems of child rearing. Parents reported on their offsprings' misbehavior, what they did about it, with what effect. Youngsters likewise helped the psychologists by confessing their most recent misdeeds, their parents' reaction, and the result." (Chicago Sunday Tribune) Index.

Reviewed by F. D. Heron

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Je 29 '52 50w

"Any parent would learn something from this practical guide, which is based on more than six thousand individual reports. . . The author's many specific recommendations are of a most useful sort." J. E. Skillin

+ Commonweal 56:420 Ag 1 '52 160w

"An object lesson which most mothers and fathers should find of real value, as against the many more theoretical texts."

+ Kirkus 20:251 Ap 1 '52 420w

San Francisco Chronicle p20 J1 20 '52 110w

School & Society 76:31 J1 12 '52 20w

CZAPSKI, JOZEF. Inhuman land; foreword by Daniel Halévy; introd. by Edward Crankshaw; tr. from the French by Gerard Hopkins. 301p il $3.50 Sheed

940.547 World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, Polish. World war, 1939-1945—Prisoners and prisons, Russian 52-8896

"Mr. Czapski, an artist in civilian life, left his Paris studio and hurried to join the Polish Army as Hitler prepared to launch the attack that began World War II. He was among the thousands who were placed in Russian prison camps after the combined Nazi-Communist onslaught broke the Polish defenses. His book deals with the period that began when Hitler tore up his 'friendship' pact with Stalin and the German troops invaded Russia." Springfield Republican

"In his Christian forbearance Joseph Czapski seldom yields to bitterness. Whether he is telling of gestures of sympathy for Polish prisoners on the part of Russian people or describing the Russian countryside, he does it with artistic objectivity. The climax of his sad narrative is of a positive sort: the joy that transported a prison camp for Poles when a pianist led them for hours in their native songs." E. S. Skillin

+ Commonweal 56:205 My 30 '52 190w

Reviewed by Marcus Duffield

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Je 29 '52 400w

Reviewed by Mikhail Koriakov

N Y Times p7 Je 1 '52 850w

"Probably because he is an artist, Mr. Czapski has a remarkably keen eye for color and tone, and interspersed through his book are occasional paragraphs describing the land and the people in exceptionally graphic style." H. H.

+ Springfield Republican p10C My 4 '52 450w

D

D'AGOSTINO, GUIDO. Barking of a lonely fox. 274p $3 McGraw

52-5344

"Essentially the story of conflict between man and the land in Pennsylvania farm country, this is also the tale of the different means of working the land. One man works with his heart while another uses his money to make a thing of beauty out of farm land. This is also a story of love, and as with the land, one love came completely endowed while the other had to be pursued to develop." Library J

Booklist 48:321 Je 1 '52

"A strong, absorbing novel told with shrewd insight."

+ Bookmark 11:210 Je '52 30w

Reviewed by Edmund Fuller

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 J1 13 '52 330w

"A blunt, harsh, holding portrayal of husbandry—both animal and domestic, of a way of life which is hard and slow to succeed, of bitter feeling—and broken power, which mirrors the instinctual pattern of the outdoor world."

Kirkus 20:197 Mr 15 '52 200w

"The writing is good although it lacks some of the force that is necessary to make the plot live. The resolutions of the problems are too pat and neat to be real." H. L. Roth

+ Library J 77:790 My 1 '52 100w

"A good story told without irritating tricks of style or structure, people who come to life, people who are good to read about though far from saints they know the rewards of life are worth the struggle—all these old-fashioned virtues 'The Barking of a Lonely Fox' has. Yet it is not itself old-fashioned. It has a modern rhythm. . . The book's faults

D'AGOSTINO, GUIDO—Continued

are not important—an occasional unnatural formality in the dialogue, a slight tinge of unconvincingness in the problem Julian has to face." Bradford Smith

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 My 4 '52
500w

"Guido d'Agostino writes with sympathy about the lives of his non-traditional farmers. It's the wealthy O'Malleys who do not come off. Lucille O'Malley, who is charming in the early pages, becomes unbelievable later on." W. M. Teller

N Y Times p14 Je 1 '52 300w

"Here is a sound book in an established, and recently much neglected, tradition which won't set you dancing in the streets but should provide a number of hours of quiet enjoyment and satisfaction." E. J. Fitzgerald

+ Sat R 35:21 J1 5 '52 170w

DAHL, ROBERT ALAN, and BROWN, RALPH SHARP. Domestic control of atomic energy. 117p pa $1 Social science res. council 539.76 Atomic energy

"A study, exploratory in nature, briefly surveying the numerous, and for the most part ignored, areas of profitable research available in the field of atomic energy and their implications for the social scientist." Am Pol Sci R

Am Pol Sci R 46:582 Je '52 20w

Reviewed by V. H. Whitney

Am Soc R 17:112 F '52 550w

"This pamphlet, which is really a small book, will give background for useful thinking not only among the social scientists but among that great group of interested laymen who are interested, for instance, in the 'effects of secrecy on the democratic process.' As a case study of an outstanding example of increasing complexity of government, the pamphlet is and will remain a fruitful source of ideas." S. T. Pike

+ Ann Am Acad 279:195 Ja '52 450w

"The greatest value of the book lies in its explanation of what the commissioners have had to face—particularly during the Lillenthal-Wilson period. The differing points of view are impartially set forth and well documented by a useful listing of references." P. N. Powers

+ Chem & Eng N 30:457 F 4 '52 90w

DAICHES, DAVID, ed. Century of the essay, British and American. 500p $3; text ed $2.25 Harcourt

824.08

52-148

"Thirty-eight modern essays, both English and American, with an introduction on the recent decline of this form in popular esteem. In Mr. Daiches' opinion, this decline, especially in America, can be attributed not to the failings of the essay itself but to the gradual disappearance of the layman, whom he defines as the non-specialist, or man of wide and general curiosity." New Yorker

Booklist 49:29 S 15 '52

Reviewed by Ruth Chapin

Christian Science Monitor p5 D 24 '52
550w

"Public libraries will want this attractive five-hundred page volume to tempt, and having tempted to educate entertainingly the casual reader." J. F. Davidson

+ Churchman 167:17 Ja 1 '53 140w

Reviewed by Rudd Fleming

+ New Repub 127:21 S 15 '52 320w

Reviewed by J. T. Winterich

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p36 O 12 '52 80w

"A book that is as attractive physically as its contents are editorially." David Dempsey

+ N Y Times p43 O 5 '52 270w

"All of [the essays] come up very easily indeed to the standard set for conversation by Samuel Johnson, which Mr. Daiches feels applies equally well to the essay—that of propounding an idea, or a set of them, 'forcefully in the language of educated men, not gracelessly and hermetically in the language of technical experts.'" New Yorker 28:131 S 20 '52 200w

DAL FABBRO, MARIO. See Fabbro, M. dal

DALGLIESH, ALICE. Bears on Hemlock mountain; il. by Helen Sewell. [64p] $2 Scribner

52-11023

Tells what happened to Jonathan, aged eight, when he was sent over Hemlock mountain to borrow a large iron kettle from an aunt who lived "over the mountain." For ages four to eight.

Booklist 49:19 S 1 '52

"Small boys and girls still being read to or just beginning to read to themselves will love this rhythmically told tall tale of Jonathan's adventures." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ag 31 '52
120w

"A well-loved author and a noted illustrator combine to make a book as charming as it is distinguished." Elizabeth Yates

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Ag 14 '52
170w

Commonweal 57:170 N 21 '52 30w

"A story that will delight children because of its lively writing as well as its element of suspense." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 28:99 Ap '52 90w

Horn Bk 28:238 Ag '52 70w

Kirkus 20:404 J1 15 '52 150w

Reviewed by Claire Nolte

+ Library J 77:1410 S 1 '52 50w

"Jonathan's adventure is a tall tale passed down in Pennsylvania, which might have happened to a pioneer boy almost anywhere. Full of suspense and humor, it will make good reading aloud for small boys of today, certainly for those who already love the shivers provoked by television." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 J1 20 '52
220w

"Children will want to play 'going over Hemlock Mountain' every time they have a chance. This will be a popular book." Irene Smith

+ N Y Times p16 J1 20 '52 160w

New Yorker 28:197 D 6 '52 50w

"An excellently written small child's 'tall tale.'" San Francisco Chronicle p19 N 30 52

30w

"There is a rhythmic repetition in the story's wording that will delight the children when it is read aloud. Helen Sewell's drawings, printed in a deep blue and black, are strong and realistic and lovely in design."

+ Sat R 35:38 Ag 16 '52 60w

Wis Lib Bul 48:217 S '52

DALY, MAUREEN. What's your P.Q. (personality quotient)? il. by Eleanor Simmons. 244p $2.50 Dodd

395 Etiquet. Girls

52-8693

Advice for teen-agers, in question and answer form, based on letters received by the author as Sub-deb editor of the Ladies' Home Journal. Partial contents: Do girls like you? How to be big-girl pretty—and look it! Ten ways to get a date; Fun for two; Why be jealous? Families are fun; Do boys like you? Gifts to give; You and party planning.

Booklist 48:282 My 1 '52

"Recommended." Nellie McCalla

+ Library J 77:800 My 1 '52 70w

DANGERFIELD, GEORGE. Era of good feeling. 525p $6 Harcourt

973.5 U.S.—Politics and government. U.S.—History—1815-1865

51-14815

"This book is essentially a description of some of the personalities and experiences, American and European, which assisted in or were necessary to the political transition from Jeffersonian democracy to Jacksonian democracy: from the great dictum that central government is best when it governs least to the great dictum that central government must sometimes intervene strongly in behalf of the weak and the oppressed and the exploited." (Foreword) Bibliography. Index.

"Criticisms of this book can only be minor ones; the description of the abortive Monroe-Pinckney treaty (incidentally given the wrong date) as 'a thoroughly bad one' is undoubtedly sweeping, while on the technical side the unfortunate arrangement of footnotes makes a quick reference difficult. For the rest there is only praise: fine writing, wit, and understanding are contained in these dramatic and delightful pages." W. A. Barker

+ Am Hist R 57:987 J1 '52 650w

Reviewed by W. E. Binkley
Ann Am Acad 281:210 My '52 460w
Booklist 48:137; 157 D 15 '51; Ja 1 '52

"Eminently readable, scholarly."
+ Bookmark 11:104 F '52 30w

Reviewed by C. P. Nettels
Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Ja 13 '52 420w

Reviewed by Denham Sutcliffe
Christian Science Monitor p7 Ja 17 '52 750w

"The volume is objective, carefully documented, and very well organized." W. P. Sears
+ Churchman 166:13 Ja 15 '52 150w

"Though the writing of history has never been and never will be reduced to a science, despite the belligerent hopes of unimaginative men, it has on occasion been disguised as an art, and seldom more successfully than by George Dangerfield, whose study of the Era of Good Feelings is as delightful as it is profound." Wayne Andrews

+ Commonweal 55:330 Ja 4 '52 900w
Kirkus 19:669 N 15 '51 270w

"A scholarly work that is still good reading. Recommended." H. L. Roth
+ Library J 77:45 Ja 1 '52 140w

Nation 175:116 Ag 9 '52 120w

Reviewed by Richard Hofstadter
New Repub 126:18 Mr 10 '52 1400w

"The chief criticism of this book is that it belies its name. Its first hundred pages have little to do with the Era of Good Feelings, and the last hundred have still less. Nobody could possibly describe the period of John Quincy Adams's Presidency as having anything to do with good feeling, or even political decency. In addition, the organization of the book, in its departure from chronology as regards the period prior to 1817, seems to have little to be said for it. But these are minor matters. It is a substantial achievement to write as well as Mr. Dangerfield writes, and his interest in human personality and the social scene alike give warmth to his pages." Dexter Perkins

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ja 6 '52 600w

Reviewed by H. F. Graff
N Y Times p3 Ja 6 '52 750w

"It is an agile piece of historical writing—witty, selective, and illuminating."
+ New Yorker 27:111 F 16 '52 180w

"Despite the book's lack of genuine freshness and originality, it still remains a fine piece of work. Mr. Dangerfield provides an excellent introduction to the period. He writes in a style highly reminiscent of another Englishman, George Otto Trevelyan, who described so unforgettably the American Revolution." Chilton Williamson

+ Pol Sci Q 67:290 Je '52 550w

"George Dangerfield writes with gusto, sense, and authority. His agreeable, eloquent book is full of people, conflicts, ideas, and color. It is a learned book, and witty and skilful; on every page it is thoughtful, clever, and original. If the total impression is somewhat less original, the fault lies with the material, not the writer." J. H. Powell

+ Sat R 35:15 Ja 12 '52 650w

"This is an excellent book: the style is superb, the facts are here, and the interpretations are sound. The book throws new and fresh light on an important transitional period in our history." F. M. Green

+ Social Forces 31:175 D '52 750w

"The book is especially penetrating in the account of that difficult figure, John Quincy Adams, who had the honesty to enter in his diary his own accurate statement of his personal shortcomings."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:154 Je '52 220w
Wis Lib Bul 48:32 Ja '52

DANIEL, HAWTHORNE. Judge Medina. 373p
$4 Funk, W.

B or 92 Medina, Harold Raymond 52-9783

An authorized biography of Judge Harold Medina. It discusses his youth and education, his marriage, and his early years as a teacher of law, and then gives a detailed account of the famous trial of the eleven Communists in 1949. Index.

Booklist 49:30 S 15 '52

Bookmark 12:5 O '52 30w

Reviewed by H. C. Havighurst
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ag 17 '52 220w

"Mr. Daniel, with a careful study of the judge both before and during the trial, provides the reader with a great service. We find, in this excellent biography, that the judge by nature is garrulous, sometimes impetuous and sharp-tongued, and always bordering on the impatient. Many realized that the trial of the Communists was also a trial for Judge Medina, but against the character backdrop supplied by the author, we can see that it was a far greater test than we thought. Yes, he was patient—but it was something more like self-restraint. And it was something even more significant than that, as the book brings out." Godfrey Sperling
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 21 '52 1100w

"Mr. Daniel has written his biography of Judge Medina simply and directly. It is, according to the jacket, 'authorized' by its subject, and has a good deal more substance than most works written about living men. . . 'Judge Medina' is a sound and thorough introduction to a man whose impact on American jurisprudence is, one may assume, just beginning to be felt." H. W. Baehr
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ag 17 '52 700w

"Undoubtedly the reader's main interest is to know something of the background of the man who toiled and struggled through the abuses and complexities of the Communist trials. This Mr. Daniel has done admirably. In a combination of Who's Who sketch and a New Yorker Profile, he has managed to get across to the reader a fairly sharp portrait of the judge in the making." Rudolph Halley
+ N Y Times p3 Ag 17 '52 650w

"About a third of this biography—by far its most worth-while part—is devoted to a running account of the 1949 trial of eleven members of the national board of the Communist Party in this country. . . In dealing with Judge Medina's earlier life, though . . . Mr. Daniel uses a Ralph Henry Barbour approach, with the result that the judge's very substantial achievements tend to sound like those of a prep-school hero."
+ New Yorker 28:87 Ag 23 '52 140w

"Judge Medina's conduct of the trial is well-known, as is the rigorous course of personal health-saving measures he imposed upon himself. But his background, his training, and the rest of the story of this unusual man who brought so much honor to American justice are not so well known. Mr. Daniel's biography is welcome for that reason and because it is a well written story, admirably paced and carefully prepared." C. W. Weinberger
+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 Ag 19 '52 800w

Reviewed by J. C. Cairns
Sat R 35:42 O 25 '52 180w

DANIELS, BEBE (MRS BEN LYON), and ALLGOOD, JILL, comps. Complete book of salads [Eng title: 282 ways of making a salad]. 206p il $2.95 Prentice-Hall

641.83 Salads 52-10143

Recipes for favorite salads collected from well-known American and English stars and personalities. The author is the American movie star who now lives in England, and Jill Allgood is an English radio writer and producer. Index.

Reviewed by Charlotte Turgeon
N Y Times p10 Je 29 '52 60w

"A first-rate job. An extra mark should go to the designer who has made an unusually attractive book of this simply by knowing how to use type."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 Je 1 '52 60w

"The printing is easily read from shelf distance even by the bifocal afflicted, and the paper is a joy to touch, smooth and silky. The illustrations are cleverly drawn and all too few." A. S. R.

+ Springfield'd Republican p5D J1 20 '52 200w

DANIELS, WALTER MACHRAY, ed. Point four program. (Reference shelf) 207p $1.75 Wilson, H.W.

338.9 Industrialization. International co-operation 52-278

"The program of financial and technical assistance to underdeveloped areas, proposed in President Truman's inaugural address of 1949, is examined here in all its implications. Various shades of opinion on this plan for 'self-help' are voiced, from enthusiastic supporters who feel this is an opportunity to raise the world's standard of living, to severe critics who believe we are merely dissipating our resources. There is a section which deals with the progress already made under Point Four and another which considers the possible ultimate results, both in relation to our own economy and to the institutions, political character and way of life of the areas it is designed to aid." (Current Hist) Bibliography.

Booklist 48:198 F 15 '52

Current Hist 22:230 Ap '52 120w

DANNER, SARA KOLB. Gallery tour. 58p col il $5 Stanford univ. press

811 52-5971

"If one were not told that the painting and the poetry in this handsome volume were by the same artist, one might well arrive at that conclusion anyway. The poetry has the same strong color and line, the same representational detail as the oil painting. It is art native to California, done in a rather conventional objective style, but full of exceptional observation." San Francisco Chronicle

"The poetry is a little uneven. For a moment now and then in long poems such as 'California Quail,' it almost degenerates into doggerel, a partial victim of too many rhymes too close together. Mrs. Danner's sonnets are perhaps the best things in the book. On the other hand, the excellent and somewhat freer verse of 'Small Sons' makes one wish she had (as both poet and painter) worked with a freer hand." Lawrence Ferling

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 Mr 9 '52 120w

"Despite its elaborate format (for a book of poems) it is neither pretentious nor overdone. Mrs. Danner is a recognized artist and the four paintings here reproduced are exceedingly attractive and colorful. Her eye for color, her quick observation, and her feeling for the significant detail naturally carry over into her poems." S. H. Hay

+ Sat R 35:43 Je 21 '52 200w

DANZIG, ALLISON, and BRANDWEIN, PETER, eds. Greatest sport stories from the New York times; sport classics of a century. 680p il $4.95 Barnes, A.S.

796 Sports 51-14836

A collection of eyewitness reports of classic events in sports from 1851 to 1951. All are from the New York Times; arrangement is chronological. Photographs. Index.

Booklist 48:156 Ja 1 '52

"Accurate [and] expertly written."

+ Bookmark 11:80 Ja '52 20w

"All the great sports events of the century are included, right up to the Cleveland Browns' fifth title and Ben Hogan's comeback. If you like sports you can't go wrong." Robert Cromie

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Ja 13 '52 320w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 76:1812 N 1 '51 40w

"It's a fair bet that whatever your sport you will find your story. For the all-round sports-minded reader, the book can be read, with complete pleasure and even fascination, from beginning to end... This expert and engaging volume, this hilarious and moving history, has my respect, and I am pretty sure it will continue to merit it." Wilbur Watson

+ N Y Times p20 D 9 '51 700w

"A real album of memories for the sports enthusiast... The importance and diversity of the incidents recorded, however, make up for much of the stylistic heaviness."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:167 Je '52 230w

DARINGER, HELEN FERN. Stepsister Sally; il. by Garrett Price. 182p $2.25 Harcourt 52-7083

Story for grades five to eight about Sally's adjustment to life with a stepmother who had three children of her own. The two boys were no problem to sensible little Sally, but her stepsister Dorothy was another matter.

Booklist 48:217 Mr 1 '52

Bookmark 11:134 Mr '52

"The Cinderella theme is a perennial favorite with young and old, and this sympathetically told story of a modern little stepsister who makes good is sure to find friends among girls of 8 to 12." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 F' 24 '52 200w

Reviewed by Ruth Wales

Christian Science Monitor p10 My 15 '52 40w

Horn Bk 28:104 Ap '52 100w

Kirkus 20:125 F 15 '52 120w

"Will be popular with girls from 9-12 years. Recommended." Virginia Russell

+ Library J 77:539 Mr 15 '52 70w

"This is a delightful story for girls under twelve, with real family problems, lively school scenes, and true discernment as to the feelings of a growing girl." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Mr 16 '52 140w

"Likable Sally and her lively doings will appeal especially to girls in the upper elementary grades." Elizabeth Hodges

+ N Y Times p26 Mr 2 '52 180w

Wis Lib Bul 48:176 J1 '52

DAUGHERTY, EDGAR FAY. Hoosier parson; his boosts and bumps (an apologia pro mea vita). 224p $2.50 Meador

B or 92 Clergy—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 51-7594

"Edgar Fay Daugherty, who [here] tells the story of his life, is a clergyman who definitely has found life good. On the order of most autobiographies, he tells in detail of his boyhood, school and university days, following with his early and later pastorates in California and Indiana. Chapters are devoted to his two hobbies, fishing and hunting, pursuit of which has taken him to various parts of the country. Also included are some addresses he has delivered on important occasions." Springfield Republican

"Daugherty's own story reveals him as a very unconventional parson. My own long acquaintance with him certifies to his gifts for friendship, helpfulness and courage. The record as he tells it is frank, informal, hilarious in spots, and as modest as need be." W. E. G. + Christian Century 69:466 Ap 16 '52 70w

Reviewed by O. J. Aldrich
Springfield Republican p6D Ja 13 '52 170w

DAUGHERTY, JAMES HENRY. Trappers and traders of the far West; il. by [the author]. (Landmark bks) 181p $1.50 Random house

979 West—Discovery and exploration—Juvenile literature. Fur trade 52-7230

The saga of the men who blazed the trail to the Pacific and made way for John Jacob Astor and his fur empire. For fifth grade and older.

Booklist 49:160 Ja 1 '53

Reviewed by C. I. Judson
Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 N 16 '52 90w

"Here is exciting reporting with a sharp historical perspective."

+ Kirkus 20:457 Ag 1 '52 160w

"Recommended for fifth grade up." Harriet Morrison

+ Library J 77:1664 O 1 '52 50w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p11 N 16 '52 40w

DAVENPORT, BASIL, ed. Great escapes. 409p $5 Sloane

920 Escapes. Adventures and adventurers. 52-13625

"Basil Davenport brings together 28 famous true stories of escapes over the centuries. . . Mr Davenport begins early, in the Twelfth Century B.C., with Herodotus' account of the escape of a thief who had stolen the dead body of his brother from the Egyptian King. . . From this early start Mr. Davenport moves down the years . . . to our own [times], with Winston Churchill's escape from Pretoria in the Boer War, the British Army's escape from Dunkirk, and General Giraud's escape from the German prison of Konigstein." San Francisco Chronicle

Booklist 49:98 N 15 '52

"Exciting, historically accurate."

+ Bookmark 12:51 D '52 20w

"A book for older boys and girls as well as the adventure-minded adult."

+ Kirkus 20:447 Jl 15 '52 170w

Reviewed by E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 77:1395 S 1 '52 130w

"The compilation is a pleasing miscellany in time, place, personalities, predicaments, methods of departure, and manner of recital." J. T. Winterich

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 D 21 '52 180w

"A notable volume. It is unlikely that anyone will pick it up and read it from cover to cover, but it will certainly be placed upon many bedside tables to be dipped into with pleasure and reward." T. C. Chubb

+ N Y Times p29 N 2 '52 550w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 O 23 '52 650w

"All too seldom does a publisher present a book which is destined to be read and reread. Such a book is 'Great Escapes.'" B. F. K.

+ Springfield Republican p8C N 9 '52 120w

DAVENPORT, BASIL, ed. Portable Roman reader; with an introduction. (Viking portable lib) 656p $2.50 Viking

870.8 Latin literature—Collections 51-14312

"A gleaming from seven centuries of Latin literature. [Contains] a comedy apiece from Plautus and Terence, a Senecan tragedy, generous slices from the long poems of Lucretius, Virgil, and Ovid, and a token bit from Lucan, clusters of lyrics from Catullus, Horace, and Martial, with Horace's satire on the bore and his 'Art of Poetry' thrown in, a satire by Juvenal, and the lovely anonymous 'Vigil of Venus.' For prose there are samples from Caesar, Cicero, and Livy, 'Trimachio's Banquet' by Petronius, 'Cupid and Psyche' from Apuleius, and a few pages each by St. Augustine and Boethius. All the selections have been grouped chronologically under four main headings with competent brief introductions to the several periods." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

"An interesting experiment and a challenging one."

+ Kirkus 19:552 S 15 '51 120w

"Readers who once found Latin unendurable may be surprised and delighted to discover how much the Romans contributed to the world's stock of significant and entertaining writing." G. F. Whicher

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Ja 20 '52 320w

"An excellent selection." B. R. Redman

+ Sat R 35:24 Mr 8 '52 50w

School & Society 74:415 D 22 '51 20w

DAVID, ELIZABETH. Book of Mediterranean food. 191p $2.95 Horizon press

641.5 Cookery

"The author of 'French Country Cooking' here extends her scope to dishes from other lands bordering the Mediterranean, including Italy, the Greek islands and Egypt." San Francisco Chronicle

Reviewed by K. T. Willis

+ Library J 77:2073 D 1 '52 60w

"Elizabeth David's book on Mediterranean food is written in the same delightful manner with which she encouraged ration-bound Britishers to try their hand at French home cooking." Charlotte Turgeon

+ N Y Times p41 O 19 '52 70w

New Yorker 28:139 O 4 '52 120w

"She writes well, understands her foods, and organizes her recipes excellently. The book is unusually pleasantly designed, with decorations by John Minton."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 N 2 '52 30w

DAVID, ELIZABETH. French country cooking; decorated by John Minton. 247p $2.95 Horizon press

641.5 Cookery, French 52-1516

"Written for English readers with a straight-from-the-shoulder discussion and criticism of English cookery, particularly in restaurants and other public places. With true British spirit Elizabeth David shows how, despite shortages and curtailments, it is perfectly possible to eat well and heartily if one follows the example of the provident French as they eat a la campagne, where the author finds French cooking to be at its best." N Y Times

"The soup, fish, meat, and poultry recipes will make you want to take the first boat to France, or, if that is beyond the family purse, make you want to try them in your own kitchen. There are scores of new ideas for the keen cook." Morrison Wood

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Jl 13 '52 70w

Reviewed by K. T. Willis

Library J 77:2073 D 1 '52 20w

"There are many excellent recipes not commonly found in other French cook books and although the recipes have not been adapted to American methods and cannot be recommended as an introduction to the French cuisine, it is a thoroughly good book and a fine addition to any kitchen library." Charlotte Turgeon

DAVID, ELIZABETH—Continued

+ N Y Times p30 My 25 '52 90w

New Yorker 28:139 O 4 '52 120w

San Francisco Chronicle p21 Je 1 '52 30w

DAVIDOFF, EUGENE, and NOETZEL, ELINOR S. Child guidance approach to juvenile delinquency. 173p $4.50 Child care publications, 30 W. 58th st, N.Y. 19

364.3 Juvenile delinquency 51-8539

"The book is based upon experimental work conducted at the Syracuse Psychopathic Outpatient Department and Hospital in an attempt to discover a method 'to prevent bringing juvenile delinquents in contact with the penal machine.' A discussion of the problem as approached by the psychologist, the psychiatrist, the social worker, the clinician, and all those in charge of delinquent children; includes a report of a follow-up study of 374 children." School & Society

"This volume suffers throughout from a telescoped treatment of most topics. One begins to wish that the authors had started to write at the point where they left off. While some significant general principles are drawn and while the case studies do lend specificity and give insight to the particular study techniques and treatment followed, the reading generally is not very rewarding for the experienced worker in the child-guidance field. At best, this is a textbook that might be used for orientation or introductory purposes." W. C. Kvaraceus

El School J 52:178 N '51 500w

School & Society 74:31 JI 14 '51 70w

Reviewed by W. W. Brickman

School & Society 75:408 Je 28 '52 100w

DAVIDSON, BASIL. Report on Southern Africa. 285p $3.50 British bk centre

301.45 [323.168] South Africa—Race question [52-39892]

"An English newspaperman who worked for the London Times, the Economist and the New Statesman, Mr. Davidson has written a first-hand report on one of the world's critical areas, the Union of South Africa, with its racial segregation policy of Apartheid and extreme nationalism. The author also examines the situation in Southern and Northern Rhodesia and the British protectorates—Bechuanaland, Basutoland and Swaziland—and concludes that British policy in these areas is open to serious objections." San Francisco Chronicle

Reviewed by Gilbert Twiss

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 N 2 '52 110w

Current Hist 23:394 D '52 40w

Manchester Guardian p4 JI 4 '52 160w

Reviewed by R. W. Logan

Nation 175:450 N 15 '52 290w

"The strength of his work is that while he extenuates nothing of the tortured monstrosities of the Union's present social scheme, he has a quickness of sympathy and insight which enables him to discern the half-hidden promise of better things to come. . . It is impossible here to indicate the subtlety and persuasiveness with which Mr. Davidson develops this theme, and shows how the revolt of 'manufacturing against mining' implies far-reaching changes in the framework of social and racial relations." Leonard Barnes

+ New Statesman & Nation 44:78 JI 19 '52 360w

"Report on Southern Africa' not only gives a discerning account of the present situation but explores the historical background which led to the existing state of affairs. The book not only traces the forces at work but includes much illustrative detail and profiles of many of the leaders such as Malan and others." I. B.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 O 12 '52 240w

"The present fashion is to denounce all things South African; but books like this, being necessarily incomplete, only give South African politicians the luxury of righteous indignation, and are to be deprecated, or even repudiated. No one would gather from these well-weighted pages that the urban settlements of South Africa, which 'continue to be the places of squalor they have always been,' include, as I can testify, some of the best housing in all Africa,' put up by Municipalities out of 'White' rates." W. M. Macmillan

— Spec 189:340 S 12 '52 650w

"Mr. Davidson's descriptive prose paints the African scene skillfully and there is deeply felt emotion behind his often expressed indignation."

Times [London] Lit Sup p550 Ag 22 '52 150w

DAVIDSON, LEVETTE JAY, ed. Poems of the old West; a Rocky Mountain anthology. 240p $3.50 Univ. of Denver press

811.08 American poetry—Collections. American literature—Rocky mountains 52-6118

"Collection of ballads and narrative poems about western America in pioneer and cowboy days, the lure of gold, cowboys and cattle, Indians, scouts and soldiers, and frontier doings." Library J

"A fine collection for boys who think poetry is for sissies and girls." M. D. Read

+ Library J 77:366 F 15 '52 40w

Reviewed by G. D. McDonald

Library J 77:533 Mr 15 '52 110w

"The editor is not claiming that what he has brought together in this volume is great poetry, or maybe even literature of an important sort; what he wants is to rescue the best and most representative of the verse written at one time or another in his region and about it. The result is a mixture of plain jingles and good poetry, in which men and women of the Rocky mountain region express themselves about their own place." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p8 Ja 26 '52 220w

DAVIDSON, LOUIS B., and DOHERTY, EDWARD JOSEPH. Captain Marooner; introd. by William McFee. 368p $3.95 Crowell

52-8851

A sea story based on historic facts, the mutiny on the whaleship Globe in the 1820s. The story, told from the point of view of young George Comstock, deals with the adventures of the mutineers and also of the innocent members of the crew both before and after the mutiny.

Booklist 49:89 N 1 '52

"This novel is presented in the form of a diary which in some unaccountable way George Comstock managed to keep up to date. Certain entries have a credibly laconic quality. But the long full narrative chapters read less like a young seaman's diary than a novelist's recreation of a dramatic episode of maritime history." Walter Havighurst

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p17 O 5 '52 350w

"The court scene which winds up the drama, is a magnificent one, with a surprise ending. In all, grand reading, good re-creation of historical material. Not another Caine Mutiny, but that is the market to go after."

+ Kirkus 20:419 JI 15 '52 320w

"No romantic tale this, but factual history with every character drawn from actual persons. Recommended." H. R. Forbes

+ Library J 77:1505 S 15 '52 40w

"Like the Bounty stories the story of 'Captain Marooner' is factual and the authors have been at pains to keep it so, at the same time endowing it with the glowing color that only expert and sincere writing can give. As a novel, as well as a compelling incident of maritime history, it ranks high." E. L. Acken

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 S 21 '52 700w

"This violent tale bears a striking surface resemblance to 'Mutiny on the Bounty'... There the resemblance ends abruptly. Where Nordhoff and Hall fused fact into magnificent fiction, the present pair steer a more factual, coastwise course, never venturing very far into the high seas of creative writing. Their material itself is of extreme interest." Burke Wilkinson

N Y Times p34 S 28 '52 450w

"As a novel it is pretty atrocious. The end has nothing to do with the beginning and is held on by safety pins. The motivation is often so peculiar as to be incredible... But having admitted and examined these defects, it is fair to say that the book has a number of positive virtues. In spite of the improbable dialogue, most of the characters are alive and usually doing things that people do. There is a distinctly good sense of the sea in the book, and almost as good a sense of what Micronesia was like in the early years of the last century. Best of all, the story holds interest throughout." Fletcher Pratt

+ Sat R 35:36 O 4 '52 320w

DAVIDSON, ROBERT FRANKLIN. Philosophies men live by. 484p $5 Dial press

100 Philosophy 52-2205

"An effort to present the thought of the great philosophers in a manner that the ordinary man and woman will find meaningful and appealing, an approach that necessarily calls for simplification and popularization." School & Society

Booklist 49:59 O 15 '52

"His approach is unconventional. It is neither historical nor topical according to the usual categories. For example, one of his four major divisions, entitled 'The Life of Reason,' breaks into three sections dealing respectively with the Stoics, Spinoza and Walter Lippmann... This book will take a little thinking about." W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 69:973 Ag 27 '52 110w

School & Society 75:335 My 21 '52 30w

DAVIES, ARTHUR POWELL. Temptation to be good; a book of unconventional sermons. 210p $2.50 Farrar, Straus

252 Sermons 52-12565

"This book is intended for those who are doubtful that religion can do anything to help them but who very much wish that it could... The twenty-one sermons which compose the book are concerned with a rather wide variety of subjects, but all are centered in the quest of the individual for spiritual reality and authentic moral guidance." Foreword

Booklist 49:41 O 1 '52

"Dr. Davies is witty, whimsical, earnest, eloquent, completely devoid of clichés and definitely vitalizing." P. E. Osgood

+ Churchman 166:13 D 15 '52 90w

Kirkus 20:464 Ag 1 '52 70w

"Highly recommended." R. P. Tubby

+ Library J 77:1396 S 1 '52 50w

"This preacher is a spiritual engineer, building a bridge on Sunday morning with the determined intent to get some goods across into individual lives. And from this book's first sermon—which is a masterpiece—to the last, I suspect that every one of them succeeded in doing just that." H. E. Fosdick

+ New Repub 127:20 O 13 '52 320w

Reviewed by Paul Ramsey

N Y Times p18 D 14 '52 240w

DAVIES, BLODWEN. Quebec: portrait of a province. 258p il $5 Greenberg

971.4 Quebec (province) 51-12513

In her foreword the author says: "What I have tried to do in this and in all my writing on the early days of this country is what the artist does when he paints a sketch of a Canadian scene or a Canadian person. I have tried to select something that is beautiful or significant or interesting or essential to an understanding of ourselves. I have tried to tell the stories of personalities, men and women who have by their human qualities, aspirations and activities, given substance to our history, whose loves and hates and fears and achievements have been woven into the very fabric of our Canadian consciousness."

"Miss Davies says, 'there is . . . far too little encouragement in the research and creative effort required to transform factual data into books that can be read for pleasure.' This reader agrees. For him the result of her research has been a pleasure, a pleasure enhanced by good descriptive narrative free of tempting political or religious bias." Bruce Findlay

+ Canadian Forum 31:168 O '51 350w

"This book is intended 'for relaxation.' The non-critical reader will find that it fulfils this purpose adequately. The historian will look elsewhere for his information." A. G. Reid

Canadian Hist R 32:392 D '51 340w

"A worthy library acquisition." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 76:2117 D 15 '51 60w

"The book is filled with [the kind of] information which fleshes out history and adds colour to Canada's story, only now really beginning to be told."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p285 Ap 25 '52 250w

DAVIES, RHYS. Marianne. 288p $3 Doubleday 52-5123

When Barbara's twin sister lay dying in childbirth she whispered the name of her betrayer. Inspired by abnormal desire for revenge Barbara sought out the man, lured him into marriage, and then destroyed him, only too late finding out her mistake. The scene is a Welsh manufacturing district, the time just before World war II.

"Rhys Davies is a Welsh writer of considerable distinction. 'Marianne' ought to do much to increase his already growing reputation in this country. It is a rich novel, written with fresh and often lyrical intensity, loaded with brightly realized characters, and dealing with a theme of destruction." Richard Sullivan

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 F 3 '52 330w

Kirkus 19:666 N 15 '51 180w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Jenkins

Manchester Guardian p4 S 28 '51 180w

Reviewed by J. D. Scott

New Statesman & Nation 42:374 O 6 '51 100w

"The carpentry shows too clearly in this novel. The over-extended revenge theme, the concluding twist almost right out of O. Henry, the last few pages in which all debts are paid out, all ends patly tied up—these things jut out. . . But if the scaffolding protrudes, nevertheless, Davies has draped upon it some of the most compellingly written dramatic and emotionally evocative experiences to come along in some time. Often his style is pure biting and brooding poetry. At other times it is starkly naturalistic." Hugh McGovern

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ja 27 '52 500w

"One remembers the suspenseful power of the birth scene, the vignettes of a tawdry courtship, the intimate horrors of Barbara's married life, the unrelieved cross-tensions that hold the novel together. 'Marianne' may appear turgid and cold, with speechifying characters. But to most readers, it will leave a sense of identification with the very real troubles of one family, members of which are drawn directly from life." James Kelly

+ N Y Times p4 Ja 27 '52 600w

"An artificial and rather dull book."

+ New Yorker 27:108 F 16 '52 50w

DAVIES, RHYS—Continued

- Reviewed by Don Pitt
San Francisco Chronicle p27 F 3 '52
 850w
 Sat R 35:17 Mr 8 '52 160w
 "An extremely dramatic and expert story."
 Tangye Lean
 + Spec 187:376 S 21 '51 100w
 Reviewed by J. M. Neal
Springf'd Republican p8D Mr 9 '52
 120w
Times [London] Lit Sup p641 O 12 '51
 330w

DAVIES, ROBERTSON. Tempest-tost. 307p $3
 Rinehart

52-5560

Novel about an amateur theatrical group and its performance of The Tempest in a Canadian college town.

"Through the ticklish problems of casting, to rehearsals and the first night, with some asides at an auction and a local ball, this gently taunts the petty snobberies, rivalries and vanities of a close Canadian community.
 Manages some careful observation but only a mild diversion."

Kirkus 20:95 F 1 '52 160w

"This is one of the most amusing and informative novels yet written about the theatre. . . Eligible for part circulation libraries as well as theatre collections and libraries of theatrical novels." George Freedley
 + Library J 77:1208 J1 '52 40w

Reviewed by Paul Bloomfield
Manchester Guardian p4 J1 4 '52 30w

"Mr. Davies' novel [is] an urbanely readable one."
 + N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ag 3
 '52 340w

Reviewed by Nancy Lenkeith
N Y Times p17 J1 13 '52 110w

Reviewed by Walter Havighurst
Sat R 35:36 Ag 23 '52 410w
Springf'd Republican p9C Je 8 '52 80w

"Mr. Davies is a Canadian novelist and dramatist with an impudently witty pen that reminds me frequently of Saki, but more often he might be carrying on in the mellow, highly mirthful tradition of his own noted countryman and humorist, Stephen Leacock." Richard Mc-Laughlin

+ Theatre Arts 36:6 My '52 320w

"Mr. Davies has a good deal of wit; he writes easily and makes his tale last to the end of the book without spinning it out too noticeably."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p465 J1 18 '52
 60w

DAVIOT, GORDON, pseud. See Mackintosh, E.

DAVIS, BURKE. Yorktown. 306p $3.50 Rinehart

52-9600

Historical novel covering the last years of the Revolution. The central figure is Sergeant (later Lieutenant) Peter Spargo. Escaping from a prison ship off Long Island, his experiences are traced thru the next three years to the end in Yorktown.

Booklist 49:125 D 1 '52

Bookmark 12:56 D '52 30w

Reviewed by R. L. Blakesley
Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 N 9 '52
 150w

Kirkus 20:520 Ag 15 '52 180w

"It will appeal to those who like their historical novels valid but unvarnished. Recommended." H. R. Forbes

+ Library J 77:1654 O 1 '52 50w

"This is an unusual historical novel. Its occasional incoherence is a defect of its virtues of warmth and vigor." Mary Ross
 + N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 N 2 '52
 350w

"It must be added that as historical romance
 'Yorktown' is rather more historical than romantic. It is when Davis introduces a heroine (uninhibited, even by historical-novel standards) that the weakness of the plotting becomes apparent." Henry Cavendish

+ N Y Times p22 N 2 '52 320w

New Yorker 28:199 N 22 '52 100w

"Battle scenes crackle with action, and the sights, smells, and sounds of conflict are presented in a realistic manner which, fortunately, stops this side of being macabre. The writing throughout is crisp, vibrant, and colorful.
 The structure of the novel leaves something to be desired." W. M. Wallace

+ Sat R 35:16 N 22 '52 420w

Springf'd Republican p35A N 16 '52
 80w

DAVIS, CLYDE BRION. Thudbury; an American comedy. 446p $3.75 Lippincott

52-9534

Satirical novel depicting the life of Otis
 Paul Thudbury (1880-1945), the "big-man" of a small up-state New York community.

"Mr. Davis's sly humor and perfect control of his material make every page of the book a joy to read. Like all satire, Thudbury is designed to irritate as much as to amuse, and like all satire it can be charged with exaggeration and cantankerousness. The exact degree of each reader's pleasure in the book will depend upon how far he accepts the author's premise that wealth is power and that power inevitably corrupts." P. L. Adams
 + Atlantic 190:96 O '52 900w

Bookmark 12:34 N '52 20w

"Mr. Davis's novel is an elaborate, sometimes quite funny, spoof of a certain type of fatuous complacency, and it makes amusing reading." Riley Hughes

+ Cath World 176:152 N '52 170w

Reviewed by Paul Engle

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 S 21 '52
 480w

Christian Science Monitor p6 O 2 '52
 160w

Kirkus 20:423 J1 15 '52 310w

"Novel is good satire, and entertaining social history." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 77:1504 S 15 '52 90w

"The novel can be read for straight entertainment, with appreciation of the quips and turns in American life that Mr. Davis shows, sometimes almost to the point of farcicality, in this story of a half century. On the other hand, many readers will find the story also a shrewd commentary on strong and weak points in prevailing practices and the psychology of the times." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 S 21 '52
 850w

"Some readers may become weary of prolonged exposure to the 'authorized biography,' a whimsical device further weakened by excessive details. But Mr. Davis' glinting humor and ability to place believable human beings in scenes of real dramatic power more than make up for the small imperfections of 'Thudbury,' man and book. Most onlookers will agree that the final product is nostalgic entertainment." James Kelly

+ N Y Times p35 S 28 '52 330w

"Mr Davis's irony has a fixed and resolute smile from page 1 to the end, but the total effect is wearisome, like a fairly good joke carried on too long."

New Yorker 28:125 S 20 '52 40w

"This is sharp satire, the stronger for the outwardly innocent way it is handled. 'Thudbury' is probably Mr. Davis' best novel." J. H.
 Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 O 17 '52
 650w

"'Thudbury' is a part of the development of recent years designed to revise and correct the perspective on the American businessman.
 As such, it a very interesting book; what it does is to qualify both the exorbitant and uncritical estimate put upon the business titan by himself and the extravagant censure visited upon him by his detractors." F. J. Hoffman

+ Sat R 35:13 S 20 '52 480w

Spring'd Republican p10D O 5 '52
290w

Reviewed by Paul Pickrel
Yale R n s 42:10 autumn '52 400w

DAVIS, DORIS. Women of Champion city.
246p $3 Sloane

51-7928

Story of two women in a Florida resort town in the last days of the war. One woman is the proprietor of a small hotel, the other is a girl from the North who comes in search of relief from heartbreak over a broken marriage.

Kirkus 19:588 O 1 '51 180w

"The Women of Champion City' is an unusual first novel. Sharply evoking a period, deceptively slick and smart in its prose style, it is generous in its judgments, and it has something serious and moving to say." Barbara Klaw

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p19 N 18 '51
600w

"Miss Davis tells her story in a series of monologues featuring the main characters of the action. The dialogue is relentlessly of the wise-crack variety and the story-line thin. But her command over setting and her knowledge of feminine psychology are both expert and entertaining." Charles Lee

+ — N Y Times p10 D 23 '51 230w

Reviewed by E. J. Fitzgerald
Sat R 35:62 Ja 19 '52 110w

DAVIS, DOROTHY SALISBURY. Town of masks. 190p $2.50 Scribner

52-1691

Detective story.

Booklist 48:379 J1 15 '52

Kirkus 20:168 Mr 1 '52 90w

"This is a tale of very delicate texture and a worthy companion for the three distinguished mysteries that have preceded it." James Sandoe
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Ap 27 '52
180w

"The depiction of a Lake Michigan town is fine; some of the individual scenes are beautifully written; and the whole is worth exploring as a part of the Davis canon, if not quite as a satisfactory book in itself." Anthony Boucher
+ — N Y Times p28 Ap 27 '52 120w

"This portrait of a murderer, to be both hated and pitied, should be wonderful in Mrs. Davis' hands, but misses somewhat, because it's obscured by over-subtlety." L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p28 My 25 '52
100w

DAVIS, FREDERICK CLYDE (STEPHEN RANSOME, pseud.) Tread lightly, angel. 190p $2.50 Doubleday

52-5229

Detective story.

Reviewed by Drexel Drake
Chicago Sunday Tribune p18 F 17 '52
120w

Kirkus 19:713 D 15 '51 60w

"Out of a desire to be impressive, Stephen Ransome's plots tend to be overwritten and underdone, yet he has a genuine streak of originality to recommend him." Ralph Partidge

+ — New Statesman & Nation 44:218 Ag 23
'52 90w

Reviewed by James Sandoe
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 F 17
'52 80w

"A number of neat subplots are well interrelated; and the ending offers an unexpected and agreeable surprise at which no well-mannered reviewer should hint. All in all, a highly novel and pleasing venture." Anthony Boucher
+ N Y Times p29 F 17 '52 60w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p24 F 17 '52
50w

"Personnel largely incredible; flowery style irritating; horror angle overworked." Sergeant Cuff

— Sat R 35:55 F 16 '52 30w

Times [London] Lit Sup p481 J1 25 '52
40w

DAVIS, HAROLD LENOIR. Winds of morning.
344p $3.50 Morrow

52-5054

A story of life on the frontier—the middle Columbia river country of the Northwest—in the 1920s. The chief characters are young Amos Clarke, the narrator, a sheriff's assistant, and the old horse herder, Hendricks, with whom Amos travels into the wilderness.

"A rare narrative in any season—I like the country it is laid in, the Columbia River valley, the characterizations, which are telling; and the style, which is supple and masculine." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic 189:78 F '52 300w

Booklist 48:196 F 15 '52

"This fresh, pungent tale . . . introduces the notional old herder, Pap Hendricks, who will be long remembered as will the originality of the entire book."

+ Bookmark 11:108 F '52 50w

"It may be that Winds of Morning is nothing more than an 'intellectual Western' and that its plot will not stand up under sustained analysis, but it is plausible in the reading and it evokes greatness." Riley Hughes

+ Cath World 174:468 Mr '52 250w

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ja 6 '52
650w

"This is a book with a large common denominator of interest. . . . It has something for everybody. It is honest, humorous, pungent. It is history and social criticism joined to real laughter and real tears." Horace Reynolds
+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Ja 10 '52
700w

Kirkus 19:363 J1 15 '51 190w

"Interesting, readable. Important contribution to contemporary western Americana." L. R. Etzkorn

+ Library J 77:48 Ja 1 '52 130w

Reviewed by Margaret Marshall

Nation 174:110 F 2 '52 300w

New Repub 126:23 Ap 7 '52 130w

"In 'Winds of Morning' what chiefly impresses is not the story itself, expertly as that is handled, but the manner of its telling." Oscar Lewis

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Ja 6 '52
950w

"A western in a sense and a mystery in a sense, 'Winds of Morning' is much more than either or both of these. It is a persuasive and mature work, honest to experience, wide in its embrace. It is great fun to read. It is such a book as seldom comes along." A. B. Guthrie
+ N Y Times p5 Ja 6 '52 800w

"Although the talk is free and the ride is long, we somehow have the feeling that Mr. Davis let things come to an end sooner than he should have, dismissing the old man before he seems to have really got down to what he wants to say. This is a tribute to Mr. Davis's power of persuasiveness, however, for there would be no fault to find if he had made his old man less likable and less engrossing. For the rest, the writing is fine and alive, a murder mystery is provided and solved, and there is a love affair with a happy ending."

+ New Yorker 27:81 Ja 12 '52 160w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ja 13 '52
2000w

"In 'Winds of Morning' H. L. Davis recurs to the Columbia River country, which he has annexed as his own, to tell a tale, the elements of which are compounded of Western fiction, a mystery plot, and a book about nature. However frayed these elements, Mr. Davis blends them well and handles them freshly, the defects of the novel, so far as they exist, arising less from the familiar elements of the pattern than from a mild failure in control." H. M. Jones

DAVIS, H. L.—Continued

+ — Sat R 35:16 Ja 13 '52 700w

Springf'd Republican p16A Ja 20 '52 120w

"The action of the book, though now and again it holds some excitement, has no importance; it rises quietly out of the big land, and sinks quietly back into it. The natural world, in fact, is the only real character in Winds of Morning; the people in the book appear chiefly as traits of that character. Ordinarily, this would be a fatal flaw. The measure of Novelist Davis' success is that he will almost certainly make a great many readers decide that his favorite country deserves the affectionate priority he gives it."

+ Time 59:90 Ja 7 '52 390w

Times [London] Lit Sup p773 N 28 '52 160w

"The prodigality of incidental pungencies of sight, sound, and smell, in this zestful novel, the steady richness of its understanding, and its shrewd calibration of the shift in values that occurs when the frontier recedes, all serve to distract the reader from the exigencies of a familiar and not altogether controlled plot."

+ — U S Quarterly Bk R 8:137 Je '52 240w

DAVIS, HASSOLDT. The jungle and the damned; with photographs by Ruth and Hassoldt Davis. 306p il $4.50 Duell; Little

983.2 [918.82] French Guiana 52-6792

A non-technical account of an explorer's trip into the interior of French Guiana, a region unknown to white men. The author was accompanied on the trip by his wife, a professional photographer.

Booklist 49:30 S 15 '52

"Davis' story is a colorful, exciting chronicle of exploration into one of the world's most dangerous and least known areas. The illustrations are superb." R. L. Blakesley

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ag 10 '52 250w

Christian Century 69:1353 N 19 '52 90w

"Mr. Davis' sometimes lyrical and poetic phrasings place the book a couple of good notches above that of most travel writing. Some may object, however, to his blunt descriptions of native customs or the ugliness of certain tales about French penal colony inmates." R. M. Hallett

+ — Christian Science Monitor p9 S 2 '52 600w

"Vivid and intimate pictures of docile and hostile jungles, of unknown peoples and a great uncomfortable world which have a definitely popular appeal."

+ Kirkus 20:335 Je 1 '52 200w

"Recommended for all libraries." R. S. Taylor

+ Library J 77:1186 Jl '52 50w

"Throughout his book Mr. Davis is casual and conversational. He tells the story as he might tell it in a drawing room after dinner. The one time he becomes really grim—and slightly on the defensive—is when he relates the climax of the Malfatti episode." Marcus Duffield

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Ag 10 '52 800w

"As a honeymoon, all this may not appeal to those who have previously leaned toward Bermuda. As reading matter, it is something else again—a tale of adventure with its proper quota of details like the St. Laurent doctor who championed American 'Quakair Wats' for virile vigor, or getting used to having jungle-dwellers observe your strange domestic rites as you observed theirs." R. C. Lewis

+ N Y Times p3 Ag 10 '52 700w

"It is never possible to get the whole of a really good book of exploration into a review. This is such a book. There is not a slow moment in it, and far too much happens to record here. What you'd better do, if you are one who likes true-adventure reading, is to get hold of this record of the Davis expedition and see for yourself." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 Ag 5 '52 550w

Reviewed by J. W. Vandercook
Sat R 35:33 Ag 9 '52 600w

Wis Lib Bul 48:213 S '52

DAVIS, JEROME. Peace, war and you; with an introd. by Clarence E. Pickett. 252p $3 Schuman

341.1 International cooperation. U.S.—
Foreign policy 52-9804

Criticism of American foreign policy and America's attitude towards the Korean war and the satellite countries behind the so-called Iron Curtain. Author is a Quaker and pacifist, and tho he points out Russia's errors his primary purpose is to reveal ours to us.

"Peace, War and You may prove useful to peace study groups, but it contributes little to our needed analysis of the nature of the international conflict processes." D. R. Taft
Am Soc R 17:634 O '52 650w

Reviewed by James Finucane
Ann Am Acad 284:169 N '52 600w
Booklist 48:311 Je 1 '52

"Whatever arguments the realist may find against his proposals, we doubt whether any intelligent Christian can deny that this book sets forth just about what ought to be done." W. L. Caswell

Churchman 166:12 Jl '52 160w

"Idealistic? Perhaps. But without ever endorsing what the Soviet stands for, without excusing or condoning the Communist psychology, he succeeds in making one re-examine ones own beliefs, ideals and hopes. . . . There have been too few persuasive books devoted to the cause of peace. Let's give this one a chance."

+ Kirkus 20:209 Mr 15 '52 400w

"Book will be useful in libraries which want to present fairly all sides on world affairs." F. E. Hirsch

Library J 77:894 My 15 '52 210w

"Simply written, with great faith in man's potential for good, this volume is superbly inspirational and rewarding reading." P. M. S.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 Jl 13 '52 160w

Reviewed by Quincy Howe

Sat R 35:15 Ag 30 '52 450w

School & Society 75:319 My 17 '52 30w

Springf'd Republican p4C Jl 6 '52 140w

DAVIS, JOHN AUBREY. Regional organization of the Social security administration; a case study. 315p $4 Columbia univ. press

362.9 [331.2544] U.S. Social security administration 51-7655

"Assuming the necessity and desirability of decentralized administration in large federal agencies, Dr. Davis here concerns himself with the means by which the rationalization of the field structure may be accomplished at the regional level. . . . The Social Security Administration is an early and important example of this approach. . . . The history, the problems, the failures, and the success of the administrative experiment in the SSA comprise Dr. Davis' case study." (U S Quarterly Bk R) Index.

"A thorough piece of work by one who seems to understand the social as well as the political implications of this problem. Recommended for libraries where questions of administrative procedures arise." D. K. Oko

+ Library J 76:1935 N 15 '51 140w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:54 Mr '52 200w

DAVIS, KENNETH SYDNEY. Morning in Kansas. 382p $3.95 Doubleday

52-10045

A novel in three parts. The first describes the adolescence of Earle Borden, growing up in a Kansas town. Earle often visits the ruined Baldrige place and delves into their family history. The second part of the novel turns back to 1858 when the first Baldrige arrived in New Boston, Kansas, and brings the family chronicle up to date. In part three Earle meets the surviving Baldriged.

Reviewed by Richard Sullivan
Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ag 24 '52
270w

"A more than explicit examination of brooding, festering lives which give off a general malaise within the confines of a midwestern community."

— Kirkus 20:350 Je 15 '52 210w

Reviewed by L. R. Etzkorn
Library J 77:1302 Ag '52 140w

"The look and feel of the land have rarely been better caught in words than in 'Morning in Kansas.' With so much in its favor, it is a pity that Mr. Davis' book pursues a contrived plot line reminiscent of ten-twenty-third melodrama. . . . Burdened with unbelievable characters etched only in chiaroscuro, the novel suffers also from a fussy, florid style which seems strangely un-Kansan, almost Victorian, replete with heavy-breathing metaphors." W. B. Bracke

— N Y Herald Tribune BK R p9 Ag 24 '52
550w

"Mr. Davis writes with intelligence, even at times with brilliance, but too often with a kind of detail that can only be described as implacable. There is as much gingerbread in his style as there is on the grandiose frame of the Baldrige place. The focus of his complicated story seems to this reader to shift about too much to give it compelling cohesion, and psychological analysis all but smothers its excellent moments of drama. Its strong note of idealism, however, and its accent on affirmative values gives it a certain freshness and a claim on the intelligent reader's time." C. L.

N Y Times p17 Ag 24 '52 290w

"A warm and engaging story of youth. He could have picked a less demanding one; the probities of youth have evaded many sweating novelists before him. But he has brought it off—chiefly in the tender universality of his hero." D. A. Pitt

+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 Ag 22 '52
500w

"Dominating everything in the book is Kenneth Davis's profound urge to tell a story, and his powers as a storyteller that will not be denied fuse uneven materials into a readable novel." J. W. Rogers

+ Sat R 35:15 Ag 23 '52 550w

Springf'd Republican p4C Ag 31 '52
120w

DAVIS, MRS LAVINIA (RIKER). Sandy's spurs; il. by Grace Paull. 246p $2.50 Doubleday

51-13708

"When Sandy first arrives as a paying guest at the Trowbridge's home in Virginia, he is something of a misfit with the three Trowbridge children because his chief interest is bird-spotting and theirs is horses. It isn't long, however, before he discovers that riding and caring for horses is fun." N Y Times

Booklist 48:174 Ja 15 '52

Kirkus 19:390 Ag 1 '51 160w

"Combination of horse and mystery story will appeal especially to 9-12-year-olds." Margaret Miller

+ Library J 77:66 Ja 1 '52 80w

"It stays in the mind as a good family story for boys first, which all girls who love horses will enjoy too, with very good character development." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune BK R p18 N 18
'51 180w

Reviewed by Marjorie Burger
N Y Times p30 N 11 '51 130w
Wis Lib Bul 48:97 Mr '52

DAVIS, MRS LAVINIA (RIKER). Secret of Donkey island; il. by Jean Macdonald Porter. 246p $2.50 Doubleday

52-11001

Story of a boy's summer largely spent exploring an isolated island off Cape Cod. For grades 5-8.

Booklist 49:111 N 15 '52

"Here, by an author who plainly loves children, is more than just the adventurous story of a boy's summer. It is also a warmly perceptive picture of his desire to prove his special identity in a large family." Roberta Forsyth

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 16 '52
100w

+ Horn Bk 28:410 D '52 120w

Kirkus 20:501 Ag 15 '52 90w

"A story sure to please both boys and girls. Recommended." D. M. Blasco

+ Library J 77:2076 D 1 '52 40w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune BK R pt2, p10 N
16 '52 20w

"More ado is made over the mysteries than is justified. It is the sharply-etched personalities of Jamie and his new friends and the sun-and-brine flavor of their island adventures which give this book its appeal." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p52 N 9 '52 130w

"Absorbing, charming and real." L. G. Offord
+ San Francisco Chronicle p7 N 16 '52
40w

DAVIS, MRS LAVINIA (RIKER). Summer is fun; pictures by Hildegard Woodward. 48p $2.50 Doubleday

51-13709

Story of the summer the twins, Gil and Tippy, spent at their grandfather's farm. One of their most exciting adventures was the discovery of an old Indian trace, which meant that they could bring the little lame boy from the next farm along the trace to play with them.

Booklist 48:217 Mr 1 '52

"A well-made, freshly interesting, and attractively illustrated book."

+ Cath World 174:321 Ja '52 30w

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 Ja 20
'52 110w

+ Horn Bk 28:26 F '52 70w

Kirkus 19:633 N 1 '51 120w

"Fresh and real, though not quite up to Wild Birthday Cake. . . . Boys of 8 can read this for themselves." E. W. Turpin

+ Library J 76:2009 D 1 '51 80w

Reviewed by Marjorie Burger

N Y Times p28 Ja 27 '52 100w

Wis Lib Bul 48:96 Mr '52

DAVIS, MARY GOULD, comp. Girl's book of verse; an anthology [introd. by Amelia Munson], rev ed 202p $2.75 Lippincott

821.08 English poetry—Collections, American poetry—Collections 52-7251

"This revised, enlarged and redesigned edition contains 130 poems, as against 91 in the earlier edition, 66 of them new." (Booklist) For first edition see Book Review Digest 1922.

Booklist 48:237 Mr 15 '52

"Exceptionally good collection." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 28:112 Ap '52 90w

Kirkus 20:33 Ja 15 '52 120w

DAVIS, M. G.—Continued

"This completely revised edition is a joy to give to add to a library for young people or to give any girl from ten to sixteen." L. R. Markey
+ Library J 77:540 Mr 15 '52 90w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ap 20 '52 190w

DAVIS, MERRELL REES. Melville's Mardi; a chartless voyage. 240p $4 Yale univ. press
813 Melville, Herman—Mardi 52-5360

"Herman Melville's third book, Mardi; and a Voyage Thither is here considered as a focal point in his literary career. From a fresh evaluation of Melville's literary apprenticeship the study proceeds to a reappraisal of the book which despite its faults first revealed the extension of Melville's literary and intellectual horizons. Using new evidence from Melville's correspondence with his publishers, other previously unexplored material, and aided by a careful investigation of the internal evidence, the author presents the first complete and fully documented account of the genesis, slow growth, and completion of Mardi." (Publisher's note) Index.

"The interpretation of 'Mardi,' in light of the new evidence, is sound and should prove very helpful to students of Melville. The general reader who usually eschews scholarly studies will find in this one a delightful clarity of presentation, some first-rate criticism of a piece of fiction as a work of art, and, above all, the enjoyment of pursuing a research problem to a rewarding conclusion." C. T. Houpt

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 21 '52 650w

Manchester Guardian p4 O 7 '52 100w

"Among Mr. Davis' many contributions to a clearer understanding of this cloudy book, I find most interesting his use of Melville's letters to John Murray, printed here in their entirety for the first time. They are fascinating in what they reveal about the young writer's growing confidence in his work." Willard Thorp

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ag 31 '52 450w

Reviewed by Charles Duffy
N Y Times p42 O 5 '52 270w

DAVIS, RALPH CURRIER. Fundamentals of top management. 825p il $6 Harper 658 Business management 51-11899

"Purpose—to present a fundamental statement of business objectives, policies and general methods that govern the evolution of basic business problems." (Library J) The author is an industrial engineer and management consultant.

"Professor Davis in this book, his major contribution, has given to the management field the best and most comprehensive treatment of management philosophy and fundamentals to date." J. F. Mee

+ Ann Am Acad 281:215 My '52 450w

"A tightly-packed, closely reasoned, comprehensive work." J. E. Cross

+ Library J 77:54 Ja 1 '52 160w

"Frequently, the author finds it difficult to avoid being repetitious. Witness the two chapters on responsibility and authority. Much of what can be said about one may also be said about the other, so that the chapter on authority is in part a repetition of the chapter on responsibility. Moreover, though this book is first-class management philosophy and is as readable as most books in its field, it has some shortcomings as a literary effort. The author's affinity for the simple declarative sentence is rather monotonous, and the reader is at times left grasping for antecedents to pronouns. But the intelligence and the thoroughness with which Mr. Davis handles his subject matter is impressive." H. F. Willkie + Management R 41:542 Ag '52 500

"A filled-in outline, [the] book becomes the most comprehensive single work on the problems of top management." J. M. Juran
+ N Y Times p19 Ja 20 '52 180w

DAVIS, RUPERT HART-. See Hart-Davis, R.

DAVISON, MRS ANN. Last voyage; decorations by John O'Hara Cosgrave II [il. with phot, map and diagrams, and sketches by the author]. 310p $4 Sloane

910.45 Reliance (ketch). Voyages and travels 52-7616

"An autobiographical account of all that led up to an illicit voyage and the outcome thereof." Subtitle

Booklist 48:226 Mr 15 '52

Bookmark 11:154 Ap '52 30w

"While only a third of the book covers their actual salt water sailing, 'Lost Voyage' can surely be placed among the great books of the sea as a splendid example of superb, shipshape writing. It already is a best seller in England." Al Chase

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ap 13 '52 250w

Horn Bk 28:189 Je '52 20w

"A chins-up, gallant story, this trades neither on self-pity nor excuse, sentimentality nor snivelling, and should pass the mark with all deep sea sailors as well as with the general reading public."

+ Kirkus 19:473 Ag 15 '51 260w

"This story may be read as an exciting adventure with a hair-raising ending; or as a human document, disturbingly full of meaning for all of us, possibly a warning symbol of the way we run our lives." D. C. Fisher

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Mr 23 '52 1050w

Reviewed by Fletcher Pratt

Sat R 35:31 Jl 19 '52 380w

"This could not have been an easy story to tell, and the skill with which it has been done is concealed in its candour, humour and lightness of touch. Told otherwise, it might have been a rigmarole of reckless stupidity and failure. Told Mrs. Davison's way, it is illuminated by truth's simple explanations and provokes great sympathy and great admiration." G. P. Griggs

+ Spec 187:796 D 7 '51 700w

Time 59:112 Mr 24 '52 500w

"Mrs. Davison is a spirited writer, though in the indifferent and casual modern manner. Her book could have been written only in these anarchical years; indirectly, it is a droll criticism of our period. Grim fun is in her book, though her apt words and phrases do not provoke laughter, but a rueful smile."

Times [London] Lit Sup p138 F 22 '52 500w

DAVISON, ARCHIBALD THOMPSON. Bach and Handel; the consummation of the baroque in music. 77p $2 Harvard univ. press

780.9 Bach, Johann Sebastian. Händel, Georg Friedrich 51-10950

The material of this volume was first embodied in lectures, illustrated with music, delivered at the University of Virginia in April 1950. The author is James Edward Ditson Professor of music at Harvard.

"A question which no musician, no casual or passionate listener has ever failed to ask himself or others, is this: 'Just what is it that makes Bach Bach, and Handel Handel?'... Prof. Archibald T. Davison, one of the greatest choral conductors and teachers this country has known, gives us a most brilliant and lucid summary of the essential points of difference and areas of likeness. Variety of observation, the depth of the author's insight, and the humor and clarity of his style make this a volume of outstanding interest for any person with a sensitive ear and questioning mind." K. G. Roy

+ Christian Science Monitor p15 D 13 '51 150w

Reviewed by C. K. Miller

Library J 76:1227 Ag '51 60w

"This is no learned academic discourse. Rather, it is a statement of faith by a scholar who is also a master musician. With admirable restraint, Dr Davidson states his case lucidly and simply." E. C. Krohn
+ Music Lib Assn Notes 9:417 Je '52 280w

"Mr. Davidson is both a wise and witty writer. He is interesting at every turn. His little book is also a scholarly one, and in it he exhibits keen insight into the nature of the genius of Bach and Handel. I warmly recommend the book in every way." Moses Smith
+ N Y Times p31 S 30 '51 70w

"To find a professor of music at Harvard full of an uninhibited passion for conducting and listening to Bach and Handel is a joy, and he conveys the impression that he is impelled to share his musical trouvailles with his readers; in this, indeed, lies the chief merit of the book."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p200 Mr 21 '52 360w

DAVISON, ARCHIBALD THOMPSON. Church music; illusion and reality. 148p $3.25 Harvard univ. press

783 Church music 52-5393
A discussion of the nature and purpose of church music. The author is James Edward Ditson professor of music at Harvard university. Contains a selected list of anthems and an index.

Booklist 48:292 My 15 '52

Christian Century 69:1003 S 3 '52 90w

"A rich, lively, learned commentary." C. K. Miller

+ Library J 77:719 Ap 15 '52 100w

"Stimulating discussion of contemporary musical problems and practices in the Protestant church with specific reference to the American scene." Irving Lowens

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 9:415 Je '52 360w

DAVY, JOHN RUPERT. Industrial high vacuum. 243p il $5.50 Pitman 621.5 Vacuum [52-10188]

"A practical manual of high vacuum apparatus, techniques and selected applications. As the title indicates, it is slanted for technicians in industrial plants and laboratories. However, much of the information that it contains is just as applicable in research laboratories associated with universities. Much practical 'know-how' is included that is not available elsewhere. There are selected literature references and eighty-two illustrations." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

"The subject is of interest in a variety of industries including pharmaceutical manufacturing, electronics and optics. The author is a British physicist." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 77:1079 Je 15 '52 30w

N Y New Tech Bks 37:63 Jl '52

DAWES, BENJAMIN. Hundred years of biology. 429p il $5 Macmillan

574.09 Biology—History 52-11434

"Covers in condensed but fairly readable style the development of biological knowledge over the past century. Important advances are described, and the names of the scientists who made them are given. The material is handled so that the reader is given a narrative of continuous development rather than a series of episodes. There are a long bibliography and a detailed index. The author is Reader in Zoology in the University of London." N Y New Tech Bks

Booklist 49:43 O 1 '52

"The book may be found useful by teachers and students as a source of references, and by others as a rough guide to what is going on to-day in many of the main departments of biology. A true synthesis remains to be written."

+ New Statesman & Nation 44:168 Ag 9 '52 270w

N Y New Tech Bks 37:66 S '52

DAWSON, CARLEY. Mr Wicker's window; il. by Lynd Ward. 272p $3.25 Houghton

52-5906

A fantasy for boys and girls. Twelve-year-old Chris, living in Washington, applies for a job in an antique shop for a friend. Instead, the job is given to him, and he has a series of adventures back in the days of the 1790's.

Booklist 49:160 Ja 1 '53

"An author of lively and romantic imagination created this magic coated tale of adventure and its colorful cast of characters. And the publisher has wrapped it up in an unusually handsome volume, beautifully and lavishly illustrated in two colors by Lynd Ward." F. G.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p20 N 16 '52 160w

"Characters are well drawn and plausible. Good illustrations by Lynd Ward. Recommended for large collections. For good readers." Betty DuPont

+ Library J 78:68 Ja 1 '53 90w

"It is a magic look at the past, not for history's sake, just for thrilling adventure. Mr. Ward's pictures are powerful both as to characters and action." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p4 N 16 '52 180w

"In this mixture of fact and fantasy Carley Dawson has shown great skill in making the past come alive. Her characters are well drawn, and no matter how fantastic, completely credible. Lynd Ward's illustrations in black and magenta reflect the spirit of the book." A. N. Fedder

+ N Y Times p48 N 30 '52 120w

New Yorker 28:195 D 6 '52 60w

"In the mind of this reviewer the question is: Will boys and girls of an age to read this long story accept Mr. Wicker's magic? It is definitely a 'fairy-tale' magic. The scene in the Emperor's garden when Chris gets the tree might be straight out of a fairy tale. Yet it is, essentially, an adventure story for boys and girls who will probably feel that they have outgrown fairy tales. The 1790 scenes have atmosphere and humor."

Sat R 35:51 N 15 '52 170w

DAWSON, CHRISTOPHER HENRY. Understanding Europe. 261p $3.50 Sheed

940 Europe—History 52-10609

"Mr. Dawson's concern is the preservation of Europe as a society of peoples with a common culture. His historical survey purports to show that the European tradition, which is basically Roman and Christian, has been threatened whenever Asiatic despotism has become too powerful." (Manchester Guardian) Index.

Reviewed by Joseph McSorley

Cath World 176:236 D '52 240w

"Christopher Dawson's Understanding Europe is both timely and valuable." John Connor

+ Commonweal 57:126 N 7 '52 700w

Current Hist 23:272 O '52 110w

"This new book by C. Dawson contains a brilliant and many-sided analysis of the crisis which marks the contemporary world-situation (with specific reference to Western Europe) and traces the origins of that crisis to their ultimate roots in the soul of modern man. To those of us who feel that one of the most significant and sinister facts of our time is the submergence of Western Europe beneath the two rival power-systems of America and Russia, such a book, inspired by so strong a consciousness of the unity, the historical continuity and the immense creative rôle of Western European culture, will be especially welcome. . . All students of contemporary history will be especially grateful to Mr Dawson for his profound and sympathetic analysis and interpretation of the phenomenon of Russian Communism and his exposure of its roots in the soul of the Russian people, and the long dark night of their past." Harold Knight

+ Hibbert J 50:419 Jl '52 1500w

DAWSON, C. H.—Continued

"Written with sense and conviction, but [it] remains [a] tract for the times." Noel Annan
+ Manchester Guardian p4 Je 3 '52 300w

Reviewed by William Barrett
N Y Times p9 D 28 '52 700w

"Understanding Europe is a wise book, well and persuasively written." Herbert Agar
+ Spec 189:29 J1 4 '52 1100w

Springf'd Republican p10D O 5 '52 100v

Times [London] Lit Sup p717 N 7 '52 2500w

DAWSON, JACK C. Encyclopedia of sport thrills; il. by Jesse Jacobs. 223p $2.75; pa $1 Hart

796.03 Sports—Dictionaries 51-13909

"Under twenty-four headings, from aerobatics to winter sports, are gathered brief journalistic terms about 'colorful personalities, thrilling episodes, records, famous players, blunders, big moments.' Billiards and badminton, table tennis and horse racing have their entries. The period covered is 1903 to 1951. On any single sport it is very brief; it is a sort of introductory fact book in the many fields." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

"This is entertaining froth to add to the sports collections. Will interest fans of 10 and up." Lillian Morrison

+ Library J 76:2016 D 1 '51 40w

"For boys of about ten up who follow many sports on TV and radio and argue with their fathers and friends about records, players, unusual events, here is a find." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 D 16 '51 130w

"It may not be vital that in 1934 Guy Zimmerman pitched 56 consecutive horseshoe ringers . . . but it's handy information to have around. A good book for the American male who is old enough to argue." R. F. H.
Springf'd Republican p30A D 2 '51 110w

DAWSON, VIRGINIA (DOUGLAS), and WILSON, BETTY (DOUGLAS). Shape of Sunday; an intimate biography of Lloyd C. Douglas. 372p il $3.50 Houghton

B or 92 Douglas, Lloyd Cassel 52-11451

Time to Remember (Book Review Digest 1951) was to have been the first volume of the author's autobiography, but he died before the second volume could be started. This volume by his two daughters carries the story of their father's life to its end. They stress the parts relating to his ministry and writing career.

Booklist 49:124 D 1 '52

Bookmark 12:52 D '52 30w

"[Lloyd Douglas'] two daughters, Virginia and Betty, have told it with simple charm and honesty and with some sense of the enormous fun their readers would enjoy. Obviously, they loved their 'Poppa' very much, but they have not let his amazing literary success transform him into an unapproachable savant thru the chemistry of adulation." Clarence Seidenspinner

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 N 2 '52 270w

"The value of the book lies, not in its biographical record, but in the close-up portrait of the man himself, with his zest for life, his humor, his abounding vitality, his dedication to the cause of helping his fellow man."

+ Kirkus 20:672 O 1 '52 240w

"A vivid, pleasantly intimate biography of a most unusual man." F. H. Bullock
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 N 2 '52 650w

"The Shape of Sunday' is, of course, a sentimental pilgrimage into yesteryear. The Douglas daughters walked through the towns their parents lived in, talked to oldesters, thumbbed yellowing scrapbooks, and ransacked each other's memories of the past. The result can hardly help being episodic and admiring. If it is often trivial, it is also tender; the authors are not so much writers as recorders; they reveal quite as much of their own fine sense of loyalty as they do of the facts about their celebrated father." Charles Lee

+ N Y Times p12 N 2 '52 360w

"The book is not sticky nor is its tone annoying. It gives us the necessary complement to Douglas's own volume of memoirs on his early life." Carl Bode

+ Sat R 36:14 Ja 10 '53 600w

Springf'd Republican p9C N 2 '52 100w

DAY, DONALD, ed. Woodrow Wilson's own story. See Wilson, W.

DAY, DOROTHY. The long loneliness. 288p il $3.50 Harper

B or 92 51-11898

Autobiography of the co-founder of the Catholic Worker Movement in which she explains not only her own life and her conversion to Catholicism, but also the working of the organization which she and Peter Maurin founded. Index.

Booklist 48:227 Mr 15 '52

Bookmark 11:154 Ap '52 30w

"The Long Loneliness is written without slants and formulas, out of the great integrity which even those who disagree most strongly with her Catholic Worker position cannot fail to recognize in Dorothy Day. The story is dramatic; but she does not dramatize it. . . And the reader will not forget her, or the challenge (and for most of us the reproach) of her life." Paul Dinkins

+ Cath World 176:155 My '52 400w

Reviewed by Edward Barry

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 F 10 '52 240w

Reviewed by T. D. Mygatt

+ Churchman 166:16 Ap 1 '52 230w

Reviewed by H. A. Reinhold

Commonweal 55:521 F' 29 '52 1700w

"Dorothy Day is a writer of experience and competence and this story of her life is interestingly told. . . Of interest to Catholic readers and others concerned with social welfare."

+ Kirkus 20:36 Ja 15 '52 170w

Reviewed by F. E. McMahon

New Repub 127:20 Ag 4 '52 480w

"A mixture of reporting and reflection, of recollection and self-revelation. It is exciting when it is not thoughtful; it is vigorous when it is not contemplative; it is filled with the Sermon on the Mount when it is not flooded with rage against the exploiters of the poor and the inept." Thomas Sugrue

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ja 20 '52 1050w

"This book will not shock anybody. It may touch many, whatever their secular or religious faith, who lament the kindness and sympathy that Communists found among certain left-wing groups—and betrayed." R. L. Duffus

N Y Times p12 Ja 20 '52 430w

New Yorker 28:124 Mr 8 '52 150w

Reviewed by Anne Fremantle

Sat R 35:12 Mr 1 '52 1000w

Wis Lib Bul 48:92 Mr '52

DAY, LARAINÉ (MRS LEO ERNEST DUROCHER). Day with the Giants; ed. by Kyle Crichton; drawings by Leo Hershfield. 219p $2.75 Doubleday

796.357 New York (city). Baseball club (National league). Durocher, Leo Ernest 52-5758

Professional baseball presented from the woman's point of view by the wife of the manager of the New York Giants.

Booklist 48:277 My 1 '52

Bookmark 11:230 J1 '52 20w

"A highly creditable and readable job." Robert Cromie

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ap 20 '52 400w

Kirkus 20:146 F 15 '52 120w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 77:440 Mr 1 '52 50w

"An amusing, informative book—the first, so far as one knows, to report on baseball from the viewpoint of the wife."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Je 29 '52 240w

"The characterizations in the anecdotes are not always vivid and the humor is often strained. Moreover, anyone familiar enough with the game to know a home run from a strike out will find many stories (such as Toots Shor's remark in a less rosy season, 'I'm the meanest man in the world—raising my kids to be Giant fans') which have become part of national (if not National) folklore. But generally, even the chestnuts are freshly told, for Miss Day's style, as edited by Kyle Crichton, is breezy and readable. Every day is Ladies' Day for Laraine Day and she makes a good story of it." A. B. Lochheim

+ — N Y Times p3 Ap 20 '52 550w

Reviewed by C. K. Larrabee

San Francisco Chronicle p11 Ag 10 '52 120w

DEAN, JOEL. Capital budgeting; top-management policy on plant, equipment, and product development. 174p $5 Columbia univ. press

658.14 Capital. Budget, Business 51-11344

"A discussion of four major phases of planning and control of capital expenditures in large corporations: the demand for capital, the available supply, its rationing, and the timing of its use. Later chapters deal with specific kinds of capital expenditure and the considerations involved in decision-making." Library J

Reviewed by J. E. Cross

Library J 76:1229 Ag '51 40w

"This book is well organized and seems as readable as a study of such a technical subject can be made. However, thought-provoking works are never light reading, and Capital Budgeting is no exception." W. W. Voorhees

+ Management R 40:788 D '51 750w

"Top management officials will find the study rewarding as a careful evaluation of current policies in the field. Academic economists will find revealing the many insights into the way resources are actually allocated by the large corporations which form the backbone of the American economy."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:368 D '51 150w

DEAN, REGINALD SCOTT. Electrolytic manganese and its alloys. 257p il $12 Ronald 669.732 Manganese 52-6188

"The author of this technical monograph was a leading figure in the development of electrolytic manganese during his years of association with the United States Bureau of Mines. Here he presents the current knowledge of both the metal itself and its alloys. The discussions of the production and properties of electrolytic manganese run to only eighty-two pages; hence more than two-thirds of the book is given to descriptions of the alloys. These descriptions include a wide range of specific data on properties, heat treatment and applications. The book is based on a digest of the periodical and patent literature, and each of the chapters is accompanied by a long list of references." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

"Dr. Dean's presentation of the great variety of alloys with manganese and their sometimes surprisingly favorable physical properties will contribute to widen their application in the metallurgical field. The editor should have the credit for giving this book the form and appearance it deserves." E. S. Nossen

+ Chem Eng 59:413 Jl '52 440w

"The book is addressed to specialists in metallurgy. In spite of its high price, libraries with active collections in metallurgy will need it." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 77:1079 Je 15 '52 120w

N Y New Tech Bks 37:42 My '52

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:213 Je '52 300w

DEAN, ROBERT GEORGE (GEORGE GRISWOLD, pseud). Gambit for Mr. Groode. 220p $2.50 Dutton

52-7791

Mystery story.

Booklist 49:50 O 1 '52

Kirkus 20:332 Je 1 '52 80w

"Griswold's narrative has the retrospective fidgets, but save for the presumption that it'll all come out tidily in the end one can't really predict how things will happen before that, or where. This, in a tale of intrigue, is uncommon enough to be pointed to." James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Jl 13 '52 180w

"Sentence by sentence this is a readable book, economically written, with some plausible historical background. . . . As a melodrama of espionage, it is simply foolish, impossible to believe for a minute or even to follow consistently." Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p21 Jl 13 '52 90w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p23 Jl 20 '52 80w

Springf'd Republican p6D Jl 27 '52 110w

DE ANGELI, MRS MARGUERITE (LOFFT). Just like David. 121p il $2.50 Doubleday

51-14087

"When Jeffrey was almost six, his family moved from Hatboro, Pennsylvania, to a new home in Ohio. The trip over the Pennsylvania Turnpike was exciting, but, best of all, in Ohio Jeffrey's dearest wish came true, for he was to go to school 'just like David.'" Library J

Booklist 48:149 D 15 '51

Bookmark 11:85 Ja '52

"This charming, simply told story is just right for beginner readers." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 N 11 '51 120w

"Just the thing for youngsters wary about pulling up and starting in a new school. Again delightful, soft sketches by the author."

+ Kirkus 19:389 Ag 1 '51 150w

"Not her most important work but very pleasant for children of 8-9 to read themselves and younger ones will enjoy having it read to them. Recommended." D. M. Blasco

+ Library J 76:2120 D 15 '51 80w

"Best to read aloud, this also is good for eights and nines to read themselves. It has many charming pictures, two in full color, and is a 'little boy book' we highly recommend." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p32 N 11 '51 170w

"The boys are natural and appealing, even squabbling in a brotherly fashion. Yet the story often lags, because there is too much information, too much description of scenery and regional architecture with historical background, and not quite enough real adventure." E. L. B.

N Y Times p24 F 10 '52 220w

Wis Lib Bul 48:39 Ja '52

DE ASSIS, MACHADO. See Machado de Assis, J. M.

DEASY, MARY. Devil's bridge. (Atlantic Monthly press bk) 365p $3 Little

52-9780

"[A novel] about a professionally capable but morally confused bridge builder who gets crossed up in politics and in the deviating currents of emotional attachments. These are to

DEASY, MARY—Continued
 an utterly horrid wife, three attractive children, and a sex-starved young widow of explosive possibilities. It's a story, too, of the bridge builder's younger friend [and narrator of the book]. Chicago Sunday Tribune

Booklist 49:89 N 1 '52

"The reactions of Leo's wife and children are perceptively shown, but the nemesis the author calls upon is too crushingly and too frequently applied to convince. An outstanding short story writer, Miss Deasy excels in fine touches and brief insights; here, at least, the novel form does not lend itself readily to such talents." Riley Hughes

— + Cath World 176:312 Ja '53 250w

"Miss Deasy writes with sufficient intensity to provoke definitely responsive reactions on the part of her readers... Reading the book has left this reviewer with a confused sense of jaded attraction, and a feeling that one of these days the author is likely to really spill out over the fertile regions of her undoubted imagination. When she does, the resultant product, framed with elemental forcefulness, skilfully outlined and simply written, is likely to jolt us all loose from our hesitant critical underpinnings." Henry Cavendish

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 O 19 '52 400w

"Competently written and tightly plotted."

+ Kirkus 20:567 S 1 '52 130w

"Miss Deasy has fashioned his story with professional skill, presenting her incident and insight in a highly competent and comfortable way. It is all as pat as you please and thoroughly, though not profoundly, thought out." R. D. Loomis

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p22 N 9 '52 380w

"It is one of the most accomplished and generally successful books of its kind that this reviewer has seen since 'All the King's Men.'... Bursting with the abundance of life, yet plotted with an engineer's care, combining a man's grasp of force and resistance with a woman's sensibility, this is a memorable novel indeed." John Brooks

+ N Y Times p45 O 19 '52 400w

"The atmosphere is indignant where state politics are concerned and lachrymose where love is concerned, and the writing is pale and profuse."

— New Yorker 28:198 N 22 '52 130w

"At a moment when the entire country is absorbed in political activity, this is a most timely book, and a definitely readable one, too." C. R. Sumner

+ Sat R 35:15 N 15 '52 500w

DE BOTH, JESSIE MARIE. It's easy to be a good cook. 254p $2.50 Garden city bks. 641.5 Cookery 51-13519

"[The author is] originator of the large-scale, audience-participation cooking-school program, writer of a syndicated weekly column, 'Jessie's Notebook,' and author of many cookbooks. . . . A feature of this volume is the introductory 'set of 'Do' and 'Don't' tips preceding each chapter. You won't find many exotic recipes here by the way. For the greater part this is a book of advice on how to do the fairly common dish correctly." San Francisco Chronicle

"Not necessary, but a useful and pleasing addition to the cookery shelves in those libraries which are expected to supply a great variety of cookbooks."

Booklist 48:140 D 15 '51

"A chatty friendly book this, intended to encourage the beginner and straighten out the kitchen kinks of the experienced."

+ N Y Times p54 D 2 '51 30w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 O 23 '51 150w

Reviewed by Lawton Mackall

Sat R 35:68 Mr 8 '52 90w

DE BRUYNE, NORMAN ADRIAN, and HOUWINK, ROELOF, eds. Adhesion and adhesives. 517p il $10 Elsevier

668.3 Adhesion. Adhesives

52-2027

"A volume composed of original papers written by authorities from several countries of the world. The papers are monographic in nature. Each one provides a survey of the present status of a specific area of the adhesive field and concludes with a bibliography. Scientific aspects are emphasized but considerable material is included on practical aspects as well. The work is potentially of interest to chemists working in adhesives research and to engineers and other technical personnel concerned with the selection of adhesives for use in manufacturing." N Y New Tech Bks

"The adhesive expert will find this publication a useful and valuable reference work. Other scientists and engineers interested in studying the underlying scientific phenomena involved in adhesion and in learning about types and applications of adhesives will also find this work of prime value. This book fills a need in adhesives which has become a big and growing phase of science and industry." F. W. Reinhart

+ Chem & Eng N 30:1034 Mr 10 '52 200w

"The writing is technical and the book is primarily suited to industrial chemists in the adhesives manufacturing industry and to engineers concerned with adhesives in the design of manufactured products." R. R. Hawkins

Library J 76:2119 D 15 '51 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 36:81 N '51

DE CAMP, LYON SPRAGUE, and LEY, WILLY. Lands beyond. 329p il maps $4.75; text ed $3.50 Rinehart

398.23 Geographical myths

52-5577

Attempts to discover the truth underlying such legends as the lost Atlantis, the lands and people described in the Odyssey, the land of Prester John, the lost tribes of Israel, the Sargasso Sea, and the Mount Shasta legend. Index.

Booklist 48:351 J1 1 '52

Bookmark 11:230 J1 '52 20w

Reviewed by Richard Blakesley

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 J1 20 '52 200w

"A series of essays or dissertations rather than a unity. Readers of many tastes and interests may find one or other chapters entertaining and informative, but the book as a whole is for more specialized groups, teenage boys, professional geographers and folklorists, and authors of science fiction and of novels of fantasy in search of atmosphere." Gary MacEoin

+ Commonweal 56:371 J1 18 '52 300w

Kirkus 20:254 Ap 1 '52 130w

"The book is a masterly piece of research. . . . Fascinating reading." J. E. Brown

+ Library J 77:888 My 15 '52 140w

Nation 175:157 Ag 23 '52 240w

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Je 29 '52 1000w

"This enchanting book retells the fact and fiction about Lost Atlantis and the Cities of Gold the Spaniards sought, [and] comes as a marvelous narrative of pleasant escape into the past. It takes us back to the childhood of the race, when men did not know the B-29 or the Stuka, but feared the 'great roc' which carried Sinbad as an eagle might carry a sparrow." Michael Amrine

+ N Y Times p6 Je 22 '52 650w

"Despite the qualifications of the authors—Mr. de Camp is a scholarly science-fiction man and Mr. Ley a first-rate science popularizer—the book turns out to be dull and hasty. . . . Still, there are interesting patches, and the bibliography is good."

— + New Yorker 28:68 Ag 2 '52 110w

Reviewed by Don Fabun

San Francisco Chronicle p8 J1 27 '52 800w

"The selection of manageable portion from the vast amount of primary and secondary material available must of necessity be somewhat arbitrary; De Camp and Ley do some violence to the continuity and coherence of their presentation with a superfluity of details which, while sometimes intrinsically amusing, are often irrelevant and trivial in the context." Glenn Negley

+ — Sat R 35:15 J1 26 '52 600w

Reviewed by J. F. Rooney

Spring'd Republican p6D J1 27 '52
220w

DE CESPEDES, ALBA. See Céspedes, A. de

DECKER, DUANE WALTER. Big Stretch.
191p $2.50 Morrow

52-5071

"This is the story of how the former bat boy made his teammates the Blue Sox believe in themselves and in their new first baseman—Stretch." (Publisher's note) For ages 10 to 16.

Booklist 48:301 My 15 '52

Reviewed by J. C. Worley

Christian Science Monitor p11 My 15 '52 50w

Kirkus 20:158 Mr 1 '52 80w

"Good fast baseball by a master baseball writer. Recommended for ages 12-16." M. D. Read

+ Library J 77:910 My 15 '52 20w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p23 My 11 '52 30w

DEDERICH, ROBERT M. Communication of technical information. 116p pa $5 Chemo-nomics, Inc, 400 Madison Av, N.Y. 17

651.78 Technical writing. Reports—Preparation 52-8544

"Written from the business manager's point of view, this book evaluates methods of communication with the following fundamentals in mind: Why is the transfer of information necessary? Who can use the information? How will it be used? The stress is on the thinking and logic which must underlie the communication of information by technical personnel, and the book covers not only written reports but inter-organization memos, progress statements, and oral presentations in conferences." Management R

"The reviewer found the book difficult to read, both mentally and physically. Many examples appear far afield and much material seems to lack applicability to the subject being discussed. The book is lithoprinted from master sheets prepared from expanded letters, which gives a page of rather heavy type. It also is greatly overpriced." K. A. Kobe

Chem & Eng N 30:2028 My 12 '52 70w

Management R 41:557 Ag '52 40w

Special Libraries 43:271 S '52 100w

DEFOE, DANIEL. Best of Defoe's Review; an anthology; compiled and ed. by William L. Payne. 289p $4 Columbia univ. press

652 Review (periodical). Great Britain—History—Sources. Great Britain—Social life and customs 51-14009

"An anthology compiled from the files of the periodical written and edited by Daniel Defoe from 1704 to 1713. Like everything else Defoe wrote, these selections are the work of a moralist; unlike most other journals of the time, notably the Tatler and the Spectator, the Review was serious, for its editor considered his chief function was to point out what was wrong and evil in English life and to offer strong recommendations as to how things could be set to rights." (New Yorker) Index.

New Yorker 27:86 Ja 19 '52 120w

"Mr. Payne has made an intelligent selection from Defoe's essays, and represented his various interests very fairly. The reader must not expect from Defoe the same gentle, time-killing pleasure that he gets from reading a Tatler or Spectator essay. Defoe's discourse is nearly always practical, and even when he relaxes his writing has an earnestness that marks him off from Addison and Steele."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p482 J1 25 '52 470w

DEGAS, HILAIRE GERMAIN EDGAR. Edgar Hilaire Germain Degas; text by Daniel Catton Rich. (Library of great painters) 126p il col pl $12.50 Abrams

759.4 Paintings

52-6130

"Contains a text by the director of The Art Institute of Chicago, and 50 illustrations in color. Each reproduction is accompanied by a full description." Christian Science Monitor

Booklist 48:231 Mr 15 '52

"To possess under one cover 50 excellent reproductions in full color of the work of this much loved master is in itself worth the price asked for this volume. . . In the commentaries, also by Mr. Rich, on the page facing each painting, we reap a rich and interesting harvest of knowledge born of his many years of study and intimate contact with the great paintings of the world." Gary Sheahan

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ja 27 '52 80w

"Certainly a reader can learn much about the great French master, Edgar Degas, from this well-put-together volume." D. A.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 D 6 '51 180w

Kirkus 19:674 N 15 '51 80w

Reviewed by S. L. Faison

Nation 174:186 F 23 '52 240w

"The half hundred reproductions in this book give a more comprehensive résumé of the great French draftsman's work than is usually found in a single publication. . . The reproductions in the book are very good." G. P. du Bois

+ N Y Times p7 D 16 '51 450w

"The three previous volumes in Harry N. Abrams' Library of Great Painters series—'Renoir,' 'Van Gogh,' and 'El Greco'—were models of what such anthologies should be. The Degas volume is easily their equal in tastefully designed format and richly reproduced color plates. It is even better, I think, by reason of the text and individual commentary on the various pictures by Daniel Catton Rich."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p8 N 25 '51 260w

DE GAURY, GERALD. New state of Israel. 260p il $3.95 Praeger

956.94 Israel

[52-37851]

"Maintaining that the Western world is strangely ignoring the high political importance of the Israeli colonization experiment, the non-Jewish author, a great British scholar of Middle East history, provides the only objectively-intentioned textbook that helps us estimate statistically and factually Israel's own pioneer chances for success. . . Make-up is chief feature: succinct outlines, maps, glossary, 70 references, 39 photographs, index." Library J

Bookmark 12:52 D '52 20w

"So factual and precise is this volume that it might almost be called a textbook. Yet, despite all carefully exorcised enthusiasm or disapproval, the author, an experienced British expert on the Middle East, does indicate his conviction that Israel, which he calls 'a great camp of forthright pioneers,' will surmount the formidable roster of difficulties facing it." J. G. Harrison

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Ag 2 '52 210w

"This will satisfy many people eager to know more about Israel and will lead others to read from the selected bibliography included. . . Should be useful as a reference handbook."

+ Kirkus 20:359 Je 15 '52 150w

DE GAURY, GERALD—Continued

"This octavo-sized handbook typifies an A. L. A. motto—the best reading for the largest number at the least cost," J. M. Scherr

+ Library J 77:1186 J1 '52 140w

"Israel had hitherto not found an English writer to expound its structure and institutions in a book. Colonel De Gaury, who knows the Middle East well, is first in the field, and he has given us all the facts so far as they can be gathered from official publications of the Government of Israel and the United Nations. Occasionally we could wish for a few less facts and a little more comment." Norman Bentwich

+ — Manchester Guardian p4 J1 22 '52 200w

Reviewed by R. H. S. Crossman

New Statesman & Nation 44:112 J1 26 '52 70w

"De Gaury's survey of Israel differs from most others in its extreme coolness. By carefully avoiding more than a brisk resume of the controversial events leading up to the Declaration of the State of Israel on May 14, 1948, in a Tel Aviv movie theater ringing with cheers, de Gaury keeps both strong emotion and major differences of opinion out of his book. . . . There are many good photographic illustrations and an ample bibliography of those other books on Israel already on the shelves." R. W. E.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 S 21 '52 170w

"In many ways a disappointment. Mr. de Gaury can write so outstandingly well when his eye and sympathies are engaged that it is sad to find him accepting the status of a compiler. He has abandoned the desert for the sown, descriptive writing for statistics, and produced a book of facts and figures about the State of Israel." Edward Hodgkin
Spec 189:310 S 5 '52 120w

DE GRAAFF, JAN. New book of lilies. 176p il $3.50 Barrows

635.93 Lilies

Agri51-543

A guide to the growing of lilies by an authority who has worked with lilies in Holland, England, and for some twenty years in this country. Partial contents: How to grow lilies; Growing lilies indoors; How lilies multiply; How new kinds are made; Progress to date; Lily troubles; Lily lists; Reference chart of species and varieties; Lily language; a glossary; Index.

Booklist 48:95 N 15 '51

"The book is far more than a record of a famous bulb grower's accomplishments. In the best sense it is a monograph of modern lily culture in gardens, with all the instructive merit that such a phrase implies. Lily enthusiasts of all degrees will find it enlightening, helpful and keenly stimulative." R. S. Lemmon

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p28 My 11 '52 170w

Reviewed by C. H. Woodward

Sat R 35:20 Ag 2 '52 40w

DE GROOT, SYBREN RUURDS. See Groot, S. R. deDE HARTOG, JAN. See Hartog, J. deDE JAEGER, RAYMOND J., and KUHN, MRS IRENE (CORBALLY). Enemy within; an eyewitness account of the communist conquest of China. 314p $3.75 Doubleday

951.042 Communism—China. China—History 52-5541

"Account of a Catholic priest's experiences with the Chinese Communists during their methodic climb to power in North China in the long years of war against Japan. Father deJaeger contradicts much that was written by other observers during the same years, for his experiences were bitter and the Communists were vile. He frankly states that he has been at war with the Chinese Communists from almost the moment, late in 1937, when they took command of the Chinese city of which he was bishop and temporarily mayor." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) Index.

Booklist 48:262 Ap 15 '52

Reviewed by B. F. Meyer

Cath World 175:237 Je '52 350w

Reviewed by Walter Simmons

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Mr 30 '52 360w

"The over-all picture of the Chinese revolution, of which the Communist is but one phase, is yet to be written both in events and in words. The present book adds one more very interesting document to the cumulating materials with which a future historian may write an objective account." L. S. C. Smythe
Christian Century 69:559 My 7 '52 1400w

Foreign Affairs 30:683 J1 '52 20w

Kirkus 20:57 Ja 15 '52 190w

Reviewed by H. P. Linton

Library J 77:592 Ap 1 '52 130w

"What Father deJaeger witnessed makes interesting narrative and is presented in lively style by his collaborator. . . . When Father deJaeger is telling his personal story the book is vivid and lively; when he and his collaborator try to explain a complex historical event they offer little, aside from a devil theory, to help us understand how China went Communist." C. M. Wilbur

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Mr 23 '52 700w

"'The Enemy Within,' which has a flavor of authenticity that is almost unique, tells of the nearly unrelieved treachery, terror and oppression that followed the Communist advance. . . . It is impressively successful in its primary purpose of revealing Chinese communism as a ruthless dictatorship. In addition, however, the inevitability of the Red victory is curiously revealed." Stuart Lillico

+ — N Y Times p31 Mr 16 '52 550w

"It makes a grisly story and will come as a surprise to those who have the notion that Reds of the Chinese species are less cruel than their cousins to the west; if anything, according to Father de Jaeger, they are worse. The book winds up with a discussion of the ill-fated Marshall mission to China, a chapter that is certainly as depressing as any in the book."

New Yorker 28:147 Ap 19 '52 140w

"A book that will be rightfully remembered and that should be read for many years to come." Hallett Abend

+ Sat R 35:11 My 17 '52 800w

Springf'd Republican p7D My 18 '52 250w

DEJONG, DAVID CORNEL. Two sofas in the parlor. 253p $3 Doubleday

52-5115

The story of one year, 1913, in the lives of a Dutch family recently come from Holland to Grand Rapids.

Bookmark 11:108 F '52 30w

"There are warmth, wisdom, and laughter in the book. It should appeal to many, and most particularly to all who know its region or who share its roots." Edmund Fuller

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ja 20 '52 290w

Kirkus 19:682 D 1 '51 160w

"Mr. DeJong tells the story of the Kegels and their neighbors appealingly, with humor as well as understanding. It is a vivid commentary on some of the pains of the melting pot, even for a family much better equipped than most to start life over again in a new land." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Ja 20 '52 490w

"The story comes off better than most novels of its kind, largely because David DeJong has focused firmly on one small segment of Renzel Kegel's experience—his thirteenth year... DeJong is least successful with his dialogue."

Robert Lowry

+ — N Y Times p20 Ja 20 '52 480w

"Mr. DeJong tells their story in a breezy tone, allotting sympathy to all and relying on whimsey for his humor."

New Yorker 27:98 Ja 26 '52 80w

"A delightful picture of family life in the misnamed 'melting pot' that was America early in this century." E. J. Fitzgerald

+ Sat R 35:15 F 23 '52 360w

DE LA BEDOYERE, MICHAEL, count. Life of Baron von Hügel. 366p il $5 Scribner

B or 92 Hügel, Friedrich, freiherr von

[51-8513]

"Definitive biography of Baron Friedrich von Hügel (1852-1925), distinguished philosopher and saintly Catholic layman, son of an Austrian diplomat, born on the continent, but who lived his life in England. The book brings out clearly by means of generous quotations from his correspondence the prominent part the Baron played in the modernist controversies which harassed the Church at the opening of this century; the import of his letters, essays, and his two famous books The Mystical Element of Religion (1908) and Eternal Life (1912) upon Catholic life and thought." Library J

"Students of the Modernist conflict of the early twentieth century will not find all the answers to the problem in this biography. But what they will find is a 'jeweled' portrait of the central figure, a man much maligned by the ignorant, understood by the wise, and justified by history." G. E. Sherry

+ Cath World 176:76 O '52 330w

"As a solid and temperate piece of scholarship The Life of Baron von Hügel must be strongly recommended to serious students." Theodore Maynard

+ Commonweal 56:100 My 2 '52 550w

Reviewed by J. H. Nichols

J Religion 32:223 Jl '52 850w

Reviewed by R. P. Breaden

+ Library J 77:718 Ap 15 '52 140w

"The book is important, but it is really unnecessarily allusive, incoherent, and, at times, exasperating."

— + Manchester Guardian p3 Jl 30 '51 210w

"This picture of von Hügel, composed by Count de la Bedoyère (editor of the British Catholic Herald) with ability, tact and discretion, is substantially the same as that which emerges after critical examination from the mass of material previously printed about him." A. H. Dakin

+ N Y Times p7 F 17 '52 1050w

Reviewed by W. R. Matthews

Spec 187:101 Jl 20 '51 750w

"A life of von Hügel without Modernism would be like a life of Pascal without Jansenism, or a life of Fénelon without Quietism. Count de la Bedoyère has performed the thankless task of following von Hügel through the 'terrible years' with knowledge, tact and judgment. By focusing attention on von Hügel's relations with the principal figures of the movement, with Loisy and Tyrrell, Maude Peter and Mignot, he transmutes what might easily have become an opaque theological screen into the very stuff of which von Hügel's life and work were made."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p557 S 7 '51 3900w

DEACOUR, JEAN THEODORE. Pheasants of the world; il. by J. C. Harrison. 347p maps $35 Scribner

598.2 Pheasants

52-7331

"Although several species of pheasants were known in Asiatic countries and in Europe two or three thousand years ago, 'the greatest number of pheasants have come to the knowledge of Western zoologists during the nineteenth century'... Some species may still be undiscovered; and a few have never been observed in their wild state. Jean Deacour himself has found and described a number of new forms as a result of expeditions to Indo-China during the past forty years. The sixteen genera recognized by Deacour are well described here and all essential available information needed by ornithologists, aviculturists and sportsmen is provided." N Y Times

"Recommended for reference or sporting libraries." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 77:58 Ja 1 '52 50w

"M. Jean Deacour has long been pre-eminent as an authority on these wonderful birds... The whole production of the book and the coloured plates are fully worthy of their subject, and that is praise enough." A. W. Boyd

+ Manchester Guardian p4 O 9 '51 300w

"This book, handsomely made in England, will long remain standard in its field. It is an important contribution to ornithology, and a fascinating study of beautiful, exotic birds." Thomas Foster

+ N Y Times p13 D 16 '51 230w

Times [London] Lit Sup p145 F 22 '52 480w

DE LA ROCHE, MAZO. Boy in the house, and other stories. (Atlantic Monthly press bk) 244p $3 Little

52-10943

A collection of nine short stories and a novelette by the author of the Jalna books. Contents: Auntimay; The celebration; "Twa Kings"; The submissive wife; The broken fan; Patient Miss Peel; A word for Coffey; The widow Cruse; Quartet; A boy in the house (novelette).

"The collection adds up to good reading, and to an enhancement of the author's already considerable standing." Olive Caruthers

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 2 '52 280w

Reviewed by W. K. Rugg

Christian Science Monitor p5 D 24 '52 180w

Kirkus 20:571 S 1 '52 160w

"Even non-short story readers will enjoy this collection and students of technique of short story writing will find it worth their attention." H. R. Forbes

+ Library J 77:1654 O 1 '52 40w

"Nine short stories and the novelette from which the book takes its title here show that Mazo de la Roche is at home among people outside the Whiteoak clan with which her name is inextricably associated. The settings range from this country and Canada to England, Scotland and the Continent. The stories are chiefly of plain people, often humble people, and of the humor and pathos of human nature."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p40 D 7 '52 150w

"Told with simplicity, these stories have a quaint, old-fashioned atmosphere which will appeal to those who want to escape momentarily from present-day life." Louise Anderson

+ N Y Times p23 Ja 4 '53 330w

"All of them [are] homey, diffuse, and gentle, and most of them with a substantial injection of rather childish irony toward the end. Miss de la Roche apparently believes that all she needs to make a story is a group of very ordinary people trying to grapple with some minute crisis that temporarily disturbs their lives, but these formless and characterless pieces of writing do nothing to prove that she is right."

— + New Yorker 28:172 N 8 '52 40w

"The touch is mildly ironic, the writing cleanly effective. It is in the plotting that Miss de la Roche surprisingly breaks down." E. J. F.

+ Sat R 35:37 D 6 '52 170w

Times [London] Lit Sup p789 D 5 '52 70w

DE LA TORRE-BUENO, LILLIAN (MRS G. S. MCCUE). Heir of Douglas; being a new solution to the old mystery of the Douglas cause. 267p il $4 Knopf

B or 92 Douglas, Archibald James Edward Douglas, 1st baron 51-13219

A new account of a famous 18th century mystery; was Archibald Douglas really the son of Lady Jane Douglas and heir to the Douglas title and wealth? Index.

Booklist 49:12 S 1 '52

Bookmark 12:34 N '52 20w

Reviewed by Paul Engle

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ag 31 '52 350w

Kirkus 20:359 Je 15 '52 210w

"Since she went direct to the sources at Yale and in Edinburgh, where she shared 'old port and rascally reminiscence' with the late William Roughhead, it will be a brave man who will dispute her conclusions. Recommended." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 77:1300 Ag '52 120w

Reviewed by S. H. Monk

New Repub 127:20 O 13 '52 700w

"[A] fresh and remarkably compelling solution to the mystery. It is a solution far more satisfying than either of those handed down by the judges in the case and it gains its solidity from a detachment that neither court demonstrated sufficiently to examine the evidence in the light of the people who had made it. It is her realization of the various values of character which make Miss de la Torre's answer to the two hundred year old puzzle more satisfactory than any of its predecessors and, so far as I can see, as unassailable as it is satisfying and astonishingly simple." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ag 31 '52 750w

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch

N Y Times p10 Ag 17 '52 700w

"Miss de la Torre's account is a fascinating one, re-creating the Eighteenth Century world in which the struggle went on, combing out the multifarious details so that the story comes clear, presenting in the end a tragic and touching picture of a great lady who—maybe—was wholly innocent of any conspiracy, and a husband who was—maybe—guilty of as fantastic a fraud as history has known." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 S 7 '52 1050w

"Grade A specialty." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 35:38 S 20 '52 30w

DE LEEUW, ADELE LOUISE, and DE LEEUW, CATEAU. Make your habits work for you. 271p $3.95 Pellegrini & Cudahy

158.43 Psychology, Applied. Habit 52-8451

A book of applied psychology which chapter by chapter describes some trait or habit that will make for a better life—at work, at play, at home and abroad—illustrating it with a case study and offering a tabulated method for improvement.

Booklist 49:41 O 1 '52

"Without any longhanded psychological terms, [the authors] offer down-to-earth suggestions and formulas for improving your state of mind and your methods of operation. Their prize specimen of effective work habits was their father, A. Lodewyk de Leeuw, an engineer and inventor. He'd like their book." L. T. Heron

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune Bk R p19 O 5 '52 80w

Kirkus 20:361 Je 15 '52 70w

"The style is simple. There is a good deal of repetition which may annoy older people. The many case histories may be helpful to teachers. Dealing with this subject is needed and one overlooks the lack of distinction in presentation." K. T. Willis

Library J 77:1187 J1 '52 40w

DE LEEUW, ADELE LOUISE, and DE LEEUW, CATEAU. Mickey the monkey; il. by Robert Henneberger. 116p $2.50 Little

52-5009

Imaginative story of a boy and a monkey and their adventures on a bus, in a farmer's auto, and in the junkman's truck.

Booklist 48:268 Ap 15 '52

Bookmark 11:186 My '52

"Mischievous, temperamental Mickey and adventurous Tom, his guide and mentor, make a most engaging pair—both in story and lively illustrations." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 Mr 2 '52 180w

Horn Bk 28:106 Ap '52 90w

"A delightful and straight-faced tribute to all childhood familiars and their creators."

+ Kirkus 20:1 Ja 1 '52 120w

"It is a very 'real' sounding pretend story and the action is well suited to this age boy."

L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Mr 23 '52 170w

"The story is gay, unusual and completely delightful. So are the illustrations." M. F. Kieran

+ N Y Times p26 Mr 2 '52 170w

DEL FIORENTINO, DANTE. See Fiorentino, D. del

DE LIMA, SIGRID. Swift cloud. 235p $3 Scribner

52-7124

Study of guilt in novelized form. A man is unjustly accused of murdering his mentally defective son. The case against him is built up gradually, a bit here and a bit there. Then the case collapses, but too late to save the accused.

Booklist 48:214 Mr 1 '52

Kirkus 20:8 Ja 1 '52 160w

"'The Swift Cloud' is a disappointment—the more so if one remembers Miss de Lima's first novel, 'Captain's Beach,' and the expectation it aroused of even better things to come. . . Yet, 'The Swift Cloud' has its excellences." Ernest Jones

+ Nation 174:350 Ap 12 '52 210w

"Miss de Lima tells her story clearly and with almost relentless detail. In spite of the fact that Clyde is indicted by an unsavory type of emotion, she avoids emotion in telling of it. Her effect is gained by small personal observations, by physical details almost invariably squalid because they are so microscopically enlarged. One admires her realism, but it is not balanced by a dramatic sense which might relieve its monotony."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 F 24 '52 280w

"Powerful and marvelously articulated story. . . Miss De Lima's characters always have lifelikeness and often possess tragic dignity or indignity. Her style, however, is distracting. Without the precosities, the little pyramids of eloquent particles, the poetic affectation of a rich sparseness, and without the irritating transitions, so cunning and so unnecessary, this fine conception would have made a very distinguished novel indeed." M. M. Ahern

+ N Y Times p4 F 17 '52 310w

"Miss de Lima is a thoughtful, observant writer, but this dirgelike tale starts out on too low a note and goes on much too long."

+ New Yorker 28:130 Mr 29 '52 40w

"Miss de Lima's observation of the world we live in is as razor-sharp as that of anyone writing fiction today. . . Although some of the flash-backs in the story are not quickly recognizable as such, 'The Swift Cloud' is a serious, thoughtfully-conceived novel that can tell all of us a lot about ourselves and be enjoyable reading besides." J. H.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p26 Mr 23 '52 450w

"In concept Miss De Lima's second novel marks an advance from her first, 'Captain's Beach.' In style, method, execution, or whatever you may call it, there is no advance, and with Miss De Lima's particular weaknesses that does not mean holding her ground, but slipping back a little." Edmund Fuller
Sat R 35:18 Mr 22 '52 450w

DELMONTE, JOHN. Plastics molding 493p il $9 Wiley

668.4 Plastics. Molds (for plastics) 52-7071
"In this book, the complex machinery of plastic molding plants is treated from the engineering standpoint. After a chapter on plastic materials, there follow chapters on hydraulic pumps, accumulators, heating equipment, molding machines, instrumentation, plant layout, etc. Basic calculations such as estimation of heat losses are explained, but most of the text is descriptions of machines and accessories." (Library J) Chapter bibliographies. Index.

"The book will be fundamental in any collection on plastic manufacturing." R. E. Hawkins
+ Library J 77:536 Mr 15 '52 80w

"The book will be of interest chiefly to trained engineers concerned either with the organization of plastics molding plants or with their management."

N Y New Tech Bks 37:25 Mr '52

"Intended for those professionally engaged in the plastics industry and versed in physics and engineering, the book will serve them well as a reliable and well-written source of information; even those who do not enjoy the benefits of basic technical knowledge will find much of it accessible to them."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:213 Je '52 140w

DEL REY, LESTER. Marooned on Mars. 210p $2 Winston

Science-fiction novel. 52-5497

Booklist 48:384 Jl 15 '52

"On the whole it's a sensible story."

+ Kirkus 20:228 Ap 1 '52 100w

"Not first-rate S-F, but recommended to fill the demand." L. T. Bulman

Library J 77:1081 Je 15 '52 80w

Reviewed by H. H. Holmes

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Jl 6 '52 70w

"A superior adventure story." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p15 Je 22 '52 110w

DEL REY, LESTER. Pirate flag for Monterey; the story of the sack of Monterey; il. by Donald E. Cooke. 178p $1.50 Winston

52-5488

Story of California in 1818 and the pirate Hypolite Bouchard who sacked Monterey and raised the Argentine flag over it for a short time. The hero is a boy of sixteen.

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Ag 3 '52 40w

Kirkus 20:261 Ap 15 '52 140w

Reviewed by Claire Nolte

Library J 77:1080 Je 15 '52 90w

"This probably will have chiefly local appeal." L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 My 11 '52 40w

"Not all the fictional exploits of Mike O'Banion, young Californian, are entirely convincing, but the historical background is authentic." E. L. Buell

N Y Times p26 Je 8 '52 30w

"One of the new titles in the Winston Adventure Books, Del Rey's story lives up to all expectations."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 My 11 '52 200w

Sat R 35:45 O 11 '52 20w

DE MADARIAGA, SALVADOR. See Madariaga, S. de

DE MILLE, AGNES GEORGE. Dance to the piper. 342p il $3.50 Little

B or 92 Dancers—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Ballet 52-119

Autobiography of the American ballerina and choreographer who created Rodeo and the ballets in Carousel and Oklahoma. Among the famous persons who appear in the book is her uncle, Cecil De Mille. Index.

"Miss de Mille writes with crisp vigor and an astringent wit—and her story is a natural." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 189:82 F '52 490w

Booklist 48:184 F 1 '52

Bookmark 11:104 F '52 20w

"An extremely interesting autobiography in itself, Agnes de Mille's story is a rare delight for the theater-goer and the 'balletomane.'" Muriel Reno

+ Cath World 175:78 Ap '52 330w

Reviewed by Claudia Cassidy

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Ja 13 '52 350w

Reviewed by Margaret Lloyd

Christian Science Monitor p7 Ja 17 '52 550w

"Probably too long, too filled with names, and too involved with the author's ideas about the dance's relation to sex and religion to hold any but the mature readers with a genuine interest in stage and screen. However, for those dance fans this is the authentic behind-the-scenes book they will read from cover to cover." M. C. Scoggin

+ Horn Bk 28:126 Ap '52 150w

Kirkus 19:656 N 1 '51 270w

"A book whose appeal extends far beyond the average theatre biography. It is well written, too. Recommended highly both for circulation (paid) and reference." George Freedley

+ Library J 77:533 Mr 15 '52 70w

"Among memoirs of dancers and choreographers her book is particularly valuable because, in spite of a certain repetitiveness, it is illuminated by so true an enthusiasm, so fervent an imagination, and so critical an intelligence. Like other artists, she may tend to over-value those who have influenced her and to under-value or almost ignore those of whom she has less experience, but what she says is well worth hearing." J. H. M.

+ Manchester Guardian p4 F 6 '52 280w

"The entire book is as interesting and exciting as some of her best dance works and one puts it down with one word—Bravo!" Paul Magriel

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 9:420 Je '52 260w

Nation 174:161 F 16 '52 30w

New Statesman & Nation 42:740 D 22 '51 180w

"Her book is full of wisdom and truth. . . It is high time that some one wrote honestly about dancers, singers, actors, producers, authors and directors. Miss de Mille has done this. An informal autobiography, 'Dance to the Piper' rings true. It is sound in its human values and unaffected in its narration." Oscar Hammerstein II

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 Ja 13 '52 1500w

"I like this book. It is hardly complete in any one way, but as a whole it is engaging, honest, informative and even useful. It gives the layman a vivid idea of what it costs in time, money, moral courage and physical effort to become and remain a dancer. And what Miss de Mille tells us, by recording the salient points of her career, has a meaning which extends beyond the realm of the dance itself." Harold Clurman

+ N Y Times p3 Ja 13 '52 1000w

"Written, for the most part, with the wit, bounce and ginger that characterize the dances she has composed (and, on occasion, performed) for the concert stage and for Broadway productions. . . Her memoir is dotted with shrewd and entertaining asides, which cover not only a good deal of recent dance history but such matters as the economics of the field, which are disastrous."

DE MILLE, A. G.—Continued

+ New Yorker 27:84 Ja 12 '52 210w

"All of it written with frankness and simplicity. Because she is a professional in the arts, moreover, she writes as a professional should—which is to say with a minimum of wasted words and a maximum of honesty."

J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ja 21 '52 900w

"This dancer has written a great autobiography. I am familiar with the type of book usually negotiated by opera singers, actors, and ballet dancers. . . Miss De Mille is not above anecdote. Indeed, this volume is rich in every variety. In each case, however, her use of anecdote is apposite, and adds something to the picture, the atmosphere, the story she is telling. Her powers of description are never idle or casual." Carl Van Vechten

+ Sat R 35:17 Ja 26 '52 1000w

"Miss De Mille is almost unfairly endowed. Anyone who can dance or direct a ballet as well as she can ought not to be able to write as well as she does. Her gift for re-creating a scene is no less astonishing than her genius for capturing the essence of a personality." J. M. Brown

+ Sat R 35:26 Mr 15 '52 1300w

School & Society 75:221 Ap 5 '52 40w

"Although I have never met Agnes de Mille, Dance to the Piper is exactly the kind of book I should have expected her to write. It is rich in the vitality, honesty and humour which are de Mille's professional characteristics; it gives excellently well-balanced judgements of the great dancers whom she has seen and sometimes worked with during this important and transitional period in the history of ballet; and it also paints lively portraits of the courageous author herself and her no less courageous if somewhat eccentric, mother." Lillian Browne

+ Spec 188:182 F 8 '52 600w

Springf'd Republican p21A Mr 23 '52 400w

"Dance to the Piper is considerably more than the success story of a poor little rich girl. It is a witty, civilized account of an age of revolution in the dance, by one of the spunkiest of the revolutionaries."

+ Time 59:98 Ja 14 '52 800w

"Most fascinating is the revelation of the character of the author—witty, stubborn, perceptive and full of ambition—that is achieved with an apparent literary ease unusual when an artist in one medium is rash enough to tackle another."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p88 F 1 '52 550w

"Miss De Mille's history of a triumphant career is rich, racy, and often hilarious, yet it is frank in its recital of the arduous training, the effort, and the discouragements that attend the dancer's climb to success."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:115 Je '52 230w

"Highly recommended."

+ Wis Lib Bul 48:35 Ja '52

DEMING, DOROTHY. Linda Kent, student nurse. 274p $2.50 Dodd

52-7213

Vocational novel for older girls. It follows Linda Kent's life thru her nursing course, and a tour of duty in Labrador.

Booklist 48:342 Je 15 '52

"Recommended for older girls." R. C. Buell

+ Library J 77:604 Ap 1 '52 90w

"Just right for high school girls who are uncertain about their careers." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p24 My 11 '52 100w

N Y Times p16 J1 20 '52 80w

DEMING, RICHARD. Gallows in my garden. 250p $2.50 Rinehart

52-5570

Detective story.

Kirkus 20:169 Mr 1 '52 70w

"The situations are all familiar and the imposition of a more or less hard-boiled private eye with a set of mechanical responses can't be said to arouse much excitement. The title is from Chesterton, who deserves a better tribute." James Sandoe

— N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 My 4 '52 120w

"This introduces a new and agreeable private eye, Manny Moon, but bears little relation to the Hammett-Chandler-Macdonald school. Rather this is a straightforward, old-school whodunit." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p20 My 4 '52 90w

"The easy-reading style is half flippant, half hardboiled, and the plot avoids some of the tough clichés if not quite all. C plus."

L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ap 27 '52 60w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 35:47 My 24 '52 30w

DEMUTH, NORMAN. Musical trends in the 20th century. 359p il $7 Macmillan

780.9 Music—History and criticism

"A European musicologist critically considers both those giants like Stravinsky, Schoenberg, and Bartók who revolutionized serious music in this century and lesser figures like Delius and Holst who lived in the century but were not of it. Along the way he does out searching and sympathetic criticism of the French and British modernists, but scants his remarks on German and American composers. Nevertheless he introduces many continental composers who are unknown outside of their national orbits. The text presupposes an ability to read scores, and thorough technical preparation." Booklist

Booklist 48:355 J1 1 '52

"The author, making available much material of interest, expresses evaluations of composers most of whom have rarely before found their way into books. . . Mr. Demuth writes with first-hand knowledge of d'Indy, Fauré, Dukas, Schmitt, Koechlin. . . The English Panorama contains useful information from one on the inside looking out. . . The section on The American Naissance is frequently irritating and lacking in understanding." Marion Bauer

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 9:611 S '52 1000w

"Only a few people writing in English have managed to combine courage with that detachment which is necessary for making valid evaluations of new work. In this country, the late Paul Rosenfeld represented this kind of criticism, and his death has left us with only a few men—Alfred Frankenstein of the San Francisco Chronicle is such a critic—who are equipped to judge new work and whose judgment is conditioned by actual knowledge. This generally bad state of affairs makes Norman Demuth's new book more gratifying to musicians than it really deserves to be. This is because Demuth, in his writing, represents that standard of criticism which should guide all music critics in their work. . . His book, and others like it, are badly needed now." Robert Evett

+ New Repub 127:20 S 1 '52 500w

"On the whole, Mr. Demuth has written an erudite and provocative book. It is a little too technical for the average layman, and tends to be loaded down with the opaque clichés of modern musical jargon. His opinions are his own, however, and he has arrived at them by plowing the field freshly and with great patience." Winthrop Sargeant

+ N Y Times p7 J1 20 '52 750w

"There are sections of interest in Demuth's study. If his musical horizon revolves a bit too closely around such centers as the Royal Academy, the Paris Conservatoire, and people and events close by, what he has to say about this orbit is often vivid and to the point. His account of the impact which Erik Satie and 'Les Six' exerted on French esthetic tenets, though by no means new to the student of modern music, revives the vibrant excitement with which musical France was once filled. . . . But whatever happens outside the Paris-London setting, or is not at least 'legalized' there, appears, according to this book, either insignificant or nonexistent. Its cursory treatment of American music as being 'in its twentieth-century adolescence,' together with a consoling pat-on-the-shoulder ('America is avid for learning'), may have been justified twenty-five years ago. Today it not only betrays utter misunderstanding of the various creative directions towards which American music radiates but actual lack of knowledge of newer literature."

— + Sat R 35:17 Ag 30 '52 850w

"Mr. Demuth's gift is for collecting rather than interpreting facts, and for musical analysis rather than for literary presentation. He is obviously acquainted with a vast number of twentieth-century works, and, as a working musician, and himself a composer, he has a quick eye for professional skill and originality in the handling of material. . . . Any presentation of any half-century of music will bear the imprint of the author's personality and predilections, but Mr. Demuth has a catholic taste, and is usually generous in his appreciation. The markedly poor style in which the book is written is not to be regretted so much as a literary failure (though it is that too) but as too often reflecting slipshod or superficial thinking." Martin Cooper

+ — Spec 188:682 My 23 '52 400w

"This is an ambitious scheme and the large number of music-type examples (more than 130), though they make the price of the book high, greatly assist both the author to make, and the reader to grasp, points of style and texture which would be otherwise impossible. Mr. Demuth is at his best when discussing or describing concrete examples of an individual composer's style. . . . When Mr. Demuth generalizes or discusses music within the larger framework of history or aesthetics he is much less successful and too often descends to the commonplace or to the easy, unscholarly reflections of general conversation."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p268 Ap 18 '52 650w

DENBIGH, KENNETH GEORGE. Thermodynamics of the steady state. 103p $1.75 Wiley 541.36 Thermodynamics 52-7588

"A short presentation of the main concepts and hypotheses of the thermodynamics of irreversible processes. Although the author describes it as a simple interpretation, the reader will need considerable background in the basic ideas of thermodynamics and in mathematics. . . . The important literature is listed in a two-page bibliography." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

"Sixty references to the important publications in this field are provided for those who may wish to pursue this subject more thoroughly than is possible in this small monograph. The author has completed a most creditable work." F. D. Rossini

+ Chem & Eng N 30:2646 Je 23 '52 120w

"The little booklet is a masterful collection of essay type lectures based on Thomson's hypothesis and Onsager's theory of microscopic reversibility. It would seem to this reviewer that particularly those of our colleagues who would gladly part with such time-honored concepts as entropy would greatly benefit by reading this scholarly piece of work." F. C. Nachod

+ Chem Eng 59:418 Jl '52 100w

N Y New Tech Bks 37:47 My '52

DENHARDT, EDITH TILTON (MRS PEN-ROSE). Economics of the international patent system. 247p $4 Johns Hopkins press

608 Patent laws and legislation 51-14897

"Believing that the only sound justification for international patent arrangements lies in their economic effects, Dr. Penrose here re-examines the provisions of the International Convention for the Protection of Industrial Property, to which most economically important countries adhere. Several enlightening chapters discuss the controversies out of which the Convention arose; the remainder of the study is an analysis of the rules laid down in the Convention, of alternative national practices permitted under it, and of major proposals for changing the rules." U S Quarterly Bk R

Foreign Affairs 31:152 O '52 10w

"Dr. Penrose describes the international patent convention and analyzes the economic problems with which it deals. Economists will welcome her informative discussion of this neglected subject, as well as her fairly detailed analyses of the merits of compulsory working and licensing for foreign patents. . . . Her contribution would have been greater if she had also added to our meager knowledge of the actual workings of patent systems." G. J. Stigler

+ J Pol Econ 60:360 Ag '52 450w

"Miss Penrose believes that compulsory licensing offers a better solution of the economic problems than the present insistence on compulsory working of foreign patents. There seems to be little writing on this subject by economists, and this book should prove a valuable contribution. There is a useful bibliography." J. E. Cross

+ Library J 77:439 Mr 1 '52 130w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:50 Mr '52 240w

DENKER, HENRY. Salome, princess of Galilee. 245p $3 Crowell

52-7035

This novel of biblical times presents Salome as the guilty sinner, with the blood of a Prophet on her hands, who is led to repentance and finally joins the early Christians after the death of Christ.

Reviewed by A. F. Otis

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ap 13 '52 450w

"It would seem almost impossible to reconstruct the immense emotional drama of the Gospels without emotional impact, but that is the end impression of this telling." Kirkus 20:93 F 1 '52 240w

"Interesting idea which lacks conviction due to weak character build-up. Recommended only as an unusual picture of the period." R. P. Tubby

Library J 77:590 Ap 1 '52 80w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Je 1 '52 260w

"Quite obviously the scantiness of the Gospel narrative of Salome gives the dramatist or novelist sufficient latitude to make any interpretation that suits his individual temper. . . . Mr. Denker has the knack of telling a plausible story, though his procedures are not over-subtle." John Cournos

N Y Times p25 Ap 20 '52 190w

DENMAN, FRANK. Television, the magic window. 60p il $2 Macmillan

621.388 Television—Juvenile literature 52-10189

"From the earliest beginnings of this new industry, this book traces the progress of this achievement. The technical explanation of the working of television, the building of sets and the preparation and production of programs are all presented with suggestions of what we may expect in the not too distant future." (Publisher's note) For ages 12-16.

Booklist 48:383 Jl 15 '52

Kirkus 20:128 F 15 '52 100w

Reviewed by M. I. Ross

Library J 77:801 My 1 '52 110w

"Especially interesting to young people—and older ones, too—are the detailed explanations of today's television cameras and the operation of the picture tube in the set. Finally,

DENMAN, FRANK—Continued

Mr. Denman suggests ways of improving television programs if you don't like the fare the companies are offering at present." Creighton Peet

+ N Y Times p18 Ag 24 '52 160w

Wis Lib Bul 48:220 S '52

DENNETT, RAYMOND, and JOHNSON, JOSEPH ESREY, eds. Negotiating with the Russians. 310p $3.50 World peace foundation, 40 Mt Vernon St, Boston 8

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations—Russia.
Russia—Foreign relations—U.S. 51-8287

"This is a collection of studies, independently written and prepared without reference to each other, by a number of prominent Americans who participated in our negotiations with the Russians from 1940 to 1947. It includes meetings on military assistance, Lend-Lease, war crimes prosecutions, etc., and conclusions independently reached. The pattern which emerges, is that negotiations with the Soviet Union are seldom successful if political conditions are not favorable." Current Hist

Am Pol Sci R 46:593 Je '52 90w

"This book is a useful contribution to the sociology of conflict." Jessie Bernard

+ Am Soc R 17:385 Je '52 750w

"It is difficult to praise this volume too highly. The materials contained in it should be extremely useful not only to specialists on Soviet affairs, international relations, and comparative government, but also to all responsible officials concerned with American foreign policy. Editors and journalists, and, perhaps most of all, members of Congress might also do well to study this volume." F. C. Barghoorn

+ Ann Am Acad 280:165 Mr '52 440w

Booklist 48:191 F 15 '52

"Here is a discerning study of the effectiveness of various tactics in the important realm of negotiation. It should be at least as much of a contribution to the triumph of enlightenment." Tully Nettleton

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 D 5 '51 650w

"All the chapters are well done." H. C. Hinton

+ Commonweal 55:305 D 28 '51 950w

Current Hist 22:37 Ja '52 110w

Foreign Affairs 30:504 Ap '52 50w

Reviewed by A. J. P. Taylor

Nation 173:571 D 29 '51 450w

Reviewed by Alexander Klein

New Repub 126:19 Mr 3 '52 500w

"The unique contribution of this present volume is that it presents accounts of a representative sample of East-West negotiations by Americans who have participated in them and seeks to analyze what can be learned from them to help guide similar efforts in the future." Harry Schwartz

N Y Times p5 D 9 '51 850w

"The question whether one can in fact negotiate with the Soviet Union, and what such negotiation entails, is of such importance that the intentions of the editors of this volume, to collect the experiences of men who have negotiated with the Russians on relatively detailed issues during and since the last world war, were wholly admirable. Their ability to carry out this plan has been hampered by the obvious limitation that not all of the contributors hoped for were available, and by the less obvious one that the book is a record of negotiation by Americans. . . In fact, however, the peculiarities of Soviet conduct in the international field spring so directly from its internal structure and its dominant ideology that many of them are constants; and the volume would have been worth sponsoring if only for the brilliant concluding chapter by Philip Mosely, which should be compulsory reading for anyone of whatever nationality who finds himself confronted with the task of negotiating with the Russians." Max Beloff

+ Pacific Affairs 25:317 S '52 450w

School & Society 75:237 Ap 12 '52 30w

"This book has a value far beyond its announced purpose of examining the conduct of negotiations with the Russians, for it provides a great many insights into the peculiar workings of the contemporary Soviet mind."

E. J. Brown

+ Survey 88:142 Mr '52 550w

"The cumulative effect on the reader of these essays will be one of discouragement, it must be admitted. . . If, however, we are to continue to seek to reduce tension between the East and the West, it is important to understand what Mr. Mosely calls 'the peculiar character of the Soviet approach to negotiation.' This book should contribute to such understanding."

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:70 Mr '52 230w

Reviewed by W. R. Sharp

Yale R n s 41:628 summer '52 700w

DENNISTON, ELINORE (RAE FOLEY, pseud.). Wake the sleeping wolf. 234p $2.50 Dodd

52-8078

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Ap 27 '52 90w

"It's hard to say why a well-conceived book seems so lifeless. Partly, perhaps, because the finally revealed motivations are hard to believe; largely because all of the characters talk the same written-rather-than-heard prose." Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p35 Ap 6 '52 80w

"Miss Foley seems to know her psychoanalysis, which makes a sound enough basis for a well told story with interesting characters." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 Mr 30 '52 50w

"Very good." Kathleen Sproul

+ Sat R 35:63 Ap 12 '52 50w

DENNON, LESTER E., ed. See Russell, B. A. W. R. Dictionary of mind, matter and morals

DEPPERMAN, W. H. Shooter's choice. 189p il $3.95 World pub.

623.44 Firearms

A treasury of information on firearms, ammunition and ballistics, supplemented with over 140 high-speed-photography illustrations of guns and bullets.

Booklist 48:374 J1 15 '52

Bookmark 11:230 J1 '52 20w

"Because Mr. Depperman obviously has the ability to make complicated phases of shooting and ballistics clear for the average gunner, this is an indispensable book for the upland game, waterfowl, and deer hunter. The scores of remarkable, high speed photographs of guns and bullets smashing into targets are the finest we've seen in any book on sporting firearms." Bob Becker

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 O 12 '52 80w

"Recommended." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 77:1206 J1 '52 30w

"Among the fall's better books for outdoorsmen is this one by a sporting magazine writer who is also a distinguished gun enthusiast." Jack Pegues

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 S 28 '52 90w

DERBY, MARK. Afraid in the dark [Eng title: Malayan Rose]. 280p $3 Viking

51-14902

Adventure story of the experiences of Patrick Derrex, a psychiatric casualty of the war. After four years in an Army institution, Patrick goes out into the postwar world jobless and insecure as to his future. Accepting a dangerous mission in Malaya he finally finds himself and saves the woman he loves.

Booklist 48:113; 159 D 1 '51; Ja 1 '52

"Sheer melodrama at times, at others an effectively tense story of vengeance and regeneration, this is superb adventure. Only when the unreal romance intervenes, the handling becomes inept for what is otherwise successful suspense for a dual market."

+ — Kirkus 19:664 N 15 '51 120w

"Written in a high-octane, stout-fella prose, this is more in the unfortunately, proliferating tradition of Mickey Spillane." E. F. Walbridge
Library J 77:48 Ja 1 '52 100w

"Fast moving, expertly written narrative."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 My 25 '52 220w

"The best that can be said for all this is that it is more readable than convincing."
Basil Davenport

N Y Times p22 Ja 6 '52 300w

New Yorker 27:88 Ja 12 '52 90w

"The characters and scenery are good, and there are enough thrills, escapes and horrors in this to shake the most case-hardened reader. B plus." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ja 27 '52 70w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 35:59 Ja 19 '52 30w

"This is a first novel, and its standard of writing and invented suspense make one very hopeful indeed—after all, it has been a long time since Buchan." Marghanita Laski

+ Spec 187:168 Ag 3 '51 110w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal

Springf'd Republican p8D F 3 '52 120w

"The book fails, both as a thriller and a novel, through the feebly conventional way in which its characters are drawn. The description in some detail of Makota's sadism gives an unpleasant novelty to the story without, as the author apparently intended, making him a thoroughly credible figure."

Times [London] Lit Sup p481 Ag 3 '51 240w

DERBY, MARK. Element of risk. 313p $3 Viking

52-12085

A young English commando turned actor who seems to be losing his memory goes to the country for a rest. Instead of rest he finds dangerous adventure when he meets a beautiful widow recently acquitted of murdering her husband.

Booklist 49:32 S 15 '52

"If you don't push for explanations too hard, it's a diverting story." Paul Engle
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 S 7 '52 250w

Kirkus 20:422 J1 15 '52 120w

Reviewed by James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p19 S 21 '52 270w

"Comparison of Derby, a comer, with Eric Ambler, the master of this form, is of interest to the espionage fan. And, while it must be said that Mr. Derby is not quite in the same league as the master, his batting average throughout is respectably high." Herbert Mitgang

+ N Y Times p34 S 23 '52 230w

New Yorker 28:139 O 4 '52 80w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p25 S 21 '52 80w

"The plotting of all this is loose and frantic and occasionally you get the feeling that you're caught on a roller-coaster that has gone berserk. If you'll just settle for action and forget logic, however, you have an all right time. Don't believe those comparisons with Buchan and Greene, however. Not for this number." E. J. F.

Sat R 35:42 S 13 '52 290w

"A clever, well-knit plot." J. F. Rooney
+ Springf'd Republican p9D S 23 '52 120w

DERLETH, AUGUST WILLIAM, ed. Beachheads in space; with an introd. by [the editor]. 320p $3.95 Pellegrini & Cudahy

Short stories—Collections

52-9049

Collection of science fiction stories. Contents: The star, by D. H. Keller; The man from outside, by Jack Williamson; Beachhead, by C. D. Simak; "The years draw nigh" by Lester del Rey; Metamorphosis, by E. F. Russell; The ordeal of Professor Klein, by L. S. de Camp; Repetition, by A. E. Van Vogt; "Breeds there a man . . . ?" by Isaac Asimov; Meteor, by J. B. Harris; And the walls came tumbling down, by John Wyndham; The blinding shadows, by Donald Wandrei; The metamorphosis of earth, by C. A. Smith; The ambassadors from Venus, by K. F. Crossen; To people a new world, by Nelson Bond.

Kirkus 20:574 S 1 '52 150w

"Like the late Fiorello La Guardia, when August Derleth pulls a boner, it's a beaut. Editor of several of the most tasteful anthologies in the science fiction field, he has here assembled easily the worst collection of the year (and the competition is pretty stiff). . . Only two stories (out of fourteen) can be firmly recommended to the literate reader: Isaac Asimov's 'Breeds There a man. . . ?' and Eric Frank Russell's 'Metamorphosis'—and the latter was anthologized only last year by Greenberg." H. H. Holmes

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p26 N 23 '52 140w

Reviewed by J. F. McComas

N Y Times p46 O 19 '52 200w

Reviewed by Don Fabun

San Francisco Chronicle p9 D 21 '52 130w

"Up-and-down anthology." Fletcher Pratt

+ — Sat R 35:43 O 18 '52 20w

DERLETH, AUGUST WILLIAM. Country of the Hawk; il. by L. F. Bjorklund. (American heritage ser) 192p $1.75; school ed $1.59
Aladdin

52-11814

"The background of this tale of pioneer and Indian life is the Prairie of the Sacs, along the Wisconsin River, not far from where it joins the Mississippi. It was 1830 when young David Howe and his family came from Vermont into what was then the Michigan Territory to settle and break the prairie. Swift Otter, an Indian lad, becomes his friend and saves the Howes from a Sioux raid. Grades 6-8." Wis Lib Bul

Kirkus 20:556 S 1 '52 80w

"A good story, written with zest, for boys and girls of 11-13. Short simple sentences will also make it useful for more mature, poor readers." Elizabeth Burr

+ Library J 77:1664 O 1 '52 50w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 S 28 '52 40w

Wis Lib Bul 48:220 S '52

DERLETH, AUGUST WILLIAM, ed. Night's yawning peal; a ghostly company; selected and with a foreword. 280p $3 Pellegrini & Cudahy

Contents: Mr. George, by Stephen Grendon; The loved dead, by C. M. Eddy, jr; The sign, by Lord Dunsany; The La Prelio paper, by Carl Jacobi; The gorge of the churels, by H. R. Wakefield; Doh, by M. W. Wellman; The churchyard yew, by J. S. LeFanu; Technical slip, by J. B. Harris; The man who collected Poe, by Robert Bloch; Hector, by Michael West; Roman remains, by Algernon Blackwood; A damsel with a dulcimer, by Malcolm Ferguson; The suppressed edition, by Richard Curle; The lonesome place, by August Derleth; The case of Charles Dexter Ward, by H. F. Lovecraft.

Booklist 48:360 J1 1 '52

Reviewed by Edward Wagenknecht

Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Ap 13 '52 300w

DERLETH, A. W.—Continued

"An extraordinary Poe-pastiche by Robert Bloch and contributions by Lord Dunsany, H. Russell Wakefield and Mr. Derleth himself must rank among the best supernatural stories of recent years. The others are more conventional, sometimes a bit anti-climactic in their obviousness, but always (with the exception of one lurid little shocker on necrophilia) tastefully selected for literacy and readability." H. H. Holmes

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 Ap 6 '52
170w

Reviewed by Fletcher Pratt
Sat R 35:34 Ag 2 '52 20w

DERLETH, AUGUST WILLIAM. Rendezvous in a landscape. 54p $2.50 Fine editions

811 52-10352

"A new collection of [Derleth's] poems in four groups, 'Homage to Thoreau,' 'Homage to Robert Frost,' 'Homage to Psyche,' and 'Homage to Edgar Lee Masters.' The first is the longest and the best poems in the book." N Y Times

Reviewed by Walter Harding
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Je 22 '52
300w

Reviewed by W. H. Whittemore
Christian Science Monitor p11 S 4 '52
100w

Reviewed by Rolfe Humphries
Nation 175:36 J1 12 '52 80w

"The whole design of the book is an interesting lesson in the dangers and possibilities of writing to or about writers." John Holmes
N Y Times p6 Ag 3 '52 230w

"He writes excellent pastiche in the manner of each, and some of his imitations (especially those of Frost) may indeed be better than the originals. But when Derleth drops imitation (as in the section entitled 'Homage to Psyche') there is really little left to call the poet's own, distinctive voice." Lawrence Ferling
San Francisco Chronicle p8 J1 6 '52
160w

"August Derleth has a real gift; he is observant, responsive, extremely fluent, and never pretentious. The sincerity of his poetic emotion is plain, but its intensity and profundity are weakened, I think, by its facility. Much of his work rises above mere superficiality because he is honestly moved and because his talent is considerable, but such an easy and wide responsiveness lacks pressure." S. H. Hay

+ — Sat R 35:20 S 6 '52 380w

DES CARS, GUY. The brute; tr. by Michael Luke. 250p $3 Greenberg

52-5619

Detective story.

Kirkus 20:133 F 15 '52 190w

"Guy des Cars uses the framework and the materials of the courtroom detective story although he does not submit himself to the rules of fair play." James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 My 25 '52 200w

"Pretentious but empty as a psychological study, trite and unfair as a detective story, and (even allowing for the peculiarities of French jurisprudence) singularly unconvincing as a legalistic courtroom-novel." Anthony Boucher

— N Y Times p20 My 4 '52 50w

"Grim, wordy, but unusual." L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p27 My 4 '52
40w

"The early chapters are of considerable interest. After that, the novel speedily runs down hill, degenerating in its final chapters into the kind of courtroom melodrama that would send even a child into hysterical laughter. The writing throughout is awkward. Or maybe that's the translation."

— + Sat R 35:41 Ag 9 '52 150w

Times [London] Lit Sup p689 O 24 '52
80w

DE SELINCOURT, AUBREY. On reading poetry. 71p $1.25 Swallow, A.

308.1 Poetry

"An essay for the person who has never been able to figure out just where to begin in learning to read or write poetry, this is a statement of what poetry does, in the light of tradition. Published originally in England in a kind of cultural 'how-to-do' series, this essay is based on the assumption that 'poetry is concerned directly only with beauty.'" San Francisco Chronicle

Booklist 49:86 N 1 '52

"A pleasant little book. . . Mr. de Selincourt talks down to his audience somewhat, to be sure, but he does so affably and without offense."

+ Nation 175:237 S 20 '52 110w

"The essay as a whole is capable of leading even the most illiterate in poetry to some real appreciation of it. It is easy to read." L. F.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 O 19 '52
60w

Times [London] Lit Sup p679 O 17 '52 550w

DESMOND, MRS ALICE (CURTIS). Alexander Hamilton's wife; a romance of the Hudson; ill. with photographs and with drawings by the author. 273p $3 Dodd

Hamilton, Elizabeth (Schuyler)—Fiction
52-8280

Fictionized biography of Alexander Hamilton and his wife, who was Betsy Schuyler, daughter of the famous Revolutionary General Philip Schuyler. Includes a good deal of historical background about the life in New York state in Colonial times and later. Includes information for finding the historic houses, etc. mentioned. Bibliography. No index.

Booklist 49:16 S 1 '52

Bookmark 12:35 N '52

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 N 16 '52
170w

"The reader may not condone Hamilton's susceptibility to feminine blandishments, nor be in accord with all of his political and economic theories, but it would be difficult indeed not to give Betsy unreserved admiration. Her story provides a valuable footnote to history, as well as a touching portrayal of a woman who might well serve as a model for wives of men in the public eye." M. W. Stoer

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Ag 28 '52
500w

"A carefully documented, well-written biography of interest to young people and adults." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 28:333 O '52 90w

"Authentic material based on extensive research. Recommended for older adolescents and adults." R. C. Buell

+ Library J 77:1312 Ag '52 90w

"In the story of the remarkable Elizabeth Schuyler, girls will find a long, detailed, but very satisfying biography." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p14 N
16 '52 150w

"Based on careful research and written with young readers in mind, this book achieves a nice balance between history and romance that is likely to appeal especially to high school girls." Elizabeth Hodges

+ N Y Times pt2, p20 N 16 '52 120w

DE TOLEDANO, RALPH. Spies, dupes and diplomats. 244p $3.50 Duell; Little 364.13 [351.74] Spies. U.S.—Foreign relations

52-9357

"The spies are those, American and non-American, who have served the Soviet Union so assiduously during the past decade and more. The dupes are a number of highly placed citizens of the United States who, through misguided liberalism, bad judgment, or just plain muddle-headedness, also have served to further Russian aims. The diplomats, for the most part, are in the Departments of State, Defense, and Justice, and, if we can believe what we read, they also showed a surprising lack of insight and vigor where Soviet intrigue was concerned. It is the author's thesis that, taken together, these three categories of individuals have aided immeasurably the Russian design for world conquest. More particularly, he charges them with having made possible the Communist conquest of China, the present weakened state of Japan, and the tragic division of Korea." (Christian Science Monitor) Index.

Reviewed by Joseph McSorley
+ Cath World 175:397 Ag '52 330w

"By the time one finishes this book, which might well be read along with Freda Utley's 'China Story,' one is convinced that a heavy share of responsibility for the loss of China rests with individuals and organizations in this country. The author cites names, chapter, and verse, and pulls no punches." W. H. Chamberlin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Je 22 '52 500w

"A book which discusses a situation which needs discussion, and does so interestingly. But it is also a book which if it had more restraint, more maturity, and fewer categorical assertions would have been even better." J. G. Harrison

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Je 14 '52 800w

Foreign Affairs 31:166 O '52 50w

Kirkus 20:363 Je 15 '52 160w

Reviewed by H. P. Linton
Library J 77:1009 Je 1 '52 130w

"By dealing with the Japanese and the Hull plans as if they were a single document, Mr. de Toledano makes a hash of his thesis. Far more powerful forces than the I. P. R. were at work during the fateful last months of 1941. And to pound the facts until they appear to sustain a conspiratorial theory of history is to exalt any would-be conspirators beyond their deserts and make the task of combating them that much more difficult." Harry Baehr

— N Y Herald Tribune BK R p10 Je 15 '52 900w

"Through the book runs that bitter anti-Acheson, anti-Truman theme—that the Administration was all wrong and Chiang Kai-shek was all right. There is much to be said pro and con about these extreme points of view. Apparently we will have to wait for the historians to give us a judicious account. The author relies heavily on the highly emotional memoirs of men who once renounced our system of government, worked against it as avowed Communists, and who returned to the American flag when the going got rough." Anthony Leviero

N Y Times p20 Je 15 '52 750w

"The cornerstone of this thesis is a long examination, which would be extremely interesting if it were not so atrociously written, of the activities of the Sorge spy ring in Japan before and during the last war. On this solid foundation, Mr. de Toledano has erected a startling superstructure of conjecture and innuendo, topped off with a number of resounding rhetorical questions as to the true significance of his material."

— New Yorker 28:106 Je 21 '52 200w

Reviewed by Irving Babow
San Francisco Chronicle p10 Je 29 '52 950w

Reviewed by H. C. Hinton
Sat R 35:14 Ag 2 '52 700w

"Mr. Toledano's book is based mainly on official documents, records of hearings, and previously published data. It is, however, one of the first books to attempt to correlate all the material and present it for consideration by laymen unversed in fitting together reams of evidence. The author's views are not necessarily to be accepted as gospel, but they are at least a vigorous and eloquent statement of what many people believe to be true." R. F. H.

+ Springfield Republican p6D J1 27 '52 550w

DEUEL, HARRY JAMES. The lipids; their chemistry and biochemistry; 2v; v 1, Chemistry. 982p $18.50 Interscience

574.19 Lipoids (51-8776)

"This book combines a full historical review of the work on the lipids with up-to-date information regarding properties and methods of study which are coming into wide use at the present time. Illustrative tables and charts are plentiful together with a full list of references." Am Chem Soc J

"Coming at a time when interest in the lipids is considerable and rapidly increasing Dr. Deuel's book is especially timely." W. R. Bloor

+ Am Chem Soc J 74:2950 Je 5 '52 330w

"The comprehensive critical evaluations of the data, illustrated by numerous tables and charts, have been presented in a smooth, uniform style, resulting in a cohesive, readable volume." Jacob Fitelson

+ Chem & Eng N 30:363 Ja 28 '52 230w

"A comprehensive, well-documented treatise on an abundant family of natural substances."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 37:8 Ja '52

"The need for a comprehensive summary of the available chemical information on the lipids has been filled in excellent fashion by Dr. Deuel's treatise. Although this scholarly work is intended in the first place for the biochemist and physiologist, the clear, logical presentation of its difficult subject will appeal equally well to the student and to those who are not specialists in the individual fields. Its greatest value will be its usefulness as a reference work for anyone interested in fats and related substances."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:206 Je '52 250w

DEUTSCH, BABETTE. Poetry in our time. 411p $6 Holt

821.09 American poetry—History and criticism. English poetry—History and criticism 52-6624

A critical survey of twentieth century American and British poetry. "A small portion of the text of this book appeared in essays and book reviews by the author published in various literary weeklies, in Partisan Review, and in Poetry: A Magazine of Verse. A few passages have been reprinted from her book, This Modern Poetry [Book Review Digest 1935]." (Acknowledgments) Short calendar of events in poetry. Index.

"I know of no book covering the same ground that so effectively combines learning, insight, and graceful writing."

+ Atlantic 190:87 Ag '52 130w

Booklist 48:356 J1 1 '52

"There are two special qualities which make this as fine a study of modern poetry as has ever appeared. Miss Deutsch has read widely all the poets whom we tend already to forget, as well as the newest who have published only a volume or two. She has, in addition, read with acuteness of intelligence and emotional sympathy." Paul Engle

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Je 29 '52 410w

"This is certainly a democratic way of appraising poetry in our time, but the reader for whom this book was written would perhaps have been better served by a more incisive, selective, and even trenchant study of the subject. That reader, I should think, will become impatient with a book that covers so much ground and sustains insistently so affirmative a note." P. F. Quinn

Commonweal 56:369 J1 18 '52 600w

+ Kirkus 20:254 Ap 1 '52 170w

"An intelligent and often penetrating view of what our leading poets have been saying, and their manner of saying it. . . Recommended." G. D. McDonald

+ Library J 77:888 My 15 '52 110w

"A marvelous book and ought to be recommended to anyone who wants to learn something about the poetry written in English since 1900. It is the only book I can think of that will neither bore nor bewilder the newcomer." Hayden Carruth

+ Nation 175:411 N 1 '52 330w

DEUTSCH, BABETTE—Continued

Reviewed by Kimon Friar

New Repub 127:23 S 22 '52 700w

"If I were a student in a French lycée, starting to read contemporary English and American poetry, or a civilized attorney or doctor in Grand Rapids, who had just decided to catch up on the stuff he had missed in college, or even that amorphous being, the cultivated general reader, this would be the book for me." Kenneth Rexroth

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 O 26 '52 800w

"[The book's] thoroughness and ingathering are remarkable. But always there is that tendency to sound like worked-over lecture notes. Parts of this book are in fact reprinted from Miss Deutsch's 'This Modern Poetry,' published in 1935. The main purpose of the new book is to expand and re-evaluate the earlier. I should be happier with Miss Deutsch's evaluations and re-evaluations were they less dependent on the current fashions in literary judgment." John Ciardi

+ — N Y Times p5 Je 22 '52 550w

Reviewed by Louise Bogan

New Yorker 28:166 N 8 '52 410w

"Her evaluations of individual poets are founded on both technical knowledge and intuition, and some of her most telling statements display a certain wisdom of the heart which is rare indeed in criticism. One may think she has sometimes not grasped the essence of certain poetry (as at rare moments in her discussion of Dylan Thomas). But this is inevitable in so comprehensive a work." L. F.

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p23 Ag 24 '52 350w

"The great reputations are handled competently, but with a few exceptions they do not provide the best criticism in the book. This seems to be because Miss Deutsch has been anticipated at nearly every point, and is forced either to acquiesce rather tamely or to strain for a violent originality which in some instances—Gerard Manley Hopkins, for example—verges upon the grotesque." Dudley Fitts

+ — Sat R 35:19 S 6 '52 750w

"A deft control marks every aspect of Miss Deutsch's book. The writing maintains a consistent vigor, clarity, and pungency. Here and there one may be offended by a strained epigram; but her efforts towards a pointed, witty style are more often effective. . . . Most remarkable, and underlying the success of the whole book, is the critical poise, the judicious tone, the analytic fairness, products of a fortunate wedding between native poetic sensibility and the intellectual rigor of modern critical method—a wedding that seems, incidentally, to have taken place in Miss Deutsch's writing within the very recent past. In any case, this is a book which everyone concerned with modern literature will find rewarding." L. L. Martz

+ Yale R n s 42:135 Autumn '52 550w

DEUTSCH, BABETTE (MRS AVRAHM YARMOLINSKY), and YARMOLINSKY, AVRAHM. Tales of faraway folk: pictures by Irena Lorentowicz. 68p $2.25 Harper

398 Folklore

52-10487

Collection of ten tales retold from the folk tales of Russia, Central Asia, Karelia, and Lithuania.

Booklist 49:128 D 1 '52

Reviewed by A. C. Moore

Horn Bk 28:395 D '52 70w

"Excellent bookmaking and black and white illustrations that carry the spirit of the stories." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 28:408 D '52 60w

+ Kirkus 20:598 S 15 '52 80w

"The stories themselves are simply and beautifully told as the people themselves would have told them. All are fine for reading aloud." Phyllis Fennel

+ Library J 77:1907 N 1 '52 80w

"Although fragmentary, the stories have the robust humor and the repetitive pattern characteristic of folktales all over the world. The collection is of special interest because the material is so fresh." E. S.

+ N Y Times pt2, p37 N 16 '52 80w

New Yorker 28:201 D 6 '52 50w

"They are short, cryptic stories, very much to the point. There is not a wasted word in one of them. They will be great fun to tell—and to listen to. Irena Lorentowicz's drawings, reproduced in black-and-white, reinforce and interpret the tales. It is good to have her pictures again for the children. This is a valuable addition to world folklore for American boys and girls."

+ Sat R 35:50 N 15 '52 120w

DEUTSCH, MONROE EMANUEL. College from within. 232p il $3 Univ. of Calif. press
378 Education, Higher. Colleges and universities—U.S. 52-7812

Dr Deutsch, long associated with the University of California, but now retired, writes on many aspects of the American university and college. Among his topics are free speech on the campus, religion, sabbatical leaves, the president, public relation, the faculty, the students, extracurricular activities, the alumni, etc. No index.

Booklist 48:222 Mr 15 '52

Reviewed by G. K. Chalmers

N Y Times p9 Jl 20 '52 700w

"This is talk from a man who knows, one who has played a notable part in the special world he is discussing. It is therefore worth the time of any reader interested in what the college is and is not doing today." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Mr 13 '52 800w

Reviewed by Harlan Hatcher

Sat R 35:17 Jl 26 '52 460w

School & Society 75:190 Mr 22 '52 30w

"In a clear and forceful style, sometimes almost conversational in tone, Dr. Deutsch makes observations that are both pertinent and timely."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:149 Je '52 220w

DEVON, LOUIS. Aide to glory. 246p $3 Crowell
Rawlins, John Aaron—Fiction 52-10035

A novel based on the life story of John Rawlins, General Grant's aide-de-camp during the Civil war, and later his Secretary of war.

Booklist 49:125 D 1 '52

"Interesting character study."

+ Library J 77:1758 O 15 '52 40w

"Although a novel, 'Aide to Glory' is an historically faithful depiction of a rather common situation: the Great Man whose greatness depended not only on native talent but on the faithful support of a friend."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p42 D 7 '52 270w

DEVOTO, BERNARD AUGUSTINE. Course of empire; with maps by Erwin Raisz. 647p $6 Houghton

973.1 America—Discovery and exploration. U.S.—Territorial expansion. Indians of North America 52-5261

A survey of the history of the exploration of the North American continent during three hundred years ending with 1895. The author points out that he is dealing with a number of principal themes which in combination explain American history. These themes are: "the geography of North America in so far as it was important in the actions dealt with; the ideas which the men involved in those actions had about this geography, their misconceptions and errors, and the growth of knowledge; the exploration of the United States and Canada, so much of it as was relevant to the discovery of a route to the Pacific Ocean; the contention of four empires for the area that is now the United States; the relationship to all these things, of various Indian tribes that affected them." (Pref)

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo
Atlantic 191:86 Ja '53 340w
Booklist 49:138 D 15 '52

Reviewed by Paul Engle
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 30 '52 340w

"A permanent contribution to history."
+ Kirkus 20:538 Ag 15 '52 280w

"Highly recommended." Herbert Cahoon
+ Library J 77:1646 O 1 '52 50w

"De Voto's writing would be benefited by more discipline. True, his prose, to use his own phrase, 'is not discolored by the Ph.D. style.' On the other hand, it does sometimes become too lush and overweighted with rhetoric. Despite such minor flaws, 'The Course of Empire' is a fascinating work, the value of which is enhanced by many maps, drawn by Erwin Raisz." Keith Hutchison

+ Nation 175:526 D 6 '52 750w

"A good many years ago Bernard De Voto, novelist, journalist, critic, set himself a task curiously neglected by 'professional' historians—a history of the conquest of the trans-Mississippi West. The first volume appeared just a decade ago—the Year of Decision; it was followed by that lively account of the fur traders, 'Across the Wide Missouri.' Now we have the completion of the great trilogy, not its capstone, but its foundation, 'The Course of Empire.' This is the largest of the books, largest in conception and in scope, largest, too, in spirit. It is not only the best book of the series, it is the best book that has been written about the West since Webb's 'Great Plains' and it is the best written book about the West since Parkman." H. S. Commager

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 N 23 '52 2150w

"Bernard DeVoto writes history in the grand manner. His book rests on a solid foundation in the sources—if Mr. DeVoto has not read them all, only two or three men are competent to say so—but it is also a work of art in the sense that it is consciously designed to engage the reader's imagination as well as his desire to be informed." H. N. Smith

+ N Y Times p6 N 23 '52 1000w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p22 N 23 '52 950w

"'The Course of Empire' will probably rank as DeVoto's major effort in the history field, the culmination of his attempt to tell the story of America. . . The effect is the same as that of going through a great and well-organized museum, whether of art or history. One realizes that the display is magnificent, the arrangement orderly, and the guide more competent than some guides are. At the same time, the wealth is too abundant, the panoramas too spectacular, the side corridors too enticing. The observer knows that behind each display lies a long and interesting story, but neither time nor energy will permit ferreting it out." W. P. Webb.

+ Sat R 35:11 N 22 '52 900w

DEWAR, HUGO. Assassins at large; being a fully documented and hitherto unpublished account of the executions outside Russia ordered by the GPU. 203p $3 Beacon press 351.74 Communism. Assassination. Political crimes and offenses 52-1638

"A literary investigation of the long series of murders and unsolved disappearances in the past twenty years that, occurring outside the Soviet Union, have all had as their victims opponents of Joseph Stalin's regime." New Yorker

"This book sounds, in parts, like a collection of detective and mystery stories. Actually it is a well-documented, though far from complete, report on political murder and kidnapping cases perpetrated by Soviet secret agents all over the world that have become known during the last fifteen years." Vladimir Petrov

+ Ann Am Acad 283:222 S '52 400w

Foreign Affairs 30:163 O '51 10w
New Yorker 28:131 Mr 29 '52 200w

Reviewed by Martin Ebon
Sat R 35:37 J1 12 '52 400w

DEWEY, THOMAS EDMUND. Journey to the far Pacific. 335p il $4 Doubleday

950 [915] East (Far East)—Politics, East (Far East)—Description and travel 52-5222

"From extensive notes Governor Dewey has written a report of his last summer's trip of 41,000 miles, giving his impressions of the 17 republics, kingdoms, territories and colonies visited in critical Southeast Asia and advocating 'a total Pacific treaty of mutual defense.'" (Bookmark) Maps on end papers. No index.

"The Governor of New York has done a valuable reporting job—modest, very readable, informative (and not, by the way, ghost-written)." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 189:78 My '52 550w

Booklist 48:349; 375 J1 1 '52; J1 15 '52

"A straightforward, informing report."

+ Bookmark 11:230 J1 '52 30w

"Journey to the Far Pacific is a fascinating book, which should be read widely, especially by those who criticize Chiang, Bao-Dai, and President Rhee. For Dewey, like Michener before him, will open their eyes." A. T. Bouscaren

+ Cath World 176:76 O '52 360w

Reviewed by Kenneth Colegrove

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 J1 13 '52 350w

"Mr. Dewey's advocacy of a total Pacific treaty of mutual defense comes at this time as something of an anachronism and detracts from what is otherwise an interesting and readable account of his journey in the summer of 1951 through most of the countries, colonies, and possessions in the Eastern Orient." Gordon Walker

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 J1 14 '52 850w

"A warm, human account."

+ Current Hist 23:127 Ag '52 170w

"No particular fire in the writing, but sincere, competent piece of perceptive reporting."

+ Kirkus 20:205 Mr 15 '52 230w

"Good. But on many things he is superficial or misled. He does not know whether what he saw was normal or a Potemkin village put up for his benefit. He writes about Buddhism and Shintoism but misses the fact that they are almost completely non-dogmatic and not even mutually exclusive." Harold Straus

Nation 175:54 J1 19 '52 1300w

Reviewed by Gordon Walker

New Repub 127:20 J1 14 '52 1300w

"Almost anybody who knows the Far East will say amen to Mr. Dewey's emphasis on Indo-China as a major dike against Communist expansion. But when Mr. Dewey gets onto the subject of French political policy in that country he is misleading." A. T. Steele

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 J1 13 '52 1200w

"Throughout this account is reflected Governor Dewey's concern with human beings as human beings. He sees the threat to Asia not in terms of strategic blueprints but in terms of individuals' liberty and dignity. This is the approach of the democrat and the humanitarian; the author demonstrates that it can also be the approach of the statesman." R. A. Smith

+ N Y Times p1 J1 13 '52 1300w

"His book is perceptive, human, and even occasionally humorous. Although he disclaims that there was any political motive behind either the trip or the report, the writing is highly charged with opinions, many of which seem informed and wise, about our policy toward the countries and peoples he saw and about the role the United States is playing in the ideological struggle for Asia."

+ New Yorker 28:83 J1 19 '52 160w

DEWEY, T. E.—Continued

"Governor Dewey's first book discloses hitherto unrevealed talents: The 1948 Republican Presidential candidate is an excellent reporter. . . It is an interesting largely dispassionate story of what he saw, heard and found in Japan, Korea, Formosa, the Philippines, Indo-China, Hong-Kong, Malaya and Indonesia." C. W. Weinberger

+ San Francisco Chronicle p8 J1 27 '52 450w

Reviewed by H. R. Isaacs
Sat R 35:9 J1 19 '52 2400w

Springf'd Republican p6D Ag 3 '52 750w

"For a U.S. politician, it is a unique effort, a lively narrative that is also diligently informative and discerning. As a student of foreign policy, Dewey has enriched his understanding with some impressive firsthand knowledge of a fateful region; he has become one of the best-briefed Republicans on world affairs."

+ Time 60:100 J1 21 '52 1100w

DE WOHL, LOUIS. Golden thread. 254p $3 Lippincott

Loyola, Ignatius of, Saint—Fiction 52-9536

Historical novel in which the story of St Ignatius Loyola (1491-1556) is interwoven with a tale of two lovers, Uli von der Flue, a Swiss soldier, and Juanita, a Spanish girl of good but not high birth.

"A book which will have an especial appeal to Catholics, although its worth as a historical novel deserves a wider reading public, which de Wohl's name will give it."

+ Kirkus 20:630 S 15 '52 240w

"Uli, the tall, lean, and reticent Swiss mercenary, seems more contemporary to Gary Cooper than to the founder of the famous Society of Jesus, and Juanita to some other twentieth century Californian—with hair-cut and boy's clothes and an unaffected manner. 'Sixteen of his (Louis De Wohl's) books published in Europe were made into films,' the jacket conclusively inform us." Philip Burnham

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p28 D 7 '52 450w

"Louis De Wohl's fictionalized cavalcade of saints marches on, even if the march this time is more of a jog-trot than a majestically unfolding procession. The reason for this, I believe, is that Mr. de Wohl apparently has not steeped himself as thoroughly in the life of St. Ignatius as he did in that of St. Thomas Aquinas (for 'The Quiet Light') or of St. Augustine (for 'The Restless Flame'). Consequently, he has been unable to make Ignatius come quite alive." H. C. Gardiner

+ N Y Times p30 O 26 '52 320w

"'The Golden Thread' is entertaining and enjoyable, but utterly lacking in either depths of conception or moving mysticism." L. S. Munn

+ Springf'd Republican p7C N 23 '52 140w

DE WOHL, LOUIS. Restless flame. 284p $3 Lippincott

Augustine, Saint—Fiction 51-11193

Fictional biography of St Augustine which begins with his sixteenth year. It covers the years of his youth and young manhood, then skips to the time when Augustine was Bishop of Hippo. The final chapter deals with the last two years of Augustine's life.

"As a first introduction to Augustine's life and work The Restless Flame may be lacking in literary authority and in the intimate touch of one of the most powerful personalities the world has ever known, but it provides, by the very unassuming character of the author's approach, direct if lesser, values of its own." Riley Hughes

Cath World 174:470 Mr '52 240w

"De Wohl has recreated the setting of this story with color and understanding: Tagaste, the teeming city of Carthage, Milan and the grandeur of its bishop, Ambrose—all come to life. Setting and character interact to give us an unusually interesting historical novel. The magnificent maturity of Augustine's life is all but untouched. . . What satisfaction it would have been to see the great saint work thru his maturity, instead of having it merely recapitulated." C. Seidenspinner

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ja 20 '52 210w

Kirkus 19:408 Ag 1 '51 140w

Reviewed by H. I.A. Fausset

Manchester Guardian p4 Je 6 '52 180w

"In 'The Restless Flame,' Mr. de Wohl draws from the life story of St. Augustine as sketched into his 'Confessions.' Rounding out, but never doing violence to, Augustine's own narrative, he enriches plot and background." Margaret Evans

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 D 9 '51 450w

"Woodenly written, this book is clogged with turgid drama, foggy dialectics, undigested philosophy. Mr. de Wohl has obviously read the 'Confessions,' but he has added no beauty to their re-telling, and little understanding of his subject." H. F. West

— N Y Times p23 Ja 6 '52 130w

San Francisco Chronicle p26 Ap 20 '52 230w

"You'll find that Saint's own 'Confessions' more illuminating and even easier reading." E. J. Fitzgerald

Sat R 35:32 Ja 26 '52 140w

Springf'd Republican p8D F 3 '52 270w

Times [London] Lit Sup p389 Je 13 '52 40w

DEYO, GEORGE PERCY, and KRIDER, JAKE LUTHER. Raising swine. 447p il $4.50; text ed $3.60 McGraw

636.4 Swine 51-12563

"Recent, nontechnical information on all phases of practical swine production, suited to students of vocational agriculture and experienced swine raisers as well. Maps, photographs, drawings. Tables, list of visual aids, index." Bookmark

Booklist 48:313 Je 1 '52

Bookmark 11:180 My '52 20w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 77:902 My 15 '52 40w

D'HUMY, FERNAND EMIL. Mary Baker Eddy in a new light. 181p $3.75 Lib. pubs.

B or 92 Eddy, Mrs Mary (Baker) 52-377

A biography of the founder of Christian Science. The author, formerly Research director of the Western union telegraph company, though not a member of the Christian Science church himself, writes with sympathy and understanding of Mrs Baker.

"There are some points in Mr. d'Humy's study which will seem not exactly correct to Christian Scientists. These do not relate to the events of Mrs. Eddy's life, but principally to Mr. d'Humy's personal interpretations. Generally speaking, however, it will be found that his book is loving, fair, and perceptive." E. D. Canham

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 10 '52 400w

"Christian Scientists will like this book. Others will scarcely find it as 'objective' as the publishers claim."

Kirkus 20:36 Ja 15 '52 120w

"Although a new and objective interpretation of Mrs. Eddy and her work is very much needed, this is definitely not it and in no way interprets Mrs. Eddy 'in a new light,' as the subtitle implies. Not recommended." G. W. Wakefield

— Library J 77:46 Ja 1 '52 50w

Reviewed by Mildred Prince

Springf'd Republican p6D Ag 3 '52 130w

DICKENS, CHARLES. Heart of Charles Dickens; as revealed in his letters to Angela Burdett-Coutts; selected and ed. from the collection in the Pierpont Morgan library, with a critical and biographical introd. by Edgar Johnson. 415p $6 Duell, Little

B or 92 Burdett-Coutts, Angela Georgina Burdett-Coutts, baroness 52-9074

Nearly 300 letters, many of them previously unpublished, selected from the Morgan Library collection of Charles Dickens' correspondence over a period of thirty years with the heiress-philanthropist, Angela Burdett-Coutts. Index.

Bookmark 12:53 D '52 40w

"Let nobody suppose that it makes dismal reading. There was as much drama at Shepherd's Bush as in Dickens' novels—with him to record it; there was even abundant humor. He could touch nothing that he did not glorify with his imagination. Even upon passages devoted to so prosaic a theme as his inability to read Miss Coutts' handwriting, he squanders as much whimsy as most writers muster to fit out a whole story." Edward Wagenknecht

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 N 30 '52 350w

"His letters are wise, witty, sad, compassionate and tender by turns, and never dull."

+ Kirkus 20:673 O 1 '52 150w

"Bernard Shaw objected to Prof. Johnson (Dickens' latest biographer) that the letters were limited to 'the concrete, sensuous, and immediate.' That is precisely what constitutes their charm and their unflagging interest to Dickensians and others. Recommended." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 77:1649 O 1 '52 110w

"What this volume proves above all is that Dickens was an incomparable letter writer. As if it need proving! The truth, though, is that relatively few lovers of his novels know that he exhibited the same tremendous vitality in his letters. Although thousands of them have been printed here and there, there has never, I think, been a good representative selection to tempt readers to further exploration. The present volume, though limited to letters addressed to one correspondent, can serve the purpose until a wider selection appears." R. D. Altick

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 N 23 '52 950w

"In this magnificent edition of new letters, it is possible to follow as never before, the nearly absolute devotion with which Dickens conceived and developed an extensive program of private charities." Carlos Baker

+ N Y Times p4 N 30 '52 550w

"Mr. Johnson has done more than show what Dickens has to say to a socially conscious generation. He has also shown why he has never ceased to be read by people who know nothing of critical theory, but who know a good story when they find it. In other words, he tells the highbrows what plain folk knew all along." Delancey Ferguson

+ Sat R 36:10 Ja 10 '53 850w

"Editor Edgar Johnson has written an excellent introduction to the book and helped the continuity with informative notes. He challenges Bernard Shaw's opinion that Dickens wrote nothing but 'roast beef and Yorkshire pudding letters,' and these letters bear him out."

+ Time 60:110 D 8 '52 700w

DICKERSON, OLIVER MORTON. Navigation acts and the American revolution. 344p $6 Univ. of Pa. press

973.31 U.S.—History—Revolution—Causes 51-13206

It is the author's contention that "The Navigation and Trade Acts were not the cause of serious complaint down to the eve of the Revolution; that the restrictions placed on Colonial manufacturing aroused protest from only a few Americans and cannot correctly be regarded as a major grievance; and that the American opposition to British measures passed after 1763 was not because they were trade regulations but because they were not." (N Y Times) Bibliography. Index.

"All students of the period would doubtless agree that when the government of Great Britain embarked on the twin policies of rigid enforcement of the navigation and trade laws and of seeking additional revenue in America by means of taxation, the consequences, under given circumstances, were fatal to the preservation of the unity of the old empire. However, they are unlikely to agree with Professor Dickerson that the change was brought about because a crowd of hungry British place seekers had to be taken care of. . . . Again, in accounting for the bitter hostility of the American seafaring people to the British customs officials and naval officers with the institution of the new regulations and taxation measures after 1763, Professor Dickerson does not take into consideration the fact that this hatred was in the first instance created in the midst of the war with France. . . . The criticisms are not intended to minimize the fact that the Navigation Acts and the American Revolution is certainly a book deserving the most thoughtful attention of every student of the Old British Empire. It brings into view a very large body of material, largely drawn from the Treasury papers, that is not readily available and also corrects many misconceptions of the functioning of the British imperial system that have been embodied not only in standard histories but even in specialized treatises." L. H. Gipson

+ — Am Hist R 57:687 Ap '52 1450w

Reviewed by A. L. Burt

Ann Am Acad 280:177 Mr '52 390w

"There is no doubt in the reviewer's mind that this is the most important book on the American Revolution that has appeared for years." S. E. Morison

+ New Eng Q 25:266 Je '52 850w

"A work of impressive scholarship." R. L. Schuyler

+ N Y Times p43 N 18 '51 230w

"This is historical reinterpretation at its best. The thesis could not be more clearly developed. It is supported by the authority resulting from years of research in the published and unpublished materials here and in England. It is extremely readable, and important for the record. That it will not go unchallenged may be taken for granted. But it will require some great effort to refute its solid conclusions."

+ Sat R 35:33 Ja 12 '52 340w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:55 Mr '52 240w

DICKERSON, REED. Products liability and the food consumer. 339p $7 Little

614.3 Food law and legislation 51-14646

"A comprehensive treatment of civil liability for defective food products—one of the most litigated of all consumer commodities. Provides answers to questions dealing with the basis of recovery, damages, legislation relating to food cases, civil action in food cases, and many other problems. Of interest to manufacturers of products other than food is the author's detailed analysis of the theories of recovery, which provides a valuable basis for dealing with cases of injury from defective machinery, drugs, cosmetics, and other manufactured products. Also helpful in this connection is a special appendix providing a full list of authorities—texts, articles, and notes—on general products liability." Management R

"The style of the book is clear and incisive. The author avoids extreme or individualistic views. . . . The principal parts of the book contain a remarkably exact and comprehensive statement of present day law. . . . While technical points are fully covered, the author is not bogged down by them; he shows how in this field the courts are swayed more by considerations of public health than by specific rules. It might be added that readers interested in general products liability will find this book useful." D. W. Noel

+ Harvard Law R 65:906 Mr '52 1500w

Management R 41:563 Ag '52 60w

DICKINSON, ALEC, pseud. See Dickinson, Alice

DICKINSON, ALICE (ALEC DICKINSON, pseud). Real book about amazing animals; il. by Fred Collins. 191p $1.25 Garden City bks.

591.5 Animals, Habits and behavior of 51-12207

"This book is concerned with mammals, their equipment and adjustment to hostile environments. Animals are grouped by characteristics: 'Toothless—More or Less,' 'Bad-tempered—But Useful' (camels), 'The Builders,' etc. . . . It is crammed with facts and information." Library J

Booklist 48:129 D 1 '51

Kirkus 19:320 J 1 '51 100w

"12-14 year-olds will read it like fiction. Recommended for all children's libraries, especially nature libraries." N. S. Chasteen

+ Library J 76:2012 D 1 '51 80w

"It is a mine of information about the larger mammals, especially those which may be seen on a visit to the zoo. The text is on the whole excellent, far better than might be expected from the low price, and the illustrations are satisfactory."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 N 25 '51 50w

Wis Lib Bul 48:45 Ja '52

DICKINSON, EMILY. Letters; ed. by Mabel Loomis Todd; with an introd. by Mark Van Doren. 389p $3.75 World pub.

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 51-9898

For descriptive note see Annual for 1951.

Reviewed by H. I. A. Fausset

+ Manchester Guardian p4 F 26 '52 230w

"This volume must always be, as Mr. Van Doren says, the core of Emily's correspondence. And her correspondence was near the core of her life. . . . Mrs. Todd's collection embraces a great many recipients; it is a broad river with many confluents, and the effect is almost overwhelming. Emily, for all her final reticences, gave so much of herself in her letters, and she was so often both cryptic and laconic, that it is impossible to read very much at a time without loss of breath." J. Y. Case

+ New Eng Q 24:546 D '51 450w

"To read her letters is to be in a world that combines with Kate Greenaway's elegant nostalgia something of Beatrix Potter's innocent fantasy of a world of rabbits with blue jackets and housekeeping field-mice, and that American timor mortis that Emily Dickinson has in common with Edgar Allan Poe. No one can read these letters without recognizing that they express a quality, with which she invested her world—something almost as rare in this quantitative age as silence itself." Kathleen Raine

+ New Statesman & Nation 43:470 Ap 19 '52 1000w

Spec 188:726 My 30 '52 170w

"There are many provoking gaps. Whether we shall ever have Emily Dickinson's full output remains doubtful; or even a fuller story of her origins to help speculation. Professor Van Doren is right in saying that what we have has no counterpart in the literature of the world. Its fascination is as irresistible as its incompleteness is dangerous. That foiled love affair is not enough to explain her. Relating these Letters to her poems, one is lured into her solitude as if into a perpetual twilight."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p158 F 29 '52 1400w

DICKSON, CARTER, pseud. See Carr, J. D.

DICKSON, JOHN HOME, ed. Glass; a handbook for students and technicians; written by specialists. 300p il $6 Chemical pub. co.

666.1 Glass blowing and working [51-6688]

"A book of general and technical information about glass. The information is presented factually and—in most parts of the book—in semitechnical terminology. There is little about the 'wonders' of glass, but there is a considerable range of information that will be valuable to persons such as salesmen and products designers in need of compact information. References to books and papers containing additional information accompany most of the chapters." N Y New Tech Bks

"The index and glossary which conclude the text show a striking dearth of references to American literature and scientists, and perhaps lays undue stress on British accomplishment, although the publication is sponsored by an American publisher. There are 24 tables and 123 illustrations. The authors are all British. This is just another book on glass, intermediate between the popular and the technologic." Alexander Silverman

Chem & Eng N 30:560 F 11 '52 250w

N Y New Tech Bks 37:41 My '52

DICKSON, MRS MARGUERITE (STOCKMAN). Only child; il. by Genia. 247p $2.50 Longmans

52-6901

Gwen was an only child, but not spoiled, so her family thought. When two attractive cousins came to live with them there were difficulties at first. Gradually things straightened out, leaving Gwen still unspoiled. For older girls.

Kirkus 20:75 F 1 '52 240w

"Wholesome, interesting story for early teen-agers." E. E. Frank

+ Library J 77:910 My 15 '52 80w

"The story moves slowly, but it is well written in the realistic style of this author's former books. The decorations by 'Genia' and the typography are excellent. Girls over twelve who enjoy such books as the Tippy Parrish Series will like this." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune BK R p24 My 11 '52 40w

"Lively writing and believable people make this absorbing reading." Eleanor Brent

+ N Y Times p18 Je 15 '52 160w

"This is an interesting, rewarding story for older girls."

+ Sat R 35:35 J1 19 '52 140w

Springf'd Republican p9D My 25 '52 70w

DIEBOLD, WILLIAM. Trade and payments in western Europe; a study in economic co-operation, 1947-51. 488p $5 Harper

382 Commerce. Europe—Economic conditions 51-11900

"Much has been written about American aid to Western Europe. This volume, for the first time, presents a comprehensive evaluation of Europe's attempts at self-help. Mr. Diebold describes the functioning of the European Payments Union, customs unions such as that of the Benelux nations, attempts at tariff reduction, and international control of cartels. He presents, in terms understandable to the lay readers, the problems, successes and failures in Western Europe's attempt to integrate her economy." Current Hist

Booklist 49:60 O 15 '52

Current Hist 23:272 O '52 50w

Foreign Affairs 31:159 O '52 50w

"A highly important work which should help greatly in improving understanding of the partial successes and the difficulties facing Europe today." J. E. Cross

+ Library J 77:2000 N 15 '52 90w

DIETZ, ARTHUR TOWNSEND. Introduction to the antitrust laws. 84p $2; text ed $1.25 Bookman associates

338.8 Trusts, Industrial 51-8934

"The principles, form and application of the anti-trust laws are the subject of this analysis. Dr. Dietz traces the history of anti-trust legislation and gives an evaluation of its applicability." (Current Hist) Index.

"The volume, as is its stated purpose, is particularly suited to classroom use. However, it will also give the interested reader a working knowledge of an important principle in American economics."

Current Hist 22:376 Je '52 40w

"The general reader, confused by the fantastic practice of tagging Acts of Congress by names of sponsoring congressmen rather than by descriptive titles, will find this book very helpful." J. E. Cross

+ Library J 77:895 My 15 '52 110w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Je 15 '52 30w

DIETZ, LEW. Jeff White: young lumberjack [il. by William Moyers]. 214p $2.75 Little 52-8337

"This fourth in a series of stories about that hardy Maine lad, Jeff White, takes him into the tall timber to cut pulpwood in the remote, lawless Big Ten section. . . Violence, then murder, walk the woods and most of the men panic, but Jeff and Skipper, aided by a few game wardens and lumbermen, solve the mystery." N Y Times

Kirkus 20:410 Jl 15 '52 160w

"Plenty of details about cutting and preparing spruce for the pulp mills, but, while this information will be useful, the thrilling plot will hold readers of 14 and up." A. M. Wetherell

+ Library J 77:1413 S 1 '52 40w

"The style is brisk and the mounting excitement well handled." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p16 N 16 '52 20w

"Like Mr. Dietz's other books, this is a well-written, vigorous story with sufficient plot and adventure to interest many adult readers. Characters who act and talk like individuals, rather than types, move against a realistic background." M. P. Allen

+ N Y Times p32 S 21 '52 120w

DILLISTONE, FREDERICK WILLIAM. Structure of the divine society. 263p $4 Westminster press

260 Church. Sociology, Christian

"Believing that the Christian Church can work together successfully and move toward union only if they understand their essential character, Professor Dillistone presents a fresh and suggestive treatment of the doctrine of the Church. His contribution to inter-Church cooperation and the ecumenical movement is a constructive synthesis of organic and covenant theories of the 'The Structure of the Divine Society.' Based on studies delivered in part as the T. V. Moore Lectures at the San Francisco Theological Seminary." (Publisher's note) Index of subjects.

"This is a finished and lucid book, written from a particular point of view but with broad understanding. The judgments are stated incisively but usually with disarming charity; one notable exception to this is the labeling as 'defective' positions other than those defended, while it seems that direct and positive criticisms of other positions can be made without recourse to negative words." R. T. Handy

+ Christian Century 69:780 Jl 2 '52 900w

"It is a momentous and joyful event to discover a good book by an established Anglican scholar which treats this whole problem from a fresh angle and which just might possibly point the way beyond the present deadlock. . . It is, of course, unlikely that many readers will agree with all the details of this thesis and its argument. But this is not a book to quibble about. Its main proposal is readily grasped as a whole and can be, and ought to be, judged on its merits even if, here and there, one feels the impulse to scribble queries and demurrers in the margins. This is a good book with a big idea, and this idea ought to be pondered and appraised by all whose consciences are pricked by the present disunity of Christendom. For those who approve our fragmented Christian community, obviously the case is quite different." A. C. Outler

+ Crozer Q 29:199 Ap '52 1200w

Reviewed by A. D. Kelley

J Religion 32:215 Jl '52 800w

"Much concentrated and sincere thinking has gone to the making of this book, and also a wide sympathy. The question remains whether the reality of the Church does not demand a larger variety of analogies—such as the New Testament provides—rather than reliance upon one or even two metaphors."

Times [London] Lit Sup p823 D 21 '51 600w

DILLON, MRS MARY EARHART. See Earhart, M.

DIRECTOR, AARON, ed. Defense, controls and inflation; a conference sponsored by the University of Chicago law school. 342p $3.50 Univ. of Chicago press

338.973 U.S.—Economic policy. Industrial mobilization (for war) 52-11297

"Transcript of conference held at White Sulphur Springs, West Virginia, April 1951, sponsored by the University of Chicago Law School and attended by prominent economists, government officials, lawyers and industrialists. Major issues and conclusions are summarized in an introduction prepared by members of the Law School." Am Pol Sci R

Am Pol Sci R 46:898 S '52 30w

Booklist 49:60 O 15 '52

Current Hist 23:191 S '52 60w

DIRKSEN, HERBERT VON. Moscow, Tokyo, London: twenty years of German foreign policy. 288p il $4 Univ. of Okla. press

327.43 Germany—Foreign policy. World politics. Diplomatic memoirs 52-9499

"A career diplomat in the German Foreign Service, Dr. von Dirksen has written an account of Germany's foreign relations between the two World Wars. The author is well equipped to comment on the development of the international crisis, having occupied three of his country's leading ambassadorial posts. Here is a 'behind the scenes' account of the anti-Comintern Pact, Godesberg, Munich and other events which shaped history." Current Hist

Booklist 48:331 Je 15 '52

Reviewed by K. F. Helleiner

Canadian Forum 31:206 D '51 280w

"Thoughtful and informing volume." H. E. Barnes

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Je 22 '52 500w

Current Hist 22:379 Je '52 40w

Foreign Affairs 30:678 Jl '52 20w

"The German diplomat's memoirs bring up the ever recurring question: how could men of personal integrity, culture, education, and world-wide experience like von Dirksen continue to work for Hitler's unspeakable regime? Perhaps we are still too close to World War II and the Nazi provocations that preceded it to do justice to men like von Dirksen." L. P. Lochner

N Y Times p7 My 4 '52 1150w

Reviewed by P. E. Mosely

Pol Sci Q 67:616 D '52 450w

DISNEY, DORIS MILES. Heavy, heavy hangs. 194p $2.50 Doubleday

52-6354

Detective story.

Booklist 48:322 Je 1 '52

Bookmark 11:236 Jl '52

Kirkus 20:170 Mr 1 '52 80w

"Even when she has chosen a cumbersome subject Mrs. Disney's tales are always ship-shape. This is a good subject and it has been handled in an exceptionally able fashion. A nicely sustained evening of carefully chilled grue." James Sandoe

DISNEY, D. M.—Continued

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 My 25 '52 70w

"One of her best." Anthony Boucher
+ N Y Times p37 My 25 '52 40w

"A somewhat conventional item, but pleasantly and lucidly written."

+ New Yorker 28:68 Ag 2 '52 90w

Reviewed by L. C. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p28 My 25 '52 50w

"Competent job." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 35:31 Je 28 '52 30w

Springf'd Republican p6D Ag 10 '52 90w

DITZEN, RUDOLF (HANS FALLADA, pseud.)

The drinker; tr. by Charlotte and A. L. Lloyd. 282p $3.50 Didier pubs.

"This is the rather depressing story of a decent fellow who through business troubles and unending marital quarrels is driven to drink and then sinks step by step, till the court orders his permanent detention in an asylum." Library J

"This is a bare, harsh study of a man's retreat from reality. One of the story's special virtues is that it centers around the man's psychological state, focusing not on the alcoholic whose personal failures are mentioned only to explain his addiction, but on the neurotic who imagines himself persecuted and therefore begins to drink excessively... It is not a tract; it is shocking but not 'sensational.'" Edwin Kennebeck

Commonweal 57:287 D 19 '52 500w

"This sad study in alcoholism should have popular appeal, but it will hardly match the success of his early masterpiece. Recommended for public libraries." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 77:1659 O 1 '52 90w

Reviewed by H. I. A. Fausset

Manchester Guardian p4 F 15 '52 80w

"I may be taken in, for Hans Fallada was only a minor novelist; yet this posthumous novel seems to me genuinely tragic and beautiful, and of a scope which includes, ramifying from the story, its writer and our world." G. D. Painter

+ New Statesman & Nation 43:354 Mr 22 '52 300w

Reviewed by Richard Plant

N Y Times p53 N 23 '52 450w

Springf'd Republican p6D D 28 '52 90w

Time 60:70 D 22 '52 350w

"It is a story with, so to speak, the heart gone out of it, not entirely successful and yet oddly and sadly significant of a time too far gone, too heartless, for the writing of documentaries."

Times [London] Lit Sup p193 Mr 14 '52 700w

DIVIDED we fought; a pictorial history of the war, 1861-1865; picture eds: Hirst D. Milholten and Milton Kaplan; author of the text and general editor: David Donald. 452p $10 Macmillan

973.7 U.S.—History Civil war—Pictorial works 52-4479

A pictorial history of the Civil war composed of reproductions of photographs and drawings, with text by the editor, David Donald. Picture credits.

"It is an exciting re-creation of the war to preserve our union; a book eminently worth reading, and an ideal Christmas gift for young readers, or old." R. L. Blakesley

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 23 '52 300w

"Pictorial works on the Civil War seem to gain in authority and reference value as the vogue for them continues. They also gain in popular appeal and, for that reason alone, this volume belongs in every library where Miller's Photographic History of the Civil War has become dog eared and shaken... Highly recommended." Herbert Cahoon

+ Library J 77:2067 D 1 '52 60w

"Here is one of the finest books on the Civil War to be printed in many a year. It is a pictorial history which has been compiled and edited with rare judgment and artistic taste and equipped with a running text well worth reading on its own account—a text that lets the pictures speak for themselves but also manages unobtrusively to amplify and sharpen the graphic message recorded by the amazing camera men of the 1860's." Bruce Catton

+ Nation 175:532 D 6 '52 650w

"Remembering that in a book of this nature the pictures are the thing, David Donald has embellished it with a text, drawn largely from personal letters and eyewitness accounts, that never pushes ahead or falls behind, but keeps perfect step with the pictures. Each paragraph sticks strictly to the subject of the illustration it explains, yet the text as a whole is so expertly conceived that it provides as good a short, non-technical account of military operations and army life as one will find anywhere." B. F. Thomas

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 N 23 '52 550w

"'Divided We Fought' is both admirable and handsome. Photographs and drawings were selected by experts from the Library of Congress Prints and Photographic Division who not only know good pictures but who also know where to look for them. The reproductions are as clear as modern printing techniques can make them. The accompanying narrative, written by David Donald, an accomplished historian and a superb stylist, is lucid, authoritative and remarkably well adapted to the pictures." B. I. Wiley

+ N Y Times p7 N 23 '52 550w

"This is a labor of love guided by expert knowledge." Holger Cahill

+ Sat R 35:12 D 20 '52 470w

DOANE, PELAGIE. Book of nature. 110p il $4 Oxford

574 Nature study—Juvenile literature 52-13984

A nature book for children. It describes the plant and animal life in three areas: meadows, woods, and the sea, during the four seasons. Illustrated with twenty-four pages of small colored pictures, arranged at ends of sections. Index.

"Here is a book that both child and parent can read together with pleasure, getting acquainted with things to look for on the next trip to forest preserve or countryside." A. C. Ames

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p16 N 16 '52 150w

Kirkus 20:721 N 15 '52 120w

"Pictures are small but well done, with as many as twenty-four on a page in many instances. Has been checked by authorities and found to be accurate. Good for home use. Not a must for small collections but a good addition to larger libraries and schools. Recommended for ages 8 up." E. T. Dobbins

+ Library J 77:2076 D 1 '52 60w

"It is obviously the result of long and loving labor, and this artist's wide following may like it. Nature books like those by Irma Weber and Margaret Waring Buck seem to us better suited for beginning nature study." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p2 N 16 '52 100w

"The text is so beautifully written that it should be read aloud to children." B. D. Hurley
+ N Y Times p48 N 30 '52 120w

DOBIE, JAMES FRANK. The mustangs; il. by Charles Banks Wilson. 376p $6 Little 636.1 Horses 52-6802

A history of the "wild horses" of the American West, examining the theories of their origin, and relating incidents of their capture and use by both Indians and whites.

Reviewed by P. L. Adams
Atlantic 190:98 O '52 500w
Booklist 49:61 O 15 '52
Bookmark 12:30 N '52 30w

Reviewed by Stanley Vestal
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 O 5 '52
210w

"Almost a 'must' for the avid follower of range and prairie lore."

+ Kirkus 20:442 J1 15 '52 150w

"Recommended for all horse-lovers and for all readers interested in the West." Clarence Gorchels

+ Library J 77:1396 S 1 '52 120w

"I can think of no other man who could have written this book with its wealth of lore and legend, its salty, tangy flavor. For Frank Dobie is that rare phenomenon, a scholar whose roots go deep in the soil. He brings to the book a deep feeling and understanding not only of the mustang but of the cowboy and the vaquero as well who were as much a part of Texas as the longhorn and the mustang itself." Ross Santee

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 S 28 '52
800w

"This is a beautiful book. . . If there be any flaw in this admirable book it lies in its comparative neglect of the Northern Plains, where wild horses long abounded. 'The Mustangs' is handsomely turned out, with a color plate and numerous spirited drawings." Stanley Vestal

+ N Y Times p6 O 5 '52 750w

"On the American history of the horse, Dobie gives the best-balanced, the most compact presentation of its introduction, spread, influence, zenith and disappearance this reviewer has ever read." W. H. Hutchinson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 O 12 '52
600w

"This son of Live Oak County, Texas, is the master of the yarn and the reminiscence. This lore, culled from obscure publications where some literate cowpoke has left his tracks or recorded from the lips of old mustangers as they sat in the shade of the mesquite, composes the meat of the book. This folklorist does not pretend to write a narrative history of the mustang, though he uses the tools of the craft including an extensive bibliography and even footnotes. Yet this book is a faithful re-creation of the mustang period." W. D. Wyman

+ Sat R 35:17 O 18 '52 600w

DOEREE, BONAMY. Alexander Pope. 125p $3
Philosophical lib

B or 92 Pope, Alexander [A52-4480]

A brief survey of the life and works of Alexander Pope. Index.

"Balanced, informed, appreciative, and delightfully written." A. C. Ames

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Mr 2 '52
140w

"Charmingly written little book [which] gives a compact summary of the results of the best modern scholarship."

+ Nation 174:284 Mr 22 '52 150w

"The eighteenth-century background of men and events comes through in a lively way, and the entire essay is so dramatically organized that it holds the interest firmly."

+ New Yorker 28:72 Ag 30 '52 100w

"An excellent short study of Pope, this brief life gives all the essentials, as well as a sympathetic and intuitive interpretation of many of the controversial episodes." C. W. W.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p31 Ap 20
'52 120w

"In his slight book Bonamy Dobrée has written an extremely generous interpretation of Pope's life, sketching the events, friendships, literary campaigns and victories, and interpolating rather emphatic praise of the poetry. To the uninitiated his book may be a persuasive introduction to the poet whose reputation has suffered in the past, but one may still question his method of achieving that praiseworthy end." Robert Halsband

+ Sat R 35:19 My 3 '52 170w

"The pleasure of this book is that Pope remains alive and vibrant throughout, and Professor Dobrée eminently reasonable." Graham Midgley

+ Spec 187:830 D 14 '51 550w

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p806 D 14 '51
650w

DOBRIN, MILTON BURNETT. Introduction to geophysical prospecting. 435p il maps $7
McGraw

622.1 Prospecting 51-12602

"Current techniques in geophysical prospecting for petroleum and minerals are described in this book for advanced students in geology and mining engineering and for graduate engineers in these fields who find themselves in need of an introductory survey. Even though the work is an introduction, a wide range of material is included on scientific principles, instruments, methods of making observations and of interpreting them for the various established geophysical techniques." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 77:903 My 15 '52 40w

N Y New Tech Bks 37:71 S '52

DODDS, ERIC ROBERTSON. Greeks and the irrational. (Sather classical lectures) 327p
$5 Univ. of Calif. press

938 Greece—Intellectual life. Greece—Religion. Occult sciences 51-13756

A series of essays first delivered as lectures at Berkeley in 1949. As a whole the work embodies a study of the nature of Greek religion and culture in which the role played by primitive and irrational forces in their society is brought into focus. Contents: Agamemnon's apology; From shame-culture to guilt-culture; The blessings of madness; Dream-pattern and culture-pattern; The Greek Shamans and the origin of Puritanism; Rationalism and reaction in the classical age; Plato, the irrational soul, and the inherited conglomerate; The fear of freedom. Appendix I, Maenadism. Appendix II, Theurgy. Index.

"This is an important, an attractive and an original book. It is important because it throws a wholly new light on the categories of Greek thought at a time when our valuation of the Classics is, as it seems to your reviewer, very apt to be false. It is attractive because it calls into play such a wide diversity of themes and methods—it is a wonderful demonstration of the true integration we so greatly need." Ronald Lunt

+ Hibbert J 51:92 O '52 1150w

"Although The Greeks and the Irrational is based on the Sather Lectures of 1949 it is not disjointed, but develops with all the interest of a good psychological novel, a novel, moreover, which ends with a sharp moral for ourselves." Jacquetta Hawkes

+ New Statesman & Nation 43:466 Ap 19
'52 1850w

"This is a work of admirable learning which is also extremely readable. . . . What we miss, however, is a discussion of the meaning of the irrational, for the term seems gradually to shift its meaning in the course of the work."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p585 S 5 '52
600w

Reviewed by W. E. Brown

Yale R n s 41:472 spring '52 1050w

DODDS, HAROLD WILLIS, and others. Government assistance to universities in Great Britain; memoranda submitted to the Commission on financing higher education; published for the Commission. 133p $2.50 Columbia univ. press

379.12 School finance. Colleges and universities—Great Britain 52-8830

"This volume is made up of three memoranda submitted to the Commission on Financing

DODDS, H. W.—Continued

Higher Education, which is sponsored by the Association of American Universities. The three authors report on the relation between the universities and the British government, the University Grants Committee, and the Government Grants-in-aid. Presumably, this study of the British experience is meant as a stimulus to American thinking about the future of the financing of colleges and universities." School & Society

Reviewed by Harlan Hatcher
Sat R 35:17 J1 26 '52 240w

Reviewed by W. W. Brickman
School & Society 75:346 My 31 '52 130w

"Heavily fortified with statistical material, this little book will repay careful scrutiny by administrators, legislators, and others concerned with higher education in America."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:278 S '52 200w

DODDS, JOHN WENDELL. Age of paradox; a biography of England, 1841-1851. 509p il $6 Rinehart

942.08 Great Britain—Civilization. Great Britain—History—Victoria, 1837-1901. Great Britain—Social life and customs 52-8744

A social history of England during one decade: 1841 to 1851. The author is professor of English at Stanford University. Index.

Booklist 49:122 D 1 '52

Reviewed by R. L. Blakesley
Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 D 14 '52 280w

Reviewed by J. A. May
Christian Science Monitor p5 D 24 '52 650w

Kirkus 20:493 Ag 1 '52 180w

"A rich, buzzing, blooming confusion, like the world confronting William James's baby, but both entertaining and instructive." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 77:1437 S 15 '52 90w

"Inescapably, perhaps, a book like this leaves one somewhat unsatisfied. It is fun to read, a chapter at a time, and in future can be returned to for a half-hour's pleasant browsing. But apart from mere dates on a calendar, it begins nowhere and ends nowhere, unless the Great Exhibition of 1851 can be said to be a fitting terminus ad quem. . . 'The Age of Paradox' is continuously interesting, but unless seen against a wider background of history, it is not particularly significant. Without interpretation, social history is nothing more than retrospective journalism." R. D. Altick

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 N 2 '52 900w

"The method employed here is not quite that of a chronicle, although the narrative is broken up into years and some themes are repeated. We learn about the weather every year. We learn about the more dramatic historical events. But Mr. Dodds has an eclectic taste and he jumps from crime to riot, to politics, to business, to fashion, to music. There are few aspects of English life of which we are not told something and Mr. Dodds has a very keen eye for the ludicrous, the dramatic, the odd. To a pedantic historian of the old school the proportions of this book will seem odd." D. W. Brogan

N Y Times p6 Ja 4 '53 900w

"After finishing this account of the English decade 1841-1851, I rather wished that it had been called 'The Age of Little Nell,' not 'The Age of Paradox.' . . The book itself, however, is such a fascinating congregation of facts and pictures that it would be invidious to quarrel with the title. It is not only a fascinating book, it is also an unnerving one. . . In an atmosphere of famine and cholera, despair and displacement, the principle of laissez-faire experienced its heyday and prepared its graveyard." George Dangerfield

+ Sat R 35:14 N 22 '52 420w

DODGE, DAVID. To catch a thief. 248p $2.50 Random house

52-5136

Detective story.

Booklist 48:230 Mr 15 '52

Bookmark 11:211 Je '52

"Cleverly original, sprightly characterization, swift and deft movement, and surprise climax." Drexel Drake

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p18 F 17 '52 110w

Kirkus 19:650 N 1 '51 70w

"It's all tarradiddle and managed just plausibly enough to rate credit, a condition enhanced by its skillful concoction." James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p19 Ja 27 '52 230w

"It's rumored that the novel has been bought before publication for a film by Alfred Hitchcock; if it hasn't been, it should be." Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p26 Ja 27 '52 130w

"Some neat twists and complications and a good surprise make this a rousing yarn—with not one trace of the Dodge comedy, but plenty of his story-telling skill. B plus." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p31 F 3 '52 80w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 35:45 Mr 22 '52 30w

DOE, EDWIN W. Foundry work; prepared in cooperation with the Textbook committee of the Educational division, American foundrymen's society, Chicago. 109p il $1.76 Wiley

671 Foundry practice 51-14314

"A simple, easy-to-read text in foundry work, designed for use in trade schools, but will be useful to any young person desiring information on the subject. There are nearly 100 illustrations, a glossary, and a short list of books for further reading. The Educational Division of the American Foundrymen's Society cooperated in the book's preparation." Library J

Booklist 48:155 Ja 1 '52

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 77:363 F 15 '52 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 37:6 Ja '52

DOERING, HEINRICH UBBELOHDE. See Ubbelohde-Doering, H.

DOIG, PETER. Concise history of astronomy; with a foreword by Sir Harold Spencer Jones. 320p $4.75 Philosophical lib.

520 Astronomy—History [50-14161]

"A survey of the 'oldest science,' from the stargazers of ancient China to the students of galaxies at Mount Wilson." (Cleveland Open Shelf) The author is editor of the Journal of the British Astronomical Association, and the book was first published in England.

"It is unfortunate that scientists to whom historical scholarship is largely terra incognita continue to feel impelled to write, strictly off their own bats, on the history of science. Mr. Doig's book is a case in point. Not that the volume is without value for the student of history, as well as for the general reader to whom it is directed. The last hundred pages offer a convenient, concise account of the epoch-making advances in astronomy during the first half of the twentieth century. The even briefer discussion of the nineteenth century has a corresponding usefulness. It is in the hundred and thirty pages devoted to the history of astronomy before 1830 that the limitations of the book are most apparent." J. W. Olmsted

Am Hist R 57:490 Ja '52 380w

"A foreword by H. Spencer Jones, astronomer royal at Greenwich, bespeaks the reliability of the author, but a pedestrian writing style impairs the value of the volume to any reader who has not already hitched his thoughts to a star." L. T. Heron

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 D 16 '51
70w

Cleveland Open Shelf p17 S '51

Kirkus 19:382 J1 15 '51 120w

"The book will be a useful supplement to the older histories which give little account of twentieth-century developments."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 36:65 S '51

DOLE, MRS MARY H. Trailing at sixty-five. 232p $3 Exposition

796.7 Automobiles—Trailers. U.S.—Description and travel 51-11842

A retired school teacher with a desire to see more of the United States decided that a trailer was her best way of doing it. This is her account of her acquisition of the trailer and her successful life in it.

Booklist 48:167 Ja 15 '52

Bookmark 11:130 Mr '52 40w

Reviewed by Ethel Dexter
Springf'd Republican p4D F 24 '52
400w

DOME, ROBERT B. Television principles. 291p $5.50 McGraw

621.388 Television 51-11729

"The material of this book originally consisted of a series of twenty-eight lectures and formed one of the radio training courses offered after business hours to employees of the General Electric Company. The original series, begun in 1938, has been revised and enlarged several times in the past decade, the latest revision having been completed in 1949. At that time the series was offered as a graduate course for engineering students in a cooperative educational program established by Syracuse University and the General Electric Company. The lecture material has been regrouped and in some cases revised in order to make the presentation more coherent." (Pref) Index.

Bookmark 11:187 My '52 30w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 76:1937 N 15 '51 60w
N Y New Tech Bks 37:28 Mr '52

DONAHUE, WILMA T., and TIBBITTS, CLARK, eds. Growing in the older years; foreword by Everett J. Soop. 204p $2.50 Univ. of Mich. press

618.97 Old age 51-61897

"The last of three volumes presenting papers given at the University of Michigan's institutes on living in the later years. Emphasis in this volume is on 'medical health, mental hygiene, and education.' Representative topics include: Community health services for older people, Proposed programs in education for an aging population, Group development and the education of older people, Training for volunteers in community services with old people, and Physical restoration and the older person." Booklist

Reviewed by E. H. Moore

Am Soc R 17:382 Je '52 450w

"A collection of intelligent and thought-provoking essays providing up-to-date information for the practitioner and student of gerontology as well as for those concerned with their own aging processes." Elizabeth Breckinridge

+ Ann Am Acad 281:226 My '52 420w

Booklist 48:140 D 15 '51

Bookmark 11:104 F '52 30w

"It is a good book and worth while, albeit weak in spots and occasionally repetitious. The ideas advanced cannot be said to be particularly new, but they are well presented. In the field of education the suggestions are very sound." E. W. Russell

+ J Home Econ 44:303 Ap '52 210w

"This is the third volume in a noteworthy trilogy, edited by Wilma Donahue and Clark Tibbitts, dealing with the problems of the aging. . . The closing chapter by, William Donahue, 'A Mid-Century Forecast,' is well-timed and challenging. . . Age may come to be recognized as an artificial or very general classification. Thus the attention now being given the aging will contribute to the total betterment of people at all ages. This trilogy is an important contribution." A. M. Loomis + Survey 87:444 O '51 700w

DONALD, DAVID HERBERT, ed. Divided we fought. See Divided we fought

DONALD, HENDERSON HAMILTON. Negro freedman; life conditions of the American Negro in the early years after emancipation. 270p $4 Schuman

326 [326.8] Negroes—Economic conditions. Negroes—Moral and social conditions 52-7163

Study of the freed Negro slaves during the early years of reconstruction. The author was a member of the faculty of Howard University from 1928 to 1937, and has taught at Livingstone College as professor of sociology. Index.

"This is an interesting book, and one which is useful because of its array of significant facts about a relatively neglected phase of the history of the American Negro. It is written in a simple and clear style and should interest the layman as well as the specialist. . . One is disappointed by the absence of some important sources of information. The works of such writers as John Hope Franklin, E. Franklin Frazier, Carter G. Woodson, Charles S. Johnson, W. E. B. DuBois, Francis Butler Simkins, et al., would have been unquestionably valuable." E. H. Fitchett

+ Am J Soc 58:224 S '52 700w

"The serious student is not likely to find anything of value in this work." Preston Valien

Am Soc R 17:655 O '52 360w

Booklist 48:222 Mr 15 '52

Reviewed by Elizabeth Yates
Christian Science Monitor p15 My 29 '52 290w

Kirkus 20:23 Ja 1 '52 200w

"A fluent and interesting work which is more important than its narrow subject indicates since similar arguments are being made to damn the Negro today. Recommended to all libraries as a balanced portrayal of a Negro culture." M. S. Byam

+ Library J 77:429 Mr 1 '52 130w

Nation 174:352 Ap 12 '52 60w

"The materials from which [the] conclusions are drawn are, in the main, a body of uncritically selected anecdotal and impressionistic writings provided by travelers, reporters and other observers of the era. . . Apparently the author is unaware of the severe methodological criticisms that Howard K. Beale and others have levied against this type of historical interpretation. The volume neither mentions nor includes materials from the special and definitive works of such scholars as Bond, Calhoun, Drake, DuBois, Franklin Frazier, Harris, Quarles, Simkins, Wesley, Woodson and Woody. . . The total result is a sort of twentieth-century 'Aeneas Africanus,' just as episodic, anecdotal and inaccurate as a portrayal of the Reconstruction period." I. De A. Reid

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 Mr 23 '52 1050w

"This book comes highly recommended by sociologists. This historian must regretfully file a dissenting opinion." C. V. Woodward
— Sat R 35:40 Mr 22 '52 500w

School & Society 75:302 My 10 '52 30w

"Dr. Donald errs badly in his interpretation of the causes for the elimination of the southern Negro from the skilled trades of the region. . . Dr. Donald's study does serve to direct our attention to the many areas of Negro life affected by emancipation. Undoubtedly it will stimulate additional studies in this very important field." Jack Abramowitz

DONALD, H. H.—Continued

+ — Social Educ 16:298 O '52 250w

DONER, MARY FRANCES (MRS C. L. PAY-ZANT). Host rock. 224p $2.75 Doubleday 52-6358

"Once more Mary Frances Doner uses the Lake Superior country as background for a romantic novel. . . The plot is entirely conventional, complicated by rivalries and misunderstandings which repeatedly separate and bring together the leading characters. These are Phoebe Rawlins, a disillusioned American woman who has gone to the Canadian wilds for escape, and Bruce Winslow, a Canadian prospector. Before they can reach a final understanding, they must face the perils both of man and nature." Chicago Sunday Tribune

"The book is fresh and interesting in its background of uranium mining." Walter Havighurst

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ag 10 '52 200w

Kirkus 20:165 Mr 1 '52 120w

"The light novels of Miss Doner generally unfold against a factual background which informs the reader about some industry or specialized activity. . . This time, however, the big doings (at the Kewaydin Mining Company) aren't very interesting or very thoroughly researched." M. S. Hurst

— N Y Times p16 Je 15 '52 160w

"Miss Doner's construction in this one is so sloppy that you wouldn't be able to tell the players or what they were supposed to be doing even if you had a score card."

— Sat R 35:23 Je 21 '52 110w

DOOLEY, ROGER BURKE. House of Shanahan. 249p $3 Doubleday

52-5768

Family chronicle about the Shanahans, Irish Catholics, living in Buffalo in the 1920s.

"This novel does not quite jell, but it nonetheless marks a growth and achievement for its author, for he has largely avoided the pat melodrama which marred his earlier work." Riley Hughes

+ — Cath World 175:392 Ag '52 250w

"The House of Shanahan has everything except the breath of life. One of the nearly infallible tests of greatness is the way a work sticks in the memory. The Shanahan clan will be forgotten almost before it is known." Mariella Gable

— Commonweal 56:206 My 30 '52 330w

Kirkus 20:135 F 15 '52 160w

"Mr. Dooley tells their story unassumingly and competently, with special insight into the meaning, for one and another, of their Catholic faith. Whether or not one shares that faith and the scruples that kept Gen from a remarriage that promised much that she and others needed, the motivation is clear and convincing. 'The House of Shanahan' is a pleasant and readable story that, eschewing the exaggerations of Irish clichés, records a way of life among one group of Americans." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Je 22 '52 400w

"A large Roman Catholic Irish family in Buffalo is ably described in this novel by a Catholic writer. The time is the Twenties—a decade of temptation in which Roger Dooley tries the morals of his characters. . . It is an interesting subject and Mr. Dooley deals honestly if restrictedly with it." Horace Reynolds

+ N Y Times p25 Ap 27 '52 280w

"I'm afraid you'll have to keep a score card if you want to get all the characters straight. Mr. Dooley doesn't help much. He writes in a flat unemphatic prose and his cardboard characters are indistinguishable except for the fact that they wear different names. There are some fairly good atmospheric shots of Buffalo in the middle Twenties, and what plot there is concerns the Roman Catholic attitude toward divorce."

— + Sat R 35:46 My 24 '52 180w

Spring'd Republican p17A Je 15 '52 30w

DORF, PHILIP. The builder; a biography of Ezra Cornell. 459p il $5 Macmillan

B or 92 Cornell, Ezra 52-14325

"First half of voluminous work describes Ezra Cornell's youth, work and struggles, and his obstinate faith in the future of the Morse telegraph which made him one of the chief builders of telegraph lines and co-founder of Western Union. Second half depicts the older man and his devotion to higher education as shown in the establishment of the great academic institution which bears his name." Library J

Booklist 49:155 Ja 1 '53

Kirkus 20:619 S 15 '52 120w

"Indispensable for Cornellians; recommended for all public and educational libraries." H. H. Bernt

+ Library J 77:1998 N 15 '52 80w

"Philip Dorf, who is best known as a writer of textbooks in the field of American history, shows how Cornell's whole life led logically to the founding of Cornell University." Armand Schwab

+ N Y Times p12 N 23 '52 450w

School & Society 76:318 N 15 '52 20w

DORSEY, STEPHEN PALMER. Early English churches in America, 1607-1807. 206p il $10 Oxford

726.5 Church architecture, Protestant Episcopal church in the U.S.A. 52-9429

"The author calls this book a 'visual essay,' for his primary purpose is to show, in unusually beautiful photographs, the exteriors and interiors, the pulpits and pews, the furniture and fonts and silver plate of some of our finest early churches. Introductory chapters establish the historical background and the typical arrangement of church interiors, and succeeding chapters reveal the best surviving buildings of four main regions: Virginia and Maryland; the Carolinas; the Middle States; and New England. The chronological lists, at the ends of chapters, of all existing Episcopal churches built prior to 1808 will be of particular value to local students and antiquarians." N Y Times

"The book will be of highest value to students of American church history and architecture; but because of the large number of structures considered and the breadth of territory covered, it will also interest a large number of parishioners up and down the coast." H. B. Nichols

+ Christian Science Monitor p5 D 24 '52 400w

"Illustrations and format are excellent. It is unfortunate that author has used the adjective 'English' in his title when 'Protestant Episcopal' would more accurately describe the churches to the reader in this country. Recommended for all except the smallest public libraries with no interest in the subject." E. H. Weeks

+ Library J 77:1497 S 15 '52 130w

"Mr. Dorsey has organized, indexed, and written his book well. His choice of the splendid Anglican examples is good. . . The pictures are magnificent." E. H. Smith

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 D 28 '52 240w

Reviewed by Hugh Morrison

N Y Times p34 O 5 '52 230w

DORSON, RICHARD MERCER. Bloodstoppers and bearwalkers; folk traditions of the Upper Peninsula. 305p il $5 Harvard Univ. press

398.2 Folklore—Michigan 52-5394

In 1946 the author spent five months gathering the stories told by the inhabitants of the Upper Peninsula country of Michigan. From the vast amount of material collected, he has made this selection, arranging the stories under three main heads: The Indian tradition; The European tradition; and The native tradition. Under each are many types of story: creation myths, fairy tales, tall tales, legends, jests, etc.

Booklist 49:60 O 15 '52

"A valuable collection. . . For large libraries, all libraries in Michigan, and wherever there is keen interest in folklore." G. D. McDonald
+ Library J 77:1396 S 1 '52 130w

"Mr. Dorson has not [been] in 'one of the richest story telling regions' long enough to penetrate disguises, and of course he has not the rhythm and warmth of Hard and Carmer, who have known their home states from boyhood; but he shows a sense of humor. . . 'Bloodstoppers and Bearwalkers' has stories for almost every taste. As one of the book's Canadians says, 'I hope you get your damn satisfy.'" H. W. Thompson
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p35 O 12 '52 600w

DOS PASSOS, JOHN RODERIGO. District of Columbia [with an introd. by Arthur Mizer]. 3v in 1 342,248,446p $5 Houghton

52-7617

Trilogy in one volume which includes Adventures of a Young Man, Number One, and Grand Design (Book Review Digest 1939, 1943, 1949).

Booklist 48:267 Ap 15 '52

Reviewed by Riley Hughes
Cath World 175:152 My '52 220w

"Everyone has his own ideas about what makes a book readable. This reviewer found himself admiring Dos Passos's passion against wrongs and his knowledge of all the ways of wrongdoing, and yet having to force himself to read the book. Perhaps it is because there is little but unrelenting gloom from cover to cover. Perhaps it is because Dos Passos uses types for his characters. They seem like puppets rather than people. He is a stark writer, too, dwelling heavily upon materialism." Roland Sawyer

Christian Science Monitor p9 Ap 2 '52 700w

"One emerges from the trilogy with a growing feeling of hopelessness. There seems no room in Dos Passos's world for men of goodwill. . . Yet the reader is seldom allowed to forget that he is in the presence of one of the powerful and significant novelists of contemporary American literature. There are scenes and writing here that rank with the best things in 'The 42d Parallel' and 'The Big Money.'" Leo Gurko
+ — Nation 174:304 Mr 29 '52 1000w

Reviewed by G. F. Whicher
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Ap 13 '52 500w

Reviewed by Granville Hicks
N Y Times p5 Ap 27 '52 850w
San Francisco Chronicle p13 Jl 27 '52 300w
Springf'd Republican p7D Ap 13 '52 420w

DOUBLEDAY AND COMPANY, INC. Glory of our West. See Glory of our West

DOUGLAS, JOHN SCOTT. Story of the oceans. 315p $3.50 Dodd 551.46 Ocean 52-8670

An informal introduction to oceanography. Discusses tides, waves, currents, distinctive characters of island life, ocean plants, and marine animal life and its economic importance. Index.

Booklist 48:276 My 1 '52

"The reader absorbs an uncommon amount of interesting and valuable information almost without realizing that he is wading in a lot of substantial facts. This, believe me, is a killer whale of a book." V. P. Hass
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p16 My 25 '52 360w

"Not an outstanding book; purchase only if another book on the sea is needed." E. M. Cole

Library J 77:430 Mr 1 '52 100w

Reviewed by W. B. Hayward
N Y Times p22 O 5 '52 370w

"When a writer feels it necessary to make a subject interesting, one asks, is it not because he finds it dull? The language of Mr. Douglas's opening pages reinforces these doubts, which retain a measure of validity throughout. They are, after all, pertinent to the genre itself. In the continuation, however, the author does show that he is not an intellectually meretricious writer and that he is, on the other hand, informed, responsible, and reasonably restrained." L. J. Halle
+ — Sat R 35:31 S 27 '52 290w

DOUGLAS, MARJORY (STONEMAN). Road to the sun. 340p $3.50 Rinehart

51-14824

Novel about the Miami real estate boom before the first World war. The central figures are Ellen and Jason Horne who went to Florida as bride and groom. It was their idea to raise rice for a living, but Jason's quarrel with a neighbor led to murder. Ellen became a ruthless business woman, and after success came failure, and ultimate reconciliation.

Booklist 48:113; 144 D 1 '51; D 15 '51

Bookmark 11:84 Ja '52 40w

Reviewed by Henry Cavenish
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ja 13 '52 500w

"A thoughtful, temperate story."
+ Kirkus 19:641 N 1 '51 150w

"Recommended for small library purchase."
F. A. Boyle
+ Library J 77:48 Ja 1 '52 110w

"'Road to the Sun' is an intensely poetic book. Certainly, Mrs. Douglas knows deeply and feels keenly the landscape and people she writes of with such conviction. These pages evoke the very sun and air of South Florida. . . The sensuous beauty of a whole region comes intimately alive, both by way of description and characterization." Gene Baro
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Ja 6 '52 600w

"A fine, poignant novel, set against the most exotic background our country has ever afforded." F. G. Slaughter
+ N Y Times p22 Ja 6 '52 320w

New Yorker 27:85 Ja 19 '52 110w

"'Road to the Sun' has all the makings of a powerful novel. The world it describes is real and memorable; its theme of eternal conflict between the new and the old transcends any limits of time and place, and the characters caught in the tide are both universal and unique. What she lacks is the skill to utilize completely the materials at hand." Eugenie Bolger
+ — Sat R 35:12 F 9 '52 460w

DOUGLAS, NORMAN. Footnote on Capri; photographs by Islay Lyons. 46p $2.75 McBride

945 [945.72] Capri [52-35841]

A brief sketch on the island of Capri, which Norman Douglas regarded as his spiritual home. He "rambles through any number of other accounts of Capri from the historical side, the botanical side, the geological side, now agreeing with the experts and now taking issue with them." (Sat R) There are 47 full-page photographs by Islay Lyons.

DOUGLAS, NORMAN—Continued

Reviewed by W. K. Harrison

Library J 77:2180 D 15 '52 40w

"Footnote on Capri' is by no means a major work in the Douglas canon, for much of it has appeared, in some form or other, in his previous writings. But it has its value as a memorial—the last book we shall see by one of the liveliest, witliest and most original authors of his generation." Roger Pippett

+ N Y Times p7 Ja 4 '53 300w

"A discursive memoir on the place followed by a tart postscript wherein Douglas wondered why his quiet isle was becoming a new Hollywood 'disgorging a rabble of flashy trippers' in Bikini bathing suits. There follow the photos, which are pleasant, undistinguished, and printed on coated stock." H. S.

Sat R 35:43 N 1 '52 120w

"To describe it as an original work, is, in a way, misleading, for there is little in this essay which has not already appeared, much of it verbatim and sometimes more than once, in Norman Douglas's previous writings about Capri. One novelty it does contain is the startling statement that when Augustus visited Capri for the last time, in 29 B.C., 'he was already an old man.' He was, in fact, 34 years old."

It is sad that whoever read the proofs of this posthumous work did not catch such an error of fact, for Norman Douglas had a scholar's attitude towards his writing, and his last little book should not be disfigured by such a crude mistake."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p429 J1 4 '52 3900w

DOUGLAS, PAUL HOWARD. Economy in the national government. 277p il $3.75 Univ. of Chicago press

336.73 Finance—U.S.

52-1737

The substance of this book was originally delivered in the form of lectures on the Charles R. Walgreen Foundation at the University of Chicago in October, 1951. In his Preface, the author, senior Senator from Illinois says: "While I do not pretend to cover all the detailed economies which should be made in our federal expenditures, I hope that this little book may be of some use in indicating specific ways in which we may conserve our resources and avert inflation."

"Senator Douglas's book deserves to be widely read, and doubtless will be, thanks to unusual public interest in the subject and the author's clear and constructive approach. And the ultimate impact may well be some of the improvements in procedure that he proposes." Mabel Newcomer

+ Am Econ R 42:642 S '52 650w

Am Pol Sci R 46:898 S '52 150w

Reviewed by C. C. Abbott

Ann Am Acad 283:190 S '52 300w

Booklist 48:273; 290 My 1 '52; My 15 '52

Bookmark 12:81 Ja '53

Reviewed by R. D. Cahn

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 My 25 '52 750w

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 69:974 Ag 27 '52 130w

Reviewed by J. H. Titus

Churchman 166:12 Ag '52 160w

"Particularly in an election year, taxes and inflation will be burning issues. This work is an objective, sober presentation of these vital problems and is based on a deep concern for the country's welfare. Thorough theoretical and practical knowledge combines well with a readable, often humorous style. Though reviewer is not given to superlatives, he feels this book is essential reading for everybody who has the best interests of his country at heart." H. H. Bernt

+ Library J 77:888 My 15 '52 130w

"There are sections in which he has sacrificed thoroughness of explanation for terseness, and one is not sure that the dogmas he asserts in these sections—he proposes a $1.8

billion cut in foreign aid—are necessarily true. But the book is highly valuable both because it describes individual federal activities which Douglas thinks are wasteful and because it pulls together general ideas he has previously expressed only in isolated speeches and in connection with his efforts to trim specific appropriations." Willard Shelton

+ Nation 175:16 J1 5 '52 700w

Reviewed by R. A. Lester

New Repub 126:17 My 12 '52 400w

Reviewed by J. K. Galbraith

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 My 18 '52 1200w

"Much of the book is a catalogue of waste and an exposition of areas for savings. . . Unlike most others, the Senator's budget-cutting plan is an objective and thorough job. He demonstrates a knowledge and understanding of bureaucracy that should win him recognition as the foremost authority on the subject. His tax program, labeled 'Closing Tax Loopholes,' is something else again. It is debatable whether he deals with real loopholes. . . His case for tax reform is further weakened by at least one major inaccuracy." John Morris

+ N Y Times p10 My 18 '52 650w

"Although the facts recited in this book, telling as they do of waste on a large scale in federal expenditures and favoritism in federal tax legislation, leave the reader depressed, the fact that the book was written renews his spirit. For here is a blending of the legislator, economist and political scientist, producing a volume that is at once penetrating, specific, yet well proportioned and easy to read. . . It is refreshing to read, in Appendix A, remarks from a senator on fiscal budgetary policy in prosperity and depression that make sensible use of Keynesian analysis, calling for surpluses in boom periods and deficits in depressions, but without rash assurance that all our troubles will then be over." C. S. Shoup

+ Pol Sci Q 67:448 S '52 1000w

Reviewed by W. H. Baker

+ San Francisco Chronicle p25 My 25 '52 650w

"No brief summary can do justice to the cogency of Senator Douglas's arguments. His book contains tables and diagrams which appear irrefutably damning. But throughout, the tone is for the most part moderate, the approach scholarly and fair. Exception might perhaps be taken to his overly-sharp criticism of the State Department, but the general documentation is excellent." J. C. Cairns

+ Sat R 35:29 Ag 30 '52 450w

"The presentation is somewhat scrappy, but the book compensates for this by offering material right from the firing line."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:271 S '52 180w

DOUGLAS, PAUL HOWARD. Ethics in government. 114p $2.25 Harvard univ. press 177 [172.2] Political ethics, Corruption (in politics) 52-9386

According to the Preface, "This little book embodies the substance of three lectures which I gave at Harvard University during January 1952 and which grew out of experiences I have had first as alderman from the Fifth Ward on the Chicago City Council and then as a United States Senator. My attention to these problems has been sharpened during these last two years by service a member of Senator Fulbright's committee which investigated the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and as chairman of a Senate subcommittee to consider the whole problem of ethics in government."

Booklist 49:97 N 15 '52

Reviewed by Willard Edwards

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 O 19 '52 290w

"It is undoubtedly the most readable and entertaining text in the brief compass of 100 pages for a citizen inquiry into the subject—the adventures of a man of conscience on thin ice." S. E. Davis

Christian Science Monitor p9 O 16 '52 800w

"This is a stimulating exploration of one of our major public problems and even though many readers may disagree with some of the Senator's recommendations it should be in all libraries." Margaret Eliason

+ Library J 77:1811 O 15 '52 140w

"His training as a scholar permits his approach to this study of corruption in government to be broad and clear; his experience . . . prevents him from oversimplifying a very complex problem, and makes the book realistic. It has the added virtue of being readable as well as timely, a reminder that the problem is more important and enduring than a temporary political issue, soon to be forgotten in our bustling American life." Francis Biddle

+ New Repub 127:23 O 6 '52 1050w

"Using his own brand of common-sense reasoning and a generous sprinkling of homespun illustrations the Senator has succeeded in shedding much light on his subject in a simple, yet highly meaningful way." R. K. Carr

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 O 19 '52 900w

"Whatever the circumstances, this would be counted a good and important book. Senator Douglas has a gift of lucid and stylish expression which was once identified with politicians from Virginia and Massachusetts and which henceforth, it would appear, will also be associated with men from Illinois. The standards he sets for his profession are high, but they are tolerantly stated, and no one, I think, will accuse him of being self-righteous." J. K. Galbraith

+ N Y Times p1 O 12 '52 1350w

"'Ethics in Government' is a sound, practical book by an honest man trying to make it easier for others to be equally honest." C. W. Weinberger

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 O 26 '52 480w

Reviewed by G. A. Graham

Sat R 35:19 N 15 '52 600w

Springf'd Republican p9C N 2 '52 260w

DOUGLAS, WILLIAM ORVILLE. Beyond the high Himalayas. 352p il $5 Doubleday 954.2 [915.42] Himalaya mountains 52-10393

"In 1951 Justice Douglas spent his vacation trekking through the Central Asian country following the route of noted explorers before him. He describes the country from the traveller's point of view adding cogent asides on the terrain, the people, the way of life, the economic conditions, the state of law and the position with relation to both East and West." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 49:46 O 1 '52

Bookmark 12:5 O '52 40w

"Whether it is scenery or trout fishing, politics or religion, Douglas brings to his story a deep understanding. His is a book that takes you high into the Himalayas but higher still in the regions of the mind." V. P. Hass

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 S 7 '52 280w

Christian Century 69:1530 D 31 '52 110w

Reviewed by Robert Peel

Christian Science Monitor p11 S 25 '52 650w

"He selects and records his experiences in words that carry the reader into the intimacy of his own pleasure of discovery. . . But Mr. Douglas is not content to give us a first-rate travel book. . . Beyond the High Himalayas attempts also to describe the political problems of the area in relation to the very real threats of Communism and of Soviet imperialism." Gary MacEoin

+ Commonweal 57:124 N 7 '52 450w

Reviewed by Lawrence Krader

Harvard Law R 66:382 D '52 1350w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggins

Horn Bk 28:426 D '52 240w

Kirkus 20:391 J1 1 '52 200w

Reviewed by H. L. Roth

+ Library J 77:1301 Ag '52 80w

Library J 77:2189 D 15 '52 50w

Reviewed by Michael Straight

New Repub 127:19 S 29 '52 1150w

"Whether the reader is interested in mountains, in adventure, in botany, in strange peoples or in Himalayan politics he will find something to his taste in the Douglas book. . . Justice Douglas recounts his adventures with modesty, good humor and a sympathetic insight into the customs and the problems of the people he meets along the way." A. T. Steele

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 S 21 '52 1350w

"The book is both entertaining and informative; the political passages, scattered among the anecdotes and descriptions, should fascinate the armchair traveler and make it an important book as well. Product of a profound background and tireless travel, 'Beyond the Himalayas' should be required reading." Robert Trumbull

+ N Y Times p3 S 21 '52 1150w

"The writing is easy and humorous and very informative, and the underlying seriousness makes it something more than just a travel book."

+ New Yorker 28:126 S 20 '52 160w

San Francisco Chronicle p25 N 2 '52 260w

"It is almost certain that opinion on this book will be mixed. If one accepts it, with this reviewer, as a kind of testament of a faith, the hardships, the dialogue, even the day-to-day chronology will assume a certain importance as a part of the whole scheme. To some, chiefly those who disagree with his conclusions, Mr. Douglas's book will seem disconnected and at times overly personal. . . Certainly the connection is not always clear between the sex life of the guides and the zeitgeist of Lahula; Justice Douglas's prose, while lucid and direct, lacks the power and subtlety to make such things clear. But what Mr. Douglas does make clear is his abounding good will and his preference for talking about people rather than peoples." J. F. Muehl

+ Sat R 35:14 S 20 '52 600w

Springf'd Republican p11C O 12 '52 360w

Wis Lib Bul 48:213 S '52

Reviewed by Dillon Ripley

Yale R n s 42:305 winter '53 1350w

DOUGLASS, HARL ROY. Secondary education for life adjustment of American youth. 630p il $5.50 Ronald

373 Education, Secondary 52-6189

"In this volume the attempt is made to describe, to explain, and to evaluate secondary education and its principal trends as they exist in the United States today. The more important historical and comparative background of the topics discussed is given along with them rather than in separate chapters. The book is intended primarily for use in college and university courses in general secondary education, although it should be valuable also to in-service teachers and administrators who wish to orient themselves with respect to modern philosophy and practice. The treatment is not from any special point of view other than that of the growth theory of education." (Pref) Indexes.

School & Society 75:237 Ap 12 '52 20w

"This volume by one of the outstanding men in the field of secondary education is a significant contribution to the professional literature. It is written from a very modern point of view but does not attempt to forward any special theory other than the growth concept of education." C. E. Crum

+ School R 60:437 O '52 950w

DOUGLASS, TRUMAN BARTLETT. Mission to America. 151p $2; pa $1.25 Friendship press

266 Missions—U.S. U.S.—Religion 51-4498

"The author is disturbed because the 'American Way of Life,' as we know it today, is far removed from the course envisioned by our forefathers 'when they articulated the fundamental principles of American life.' It is the author's feeling that 'Those principles have no sympathy with any system of caste, in which a man's importance and standing are measured by the number of people he can look down upon.' . . . The Christian church, to Mr. Douglass, is the remnant of loyal people in all our denominations—the God-committed, Christ-possessed. And it is these people who must lead the mission to America." Crozer Q

"Every churchman who questions the need of the 'red' side of a duplex envelope for a generous gift, all engaged in the Every-Member Canvass should read this book." R. C. Batchelder

+ Churchman 165:17 O 15 '51 190w

"Mission to America has a fresh approach, is written in a lucid style, and its theme—winning America to Christ through the community of true believers—is consistently developed from start to finish." W. W. Shrader

+ Crozer Q 28:373 O '51 250w

DOWDEY, CLIFFORD. Jasmine street. 415p $3.95 Doubleday

52-5237

Paul Carrick, born in a Southern city in 1900, is the hero of this long character study. The novel covers some forty years of Paul's life in the South and in New York city, ending with the attack on Pearl Harbor. An epilog brings Paul's story up to the present.

Booklist 48:214 Mr 1 '52

"This is a sound novel and a remarkably readable one. It is at once a trip down Memory Lane and a social commentary." V. P. Hass

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Mr 2 '52 400w

Kirkus 19:710 D 15 '51 200w

Reviewed by Coleman Rosenberger

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 F 24 '52 750w

"The impact of the book lies not so much in the rather simplified narrative as in the convincing manner in which the author links the fictional experiences of his characters with responsive reactions on the part of the reader." Henry Cavendish

N Y Times p23 F 24 '52 320w

"The story of Paul Carrick, as related by Mr. Dowdey, has a few memorable episodes, but it is too long, too slow, and too detailed, with too much discussion and far too many moral and social issues."

New Yorker 28:108 F 23 '52 50w

"It's all here and anyone who has ever enjoyed leafing through an old newspaper file, or an old photograph album, or a batch of old letters, can settle down for many hours of pleasant reading. If Mr. Dowdey's Paul never quite emerges from his role as a typically nice guy with whom we are all supposed to identify, and if the optimism of the ending gets somewhat fuzzy around the edges, these are minor flaws in a period piece primarily designed to evoke the enjoyments of reminiscence." E. J. Fitzgerald

+ Sat R 35:36 Mr 15 '52 260w

Springfd Republican p5C J1 13 '52 130w

DOWNER, ALAN S. Fifty years of American drama, 1900-1950. (Twentieth-century literature in America) 158p $2.50 Regnery

812.09 American drama—History and criticism. Theater—U.S. 51-13185

For descriptive note see Annual for 1951.

"In 150 easily read pages, Prof. Downer examines American drama in the past five decades, making sane evaluations of characteristic plays, and doing so with refreshing absence of the naïveté that some times accompanies academic discussions of the theater." F. H. O'Hara

+ Christian Century 69:163 F 6 '52 270w

"Folk Drama and American Comedy are briefly but skillfully analyzed in separate chapters. Mr. Downer presents clearly the two problems that confront the author of the folk drama in America: he must decide who are the 'folk'; then, he must break down the idea that 'native' characters are necessarily comic." Claire McGlinchey

+ New Eng Q 24:560 D '51 310w

"Alan S. Downer's basic criterion for his material is beyond reproach. He looks for a thoroughly organic and functional use of dramatic resources in each play, rather than any decorative use of staging, plotting or dialogue. In view of this, it is regrettable that he does not supplement his canon with greater critical imagination. He might thus have pared his excessive coverage of the florid theatre and soap-opera plots of Clyde Fitch and Belasco to the admitted neglect of 'many works of . . . aesthetic value.'" Rolf Fjelde

+ New Repub 126:20 Mr 3 '52 260w

Reviewed by A. G. Smith

Social Forces 30:364 Mr '52 160w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:24 Mr '52 250w

DOWNER, MARION. Paul Cézanne [il. with reproductions of his paintings]. 117p $2.50 Lothrop

B or 92 Cézanne, Paul—Juvenile literature 51-8762

"The lonely painter who came to be considered the greatest of the post-impressionists makes a fine subject for a brief biography intended for teen-agers and adults. Its author remembers that it may fall into the hands of many for whom it really is an 'introduction.' So, without any patronizing writing-down, she explains the world of a French provincial school-boy of the 1850s, the art world of the time in Paris, the development of French painting at the turn of the century, as well as one could in so few pages. She cannot fully explain just what drove Cézanne to paint as he did, or to paint at all, but she perhaps comes as near it as any one could. . . . Especially vivid are the bits about the country and the homes which were his chief subjects." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 48:160 Ja 1 '52

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 Mr 2 '52 160w

"Miss Downer has written with clarity and the insight of the true artist a book as informing and as readable for adults as for the high school age. It is illustrated with a frontispiece in full color and half-tone reproductions of the artist's paintings. I think it one of the finest biographies of any year." A. C. Moore

+ Horn Bk 28:23 F '52 70w

"Many facts in the history of modern art are incorporated appealingly and the reproductions of Cézanne's paintings are helpfully captioned by the author. Especially interesting to young people are the earlier chapters which tell of the artist's friendship with Emile Zola." N. R. F.

+ Horn Bk 28:115 Ap '52 120w

"A very readable story. Nothing is fictionalized, but the pages are bright with telling quotations. . . . Such a book crosses the adult and teen-age fields of readers, and should have a wide audience. Its way of introducing . . . is with first emphasis on the personality and the era. A true introduction to the art would mean more study of the pictures with details shown more clearly, which doubtless would make a duller book, at least for the young." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 D 16 '51 360w

"There are so few books on art and artists for young people that a good one is always noteworthy. It is an important event when it deals with a figure who has such a profound influence on modern art as has Cézanne.

Without benefit of fictional props, Marion Downer, author of 'Discovering Design,' has given us a moving portrait of the painter... in her analysis of his approach to painting the author helps the young reader to a fuller understanding of modern art." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p14 N 11 '51 190w

"This is not only a delightfully written biography of the great French painter. It is, too, the story of the impressionist school of painting and its influence on nineteenth- and twentieth-century art."

+ Sat R 35:52 F 16 '52 160w

Wis Lib Bul 48:31 Ja '52

DOWNES, MRS ANNE (MILLER). Pilgrim soul. 251p $3 Lippincott

52-9539

Historical novel of New Hampshire. Beginning in the 1820's it shows Hayes Copp settling in the wilderness at the foot of Mt Madison, where he built his cabin and barn before marrying Dolly. The story of their fifty years together ends on their golden wedding day.

Booklist 49:67 O 15 '52

"A sound base for a story of lives of hardship, physical and emotional, this is perhaps more thoughtful than eventful and a dependable choice for the conservative, feminine audience of Heartwood, The High Hills Calling etc."

+ Kirkus 20:474 Ag 1 '52 130w

"The charm of this pioneer novel lies in the timeless flavor of its protagonists, Hayes and Dolly Copp. They are a couple so far from the ordinary that they seem fresh and modern. It is not that Mrs. Downes attempts to modernize their story. She uses a narrative vein and does not color her characterizations by undue dialogue or description. Nevertheless, the stalwart Hayes and his vivacious wife, Dolly, come through with surprising vividness."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 O 26 '52 320w

Sat R 35:19 O 11 '52 200w

DOWNES, OLIN. 10 operatic masterpieces; with piano arrangements by Leonard Marker; designed by Merle Armitage; drawings by Alberta Sordini. 569p $10 Scribner

782.1 Opera—Stories, plots, etc. Operas

Ten operas illustrating the development of the operatic form from Mozart to Alban Berg. They include: Marriage of Figaro, Mastersingers of Nuremberg, Aida, Carmen, Tales of Hoffmann, La Boheme, La Tosca, Der Rosenkavalier, Love of three oranges, Wozzeck. For each, detailed synopses and background are given, with some music from each opera.

Booklist 49:121 D 1 '52

"Decorative drawings by Alberta Sordini and the pleasing book design by Merle Armitage contribute eye appeal, and Mr. Downs' helpful guidance will stimulate initiation and incentive among those who play for their own pleasure as well as the more ambitious."

+ Kirkus 20:446 J1 15 '52 170w

"The present handsome book is a joy to read and to handle. I cannot go so far as to take to my heart Alberta Sordini's numerous decorative illustrations in color; these seem to me in a key irrelevant to the music. But for the rest, Merle Armitage's layout will be a sheer joy to everyone who likes books to look good as well as to be good." Ernest Newman

+ N Y Times p24 D 7 '52 500w

DOWNY, FAIRFAX DAVIS. Free and Easy; the story of a Narragansett pacer; il. by Frederick Chapman. 188p $2.50 Scribner

51-12302

Story of Rhode Island in the early eighteenth century. Stella O'Dare, with the help of Jeffrey Hull rescued a fine horse, a Narragansett pacer named Free and Easy, from a shipwreck. Stella's efforts to win Free and Easy for her own, and the love story of Stella and Jeffrey, complete this novel for older girls.

"Out of the pages of history the author has created a moving and thrilling tale, against an historic background peopled with many true characters. Among these is 'Stout Jeffrey,' who provides Stella with an appealing heart interest and older girl readers with a welcome filip of romance." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 F 10 '52 180w

"The period background is provided from careful study and the characters seem real."

V. H.

+ Horn Bk 28:35 F '52 90w

Kirkus 19:443 Ag 15 '51 110w

"Much excitement and suspense, and the book as a whole seems quite sophisticated. Perhaps, each library should read before purchasing." N. L. Rathbun

Library J 77:69 Ja 1 '52 80w

"Full of action and excitement; it will delight teen-age horse-loving girls and probably many adults who know the setting." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 N 11 '51 90w

"In spite of some long-winded writing, all this adds up to an absorbing story with a particularly nice flavor of the period." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p38 O 14 '51 60w

DOWNING, ANTOINETTE FORRESTER, and SCULLY, VINCENT J. Architectural heritage of Newport, Rhode Island, 1640-1915. 241p 230pl $18.50 Harvard univ. press

720.9745 Newport, Rhode Island. Architecture—Newport, Rhode Island 52-5027

A history of the architecture of Newport, Rhode Island, covering nearly three centuries—1640 to 1915. Copiously illustrated with photographs and drawings. Index.

"This is a magnificent book, a work of dedication, painstakingly planned, excellently written, handsomely illustrated." Dorothy Adlow

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 26 '52 500w

"Plans, detailed drawings, and hundreds of admirable photographs make this project of the Newport Preservation Society eminently successful and of permanent value in Americana collections."

+ Library J 77:1304 Ag '52 110w

Reviewed by J. D. Forbes

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ag 17 '52 650w

"There are critics, and Talbot Hamlin of Columbia University is one of them, who recognize the beauties of our modern architecture and yet are well aware of the value of the contribution made by such eclectics as Hunt, McKim, Mead & White, and Platt. Mr. Scully, however, is positive that the 'last great plan' of McKim, Mead & White dates from 1890, and that 'the rest of their story is one of academicism and of the eclectic pastiche.' He is also confident that the Ecole des Beaux Arts in the late nineteenth century was 'entering into its most corrupt and academic phase.' . . . Judgments such as these will not find favor with all thoughtful readers. And yet, taken in its entirety, this book is a vivid and rewarding addition to the Americana shelf of any reader's library." Wayne Andrews

N Y Times p3 Je 22 '52 900w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles

San Francisco Chronicle p21 J1 20 '52 600w

"On the whole, this is an outstanding book, not the least satisfactory feature of which is the 230 beautifully printed colotype plates, many of them by distinguished photographers. For a rainy day in a chair at home it is a marvelous volume in which to wander up and down, but for a warm day in Newport I am afraid it is not going to be so satisfactory to walk with. It is portmanteau rather than pocket size and costs a great deal." W. L. Creese

+ Sat R 35:18 J1 12 '52 1250w

Times [London] Lit Sup p685 O 24 '52 850w

DOWNING, A. F.—Continued

"The monumental size of the volume has permitted large-scale reproduction in the many illustrations and particularly excellent plates, among which are some old photographs and pictures of houses that have been demolished. The Preservation Society of Newport County is to be highly commended for making both the research and the publication of it possible."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:244 S '52 200w

DOWNES, JOSEPH. American furniture in the Henry Francis du Pont Winterthur museum; foreword by Henry Francis du Pont; vl. Queen Anne and Chippendale periods. il col il $17.50 Macmillan

749.21 Furniture (52-8567)

"The articles described and shown here represent the best colonial American craftsmanship of the eighteenth century. An extended introduction gives a brief history of early American cabinetmaking, an explanation of terminology, a description of regional characteristics of the furniture of the period, and the woods used. A striking feature of the book is the 10 full-page illustrations of rooms in color; there are also 381 black-and-white photographs of individual articles of furniture." (Booklist) Index.

"Expensive, but worth calling to the attention of libraries with sufficient funds or special collections."

Booklist 48:292 My 15 '52

Bookmark 11:238 Jl '52 20w

Reviewed by Edward Barry

Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 My 11 '52 50w

"Each handsome photograph of bed, chair, screen, and table is fully documented. There are also more than a hundred rooms finely pictured in color. One hopes that more and similarly striking volumes are in the making. Recommended." A. S. Plaut

+ Library J 77:795 My 1 '52 150w

"Sumptuously produced and scholarly volume." Stuart Preston

+ N Y Times p7 Je 29 '52 550w

New Yorker 28:144 Je 7 '52 200w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 O 26 '52 100w

"The museum recently opened by Henry Francis DuPont at Winterthur, Delaware, is a mural of two centuries of life in America, definitive in scope, authentic in performance, delightfully intimate in detail. From this extensive collection the curator of the museum, Joseph Downes, has selected the furnishings of the Queen Anne and Chippendale periods as the subject of one of the finest books yet published on the work of the Colonial craftsman." Catharine Oglesby

+ Sat R 35:41 Je 7 '52 850w

DOWNES, ROBERT BINGHAM. American library resources. See American library association

DRAGONETTE, JESSICA. Faith is a song; the odyssey of an American artist. 322p il $3.75 McKay

B or 92 Singers—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 51-14674

"A popular, convent-bred radio singer recalls the pioneering steps that led to her success and the exciting personalities met along the way, as she affirms her faith in radio as a medium for artistic musical expression. Photographs." (Bookmark) No index.

Bookmark 11:80 Ja '52 40w

Reviewed by R. L. Blakesley

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ja 13 '52 130w

"Most of her story is jerky and two-dimensional, but will undoubtedly be welcomed by the many readers who recall the pioneer days of radio when she was one of the first singers to master microphone technique and when her audiences were estimated at 66 million persons weekly." C. K. Miller

Library J 77:146 Ja 15 '52 150w

Reviewed by D. J. Epstein

Music Lib Assn Notes 9:420 Je '52 170w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 F 17 '52 12Jw

"Her story, better written than such autobiographies usually are, combines curiously a certain hard-boiled quality with strong religiosity and not always charming naïveté." Moses Smith

N Y Times p23 Ja 27 '52 200w

DRESSER, DAVIS. Charlie Dell, by Anderson Wayne [pseud]. 247p $3 Coward-McCann

52-5022

Story of a man who, out of love with his wife, falls in love with his young sister-in-law and brings disaster down on all.

Kirkus 20:237 Ap 1 '52 200w

"The individual events of the book are sufficiently exciting to elicit the reader's engrossment until the end, at which point one pauses and realizes that the novel's circumstances and characterizations have been tailor-made to fit a prefabricated scheme which is essentially false and gratuitous. This defect has marred much of the work of James M. Cain, and it is to Cain's violent and depthless fables of modern men caught in traps set by their own cupidity and carnality that the book must inevitably be compared. It shares Cain's strength (of natural, sharp dialogue and sure-footed narrative progression) as well as his weaknesses." Jerome Stone

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 My 18 '52 320w

"A fast-moving, inexorably plotted narrative, Mr. Wayne's novel is at its best in its field descriptions of the engineer at work. Rarely, however, does he get below the surface of the ruinous passion which, he insists, drags four people (including the baby) to their downfall." John Nerber

+ N Y Times p14 Jl 20 '52 280w

"If you have been waiting for a tough-boiled sex and murder melodrama in the James M. Cain tradition 'Charlie Dell' may satisfy your needs. . . . The whole thing is written in a style that can be called 'punchy' and is sure to titillate those who enjoy the sex stories in the confession magazines."

+ Sat R 35:36 My 10 '52 190w

Springfield Republican p7D My 18 '52 80w

DRESSER, DAVIS. What really happened, by Brett Halliday, pseud. 215p $2.50 Dodd

52-10153

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 S 7 '52 140w

"Brett Halliday's What Really Happened has an especially Christie-ish plot, with a nice assortment of suspects and alibis; and though you may easily crack the key-alibi, you'll admire its neat variation on an old idea and thoroughly enjoy the ingeniously detailed background of television and recording and the expected vigor and pace of Halliday's narration." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p14 Ag 10 '52 70w

"You may anticipate the stunt that gives the solution; characters and setup, however, are colorful, and punishment for various sins is neatly dealt around. B minus." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ag 31 '52 60w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 35:38 S 20 '52 20w

DRESSLER, DAVID. Probation and parole. 237p $3.25 Columbia univ. press

364.6 Probation system 51-10476

A handbook for probation, parole officers, and other social service workers. It is based on the author's own experience as a social worker. Index.

"Dressler's account of the philosophy, techniques, and problems of probation and parole supervision provides a more accurate and stimulating discussion of these matters than the reviewer has encountered elsewhere in the literature. Since the book is devoted largely to this phase of probation and parole work, it should make interesting and enlightening reading for laymen, correctional workers, and academic students of the crime problem." L. E. Ohlin

+ Am J Soc 57:611 My '52 500w

"As a general explanation and interpretation of present thinking in the practice of probation and parole the book is well-written and down-to-earth. It should be of value both inside and outside the profession, though it seems likely to be more useful to the average lay reader than to the person seriously involved in any professional sense. It represents a good journalistic effort in the field of social work." G. B. Volz

+ Am Soc R 16:885 D '51 300w

Booklist 47:356 Je 15 '51

"Those actively engaged in probation and parole service will find the book much more than a restatement of what is already known; teachers of criminology, although they may occasionally disagree with the author, will find his ideas stimulating."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:399 D '51 160w

DRUON, MAURICE. Rise of Simon Lachaume; tr. from the French by Edward Fitzgerald. 324p $3.50 Dutton

52-7796

A chronicle of a wealthy French family during the 1920s. The titular hero is not a member of the family but a hanger on who "rises" with their help, not always voluntarily or consciously given.

Reviewed by Riley Hughes

Cath World 176:153 N '52 110w

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ag 31 '52 500w

"It is amazing that a book which concerns itself with the vices, perversities and amours of the Parisian haute monde at the end of the first World War can manage to be so dull and lifeless. With material like this, one is naturally reminded of Proust, but one need not read far to realize that without the sustained fury of his indignation or the unequalled benefits of his insight the material is as tawdry as the gossip whispered by an ancient beldame."

— Kirkus 20:356 Je 15 '52 250w

"Withal, the novel lacks sufficient body and strength to sustain it." E. P. Nichols

— Library J 77:1302 Ag '52 50w

Reviewed by Norman Shrapnel

Manchester Guardian p6 Ap 4 '52 50w

Reviewed by Ernest Jones

Nation 175:215 S 13 '52 310w

Reviewed by Isaac Rosenfeld

New Repub 127:20 S 15 '52 650w

"Proust's study of a society in decay endowed its dying movements with such beauty as paradoxically to preserve it for ever, outside Time; in Maurice Druon's impermanent family chronicle we see the same society decaying indeed, kicking, rattling and deliquescing, its disease here is not the poetic vices of snobbery and the Cities of the Plain, but the realist greeds of power, money and the flesh. This is an impressive novel, with a hard, un pitying sense of historical change and survival, not unworthy of being regarded as a lesser obverse, a devil's advocate, to Proust's sociology." G. D. Painter

+ New Statesman & Nation 43:441 Ap 12 '52 150w

"The background, the figures of a powerful novel are present in Mr. Druon's work but the impressive, mature talent of the first part of his book dissolves, with occasional exceptions, into a sort of yellow journalism devoted to the portrayal of the shocking incident. But one must pay homage to him for his portrait of Jean de La Monnerie and, in equal degree, in spite of its repulsive outlines, to that of Lucien Maubland." Rose Feld

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Ag 31 '52 550w

"The Rise of Simon Lachaume' is a work of high seriousness, and an essential part of its seriousness resides in its charm. The Nineteen Twenties are a period, after all, within the memory of some yet living. But they are treated as a period—in the same sense in which we use the word when we say 'period piece' or 'period furniture'—and, indeed, there is a careful attention to décor, costume, mores. Style is not assumed but evoked, just as we should reconstruct the style of the Eighteen Twenties. The charm acts, as a commentary, telling us that these folks, these days, this class, this aspiration, are gone." Donald Barr

+ N Y Times p10 Ag 31 '52 400w

New Yorker 28:134 O 4 '52 90w

Reviewed by Harrison Smith

Sat R 35:10 Ag 30 '52 700w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn

Spring'd Republican p11C O 12 '52 230w

Reviewed by Paul Pickrel

Yale R n s 42:10 autumn '52 400w

DUBIN, ROBERT. Human relations in administration; the sociology of organization; with readings and cases. 573p $7.35; to schools $5.50 Prentice-Hall

658.3 Industrial management 51-14966

"This book consists of selected, edited readings with author's comments at the beginning and end of each chapter. Its purpose is to set forth a general approach for the analysis of organized groups, based chiefly upon studies of economic organizations. Forty-seven examples or 'cases' of organization problems are included in the back of the book, so that the theories developed in the chapters can be applied by the student (or reader) to empirical materials." Am J Soc

"An excellent study based upon a careful and well-reasoned selection of materials." R. C. Stone

+ Am J Soc 57:517 Mr '52 600w

"There are probably few executives in the work world who will not find enlightenment in this book by Professor Dubin, or scholars interested in the field of social organization who will not feel indebted to him for drawing together such an extensive range of significant materials." Oswald Hall

+ Am Soc R 17:506 Ag '52 450w

DUBKIN, LEONARD. White lady; il. by Sy Barlowe. 165p $3 Putnam

599.4 Bats 52-5276

An account of the author's discovery of a colony of bats living in a tree on a vacant lot in Chicago. He describes his observations of the bats, especially a rare albino, which he called the White Lady.

Booklist 48:208 Mr 1 '52

"Leonard Dubkin is a persuasive writer. He had to be to keep me reading his book while my flesh crawled as he became friends with a colony of bats. His book, I am sure, will have no reader more unwilling to share his experience and I could pay him no greater compliment than to report that I not only read to the end but did so with mounting enjoyment." V. P. Hass

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Mr 2 '52 370w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Yates

Christian Science Monitor p13 Ap 5 '52 290w

"This is a delectable little book. It is written quietly, with restraint, and is thereby the more moving. Mr. Dubkin never humanizes his animals; and he is at scrupulous pains not to conjecture about their behaviors or the content of their consciousness without saying he is conjecturing. He writes with immense informativeness, with modesty, and above all with the gentle-hearted sympathy of a man of love. The White Lady deserves, and will surely secure, devoted readers." Alan Devoe

DUBKIN, LEONARD—Continued

+ Commonweal 55:621 Mr 28 '52 300w

Manchester Guardian p4 S 5 '52 200w

"This may well be one of the cases where amateur luck plus amateur enthusiasm has made a real contribution to our knowledge of animals, and the little book may become a classic."

+ Nation 175:98 Ag 2 '52 170w

"Mr. Dubkin, who is nowadays a publisher, had originally hoped to become a naturalist, and had preserved through the years both the science-mindedness and the earth-excited heart that combine ideally for that profession. He took to frequenting his bat-bower with daft enthusiasm; and now he has written this quite magical little book to record his discoveries and his delight." Alan Devoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ap 13 '52 180w

"A warmly enlightening book. . . Mr. Dubkin's report is directly and sympathetically written. 'The White Lady' entitles him to inclusion in that rare company of which Assisi's Francis is a sanctified and Hollywood's Disney a secular member." Frederick Van de Water

+ N Y Times p21 Mr 2 '52 380w

New Yorker 28:145 Ap 5 '52 130w

San Francisco Chronicle p29 Ap 20 '52 180w

Time 59:47 Mr 17 '52 1100w

"Some serious zoologists may consider the book too slight but it is a piece of delightful writing which not only naturalists will enjoy."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p680 O 17 '52 300w

DUBLIN, LOUIS ISRAEL, and SPIEGELMAN, MORTIMER. Facts of life: from birth to death. 461p $4.95 Macmillan

614.1 Vital statistics. U.S.—Population 51-13910

A popular reference book in question-and-answer form based on material and statistics gathered by the research department of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company. Partial contents: Who we are—the population; The average American family; Marital dissolution by divorce, separation, and death; The sick and their care; The conquest of tuberculosis; The mystery of cancer; The control of diabetes; Our old people; The accident toll; Mental health; The public health and its administration; How long we live; The effects of war, Selected references, Index.

"The questions and answers are given in such interesting form that the book can easily be read from cover to cover by any person concerned with health. He will find many facts so readily accessible that he can use the book for reference when he needs the answers quickly to such specific questions." R. R. Puffer

+ Am J Pub Health 42:204 F '52 260w

Reviewed by E. D. Burdick

Ann Acad 281:224 My '52 460w

Reviewed by T. R. Van Dellen

Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 Mr 9 '52 260w

Kirkus 19:473 Ag 15 '51 100w

"The book is very well organized, and there is an index. Brief and factual answers, without editorializing, are given to such questions as 'What are the chances a marriage will end in divorce?' 'What is the effect of overweight and underweight on human mortality?'" I. B.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ja 27 '52 180w

School & Society 74:303 N 10 '51 30w

"This volume is an ingenious device to extend in reading public, in time, and in informational influence the usefulness of an encyclopedic collection of statistical data, distilled by the senior author and a series of able associates including the latest, the present collaborator, out of the industrial insurance experience of the company they have served. All the statistical matter is worthy of generous acceptance and use." Haven Emerson

+ Survey 88:186 Ap '52 450w

DUBOIS, JOSIAH ELLIS, and JOHNSON, EDWARD. Devil's chemists; 24 conspirators of the International Farben cartel who manufacture wars. 374p il $3.75 Beacon press

338.885 Interessengemeinschaft farbenindustrie aktiengesellschaft, Frankfurt-am-Main. Chemical industries 52-7872

"In 1947 twenty-four high ranking members of the Farben organization were arraigned before the American Military Tribunal at Nuremberg and charged with preparing and waging aggressive war and, in addition, with committing crimes against humanity during the course of the conflict. 'The Devil's Chemists' is an account of the ensuing trial and an analysis of the evidence which formed the basis of the charges against the defendants, written by the man who was their chief prosecutor." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) Index.

Kirkus 20:581 S 1 '52 120w

"The book is an important one and deserves attention for its exposure of the Farben leaders who, once again free, are now working in collaboration with the Russians." J. E. Brown

+ Library J 77:1647 O 1 '52 100w

"This book reads like an exhaustively documented, breathlessly exciting murder mystery, and so it is. The victim: historic American principles of sympathy for innocent victims and determination to punish the transgressor, plus much of our prestige in the eyes of the free world." Bruce Bliven

+ New Repub 127:21 N 3 '52 550w

"Mr. DuBois argues his case passionately and, for the most part, effectively. There are some minor historical inaccuracies in these pages (Dollfus, for instance, was killed in 1934, not in 1937, as the author indicates); there is a good deal of repetition which might have been avoided; and the style becomes at times very involved. Despite these faults, however, this book deserves to be read by citizens who are concerned about our European policy." G. A. Craig

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 O 5 '52 1100w

"It was a herculean task to boil down the essence of the volumes of testimony and affidavits not admitted in evidence, so that the ordinary reader could have an accurate picture of the entire Farben case. To his further credit, the author has achieved a dramatic quality which makes the book highly readable." Delbert Clark

+ N Y Times p41 N 9 '52 310w

Reviewed by Delbert Clark

Sat R 35:29 D 6 '52 800w

DU BOIS, MRS THEODORA (MCCORMICK). Cavalier's corpse. 190p $2.50 Doubleday

52-10044

Detective story.

Kirkus 20:386 J 1 '52 70w

"The scene is observed with admiration and small talk, but although there are fairly steady demonstrations of hysteria it is remarkably unexciting." James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ag 24 '52 30w

"Contains some serious detectival flaws; but there's some first-rate eeriness in the green-faced Cavalier ghost who prowls murderously about the Irish village of Ballygarry." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p18 Ag 17 '52 40w

"Background and conversation charming, but attempts at drama sadly flat. C plus." L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p23 Ag 24 '52 30w

"Quietly pleasant." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 35:38 Ag 23 '52 20w

DU BOIS, MRS THEODORA (MCCORMICK).
Sarah Hall's sea god. 250p $2.75 Doubleday
52-5124

A fantasy with realistic atmosphere and complications. Middle-aged Sarah Hall, widow and grandmother, finds Poseidon in her late husband's bedroom. Soon after she, her niece, and grandson Michael set sail with the water god in their cutter, down the Inland Waterways to Florida.

Booklist 48:196 F 15 '52

"A fantasia which is gentle and gay and suitably insubstantial."

Kirkus 19:682 D 1 '51 160w

"Fantasy is not a craft that you can steer without a compass, and Theodora Du Bois lacks the steady hand at the wheel which that flexible form needs." Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 F 17 '52 440w

"A special flavor has always distinguished Theodora DuBois' picaresque yarns. Her whimsical and adventurous people prefer the world of small sailing craft and our coastal waters for their often outrageous doings. And this reader, among a respectable following, has always had a warm spot in her heart for them. This time, however, the whimsey and chicanery are more than the most hardy will be able to swallow." Elizabeth Bullock

— N Y Times p24 Ja 27 '52 380w

"Mrs. Du Bois takes us on this excursion into fantasy with a deft hand. She doesn't quite keep clear of the shoals of farce, but she keeps things spinning fast enough so that you'll enjoy most of the trip. This sort of thing used to be called hammock reading."

+ — Sat R 35:26 Mr 1 '52 130w

DU BOIS, WILLIAM PENE. Squirrel hotel;
il. by [the author]. 47p $2 Viking

52-8185

One day the author found an old man in the park entertaining the crowd with a Bee Orchestra. Later he engaged the man in conversation and heard the story of his life and all about the Squirrel Hotel. Unfortunately the man disappeared before the author found out where the Squirrel Hotel is located and as he is still searching for it he has described it in this book so others can help him hunt for it.

Reviewed by M. F. Kieran
Atlantic 189:86 Je '52 120w

Booklist 48:269 Ap 15 '52

Bookmark 11:186 My '52

"An ingenious new yarn by one whose earlier straight-faced tall tales have made him a favorite. . . Convincing detail in the text and in the carefully drawn pictures make the whole idea reasonable as well as entrancing." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 28:106 Ap '52 100w

"Magic of make believe once again, in a story only William Pene duBois could have told. For its the kind of pretend that children (and many grown ups) love."

+ Kirkus 20:71 F 1 '52 130w

"Good for reading aloud." E. T. Dobbins
+ Library J 77:727 Ap 15 '52 80w

"It is all very slight, and does not add up to a real story. It is a fine item for Du Bois collectors, but a long way from the vigor and fun of 'Twenty One Balloons,' or 'The Great Geppy.'" L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p21 My 11 '52 240w

"Mr. du Bois' illustrations for this minor-key fantasy are charming and witty, and promise much more than the book supplies." Marjorie Fischer

+ — N Y Times p30 Ap 20 '52 140w

"Squirrels never had it so good as in this charming story about a retired toy shop owner who found enjoyment and a purpose in life by taking care of his furry friends in the park."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 My 11 '52 80w

Reviewed by M. G. Davis
+ Sat R 35:48 My 10 '52 190w
Wis Lib Bul 48:218 S '52

DUBOS, RENE JULES, and DUBOS, JEAN PORTER. White plague; tuberculosis, man and society. 277p $4 Little

616.2 Tuberculosis 52-6801

Discusses the cause, cure, and prevention of tuberculosis. Includes a study of the effects of the disease upon art and literature thru the ages, and human interest details of famous sufferers. The authors are members of the Rockefeller Institute staff, and Dr René Dubos was winner of the 1951 N. T. A. Trudeau Medal. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 49:99 N 15 '52

Bookmark 12:53 D '52 20w

Reviewed by Howard Taylor
Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 N 9 '52 100w

Kirkus 20:623 S 15 '52 180w

"Probably the best nontechnical account of tuberculosis available. . . Excellent as a history for general readers; fine as a review or current survey for busy physicians." J. M. Scherr

+ Library J 77:1805 O 15 '52 100w

"The book is highly recommended, especially to those interested in the social implications of one of the greatest diseases that have afflicted the human race." S. A. Waksman

+ N Y Times p4 N 16 '52 900w

Springf'd Republican p7C N 30 '52 320w

Time 61:44 Ja 5 '53 700w

Reviewed by George Rosen
+ Yale R n s 42:315 winter '53 500w

DUCASSE, CURT JOHN. Nature, mind and death. (Paul Carus foundation lecture) 514p $4.50 Open ct.

130.16 Philosophy. Mind and body 51-6117

"Basic epistemological and metaphysical reflections are presented in this important book as a foundation for a critical examination of typical psychic phenomena which have been regarded as evidence for human survival of bodily death." U S Quarterly Bk R

Reviewed by F. H. Heinemann
Hibbert J 51:83 O '52 40w

"Most readers will find much to disagree with in this book, but it is packed with clear and detailed analysis that takes into account many objections likely to be raised. It is a solid contribution to philosophy and a worthy addition to the Paul Carus Lectures series of volumes." A. G. Ramsperger

+ — J Philos 49:239 Mr 27 '52 1800w

"The brief treatment is unusual inasmuch as it is one of the few philosophical studies of life after death which are independent of belief in God."

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:40 Mr '52 200w

DUGGAN, ALFRED LEO. Conscience of the king. 250p $3 Coward-McCann

52-7739

Historical novel, purporting to be the first-person account of the life history of the founder of the West Saxon kingdom.

Booklist 48:228 Mr 15 '52

"Conscience of the King would have been sounder historically if Mr. Duggan's authorities were less suspect than the Anglo-Saxon Chronicle and more recent than Sir Charles Oman." Simon Paynter

Canadian Forum 32:41 My '52 550w

"With few records to draw on the book is a remarkable feat of invention and duly realistic writing." H. I. A. Fausset

+ Manchester Guardian p4 F 16 '51 70w

"A tour de force of imaginative reconstruction which, while it only partially succeeds as

DUGGAN, A. L.—Continued
a novel, puts flesh on the bones of history."
John Raymond
New Statesman & Nation 41:280 Mr 10
'51 600w

"The more than ably garnered shards of history within the 250 meaty pages of this well written essay on the early English rate careful perusal. The artifacts are there, and have gained a good patina from burial in whatever musty, worm-holed books they were derived from. The author writes in a lusty way about a lusty, time-faded time, not so swashbuckling as cold, logical dog-eat-dog crude realism; not romanticized, but pragmatic in its transcription." Donald Corley
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Ap 13
'52 300w

"'Conscience of the King' is a brilliant historical spree—informed, ironic and satisfying."
Isabelle Mallet
+ N Y Times p22 Mr 16 '52 550w
New Yorker 28:136 Ap 12 '52 110w

"Mr. Duggan's reconstruction of this dark and little known period of British history is believably circumstantial and full of convincing and entertaining details. But it is his happy conception of the conscienceless king and his practical chicanery that will contribute most to your enjoyment." E. J. Fitzgerald
+ Sat R 35:34 Ap 5 '52 220w

"Mr. Duggan claims historical support for all the facts in his book, though not necessarily unanimity among historians in the interpretation of them. Most readers are not likely to be in a position to check Mr. Duggan's accuracy. But what is so remarkable, in a book so detailed in its reconstruction . . . is its narrative skill. Moreover, Mr. Duggan has an agreeable unvarnished style, which, in spite of an outward economy and dryness, is witty and telling. It is a style whose easy erudition many present-day novelists might well admire."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p97 F 16 '51
350w

DU JARDIN, MRS ROSAMOND (NEAL).
Double date. 191p $2.50 Lippincott 52-5102

Novel for teen agers. It describes one year in the lives of Pam and Penny, twin sisters. Pam was the vivacious one, and the story is about Penny's determination to map out a life of her own, and her success.

Booklist 48:284 My 1 '52
Bookmark 11:186 My '52

"A lively, easy-reading story with serious undertones." Polly Goodwin
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p16 Ap 20 '52
170w

"Teen-age readers will find the happy home background, with an understanding mother and grandmother, and the realistic discussions of school activities much to their liking." V. H.
+ Horn Bk 28:110 Ap '52 100w
Kirkus 20:34 Ja 15 '52 120w

"Will be popular because interesting and timely." E. E. Frank
+ Library J 77:604 Ap 1 '52 60w

"It is light reading of the sort that many girls of about thirteen to fifteen like very much." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ap 13 '52
130w

"As in 'Wait for Marcy' and other books Mrs. du Jardin writes of teen-age problems and emotions with an ease which seems to come from familiarity. This is good light reading for older girls, with an undercurrent of sound sense." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p32 Ap 6 '52 140w

"This is one of the best of Rosamond du Jardin's stories for the older girls."
+ Sat R 35:35 Jl 19 '52 100w

DU JARDIN, MRS ROSAMOND (NEAL).
Marcy catches up. 190p $2.50 Lippincott 52-8791

Novel for older girls. It is a sequel to Wait for Marcy (Book Review Digest 1950). Marcy and her friend Liz are invited to spend a month on Liz's uncle's Colorado ranch, where Marcy receives her first proposal.

Booklist 49:50 O 1 '52

Bookmark 12:13 O '52 20w

"As in her other books for girls, the author again shows why she is such a favorite. For she seems to know just what makes them tick and writes about what is close to their teenage hearts." Polly Goodwin
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p16 O 5 '52
150w

"Not tops in teen fiction, but essentially readable."
+ Kirkus 20:374 Jl 1 '52 70w

"Definitely a story of boy and girl relations, which teen-age girls will enjoy and many will find helpful." E. E. Frank
+ Library J 77:1413 S 1 '52 50w

"Perhaps the best pages are those where Marcy tells Mom all about it. The title means that, until this first proposal, she had not been as successful in attracting numbers of men as her friend Liz. Now she acquires the glamor of being the first in her crowd to have a real proposal." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ag 17
'52 160w

"Light in tone, written with due regard for the necessary frivolities of youth, this story still deals effectively with a theme which is of absorbing interest to most young girls."
E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p24 N 2 '52 110w

Reviewed by B. B. Thorpe
San Francisco Chronicle p3 N 16 '52
60w

DU MAURIER, DAPHNE (MRS F. A. M. BROWNING). My cousin Rachel. 348p $3.50 Doubleday 52-5231

The scene is Cornwall and Italy, the time probably the eighteenth century. The narrator is Philip Ashley, who had lived happily with his uncle on the family estate in Cornwall, until his uncle's ill health caused him to take a trip to Italy. There Ambrose met and married a distant cousin, Rachel, and not long after he died. Philip receives Rachel in Cornwall, falls under the influence of her charm, and seeks an unconventional way out when he thinks she may have poisoned his beloved uncle.

Reviewed by Edward Weeks
Atlantic 189:78 Mr '52 800w

Booklist 48:137; 196 D 15 '51; F 15 '52
Bookmark 11:133 Mr '52 50w

Reviewed by Edith Powke
Canadian Forum 32:71 Je '52 70w

Reviewed by Riley Hughes
Cath World 175:74 Ap '52 170w

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 F 10 '52
550w

"This novel, which at first seems simply the clever recording of an absorbing story, at last shows itself to be something far more important and significant." Margaret Williamson
+ Christian Science Monitor p7 F 14 '52
800w

Reviewed by Serge Hughes
Commonweal 55:477 F 15 '52 400w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
Horn Bk 28:137 Je '52 70w

"A gifted craftsman and spinner of yarns, Daphne du Maurier excels herself."
+ Kirkus 19:707 D 15 '51 290w

"Suspense, suspicion, sharp characterization and not a little strain on the reader's credulity sustain the plot." H. S. Taylor
Library J 77:210 F 1 '52 80w

"My Cousin Rachel is double-distilled readers' delight. It is in the same category as 'Rebecca'; in fact, although the story is entirely new, it has some of the elements of the former." Elizabeth Jenkins
+ Manchester Guardian p4 Ag 3 '51 230w

"Slick, effective, utterly mechanical, the book is a triumphant and uncanny example of the way in which a piece of writing can be emasculated by unconsciously 'having it arranged' for another medium. Close-ups, fade-ins, sequences by candlelight or long shots from the terrace—it has all been taken care of in the script and there is little call for anything in the way of imagination on the part of the director." John Raymond

New Statesman & Nation 42:163 Ag 11 '51 600w

"In 'My Cousin Rachel' Miss Du Maurier has a story suited to her hand. As in 'Rebecca,' she wrings out every drop of juice implicit in the situation she has created, from the tisana brewed in her boudoir (was it from the seeds of the poison laburnum?) to the beads of anguish that fall, drop by drop, from the lacerated heart of her young hero." F. H. Bullock

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 F 10 '52 480w

"Almost certainly Daphne du Maurier has been haunted by the specter of her own 'Rebecca.' It would need a dedicated artist or a confirmed experimentalist to resist so fabulously successful a brain-child. Miss du Maurier is neither of these things, but a storyteller whose sole aim is to bewitch and beguile. And in 'My Cousin Rachel' she does both, with Rebecca looking fondly over her shoulder." John Barkham

N Y Times p5 F 10 '52 600w

"Miss du Maurier's magic touch is unhappily not in evidence in this witless tale of a nineteenth-century lady who may or may not have been a poisoner."

New Yorker 27:109 F 9 '52 40w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles

San Francisco Chronicle p18 F 10 '52 600w

"The novel may be said to suffer from only one fault in construction; it takes too long to bring Cousin Rachel from Italy to Cornwall. But all murder trials begin slowly and increase in intensity until the jury delivers its verdict. Perhaps that, too, was cleverly plotted by its skilful and compelling writer." Harrison Smith

+ Sat R 35:10 F 9 '52 800w

"Miss du Maurier has reached the happy state when it can no longer matter to her what any reviewer says; but we may note that My Cousin Rachel has the old virtues, the bold sweep of imagination, the energy, plus a narrative skill which is the result of long practice; and the old faults, the facile, out-of-character lines that disfigure the often excellent dialogue, the laziness over detail, the mixture of careful with perfunctory work. Miss du Maurier deserves her enormous public. Any professional writer will salute the skill that sets Rachel moving—and sigh to see so many marks of the writer's indifference to her readers." L. A. G. Strong

+ Spec 187:196 Ag 10 '51 260w

Reviewed by Ethel Dexter

Springf'd Republican p12D Mr 16 '52 280w

"My Cousin Rachel is that comparatively rare thing in present-day writing, an expert blend of suspense, shrewd realism and romantic hokum."

+ Time 59:100 F 11 '52 330w

— Times [London] Lit Sup p561 S 7 '51 70w

DU MAURIER, GEORGE LOUIS PALMELLA BUSSON. Young George du Maurier; a selection of his letters, 1860-67; ed. by Daphne du Maurier; with a biographical appendix by Derek Peppys Whiteley and ill. from contemporary drawings by du Maurier. 307p $4.50 Doubleday

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 52-5613

Letters written by the author of Trilby and Peter Ibbetson during the years 1860 to 1867, when he was living a gay, poverty-stricken life in Victorian London. The letters are illustrated with some of his sketches, and are edited by his granddaughter. Index.

Booklist 49:11 S 1 '52

Reviewed by Edward Wagenknecht

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Je 22 '52 350w

"Recommended for biography, belles lettres and theatre collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 77:1814 O 15 '52 30w

Reviewed by Anthony Curtis

New Statesman & Nation 42:502 N 3 '51 150w

Reviewed by Horace Gregory

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 My 18 '52 1300w

Reviewed by Carlos Baker

N Y Times p4 My 11 '52 550w

"Fortunately, du Maurier dashed off his letters instead of laboriously composing them, as was the fashion of his day, so that they are both lively and revealing, and result in an excellent self-portrait of a talented and exceptionally conscientious young man, endowed with almost equal amounts of charm and priggishness."

+ New Yorker 28:142 My 10 '52 190w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 S 7 '52 180w

Reviewed by Harrison Smith

+ Sat R 35:21 Ji 19 '52 750w

"I think that this new book of his private letters to his mother, his best friend, and the girl he loved, charmingly illustrated by his own spontaneous sketches, is the best book that du Maurier ever wrote—exposing, as it does, all unconsciously and unaffectedly, the ups-and-downs of his Anglo-French artistic temperament, the quick engaging sympathy of the musician whose songs at the piano were a lasting memory of Bohemian London, and (as a binding force behind it all) the guiding principles that were fought for 'not without dust and heat,' the abiding faith in the ultimate rewards of family life." Derek Hudson

+ Spec 187:303 S 7 '51 1300w

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p608 S 28 '51 850w

DUNBAR, SIR GEORGE DUFF-SUTHERLAND, 6th bart. India and the passing of empire. 225p ill col maps $4.75 Philosophical lib.

954 India—History

[52-17557]

"A short but very comprehensive survey of four thousand years of Indian history, from the time the subcontinent was colonized by migratory Indo-Aryans, who imposed the caste system, to the voluntary abdication of the British raj, in 1947." (New Yorker) Index.

"Sir George, who was an officer in the former Indian Army, is the author of a previous, full-scale history of India, and a master of clear exposition. (His account, in the present book, of the East India Company and the mess it got into is particularly noteworthy)."

+ New Yorker 28:147 S 13 '52 120w

"Like everything he has written, this book is clear and readable, containing just enough detail to explain what happened without obscuring the things that really mattered. The treatment is objective and impartial without being 'bloodless.'"

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p787 D 7 '51 100w

DUNCAN, BOB. Dicky bird was singing; men, women, and black gold. 282p $3 Rinehart

52-8740

A volume of legends and tall tales that have grown up about the oil industry of the Southwest. "These stories have come from hundreds of old-timers in the oil business who now live in the Southwest. . . . Perhaps all of this book is not folklore in a strict sense, nor is it what the scholars call history. Perhaps many of the stories told here actually happened in one of the many remote places over the wide scope of American oil. What is important is that these stories are still being told, that they reflect a way of life which is rapidly disappearing." (Intro)

DUNCAN, BOB—Continued

Reviewed by Russell MacFall

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 S 28 '52
120w

Kirkus 20:443 J1 15 '52 150w

"Old doodlebugs, young engineers, or nouveau riche Osage Indians like John Stink, all are interesting characters in these yarns of violence, drunkenness, vice and cupidity on America's brawling last frontier. Well-told, gummy tales." R. H. Dillon

+ Library J 77:1396 S 1 '52 130w

"This book is fresh with pictures and narratives of oil-field humanity. Some of the narratives amount to folk tales. They are the best part of the book. . . What the book lacks is the exercise of a disciplined mind, which the author's experience as a radio entertainer has probably not cultivated. What it has is lively and authentic representation of oil folks." J. F. Dobie

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 O 5 '52 600w

"They are a strange gallery, these fumlbers and schemers and hoodlums and misbegotten dreamers. Oil is in their veins, all of them; it maddens them, one way or another. Bob Duncan is a remarkably able chronicler, with a wry wit, a lusty sense of humor, and a rare ability to wrap up a character in a dozen words. This isn't the history that gets into the history books, but it is history of a kind. The kind of history that is seldom remembered beyond the echo of human voices, for these are tales that men tell between drinks and in the shadow of the oil derricks, where life itself is, or was in the heyday of the fields, too lusty to be real." Hal Borland

+ N Y Times p6 O 5 '52 550w

"The lusty yarns which Mr. Duncan has collected and shaped up give the reader an accurate picture of the turbulent boom towns jammed with lease dealers, wildcatters and roustabouts—and the men and women who preyed on them. In telling how oil, and the money it represented, corrupted or saved the poor and remade the social and physical landscape in the Southwest the author reveals himself as not only a good folklorist but as an excellent story-teller." R. H. Dillon

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 O 12 '52
450w

DUNCAN, DAVID. Wives and husbands. 304p
$3.50 World pub.

52-5190

"It is summer, 1950, in Pelican Hollow on California's shore. Outdoors in the mists and pines, and indoors in the new homes, ramshackle or smartly finished, a few artists are attempting to make their lives creative and meaningful. It is their story that David Duncan tells, his attention constantly shifting from one household to another and to their commingling." N Y Times

"The novelist's dogged insistence upon the anatomy per se of his characters ('her torso twisting . . . her full bosom leaping . . . her ripe shoulders glowing through the dusk') weakens and cheapens an otherwise satisfactory if undistinguished excursion into interlocking marriages and careers."

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p21 My 18 '52 140w

"One must feel that the small canvas David Duncan paints is not small enough. He devotes much space to an inconclusive tale of domestic woe, which makes but slight contact with the compact and compelling web of lives in Pelican Hollow. Still, if Mr. Duncan may sometimes be accused of irrelevance, he may never be accused of dullness." S. M. Pratt

N Y Times p25 Ap 20 '52 280w

"A rapid and amusing story." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 My 7 '52
750w

"Mr. Duncan, who can do very well with individual scenes, doesn't seem quite to have made up his mind about what he wanted to do with his novel. Occasionally he goes off into pure farce, at least once he approached social satire with real bite in it, and sometimes he just writes straight and frequently very good comedy."

Sat R 35:35 Ag 2 '52 170w

DUNCAN, RONALD FREDERICK HENRY. Blue Fox; il. by Michael Hansom. 202p $3.50
Oxford

301.35 [630.1] Country life. England—Social life and customs [52-26590]

"Basically, this collection is a man's revelation of his love of country living and a picture of life in a small Devon village. You may most enjoy his moderately acid ribbing of the bureaucrats and their bungling attempts to keep their constituents in line with silly rat-catching methods and ridiculous house-building restrictions. . . You will pick up interesting bits of farming information; and you will wonder at the four female governmental employees who came to the village to make a 'marital survey.'" N Y Times

Reviewed by Paul Engle

Chicago Sunday Tribune p22 N 16 '52
120w

Reviewed by Geoffrey Taylor

New Statesman & Nation 42:634 D 1 '51 110w

"Mr. Duncan harvests rich grist from his acres; he is never in a hurry and he has a keen sense of humor. His prose is pleasant reading and it is no surprise to this reviewer that the readers of The Evening Standard consider Mr. Duncan's weekly pieces an essential vitamin-mineral in their literary fare. . . If you like country life, nature, gardening and the spirit of unspoiled fields and woodlands, you will enjoy 'The Blue Fox.'" Haydn Pearson

+ N Y Times p24 N 9 '52 330w

"To meet the author for the first time in this collection of brief essays is not the happiest of introductions. These newspaper articles, of necessity very short, are admirably suited to their purpose, which is to capture the attention of the weary citizen at the end of the day. Read between the covers of a book they are less fortunate, producing an effect similar to a long series of short drinks. This is a pity because the ingredients are so good."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p840 D 28 '51
450w

DUNLOP, RONALD OSSORY. How to paint for pleasure; a handbook for beginners [Eng title: Painting for pleasure]. 143p il col il $3.95 Pellégrini & Cudahy

751 Painting

51-12759

"For the amateur who would like to paint for the fun of it. Written by a successful artist with years of experience, this book has all the essential steps laid out for a start at painting. Except for a guiding hand in suggesting materials, subjects, techniques, and methods of approach, the author leaves the actual picture making to the individual, thereby allowing him the joy of creative accomplishment." Chicago Sunday Tribune

"An honest, straight talking book." Gary Sheahan

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ap 20 '52
50w

Reviewed by W. C. Drake

Christian Science Monitor p7 Ag 14 '52 340w

Kirkus 19:719 D 15 '51 170w

"This little book is thoroughly articulate and vastly encouraging for those who see beauty about them and wish to interpret it in line and color." A. S. Plaut

+ Library J 77:1198 J1 '52 40w

"Here is the best kind of instruction and stimulation in art, by a British artist who has enjoyed genuine success in his calling," D. P. + San Francisco Chronicle p23 Ap 13 '52 200w

DUNNER, JOSEPH, and others. Constitutions and constitutional trends since World war I. See Zurcher, A. J., ed.

DUNPHY, JACK. Friends and vague lovers. 237p $3 Farrar, Straus

52-8674

A novel concerned with a group of young men, expatriated Americans, living in a resort town in Italy. The central figure is the middle-aged divorcee Alice Markham, whose son has committed suicide, and who finds among these young men, one to take his place.

Reviewed by John Grube
Canadian Forum 32:214 D '52 230w

"Definitely not for conservatives."

— Kirkus 20:13 Ja 1 '52 200w

"The sensitive writing which the author is at great pains to exhibit is fairly meaningless because it is supposed to express, all at once the position, the sensibility, frustration and Schmerz of the homosexual, in a language which never descends to anything so vulgar as specific motives." Isaac Rosenfeld

— New Repub 126:19 My 5 '52 260w

"Mr. Dunphy has worked out these destinies with a master's touch. The makeshifts and necessities of human adjustment make perhaps a cruel comedy, but they are nonetheless real, offering at the last their measure of pignancy and tenderness. And the characters of 'Friends and Vague Lovers' partake of the full ambivalence of human needs and conduct." Gene Baro

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ap 6 '52 600w

"Regarded as a work of art, 'Friends and Vague Lovers' stands up well. Mr. Dunphy's skill as a writer is equal to the esthetic and emotional strains placed upon it. But only his compassion saves the novel from parody." James Kelly

+ — N Y Times p22 Mr 30 '52 320w

"From the first sentence of this book to the last, Mr. Dunphy makes us extremely conscious of the style and pose of his writing. Glassy, mannered, occasionally supercilious, and often very clever, his prose seems to have been pressed and pruned to death by a pair of patient and artistic hands, so that although it offers something of beauty and of sense, its life is gone, with no hope of returning. . . Mr. Dunphy's attitude toward his characters is an admirable mixture of pity, detachment, and thorough understanding."

— + New Yorker 28:135 Ap 12 '52 200w

San Francisco Chronicle p25 Ag 17 '52 550w

"Without the embroidery of a style that is sensitive, decorative, and precise this story of the emotional escapades of men and women who have retreated from everything that gives life meaning or passion might be unbearably trivial or depressing. Mr. Dunphy has succeeded in presenting his vague lovers as both comic and tragic figures. Readers who are not inured to the common theme of homosexuality in contemporary writing may experience a revulsion against these exotic creatures, but there can be no doubt that 'Friends and Vague Lovers' is entertaining and that his characters are drawn from some approximation to life." Harrison Smith

+ — Sat R 35:25 Ap 12 '52 700w

DUNSHEATH, PERCY. Electric current. 211p il $4 British bk. centre 537 Electric currents

For over 120 years the English Royal Institution has sponsored a course of lectures delivered to children during the Christmas holidays. These lectures on electric current were delivered in 1949-1950. Index.

Booklist 48:353 Jl 1 '52

"The author has a style that is easy to understand without giving the impression that he is talking down to youngsters. The book should find a considerable number of readers among high school students and also adults approaching electricity for the first time." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 77:1309 Ag '52 50w

"Although the book is formally addressed to young people there is nothing in its tone to offend the dignity of adults. Broadly speaking, the subject-matter is the same as covered in the science Sixth at school: but there is no mathematics and the main emphasis is on application—the author is an electrical engineer, not a physicist. . . It is lucidly written and well illustrated with photographs and diagrams: it is unfortunate, however, that several sketches of apparatus are unnecessarily crude."

+ New Statesman & Nation 42:766 D 29 '51 230w

DUNSHEE, KENNETH HOLCOMB. As you pass by [old Manhattan through the fire laddies' eyes]. 270p il maps $10 Hastings house

974.71 New York (city). Fire departments 52-6691

In pictures and text this volume recreates the history of fire fighting in New York city from the time of Peter Stuyvesant to the mid 1880's, with a few glimpses of more recent times. The author has drawn on old diaries, letters, and unpublished records of old fire companies for some of his text. Many of the pictures are from old prints.

Booklist 48:211 Mr 1 '52

"The book is much more valuable and beautiful than a brief survey can report. Mr. Dunshee, Mr. Chrystie, and the publishers deserve praise for painstaking book making and publishing." Edmund Fuller

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Mr 9 '52 330w

+ Christian Century 69:498 Ap 23 '52 220w

"This is a wonderful frigate of a book, to carry the reader worlds away, and yet it deals with a substantial past, reconstructing, brick by brick, the New York of Colonial days and the early Republic." Harry Hansen

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Mr 16 '52 900w

"Interesting and unusual book. . . The anecdotal material and topographical information contained in 'As You Pass By' make it a rewarding book for readers interested in New York's social history." Lloyd Morris

+ N Y Times p3 Mr 2 '52 450w

New Yorker 28:148 Ap 5 '52 180w

"'As You Pass By' is a rich and rewarding book which cannot fail to delight lovers of New York's vanished glories. . . There are but few faults to find with Dunshee's book. One of them is the dust jacket, a diffused and unsatisfactory clue to the inner contents." Lucius Beebe

+ Sat R 35:33 Ap 12 '52 500w

School & Society 75:207 Mr 29 '52 30w

Springf'd Republican p12D Mr 16 '52 140w

DUPONT, JACQUES, and MATHEY, FRANCOIS. Seventeenth century; the new developments in art from Caravaggio to Vermeer; tr. by S. J. C. Harrison. (Great centuries of painting) 136p il col il $12.50 Skira 759.04 [750.903] Painting—History. Paintings. Painters 51-14548

"In the 17th Century painting flourished in most of the countries of Europe simultaneously, and [this] volume includes Italy, France, Spain, Flanders and Holland, representing the work of the painters of the time, including Velasquez, Franz Hals, Rembrandt, Rubens, Van Dyck, Hobbema and many more." (San Francisco Chronicle) Contains over 60 illustrations.

Reviewed by J. J. Sweeney
N Y Times p1 D 9 '51 550w

DUPONT, JACQUES—Continued

"The illustrations, of which there are over sixty, all in full color, are, unhappily, not very closely linked to the text, but they are handsome enough in themselves to make up for that, and the book is otherwise extremely well knit and well documented."

+ — New Yorker 28:111 F 23 '52 160w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p10 D 9 '51 130w

"The critique is accomplished with a flowing style that reveals the culture and personalities of the authors almost as well as it does their subjects. What they have brought under their scrutiny they looked into deeply, yet they have not succeeded in connecting Vermeer with his antecedents any more than any preceding authors have."

+ — Sat R 35:57 Mr 1 '52 260w

DU PONT DE NEMOURS, E. I. AND COMPANY, INCORPORATED. Dupont; the autobiography of an American enterprise. 138p il $5 The company; for sale by Scribner

662.2 52-2583

"This volume is published in commemoration of the 150th anniversary of the founding of Du Pont on July 19, 1802. It traces the development of the company from a single powder mill on Brandywine Creek to a national institution." Management R

Reviewed by H. B. Nichols

Christian Science Monitor p9 S 4 '52 850w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross

Library J 77:1659 O 1 '52 80w

Management R 41:555 Ag '52 20w

"This book is absolutely first-rate and should be taken as a model for subsequent enterprises of the same sort." G. W. Johnson

+ N Y Herald Tribune BK R p8 Ag 31 '52 480w

San Francisco Chronicle p8 O 19 '52 140w

"Even if one quarrels with the big business view, he must admire the pictures, many in color—paintings, photographs, lithographs, maps, newspaper advertisements, and cartoons. From the nineteenth-century advertisement of a combination sofa and bath tub ('the common sense invention of the age') to the photo of Betty Grable auctioning her nylons in World War II, nearly all are good." J. M. England

+ Sat R 35:35 N 1 '52 230w

School & Society 76:47 Jl 19 '52 20w

"A book which can become a favorite on anybody's bookshelves. Authorless, the book is a collection of historical facts, photographs, reproductions of paintings in color and interesting stories of industries, processes and people—a fascinating volume to own." J. F. S.

+ Spring'd Republican p6D Ag 10 '52 250w

DUPUY, RICHARD ERNEST. Men of West Point. 486p il maps $5 Sloane

355.07 U.S. Military academy, West Point 52-6249

This story of the first hundred and fifty years of the United States Military academy stresses the contributions of West Point graduates to education, technology, politics, and the military service. Illustrated with maps. Indexes.

"The Navy's work is described only as it directly affected land operations. But allowing for its avowed limitations the book provides the information wanted by the nonprofessional reader, and in easily readable form. It is suitable for the shelves of small libraries as well as large." T. M. Spaulding

+ Am Hist R 57:1056 Jl '52 320w

Booklist 48:179 F 1 '52

Bookmark 11:104 F '52 40w

Foreign Affairs 31:158 O '52 20w

"Well written and well-worthy as an introduction to military history and biography."

+ Kirkus 19:651 N 1 '51 120w

"Highly recommended." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 77:49 Ja 1 '52 180w

"Colonel Dupuy is a smooth, easy writer, and he has dug up a fair stock of little-known West Point contributions to the American scene. . . . Even more valuable is the demonstration that the men of the military academy have consistently followed a solid body of doctrine down through the many changes of weapons and conditions surrounding the national wars. . . . Unfortunately, when this much has been said, one runs out of recommendations for the book. More than half of it retells the history of World War II, including much detail that has little bearing on the part played by the West Pointers." Fletcher Pratt

+ — N Y Times p14 Ja 13 '52 400w

Reviewed by R. H. Dillon

San Francisco Chronicle p10 F 7 '52 600w

"Colonel Dupuy's sesquicentennial tribute to the academy, above-average as it is in comparison with similar publications on account of its careful composition and adequate documentation, will prove to be as useful to the alumnus as Dr. Forman's is to the historian." W. W. Brickman

+ School & Society 75:265 Ap 26 '52 160w

"The tone of good writing in the book is well sustained. . . . Although obviously intended for the 'Old Grad,' the book does give a good consecutive account of the contributions of the professional army to the history of the United States."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:155 Je '52 200w

DURANT, JOHN, and BETTMANN, OTTO. Pictorial history of American sports; from colonial times to the present. 280p il $10 Barnes, A.S.

796 Sports—Pictorial works 52-8298

Tells in text and photographs the complete history of sports in the United States from colonial times to the present. Index.

Booklist 49:121 D 1 '52

"This is a marvelously engaging book. Any sports fan worthy of the name will find hours of enjoyment browsing thru its 280 pages. The photographs and prints, combined with the lively and informative text, comprise a tasty and nourishing offering. And yet—It may be wishing for the moon, but it seems a shame that so delightful a pictorial history couldn't have been more complete, so far as individual performers are concerned. Some of the omissions may be excused on the grounds of lack of space." Arch Ward

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 N 30 '52 450w

Kirkus 20:717 N 1 '52 130w

"Excellent for uncritical popular use, but lack of documentation ruins what might have been a very valuable reference work. Most frustrating to researchers: photos from agencies properly credited, but illustrations from books and prints improperly credited to Bettman Archive, a commercial agency. We vigorously protest this practice!" R. W. Henderson

+ — Library J 78:64 Ja 1 '53 90w

"This is a fascinating memory book of fabulous happenings." Herbert Kupferberg

+ N Y Herald Tribune BK R p5 D 21 '52 150w

Reviewed by Arthur Daley

+ N Y Times p36 N 30 '52 350w

DURISCH, LAWRENCE LOGAN, and MACON, HERSHAL LUTHER. Upon its own resources; conservation and state administration. 136p maps $3 Univ. of Ala. press

333.7 Conservation of resources 51-7088

"This book grew from a conference in 1944 when seven southern universities and the Tennessee Valley Authority joined hands for a discussion of regional aspects of public administration. In 1947 and 1948 six state studies were published. This is the concluding volume of the joint study, a testimonial to the value of cooperative research into regional problems." Christian Science Monitor

Am Pol Sci R 46:582 Je '52 30w

"This study demonstrates the possibility of interstate cooperation in the appraisal of regional problems. It is specific in its suggestions for improvement in the administration of agencies dealing with natural resources. It is not unreasonably biased toward the federal authority as against state and local agencies in the solution of natural resource problems, and finally it is miraculously brief." Roy Helton

+ Ann Am Acad 280:200 Mr '52 500w

Reviewed by Sylvan Mayer

Christian Science Monitor p9 Ap 1 '52 600w

DURRELL, LAWRENCE. Key to modern British poetry [Eng title: Key to modern poetry]. 209p $3 Univ. of Okla. press

821.09 English poetry—History and criticism 52-3248

"A series of lectures given under the auspices of the British Council, in Argentina, to an audience of graduate teachers in English. [The author] approaches his subject by way of a parallel between Tennyson's 'Ulysses' and Mr. T. S. Eliot's 'Gerontion,' designed to illustrate and contrast the buoyant confidence of an earlier age and the doubt and confusion of the present. . . Having finished his breathless pilgrimage, the writer turns to the texts and flicks through the pages of a personal anthology of poetry since the nineties, stopping here and there to comment on a poem, a poet or a tendency. In spite of himself his commentary shows that modern poetry is as much a continuation of what went before as a departure from it." Times [London] Lit Sup

Booklist 49:8 S 1 '52

"This is a most stimulating book. . . The whole weight of thought is loaded on to the first four chapters, which are remarkable for their power of suggesting challenging ideas. They are not altogether satisfactory chapters. They are not always very clear. But they make one think hard." L. F. Duchene

+ — Manchester Guardian p4 Je 10 '52 400w

Reviewed by Jacob Korg

Nation 175:499 N 29 '52 400w

"If there is a touch of the too confident amateur in Mr. Durrell's philosophising, his remarks on particular poets show a professional tact and balance. He has a sharp eye for unfashionable merit, like that of Edward Thomas, and has even a persuasive if not finally quite convincing defence of Kipling's If. On the whole, perhaps, he shows himself here not so much a critic by vocation as an imaginative writer doing his best off his main beat."

+ New Statesman & Nation 43:782 Je 28 '52 290w

"The thesis, as far as it goes, is a valid one. . . It is unlikely that an American poet, or poet-critic, would turn out such a work as 'A Key to Modern British Poetry' along such lines. There is not a bona-fide 'explication' in the book; and though Mr. Durrell does, on occasion, grant a major premise of the 'New Critics' he is more a neo-Romantic than a neo-Classicalist. . . When he gets down to cases to illustrate his thesis, Mr. Durrell is particularly good on Eliot." G. P. Meyer

+ — Sat R 35:20 S 6 '52 800w

Times [London] Lit Sup p339 My 23 '52 850w

DUVALL, SYLVANUS MILNE. Men, women and morals. 336p $3.75 Assn. press

301.42 [177] Sex 52-9001

"One of America's leading marriage authorities collects and evaluates available research findings and technical experience relative to our sex code in an effort to provide a comprehensive guide to sex ethics." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 48:370 J1 15 '52

"The concluding chapters cover observations on sex morals and sex in relation to the family and religion. The chapter on the family is deserving of special mention. Interest in the family permeates the book. In fact, the book is to be recommended in large measure because of this interest in the family." D. M. Sterling

+ Christian Century 69:779 J1 2 '52 450w

"A sound book, which will be most useful in all libraries." E. P. Nichols

+ Library J 77:792 My 1 '52 130w

DUVOISIN, ROGER ANTOINE. A for the ark. [40p] il col il $2 Lothrop

Alphabet books 52-12846

An alphabet book based on the Biblical story of Noah and the ark. Illustrations are in color.

Booklist 49:92 N 1 '52

Bookmark 12:51 D '52

Reviewed by Marcia Winn

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 N 16 '52 100w

Commonweal 57:170 N 21 '52 20w

Reviewed by A. C. Moore

+ Horn Bk 28:311 O '52 20w

Horn Bk 28:397 D '52 80w

"An alphabet book that is definitely catchy. . . Sure to please and teach."

+ Kirkus 20:654 O 1 '52 100w

"Recommended." R. O. Bostwick

+ Library J 77:1817 O 15 '52 80w

"In a brilliant, charming, colorful book, rather nonsensical as to drawings, very realistic in its dramatic, simple text, Mr. Duvoisin plays on a familiar theme in a new way." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p4 N 16 '52 120w

+ N Y Times pt2, p40 N 16 '52 100w

New Yorker 28:188 D 6 '52 20w

"This is one of the nicest, funniest alphabet books that we have had for a long, long time."

+ Sat R 35:46 N 15 '52 150w

DUVOISIN, ROGER ANTOINE. Petunia's Christmas; il. by [the author]. [32p] $2 Knopf

52-6391

This time Petunia, the pet goose, indulges in some gay adventures and saves the life of Charles, the gander, who was being fattened up for Christmas.

"A new book about Petunia is growing into a grand annual custom. This third one about that enterprising goose is even gayer and more preposterous than its predecessors." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p40 D 7 '52 60w

Commonweal 57:170 N 21 '52 10w

Kirkus 20:547 S 1 '52 80w

"Recommended for ages 4-8." V. A. Russell

+ Library J 77:1817 O 15 '52 30w

"We are ever so glad to see 'Petunia' again, drawn in Mr. Duvoisin's most dashing style, in hundreds of funny poses." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p26 N 16 '52 200w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell

N Y Times p50 D 7 '52 50w

Reviewed by M. G. Davis

+ Sat R 35:44 D 13 '52 40w

DYORIN, EUGENE P. Racial separation in South Africa; an analysis of apartheid theory. 256p $4.50 Univ. of Chicago press

301.45 [323.168] South Africa—Race question 52-12935

"An over-all and scholarly perspective on apartheid, or racial segregation in the Union of South Africa, as practiced by the Nationalist Party since coming to power in 1948. The study gives a backward glance over race supremacy policies in the Union, and then explains how the problem is intertwined with the social, economic, and physical factors of the present, concluding with some implications for the rest of Africa and the world. Notes and extensive bibliography." (Booklist) Index.

DVORIN, E. P.—Continued

Booklist 49:84 N 1 '52

Reviewed by Gilbert Twiss

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 N 2 '52 120w

"Dvorin's factual statements are thoroughly documented and his analysis of the data is convincing, though his conclusions are not reassuring."

+ Christian Century 69:1353 N 19 '52 150w

"The reader will gain understanding but little comfort from this work."

+ Current Hist 23:394 D '52 70w

Reviewed by R. W. Logan
Nation 175:450 N 15 '52 290w

Reviewed by Leo Silberman
New Repub 127:22 N 24 '52 180w

Reviewed by John Barkham
N Y Times p21 O 12 '52 190w

Reviewed by C. H. Driver
Yale R n s 42:290 winter '53 650w

DYAR, RALPH E. News for an empire; the story of the Spokesman-Review of Spokane, Washington, and of the field it serves. 496p il $5 Caxton ptrs.

071 Spokesman-Review, Spokane, Washington 52-5883

"Account of the development of the Spokane Spokesman-Review and the men associated with it, from publisher W. H. Cowles to one-time newsboy Bing Crosby. It is a real newspaper 'biography,' showing the impact of the journal upon its community and mirroring the history of its area, in this case Washington's great Inland Empire." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

"The book, soundly documented, is a welcome addition to newspaper history." John Randolph

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Mr 30 '52 150w

Kirkus 19:716 D 15 '51 210w

Reviewed by R. H. Dillon
Library J 77:435 Mr 1 '52 100w

Reviewed by R. L. Neuberger
+ N Y Times p10 Je 1 '52 480w

DYER, MURRAY. Bridge of heaven. 305p $3.50 Harper

51-11903

A story of Westerners in Japan during the years before World War II. The hero is John Randall, an English missionary who holds fast to his faith and his friendship with the people for whom he works.

Booklist 48:214 Mr 1 '52

"Virile, absorbing narrative."

+ Bookmark 11:133 Mr '52 50w

Reviewed by Edith Weigle

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 F 17 '52 450w

Kirkus 19:665 N 15 '51 230w

"Murray Dyer tells an absorbing story, a story with the ring of truth in it. It is also a decent story, and a good many readers are going to enjoy the absence of neurotics, drunks and nymphomaniacs. They are going to welcome the story of a life based upon faith, for without ducking reality Mr. Dyer has made that his central theme. . . . Mr. Dyer has chosen a noble and elevated theme. The fault in his book as a novel is a lack of that scarcely definable thing which makes us forget we are reading and makes us believe we are living." Bradford Smith

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 F 3 '52 750w

"'The Bridge of Heaven,' is more successful in its incidental achievements than in the development of its main theme." Trudie Osborne

+ N Y Times p22 F 10 '52 350w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 Mr 23 '52 260w

Reviewed by L. H. Crockett

Sat R 35:16 Mr 1 '52 600w

"Mr. Dyer has provided a very authentic and colorful background for his story, imparts a profound sense of sympathy for his westerners, and shows a well-based and exceptionally impressive understanding of the basic conflicts between the West and the Orient. Although the story as fiction is frequently elbowed out of camera range by Mr. Dyer's full-dimensioned view of modern Japan, the book as a whole gains immeasurably because of it." R. F. H.

+ Springfield Republican p4D F 24 '52 420w

DYSON, GEORGE MALCOLM. Short guide to chemical literature. 144p $2 Longmans

016.54 Chemistry—Bibliography 51-13522

Contents: Introduction: dictionaries and encyclopaedias; Chemical journals and periodicals; Abstract journals; Textbooks and special works of reference; Works of reference on medicinal chemicals; Making a search of the literature. Appendixes: Some old and obsolete journals; An example of an organic chemical search; Tables showing the year and volume number of the main chemical publications. "It is designed primarily for students and graduates who are novices in the searching of chemical literature. Even so there are mentions of practically all important sources of chemical information." N Y New Tech Bks

"The originator of the Dyson cipher is good at packing much useful information into small space. He has done so again in his Short Guide, which is of pocketbook size. A full pocketbook it is! . . . Author and subject indexes are included to add to the value of a good little book." E. J. Crane

+ Am Chem Soc J 74:1364 Mr 5 '52 300w

"The book exhibits a number of omissions even for a work of its size, a number of errors, and a rather large number of typographical errors, all of which will no doubt be corrected in a later edition. Nevertheless, in spite of these defects the work can be recommended to the student making his first acquaintance with the literature of chemistry, and to the graduate chemist doing the same." T. E. R. Singer

+ Chem & Eng N 29:5538 D 31 '51 220w

"Although the author believes that chemical literature searches should be made by chemists rather than by librarians (p. 75), the book should be a good one for young librarians beginning to work in chemical collections."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 36:84 N '51

E

EAGER, EDWARD MCMAKEN. Mouse manor; il. by Beryl Bailey-Jones. [50p] $2 Pellegrini & Cudahy

The adventures of Miss Myrtila Mouse, of Mouse Manor, England. Miss Myrtila was a shy spinster of an impoverished family and her great experience came during her Christmas trip to London to see Queen Victoria. That was when she met young Bertie Cheesebisker, and married him despite the disparity in background.

Reviewed by M. F. Kieran

Atlantic 190:101 D '52 20w

Booklist 49:19 S 1 '52

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin
Chicago Sunday Tribune p17 N 9 '52
60w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Yates
Christian Science Monitor p11 S 11 '52
70w

Horn Bk 28:399 D '52 140w

Kirkus 20:451 Ag 1 '52 110w

"A genuinely charming, highly literate story. . . Recommended." H. M. Brogan
+ Library J 77:1310 Ag '52 60w

"To like it, you will have to find fun in rabbits who exchange hand-painted calendars, a mouse nibbling on the manuscript of 'A Christmas Carol' and finding it 'most succulent,' and a finale in which 'We are not amused' has become a byword. We cannot rate it high, but we expect the pictures will sell it widely." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 O 5 '52
160w

"Certainly this bears little resemblance to any of Miss Potter's stories, being longer, more complicated in plot and lacking her pristine simplicity. Nevertheless, this story has a charm of its own." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p52 N 9 '52 130w
Wis Lib Bul 48:217 S '52

EALY, LAWRENCE O. Republic of Panama in world affairs, 1903-1950. 207p $4 Univ. of Pa. press

327.862 Panama—Foreign relations 51-13947

Traces the part played by the Republic of Panama in the development of international cooperation during the last fifty years. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 48:165 Ja 15 '52

Foreign Affairs 30:685 J1 '52 20w

"The author provides a clear summary here of Panama's activities in the Second Hague Conference, the various Pan American and OAS meetings, World War I, the League of Nations, World War II, and the United Nations. His conclusion is justified, that the nation, far from being a mere puppet of the United States, has exercised the prerogatives and has fulfilled the obligations of a sovereign power. America's youngest republic, he shows, has reached international maturity."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:71 Mr '52 260w

EARDLEY, ARMAND JOHN. Structural geology of North America. 624p il maps $12.50 Harper

551.8 Geology—North America 51-10958

"An exhaustive survey of the crustal formations of our continent, enhanced by charts, maps, and tables of data. This book would seem to be the best and final work on the subject to date. Designed not only for geologists but also for students of geology, professional and otherwise." Wis Lib Bul

"The amount of critical reading, evaluation of reconnaissance and detailed work, of drafting, reconstruction, and balancing information gathered from the literature is immense. This book is likely to stimulate greatly all future structural work in this continent." R. Balk

+ J Geol 60:506 S '52 420w

N Y New Tech Bks 36:87 N '51

"Highly recommended."

+ Wis Lib Bul 48:87 Mr '52

EARHART, MARY. Wendell Willkie, 1892-1944. 378p $4 Lippincott

B or 92 Willkie, Wendell Lewis 52-5091

A biography of Wendell Willkie which furnishes also a critical appraisal of his political career. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Frederick Rudolph

Am Hist R 58:198 O '52 440w

"Technical users of this biography, published primarily for the general reader, will regret the absence of footnotes as well as the limited access to Willkie's personal papers. Yet Mrs. Dillon has made an assiduous search for materials and a skillfully selective use of them. Her chapters on the Republican convention of 1940, on the origins of bipartisan foreign policy, and on Willkie's world trip in 1942 as a representative of President Roosevelt, are particularly useful contributions." F. L. Burdette

+ Am Pol Sci R 46:897 S '52 200w

Reviewed by D. B. Johnson

Ann Am Acad 283:193 S '52 440w

Booklist 48:296 My 15 '52

Bookmark 11:206 Je '52 30w

Reviewed by Walter Trohan
Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 My 4 '52
550w

Reviewed by Roland Sawyer

Christian Science Monitor p9 Je 24 '52
550w

Foreign Affairs 31:158 O '52 10w

"A broad, devoted, and admirable study."

+ Kirkus 20:179 Mr 1 '52 240w

"An able, interesting study of a complex, notable personality in American history." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 77:792 My 1 '52 100w

"A very painstaking picture of the critical periods in Mr. Willkie's career, warmed by Mrs. Dillon's evident sympathy for him and his cause, even when she fails to understand him or his fundamental philosophy. . . Mrs. Dillon's reliance on those who were acquainted with Wendell Willkie, while a necessity in the case of a biographer without access to the personal papers of her subject, has one defect: it is likely to present a composite portrait of what others saw, rather than what Mr. Willkie himself thought." Harry Baehr

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 My 4
'52 950w

"Most appropriate for this particular election year is a retelling of the story of Wendell Willkie. That story becomes a pulsing full-bodied narrative in the hands of Mary Earhart Dillon." T. L. Stokes

+ N Y Times p4 My 4 '52 950w

"Mrs. Dillon has packed in a lot of material that has never been published before, especially in her accounts of the 1940 'campaign of amateurs' and of Willkie's wartime foreign missions for Roosevelt."

New Yorker 28:138 My 3 '52 160w

"Although we are not told much about public opinion and public relations, we are given a good deal of fresh material about Willkie himself and about the snake that bit him a hundred times, party politics." Whitney Balliett

+ Sat R 35:38 J1 19 '52 190w

Reviewed by Donald Derby

Springf'd Republican p9C Je 8 '52
240w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:233 S '52 280w

EARLE, OLIVE LYDIA. Birds and their nests. 60p $2 Morrow

598.2 Birds—Eggs and nests—Juvenile literature 52-5931

"Forty-two varieties of birds and their nests are presented here—from the ostrich whose nest is a hollow scratched in the sand, to the woodpecker for whom a hole in a tree is home." (Publisher's note) Index.

Booklist 49:19 S 1 '52

"Dozens of nests are delightfully pictured by Miss Earle, with drawings of numerous nestlings and adults for good measure."

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p16 N 16 '52
90w

Commonweal 57:174 N 21 '52 20w

"A neat little reference book, quietly instructive and quietly humorous in its compact text and softly detailed pencil drawings."

+ Kirkus 20:340 Je 15 '52 150w

"Olive L. Earle has made ready reference easy with the index, but the pictures and presentation of the material tempt one to read the whole of this short book."

+ Library J 77:1746 O 15 '52 40w

EARLE, O. L.—Continued

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p28 N
16 '52 50w

"The book is strongly recommended for children who have already shown an interest in birds but the wealth of details may prove too much to serve as an introduction to the subject."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p11 D 21 '52
90w

EAST-WEST PHILOSOPHERS' CONFERENCE. Essays in East-West philosophy. See Moore, C. A., ed.EASUM, CHESTER VERNE. Half-century of conflict, 929p maps $6 Harper

909.82 [1940.5] Twentieth century, European war, 1914-1918, World war, 1939-1945 51-11904

"The crucial half-century through which the world has just passed and which has seen two major conflicts and the threat of a third, is the subject of this history. Professor Easum analyzes the origins and progress of the first and second World Wars in their military, political and diplomatic aspects. There is a valuable section on the inter-war situation in Germany, the Succession States, the British Empire, France and the Soviet Union. The final chapter, 'The Problem of Freedom from Fear,' deals briefly with post-war developments, including the Marshall Plan, the Economic Cooperation Administration, the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and the events leading up to the Korean conflict." (Current Hist) Bibliography. Index.

Current Hist 22:318 My '52 100w

"A scholarly (yet eminently readable) history. . . Highly recommended."
+ Wis Lib Bul 48:90 Mr '52

EATON, ALLEN HENDERSHOTT. Beauty behind barbed wire; the arts of the Japanese in our war relocation camps; foreword by Eleanor Roosevelt. 208p il $6 Harper 709.52 Art, Japanese. Japanese in the U.S.

51-11905

Account of art work done by the Japanese internees during World war II. Work includes flower arrangements, gardens, home decoration as well as calligraphy, painting, sculpture, and dancing.

Booklist 48:226 Mr 15 '52

Library J 77:1305 Ag '52 100w

"Allen Eaton, a thinking and sensitive American, made the book, and the rest of us should be grateful to him, for nothing could reveal to Western eyes the true depth and grace of an ancient Eastern people as this book does. The whole story is here, a simple story in the telling but profound in its revelation. It will bring beauty for the eye, meaning for the mind and a torch for the spirit." Pearl Buck

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 F 24 '52
410w

Reviewed by R. L. Neuberger

N Y Times p10 Je 15 '52 290w

"'Beauty Behind Barbed Wire' deserves wide study not only for the art itself but for its story of how a people faced uncertainty and stress with dignity and courage." E. B. . .

+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 Ap 6 '52
310w

Reviewed by Lyman Bryson

Sat R 35:42 Je 7 '52 480w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:126 Je '52 240w

EATON, FRANK. Pistol Pete, veteran of the Old West; with illustrations [autobiography; as told to Eva Gillhouse]. 278p il $4 Little

B or 92 Frontier and pioneer life—West
52-5509

Life story of a ninety-one-year-old veteran of the Old West. He was eight years old when his father was killed. The boy swore vengeance, and in time he killed five of the six men who were responsible. Eaton was a deputy United States marshal and a detective for the Oklahoma Cattlemen's association for forty years.

Booklist 48:263 Ap 15 '52

"'Pistol Pete's' story is written with simplicity and individuality. In spite of the gaudy jacket which gives it the appearance of another blood and thunder western, it is an exciting, genuine bit of Americana and deserves a wide audience." Richard Blakesley

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ap 20 '52
380w

"Rambling and sentimental this nostalgic recall will have an appeal for fans of the true West."

+ Kirkus 20:111 F 1 '52 110w

"Occasionally sad, sometimes humorous but always interesting, this is a personal view of an era now dead." R. H. Dillon

+ Library J 77:588 Ap 1 '52 90w

"Recommended for teen-age boys and slow readers."

+ Library J 77:1215 Jl '52 60w

Reviewed by J. F. Dobie

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p32 My 11
'52 500w

"No credit is given any collaborator although if Eaton ever had a day's schooling in his long life he fails to mention it. If there was a ghost, however, he confined himself to spelling and syntax and did not tamper with such passages as: 'The last I saw of him he was looking up into a tree, pulling on a lariat, without a toehold. He had hold of the rope with his neck because his hands were tied.'" Hoffman Birney

+ N Y Times p10 Ap 6 '52 300w

"An artless, simple, direct narrative, it succeeds far better than most books of a more carefully literary sort in conveying the flavor of the old West of which Eaton is one of the very last survivors." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 My 16
'52 500w

"Some will say that the errors do not really matter, that the book should be treated with respect as the entertaining work of an old pioneer. But, since the account is labelled authentic, the reader is entitled to a word of warning. More important, it should be remembered that the frontier has much to do with our American heritage. To understand that heritage, and use it wisely, we should have a correct idea as to what the frontier was really like." F. H. Harrington

— Sat R 35:48 My 24 '52 280w

EATON, JAMES ROBERT. Beginning electricity. 355p $5.50 Macmillan

621.3 Electric engineering. Electric apparatus and appliances
52-10507

"An introduction written in simple language and designed primarily for adults. However, it will appeal also to high-school students and to young people interested in studying the subject by themselves. Although the fundamentals of electronics are covered, there is no undue emphasis on this aspect. The author is Professor of Electrical Engineering at Purdue University." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

"There is some mathematics in it but not much. It is not a boy's book, but is well suited to the needs of adults with practical interests in electricity." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 77:1209 Jl '52 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 37:55 Jl '52

EBERHARD, WOLFRAM. Chinese festivals. (Great religious festivals ser) 152p il $2.50 Schuman

398.3 Festivals—China
52-3720

History and significance of Chinese festivals, written by a German scholar now of the University of California. Doctor Eberhard has based his career on the Chinese language, history, and sociology; and has studied in China. Index.

Kirkus 20:435 J1 15 '52 100w

"The work is a valuable addition to a subject which has so far been only inadequately investigated." H. P. Linton

+ Library J 77:1396 S 1 '52 60w

"The book is rich in folklore and in the feeling that these festivals have always been changing 'as an expression of adaptation to new social situations.'" H. H.

+ Sat R 35:29 O 18 '52 30w

EBERHART, MRS MIGNON (GOOD). Dead men's plans. 246p $2.50 Random house

52-5161

Detective story.

Booklist 48:379 J1 15 '52

Bookmark 11:236 J1 '52

Kirkus 20:269 Ap 15 '52 70w

Reviewed by James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Je 22 '52 80w

"The background of Great Lakes shipping is more interesting than that of most Eberhart novels, but the plotting is well below her best level." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p12 J1 6 '52 40w

"The mixture is about what it always was, but the ingredients are tested and the cook's hand is remarkably sure."

New Yorker 28:84 J1 19 '52 100w

"Atmosphere of fog, family-owned freighters and riches is thick indeed, fairly out-Eberhart-ing Eberhart. C plus." L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p10 J1 6 '52 50w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 35:39 J1 19 '52 20w

EBERLE, IRMENGARDE. Big family of peoples; pref. by Ethel J. Alpenfels. 243p $3 Crowell

901 Civilization—History 52-7080

"Human history, beginning with early man and going on to discuss in some detail the groups into which he divided, with the reasons for the development of differences and the still continuing intermixing; and unemphatic, but for that reason impressive, reiteration of the fact that everyone has a mixed heritage and that all mankind has the same potentialities." (Bookmark) Index.

Booklist 48:269 Ap 15 '52

"Very incomplete index."

Bookmark 11:164 Ap '52 80w

Kirkus 20:80 F 1 '52 170w

"Will appeal to young people from 12-18 who are eager to learn how today developed from yesterday. Style is simple and clear and the work authentic. Shortcomings are lack of illustrations and maps... Highly recommended."

L. M. Schueren

+ Library J 77:365 F 15 '52 70w

"Occasionally the author oversimplifies her material. The book is, however, intrinsically interesting and gives the young reader a broad and stimulating perspective on world history." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p28 My 25 '52 110w

Sat R 35:47 O 11 '52 80w

ECONOMICS OF MOBILIZATION CONFERENCE. Defense, controls and inflation. See Director, A., ed.

EDGLEY, LESLIE (ROBERT BLOOMFIELD, pseud). From this death forward. 190p $2.50 Doubleday

52-5544

Detective story.

Kirkus 20:98 F 1 '52 100w

"Practically everybody in this book is enigmatic except the heroine who is intense and simple-minded. This allows for more theatrical crises than you would think possible. The calculation of the whole is bold to a point of lunacy and the prose is deep purple. The plot calls for a redefinition of any notions you might have had about tangled skeins. For breathless readers." James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 Ap 6 '52 140w

"All purely cardboard—and rather sub-standard skill in the fitting together of the cardboard pieces." Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p26 Ap 13 '52 50w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ap 13 '52 80w

"Story quite improbable and disjointed—no logic at all. But author keeps you reading with held breath... The man can write." Kathleen Sproul

Sat R 35:63 Ap 12 '52 40w

EDGLEY, LESLIE (ROBERT BLOOMFIELD, pseud). Judas goat. 190p $2.50 Doubleday

52-5858

Detective story.

Kirkus 20:99 F 1 '52 80w

Reviewed by James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Ap 20 '52 100w

"The Judas Goat contains some exceedingly amusing stuff on Psychonamics, 'the science of self-healing, equaled only by the invention of the printing press,' with sp'adid specimens of pastiche-gobbledegook. The suspense-pursuit plot, however, is so desperately contrived out of improbabilities and coincidences, so completely devoid of any touch of reality, that one wonders if this too is intended as parody-pastiche." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p33 Ap 20 '52 50w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p29 Ap 20 '52 60w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 35:47 My 24 '52 20w

— Springf'd Republican p10C My 4 '52 90w

EDGLEY, LESLIE (ROBERT BLOOMFIELD, pseud). Vengeance street. 189p $2.50 Doubleday

52-10404

Mystery story.

Booklist 49:69 O 15 '52

"Stirring and original study in human desperation, applied to solution of cowardly murder." Drexel Drake

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 O 12 '52 80w

"Plausible and effective."

+ Kirkus 20:431 J1 15 '52 70w

Reviewed by James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p34 O 12 '52 160w

"No single plot factor is ever made clear and plausible; but despite crude prose and a chaotic story-line, the book manages to achieve an inexplicable narrative vigor. You may not believe a word of it; but you'll find it hard to put down." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p39 O 5 '52 50w

"Danger of sympathetic character's becoming a murderer is a good suspense gimmick, but civic corruption and least-suspected villain have a distressingly familiar sound. C plus." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 O 12 '52 80w

EDMONDS, HELEN G. Negro and fusion politics in North Carolina, 1894-1901. 260p $5 Univ. of N.C. press

301.45 [325.26] Negroes—North Carolina. North Carolina—Politics and government 51-4106

"In this scholarly essay, Miss Edmonds has effectively destroyed one of the great myths of recent southern history—the myth of Negro 'domination' of North Carolina politics during the so-called Fusion period. In a painstaking, if somewhat tedious way, the constituencies of the two major parties before 1892, the agrarian discontent that provoked the formation of the Populist Party, and the fusion of the Republicans and Populists that was effected from 1894 to 1898 are analyzed. Dr. Edmonds also examines thoroughly the results of Fusion reform and concludes that these efforts were forward looking." U S Quarterly Bk R

EDMONDS, H. G.—Continued

"A competent and significant, if somewhat pedestrian, addition to the growing body of monographic literature that supports a significant reappraisal of southern history during the period 1865-1900." Dan Lacy
+ Am Hist R 57:769 Ap '52 350w

Booklist 47:395 Jl '51

"All told, an excellent recounting of a depressing but instructive episode in American history." P. R. Levin

+ Sat R 35:42 F '16 '52 320w
U S Quarterly Bk R 7:269 S '51 180w

EDMONDS, SIR JAMES EDWARD, comp.

Short history of World war I. 454p maps $7 Oxford

940.4 European war, 1914-1918 51-13423
For descriptive note see Annual for 1951.

"As a feat of condensation this book is a remarkable one, but as the end product of thirty years of study and thought on the war period it is something of a disappointment. . . In one field General Edmonds renders his readers a valuable service. He makes crystal clear the enormous cost of Britain's campaigns waged outside the main theater in France. He also traces with great skill the relation and effect of campaigns being waged in one theater upon those in another. Air and naval operations are generally dealt with separately from ground operations, in sub-chapters or summary paragraphs. There are thirty-four maps and an excellent index." H. A. DeWeerd
+ — Am Hist R 57:399 Ja '52 950w

"Whether they agree with him or not, all who are interested in the First World War will be grateful to General Edmonds for this account of that tremendous episode of world history." C. P. Stacey

+ Canadian Forum 31:283 Mr '52 450w

"General Edmonds has made an outstanding contribution by distilling into one small book the essence of a lifetime's labour: he merits the praise of historians, and the thanks of scholars. The blessing of officers preparing for examinations will assuredly rest upon him forever." A. F. Duguid

+ Canadian Hist R 32:386 D '51 850w

Foreign Affairs 30:496 Ap '52 20w

EDMONDS, WALTER DUMAUX. Corporal Bess; the story of a boy and a dog; il. by Manning De V. Lee. 182p $2.75 Dodd

Dogs—Legends and stories 52-10920

Into a down-at-heels family living in apparent poverty in an isolated farm house, the father brings a pedigreed bird dog, Corporal Bess. The father and young son train her together and eventually Bess brings them prizes greater than the blue ribbon at the dog show, the esteem of their fellow townspeople.

Booklist 49:145 D '55

"'Corporal Bess' is a heart warming story. . . It is an exciting story, too—one that all boys and girls will love." R. L. B.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 N 16 '52 50w

"It is a rather quiet story, centering on the details of the growth and training of a beautiful setter pup. One gradually senses more subtle drama than that of Pete's excitement about Bess. . . It takes very good writing to carry such adult concepts, yet to keep the story interest keyed to readers from about twelve up. There may be too much training detail to interest nondog lovers, but it would be unfortunate if this kept a wide audience from enjoying the other aspects of an unusual book." L. S. Bechtel

+ N. Y. Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p6 N 16 '52 200w

"This is more than the story of a boy and his dog; it is a chronicle of fine family relations. It moves quietly, but is full of vitality and good humor." F. C. Smith

+ N Y Times pt2, p16 N 16 '52 120w

"A superlative dog story."

+ New Yorker 28:197 D 6 '52 80w

EDWALL, PEHR, and others, eds. Ways of worship; the report of a theological commission of faith and order. 362p $4 Harper

264 Worship 52-8671

"A comprehensive symposium sponsored by the World conference on faith and order. Eminent churchmen examine the elements of liturgy, the inner meanings of word and sacrament, and liturgy and devotion." (Publisher's note) Index.

"When we consider the state of the world during the last eleven years the present volume is a remarkable one. Nevertheless anyone who buys the book is likely to be disappointed unless he understands beforehand what it is and what it offers. It does not offer settled or even suggested conclusions."

+ — Manchester Guardian p3 D 17 '51 300w

"The report itself, though comparatively brief, is comprehensive; it is also commendably frank. . . In the full and informative papers which form the body of the volume, and which, read at meetings of the commission, constitute the evidence upon which the report is founded, writers representative of the several Churches treat of the history and form of their liturgical traditions, of the meanings which their Churches assign to Word and Sacraments, and of matters relating to Devotion. Not the least value of these papers is their frankness."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p301 My 2 '52 950w

EDWARDS, CECILE PEPIN. Party for Suzanne; il. by Jane Castle. 191p $2.50 Abingdon-Cokesbury

52-11648

Because she was a newcomer in the little Massachusetts town and the boys teased her for being a Canuck (French Canadian) poor Suzanne was miserable and lonely, but in time with the help of her own violin and two cousins Suzanne became a popular girl in the school.

Kirkus 20:367 Jl 1 '52 200w

"An enjoyable story filled with interesting incidents of everyday living. Grades 5-6." E. B. Mason

+ Library J 77:1412 S 1 '52 60w

"This excellent story rises to a fine natural climax in a birthday party." S. C. Gross

+ N Y Times p30 S 14 '52 150w

"While there is a 'race prejudice' theme in this story of a French-Canadian girl in a small American city, it is so gay and lively and has such attractive characters that the theme never obstructs the easy continuity of the tale."

+ Sat R 35:64 N 15 '52 60w

EDWARDS, TUDOR. Belgium and Luxembourg. (Countries of Europe ser) 128p il maps $3.50 British bk. centre

949.3 [914.93] Belgium. Luxembourg

51-14090

Contains a brief historical sketch of the two countries, and descriptions of the principal cities, with stress on art, architecture, and local customs. Copiously illustrated. Index.

"More suitable for armchair travels than actual sight-seeing since the author gives an overall picture which is somewhat lacking in detail." W. K. Harrison

Library J 76:2117 D 15 '51 70w

Sat R of Lit 34:43 D 15 '51 110w

EELLS, KENNETH WALTER, and others. Intelligence and cultural differences; a study of cultural learning and problem-solving; under the chairmanship of Allison Davis. 388p pa $5 Univ. of Chicago press

151.1 Intellect. Class distinction 51-12970

"The first book-length report of an extended study of cultural learning as it bears upon the solution of problems in mental tests, this volume compares the responses made by white children from different socio-economic levels to standard intelligence-test elements." U S Quarterly Bk R

"This very important study will be of great interest to psychologists as well as social scientists, particularly to those concerned with constructing and giving tests. Actually, it is but another step, though a large one, in the environmental direction already much traveled by psychologists." S. S. Sargent

+ Am J Soc 58:209 S '52 1300w

"Intelligence and Cultural Differences resulted from a carefully planned design, and the conclusions are thoughtfully phrased and explicitly limited to the population investigated. Despite this fact, anyone who has been concerned about the careless interpretation of intelligence-test scores and the consequent actions taken will find much support of an objective, scientific sort for the proposition that any inferences from currently used intelligence tests about the genetic learning ability of boys and girls must be made with extreme caution." S. M. Corey

+ El School J 52:365 F '52 470w

School & Society 74:175 S 15 '51 30w

"Although their book is by no means definitive, it should prove fruitful for educators and social planners."

U S Quarterly Bk R 7:394 D '51 230w

EGBERT, DONALD DREW, and PERSONS, STOW, eds. Socialism and American life. 2v 790:589p il ea $10; set $17.50 Princeton univ. press

335 Socialism in the U.S. 52-5828

"This work is the outgrowth of Princeton's Program in American Civilization. Editors have brought together more than a dozen experts (some socialists) on various aspects of the subject and it is inevitable that contributors' approach and style vary considerably, with some overlapping in content. Of the fourteen chapters, the first six describe history of socialism in Europe and United States; remainder show influence of socialism on American economics, philosophy, art, literature, etc." Library J

Current Hist 23:271 O '52 80w

Foreign Affairs 31:157 O '52 50w

"Presented in essay form, its wide range is at the same time valuable source for European socialism. These two volumes will for many years remain standard work on subject. Plates, excellent indexes. Strongly recommended for all pertinent scholarly and all larger public libraries; also as first class reference work." H. H. Bernt

+ Library J 77:1072 Je 15 '52 160w

"At the heart of it is an excellent critical history of Marxian socialism in the United States by Daniel Bell, an essay of almost two hundred pages which might well stand as a separate work. Comparable in length is an interesting survey of Socialism and American Art by Donald Drew Egbert, which goes far beyond the limitations suggested by its title. . . To me the one seriously objectionable contribution is Paul Sweezy's account of the slight influence of Marxism on formal economic thought in the United States." Richard Hofstadter

+ Nation 175:196 S 6 '52 800w

"One cannot read these two volumes without being convinced not only that socialism has had a profound influence on American life but also that something of its spirit must be preserved as part of the American heritage." Granville Hicks

+ N Y Times p6 Ag 31 '52 950w

"Fourteen scholars collaborated to produce this study and to make it easily the most comprehensive and useful work on American socialism. . . Each of the fourteen essays is valuable, and several of them are extraordinarily significant; together they constitute a great contribution to knowledge."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:282 S '52 360w

"Why should a book so rich in material and ideas, much of it written by men of obvious brilliance and learning, leave one with the impression that it is amorphous, sprawling, without significant direction? The fault lies with an editorial policy that remained content with vague talk about casting 'light on important aspects of American civilization considered, not in isolation, but with reference to the other cultures which have influenced and been influenced by, that of the United States.' What does such a statement mean?" Rubin Gotesky

+ Yale R n s 42:155 autumn '52 1400w

EHRlich, BETTINA (BAUER) (MRS GEORGE EHRlich). Horse for the island; il. by the author. 213p $2.75 Harper

52-7883

Story of a little Italian island, Limore, where there had never been a horse until the farmer Tarlao brought one from the mainland to help him on his farm. The superstitious islanders who considered Tarlao a "foreigner" got quite a shock, but there were more in store for them.

Booklist 49:25; 48 S 15 '52; O 1 '52

Reviewed by Paul Engle

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 O 5 '52 220w

"The quiet beauty of the author's writing and her perception of the changes the commercial resort makes in the lives of the people—young and old—make this a moving book." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 28:337 O '52 170w

"A gentle fable which is not without its charm—but special."

+ Kirkus 20:473 Ag 1 '52 170w

"A refreshing adult fairy tale. Recommended for small libraries, and a good buy for YP collections too." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 77:1655 O 1 '52 80w

"No little book ever presented a quieter surface. Yet looked at closely, it is a little pageant inlaid on tortoise shell, a gift from a storyteller who loves the people of Italy and accepts the new machines, and the changes, without nostalgia but with a wonderful memory for horses, all kinds of them, who have been seen by moonlight treading on the sea." Ernestine Evans

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 N 16 '52 500w

"The author has a camera eye for detail and an astonishing dexterity in dialogue and characterization." Nancy Lenkeith

+ N Y Times p36 O 5 '52 400w

"Children who read 'A Horse for the Island' will have a great experience." Serge Hughes

+ Sat R 35:46 O 25 '52 160w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal

Springf'd Republican p7C N 23 '52 90w

EHRlich, MAX SIMON. Spin the glass web. 210p $2.50 Harper

51-11906

Mystery story.

Kirkus 19:689 D 1 '51 80w

"Mr. Ehrlich's writing is at once pretentious (purple-prose type pretentiousness breaking out in spots from time to time) and laden with cliché. And I'm afraid it's all an evocation of fear in a vacuum." James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 F 24 '52 170w

EHRLICH, M. S.—Continued

"Freshness of approach and milieu, plus ingenuity of plotting, make it seem anything but routine." Elizabeth Bullock
+ N Y Times p32 F 17 '52 360w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p30 F 24 '52 80w

"Interesting and believable Manhattan and Long Island types, and good story idea; but suspense wilts far too soon, motivations are far-fetched. Shiny-slick writing." Kathleen Sproul

+ — Sat R 35:47 F 23 '52 60w

"An entertaining and often exciting story, but oddly enough has less suspense than Mr. Ehrlich's 'Big Eye' fantasy." R. F. H.

+ — Springf'd Republican p8D F 17 '52 230w

Wis Lib Bul 48:93 Mr '52

EICHENBERG, FRITZ. Ape in a cape; an alphabet of odd animals. [26p] col il $2 Harcourt

52-6908

An alphabet book which has a large colored animal picture with brief rhyming caption for each letter.

Reviewed by M. F. Kieran

Atlantic 190:101 D '52 30w

Booklist 49:111 N 15 '52

Reviewed by B. J. Thompson

+ Cath World 176:204 D '52 20w

Reviewed by Marcia Winn

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 N 16 '52 70w

"This distinguished and original picture book is a surprise and a joy."

+ Commonweal 57:170 N 21 '52 20w

"The richness of coloring; the strength, action and humor in the drawings; and the original rhyme for each letter make this an alphabet book to treasure as a child and to remember long after one has grown up." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 28:314 O '52 90w

Kirkus 20:679 O 15 '52 70w

"Recommended for home and school use."

H. E. Walker

+ Library J 77:2011 N 15 '52 30w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p4 N 16 '52 50w

"Learning one's letters this way is fun." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times pt2, p40 N 16 '52 40w

New Yorker 28:188 D 6 '52 30w

"Every page of this picture book, its endpapers, and its cover jacket express the creative power, the humor, and the skill of an experienced artist."

+ Sat R 35:46 N 15 '52 160w

EINAUDI, MARIO, and others. Communism in western Europe; The French communist party, by Jean Marie Domenach [and] The Italian communist party, by Aldo Garosci. 239p $3 Cornell univ. press

335.4 Communism—Europe 51-14733

"This volume is the first of a series devoted to the political, economic, and constitutional problems of postwar France and Italy. It is the initial result of a 'French-Italian Inquiry' started at Cornell University in 1949. . . . In the first part, the general nature of Western European communism is analyzed and some conclusions are offered on the conditions, both of renovation and of integration of French and Italian societies, which will make defeat of communism possible. In the second part, Jean-Marie Domenach . . . writes a thoughtful study of the French Communist party. In the third part, Aldo Garosci . . . draws a vivid picture of Italian communism against a broad historical background, showing its dual relationship to national problems and to Soviet communism." Foreword

Reviewed by R. G. Neumann

Am Pol Sci R 46:564 Je '52 800w

"This is a most useful peace of research on the political strategy and tactics, on the organization and strength, on the historical evolution, and on the present prospects of communism in what the authors insist on calling Western Europe, but which is actually only a part, though an important part of it—France and Italy." Arnold Brecht

+ Ann Am Acad 281:256 My '52 550w

Foreign Affairs 31:159 O '52 60w

"In its serious tone, careful scholarship, and amazing compactness this collaborative study of Western European communism offers a welcome contrast to the emotional, imprecise, and diffuse writing on such topics that is currently the fashion nearly everywhere except in strictly academic circles. . . . The book is at once a history, a current analysis, and a proposal of remedial measures. This triple function gives it a somewhat uneven character."

H. S. Hughes

+ — Nation 174:279 Mr 22 '52 1700w

"Excellent study." C. L. Sulzberger

+ N Y Times p6 F 3 '52 450w

Reviewed by H. W. Ehrmann

Pol Sci Q 67:300 Je '52 900w

Reviewed by Martin Ebon

Sat R 35:40 Ag 23 '52 240w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:71 Mr '52 180w

Reviewed by W. R. Sharp

Yale R n s 41:627 summer '52 500w

EISENBERG, MRS HELEN, and EISENBERG, LARRY. Family pleasure chest; 1,000 family fun ideas; il. by Lewis Akin and Henrietta Wilkinson. 207p $1.50; pa $1 Meth. pub. house

790 Amusements

51-14492

"A compilation of games, projects, and hobbies, collected from 100 selected families and enriched by material used in the authors' home as they reared their four children. The book takes us back to the days when children were taught to amuse themselves without benefit of radio, TV, comics, and movies. It stresses the importance of creating new games and making the equipment for these games from easily found supplies." J Home Econ

Reviewed by F. D. Heron

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Mr 2 '52 50w

Churchman 166:17 Ja 1 '52 70w

"This inexpensive little volume is invaluable as a reference book for parents, teachers, and community leaders." Grace Farr

+ J Home Econ 44:222 Mr '52 230w

School & Society 74:319 N 17 '51 30w

EITEL, WILHELM HERMANN JULIUS. Silicate melt equilibria; tr. from the German by J. G. Phillips and T. G. Madgwick, with the collaboration of R. B. Sosman; with revisions and additions by the author. 159p il $5 Rutgers univ. press

546.28 Silicates. Phase rule and equilibrium

51-62230

"Monograph useful in glass manufacturing, ceramic manufacturing, etc. It was first published in Leipzig in 1943. . . . This translation was checked by the author, and—as the title page indicates—additions were made that did not appear in the original work. Though the emphasis is on general principles, diagrams and discussions are included for approximately 180 specific systems." N Y New Tech Bks

"The discussion is thorough and careful, and while extremely compact, it is distinguished by surprising clarity and admirable organization. It is concerned primarily with general types of behavior of importance in silicate equilibria rather than with the description of actual systems. At the same time the discussion is accompanied with a wealth of instructive and significant examples from the recent literature, adequately illustrating the great variety of possible relations, especially under the ternary systems." J. E. Ricci

+ Am Chem Soc J 73:5924 D '51 480w

Reviewed by Alexander Silverman

Chem & Eng N 29:4318 O 15 '51 240w

"The translation leaves much to be desired from the standpoint of easy readability and comprehension. . . . This is the only book in English which at all adequately presents the principles of phase equilibria with strong emphasis on silicate systems. If the present review appears unduly critical, it is because the reviewer anticipates that the book will enjoy a wide distribution. Despite its shortcomings, it helps to fill a long-felt need in the American literature on the physical chemistry of the silicates." W. R. Foster

+ — J Geol 60:293 My '52 1100w
N Y New Tech Bks 36:44 My '51

EITEL, WILHELM HERMANN JULIUS. Thermochemical methods in silicate investigation. 132p $4.75 Rutgers univ. press 541.36 Silicates 52-3556

"An important book for research workers in ceramics, crystallography and petrography. It is based largely on methods developed at the Kaiser Wilhelm Institute from 1926 to 1945, but the work of American researchers has also been incorporated. The greater part of the book is devoted to descriptions of experimental instruments and methods." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

"An important work for scientists doing theoretical research in the silicate minerals, or practical research in such fields as ceramics, and for physicists interested in calorimeters and other apparatus for precise measurements of heat quantities. . . . Good bibliographies and numerous diagrams of apparatus set-ups are included." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 77:2008 N 15 '52 40w
N Y New Tech Bks 37:67 S '52

EKVALL, ROBERT BRAINERD. Tibetan sky lines. 240p il $3.50 Farrar, Straus 951.5 Tibet—Social life and customs 52-6977

For seven years, mainly in the 1930's, the author and his family lived as missionaries in northeast Tibet, near the Chinese border. These chapters are on their experiences and show peculiarities of Tibetan morals, customs, and philosophy.

Booklist 48:337 Je 15 '52
Bookmark 11:239 Jl '52 40w

"A strangely absorbing book." Mason Warner
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Jl 13 '52 350w

"The special value of Mr. Ekvall's book at this time stems from the fact that added to the natural barriers in Tibet is the ferrous curtain which the armies of Mao Tze-tung have brought with them in China's romantic south-west corner." Gordon Walker

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 O 8 '52 460w

Kirkus 20:140 F 15 '52 130w

"His story [is] exceptionally well told." H. P. Linton

+ Library J 77:588 Ap 1 '52 110w
Manchester Guardian p4 N 18 '52 110w

Reviewed by Lawrence Griswold
New Repub 127:19 S 1 '52 240w

"It is altogether an admirable portrait of a land of contrast, of benevolence and savagery, wisdom and lunacy, magnificence and squalor; and the author's love for it is implicit in every line." Honor Tracy

+ New Statesman & Nation 44:644 N 29 '52 350w

"Virtually all popular books about Tibet have been written from the outside looking in. . . . But 'Tibetan Sky Lines' is a different book. It is written from the inside looking out. We see the natives not as incomprehensible creatures, but as human beings essentially like you and me. Only a man who knows them intimately, who speaks their language and has shared their family life could interpret them as the author has done. Robert Ekvall writes almost as a Tibetan. . . . The word-pictures are presented with skill and subtle humor. I found the chapter headed 'The Power of Silence' wholly delightful." R. C. Andrews

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Je 22 '52 1100w

"With his natural command of the Tibetan language and keen understanding of Tibetan social institutions, Mr. Ekvall has been able to do what, so far as I know, has never been done before—to take the reader right into the black yak-hair tents of the nomads and place him in the everyday conversations and way of life of these Tibetans." Lowell Thomas jr.

+ N Y Times p3 Jl 20 '52 460w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 Ag 24 '52 250w

"This is a worthy and a noteworthy narrative. It is more informative than Suydam Cutting, Theos Bernard, Lowell Thomas, and Alexandra David-Neel laid end to end, and vastly more entertaining. It is written by an American missionary run wild, a good man and devout, but with a touch of piracy to offset the piety in him."

+ Sat R 35:32 Jl 5 '52 260w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:234 S '52 240w

ELDERFIELD, ROBERT COOLEY, ed. Heterocyclic compounds; v3. Polycyclic derivatives of pyrrole; polycyclic systems with one nitrogen common to both rings; pyridine and related compounds; v4. Quinoline, isoquinoline, and their benzo derivatives. 442, 674p v3 $12; v4 $17 Wiley

547 Heterocyclic compounds (50-7589)

Contents: v3: The chemistry of indoles, by P. L. Julian, and others; Isoindole, by R. C. Elderfield and T. N. Dodd; The chemistry of carbazole, by W. Freudenberg; Pyridine, quinidine, and related compounds, by R. C. Elderfield and E. T. Losin; Bicyclic systems with a nitrogen atom common to both rings, by H. R. Ing; v4: The chemistry of quinoline, by R. C. Elderfield; Isoquinoline, by W. J. Gensler; The acridines, by Adrien Albert; Phenanthridine, by L. P. Walls; Benzoquinolines, by L. P. Walls.

"The typography of the book is excellent, and the paper and binding entirely satisfactory. The present volume will be welcomed by those interested in the chemistry of heterocyclic compounds as a fitting companion for the others of this important series." N. L. Drake
+ Chem & Eng N 30:3762 S 8 '52 300w (Review of v3)

"Because of the enormous amount of literature available on the compounds covered by this volume, particularly on quinoline, the authors have not attempted to be complete. Rather they have tried to present general principles and time reactions. . . . In a work of this scope it is inevitable that some errors will creep in, but we do not mean to imply that we detected many or all the errors." F. E. Cislak

+ — Chem & Eng N 30:3868 S 15 '52 240w (Review of v4)

"These two volumes were once intended as one, but the choice of two separate ones for consideration of the polycyclic types containing one nitrogen atom has permitted better handling for both authors and users. Each unit of the series further attests the care and balance in the planning which make certain of its elegance as well as value." E. A. Steck
+ Chem Eng 59:382 Je '52 320w (Review of v3-4)

N Y New Tech Bks 37:36 My '52 (Review of v3)

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:329 S '52 160w

ELDON, MAGDALEN. Bumble. [42]p $1.75 Scribner

Bumble Holmes, a Pekinese who admits he is half Chinese, half Scottish, lives in a hollow tree, somewhere in England, and is cared for by a family of Scottish mice, the Mac-Mouses. This picture storybook for young readers describes Bumble's life during one year.

ELDON, MAGDALEN—Continued

"Not since Beatrix Potter have there been illustrations in such charming and cunning detail." M. W.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 11 '51 40w

Kirkus 19:480 S 1 '51 60w

"Book is very English in tone, quiet, delightful in many ways, a bit Wind-in-the-Willowish without the lovely philosophy. I can't believe it will ever make a sensation with children, but it is a nice book in looks and language." Phyllis Fenner

Library J 76:2122 D 15 '51 80w

"One of the most happily imagined animal characters of the fall picture books. You don't have to know or care about Pekinese to appreciate Bumble: he is a most enchanting individual, whether dressed in blue-striped pajamas or a tweed fishing cap or chef's linens. There is no story here at all. Yet we have already found little girls of around eight absorbed in these pages, so pretty and so funny. (Of little boys we are not so sure)." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 N 11 '51 200w

"It is delightfully told and charmingly illustrated."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 N 11 '51 100w

ELEK, PAUL. This other London; il. by David Knight. 136p $2.50 British bk. centre

942.1 London—Description 52-6490

Brief, impressionistic essays on the sights, sounds, and customs of London and Londoners.

Manchester Guardian p4 Je 29 '51 90w

"Mr. Elek is a pleasant and informed guide, but he seems to have lived in London too long to see it and its life with the revealing detachment of Bourget or Capek; he writes with too much knowledge, as a commuter, an inhabitant of the grooves. His book should be invaluable to visitors from abroad who wish to be initiated to the contrasting mores." Michael Swan

New Statesman & Nation 41:722 Je 23 '51 210w

"Mr. Elek's little book will be of principal interest to those who already have a thorough knowledge of, and love for, London." C. W. W. San Francisco Chronicle p22 F 10 '52 40w

"The greater the reader's knowledge of London, the stronger will be the appeal of this entertaining and unusual book."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p466 J1 27 '51 130w

ELEY, VINCENT. Monk at the potter's wheel; the story of Charnwood-Cistercian ware; with a pref. by Bernard Rackham. 128p il $4.75 British bk. centre

738.3 Pottery

"Vincent Eley, a monk at Mount Saint Bernard Abbey, started to learn pottery in 1947, and this book is a detailed account of his early struggles. It abounds in humour and, as one would expect, has a saner background of values than is usual in these days of exaltation of the individual on the one hand and mercenary evaluation on the other." Manchester Guardian

"An amusing and readable book for those with a nodding acquaintance with the craft, though to outsiders it will read rather like a textbook on pottery." M. D.

+ Manchester Guardian p4 J1 1 '52 190w

Reviewed by Robert Richmond

New Repub 127:29 O 6 '52 400w

"Father Vincent, Cistercian monk, claims none of Thomas Merton's 'style, intelligence and sanctity.' Yet he has put so much warmth and friendliness into his book that even if you know nothing about the art of the ceramicist, you'll profit from the reading of it in a number of ways." J. V.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 O 26 '52 370w

ELIOT, THOMAS STEARNS. Complete poems and plays. 392p $6 Harcourt

811

52-11346

This volume is made up of six individual titles: Four Quartets, Collected Poems: 1909-1935, Murder in the Cathedral, The Family Reunion, Old Possum's Book of Practical Cats, and The Cocktail Party.

Booklist 49:153 Ja 1 '53

Bookmark 12:78 Ja '53 20w

"No poet has used the English language with a greater subtlety, with more richness of rhythm, with a sharper ear for the spoken idiom and the literary phrase. After so much modern poetry in which language is either outworn or too matter-of-fact, Eliot's lines seem to move with solidity of stone carved in the round, and yet without lacking lightness and motion." Paul Engle

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 D 14 '52 200w

Kirkus 20:760 D 1 '52 60w

Reviewed by G. D. McDonald

Library J 77:2174 D 15 '52 70w

Reviewed by J. C. Ransom

New Repub 127:16 D 8 '52 1400w

Reviewed by Robert Richman

New Repub 127:17 D 8 '52 1300w

"To have all this in one volume is convenient. And the most casual glance through these poems, both lyric and dramatic, serves to remind us of Eliot's stature and significance. . . Reading the plays over after several years of neglect, I was astonished to find how direct, simple and effective they have become." W. Y. Tindall

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 D 14 '52 1150w

Reviewed by V. S. Pritchett

N Y Times p1 N 30 '52 1350w

Reviewed by Lawrence Ferling

San Francisco Chronicle p13 D 14 '52 650w

"Of his poetry, the present reviewer believes that his earliest is his best, the most distinctive and with the most personal style. . . Going through the collection before us, we cannot help feeling that these poems and plays, with all their discoveries and all their great accomplishment, are limited in their emotional range. . . But when everything else is said, it must be said that T. S. Eliot is one of the great poets of the modern world and he truly deserved the Nobel Prize." M. M. Colum

+ Sat R 35:17 D 27 '52 650w

Time 60:68 D 22 '52 160w

ELIOT, THOMAS STEARNS, and HOELLER-ING, GEORGE. Film of Murder in the cathedral. 110p il $6 Harcourt

791.4 Motion picture plays. Thomas à Becket, Saint, abp. of Canterbury—Drama 52-6441

Contains the original text of the poem, with the changes and additions which were needed in making the film script. The author describes in his preface his part in the making of the film. Illustrated with 40 full-page close-ups and several pages of shorts from the film, and with many pen and ink drawings.

Booklist 48:334 Je 15 '52

"It is one of Mr. Eliot's major works and perhaps one of his noblest. Mr. Hoellering, collaborating with the author to a degree that would be unprecedented in Hollywood, turned it into a motion picture. This edition gives the full text with prefaces by both, with some further material that Mr. Eliot added for the film, and with a wealth of beautiful photography and many drawings illustrating the characters and the action." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 69:804 J1 9 '52 500w

"One of the most beautiful books on any subject you ever saw. The film has been highly praised and deservedly so. The lavishly handsome illustrations demonstrate this. Recommended for poetry, cinema and theatre collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 77:1307 Ag '52 30w

Manchester Guardian p4 Ap 25 '52 130w

Reviewed by Robert Richmond

New Repub 127:29 O 6 '52 210w

"The text is of considerable interest since it includes a whole new scene written especially for the film by Mr. Eliot, and a Preface by him which gives the poet's views on some of the special problems involved in the filming of a verse play." Herbert Read

+ New Statesman & Nation 43:500 Ap 26 '52 1300w

ELLIN, STANLEY. Key to Nicholas street.
219p $2.50 Simon & Schuster

52-8353

Detective story.

"Intelligent, intense entertainment."

+ Kirkus 20:139 F 15 '52 110w

"This is an unusual book in mode and in texture and an exceptionally disturbing experience. It is the sort of novel that traps reviewers into suggesting that it is more than a mystery. Taking another view, it's the sort of mystery that proves the vitality of the form." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Ap 27 '52 240w

"This is a study of small-town mentalities, of ingrown respectability, of cannibalistic family relationships; and the clarity and freshness of its writing, its skill in the gradual unfolding of complex and contradictory characters, might well be envied by many 'serious' novelists. It is also a pure formal detective story with dexterously concealed clues, and something of a technical tour de force in its Fearing-like use of viewpoints and varied narrative styles." Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p33 Ap 20 '52 100w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p29 Ap 20 '52 60w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 35:47 My 24 '52 20w

Springf'd Republican p7D My 18 '52 120w

ELLINGER, SUZETTE (TELENGA) (SUSAN YORKE, pseud). Naked to mine enemies.
254p $3 Harcourt

52-6436

Character study of Peter Frame, a young man from upstate New York who ran away from home to live in South America. In business he was a success, but in his love affairs he was too unstable and his life ended in tragedy. The story is told by three women who loved him: his sister; his mistress; and his wife.

Reviewed by Riley Hughes

Cath World 175:233 Je '52 160w

Reviewed by Richard Sullivan

Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 Mr 16 '52 370w

Kirkus 20:87 F 1 '52 160w

"Told in a Gide-like manner, unquestionably skillful and absorbing, but why did the author of The Widow pick such a perennial adolescent? You read it." F. A. Boyle

Library J 77:530 Mr 15 '52 70w

Nation 174:409 Ap 26 '52 60w

"The story is trivial, the sentiment cheap, the dialogue portentous and the love-making incredible." John Raymond

+ New Statesman & Nation 44:429 O 11 '52 170w

"'Naked To Mine Enemies' supports all the remarkable pledges given in Miss Susan Yorke's earlier novel, 'The Widow.' And confirms her limitations. In the pure art of story-telling—in the imagination and the skill needed to create fresh and compelling narrative devices—and in her capacity to hold the interest with dynamic, forward-marching, sophisticated prose, Miss Yorke rates extremely high. It is the naivete of her content that is puzzling." F. H. Bullock

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Mr 16 '52 550w

"Unfortunately, in attempting to tell in 'Naked to Mine Enemies' of a frustrated-untodeath love, which actually needn't have been frustrated at all, Susan Yorke has come far too close to what a drama critic recently described as 'the amorphous border line that divides melodramatic tragedy from sophomoric burlesque.'" V. L. W.

+ N Y Times p20 My 11 '52 360w

"A glossy, glum, quite sexless story. . . The main trouble with the book is that in spite of all the talking and analyzing, Peter remains shadowy and dreamlike."

New Yorker 28:123 Mr 8 '52 50w

"No doubt about it, Miss Yorke can write well and she is a thoroughly able hand at the technique of the novel. But this second book will disappoint many. The stuff of the novel is just not worth the good writing expended on it." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Je 4 '52 500w

"The writing of this is slick, highly charged, and only occasionally ungrammatical." E. J. Fitzgerald

Sat R 35:34 Ap 5 '52 120w

Reviewed by Marghanita Laski

Spec 189:408 S 26 '52 100w

Springf'd Republican p10C My 4 '52 130w

Times [London] Lit Sup p689 O 24 '52 70w

ELLIS, WILLIAM DONOHUE. Bounty lands.
492p $3.95 World pub.

52-5196

Historical novel of the American push to the West which started when the soldiers of the Revolution were granted one hundred acres in the Northwest Territories (later Ohio). The hero of the tale is Tom Woodbridge, who has to fight for his right to the warrant he inherited from his father, Jonathan.

Booklist 49:89 N 1 '52

Bookmark 12:56 D '52 40w

"It is apparent that the author has gone to a great deal of trouble to make sure just how the people lived in that day and that land. The research must have kept him busy for a long time, for nowhere in the book could this reviewer find an anachronism, or a descriptive line that did not ring true." J. A. Menough

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 O 26 '52 200w

"Can be recommended without qualifications."

W. K. Rugg

+ Christian Science Monitor p5 D 24 '52 270w

Kirkus 20:422 Jl 15 '52 130w

"First, and highly satisfactory, novel," E. J. Fitzgerald

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 N 23 '52 290w

"'The Bounty Lands' brings alive, as no non-fiction could, the currents of history that were merging to make Jacksonian democracy. Here, in short, is a first novel that makes you pretty proud to be an American." Richard Match

+ N Y Times p51 N 9 '52 330w

"This fine first novel introduces us to two Americans who are well worth knowing. We may never hear again of its hero, Thomas Woodbridge. . . We shall certainly hear more of its author, William Donahue Ellis. . . This is not so much a novel of adventure as a straightforward account of frontier life, crude, colorful, heart-breaking, and exultant. And if the love story is low-toned and quiet, it too shares in the strength of the whole book." Shirley Barker

+ Sat R 35:21 O 18 '52 380w

ELLISON, RALPH. Invisible man. 439p $3.50
Random house

52-5159

"In this first novel, the author dramatizes an interesting theme by telling the story of a Negro going in progressive stages from youthful affirmation, in a small southern town, to total rejection after a Harlem race riot. Striving to be himself, he finds that he must not only contend with the whites but with the powerful members of his own race." Library J

"Unquestionably, Ellison's book is a work of extraordinary intensity—powerfully imagined and written with a savage, wryly humorous gusto. It contains many scenes which are brought off with great brio and a striking felicity of detail. To my mind, however, it has faults which cannot simply be shrugged off—occasional overwriting, stretches of fuzzy thinking, and a tendency to waver, confusingly, between realism and surrealism." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 190:84 J1 '52 450w

Booklist 48:373 J1 15 '52

"It is a remarkably vivid and compelling story about characters who are confused and deceived and betrayed—but who remain indisputably human." Edith Fowke

+ Canadian Forum 32:142 S '52 310w

Reviewed by Roi Ottley

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 My 11 '52 270w

"Ellison stands somewhat alone as a novelist. He is not a Richard Wright yet, but really he is quite different. He is more diffuse, more introspective, but somehow less powerful. He is more dramatic, perhaps, but less compelling. He blends the weird and the warm, the grotesque and the appealing, often with fine effect, so that if your attention wanders, it always comes back. You must call him, finally and simply, dynamic." T. E. Cassidy

+ Commonweal 56:99 My 2 '52 850w

"Parts of this experience may have been told before, but never with such freshness, intensity and power. This is Ellison's first novel, but he has complete control of his story and his style."

+ Kirkus 20:94 F 1 '52 210w

"This is an angry book filled with symbolism which confuses as well as expands its meaning beyond its apparent depth. Written in an unusual style dealing with events more than people, it is not a 'protest' novel, in any sense, but one which questions. Unfortunately, there are no answers. Recommended." M. S. Byam

+ Library J 77:716 Ap 15 '52 150w

Reviewed by Irving Howe

Nation 174:454 My 10 '52 950w

"Invisible Man is a book shorn of the racial and political clichés that have encumbered the 'Negro novel.' It firmly establishes Ellison with that small group of writers—William Faulkner, Bucklin Moon, J. Saunders Redding—as an artist in handling his given material." George Mayberry

+ New Repub 126:19 Ap 21 '52 600w

"A book that is a valuable addition to our native literature and a valuable source of information for future historians of Negro-white relations in the depression decade." W. T. Hedden

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ap 13 '52 850w

"This is not another journey to the end of the night. With this book the author maps a course from the underground world into the light. 'The Invisible Man' belongs on the shelf with the classical efforts man has made to chart the river Lethe from its mouth to its source." Wright Morris

+ N Y Times p5 Ap 13 '52 900w

"An exceptionally good book and in parts an extremely funny one. That is not to say that it is without defects, but since they are almost entirely confined to the intolerably arty prologue and epilogue, and to certain expressionist passages conveniently printed in italics, they can easily be skipped, and they should be, for they are trifling in comparison with its virtues." Anthony West

+ New Yorker 28:93 My 31 '52 2100w

San Francisco Chronicle p12 J1 27 '52 400w

"Many Negro writers of real distinction have emerged in our century: Arna Bontemps, Ann Petry, Chester Himes, Langston Hughes, Gwendolyn Brooks, Richard Wright. But none of them except, sometimes, Richard Wright has been able to transcend the bitter way of life they are still (though diminished) condemned to, or to master patiently the intricacies of craftsmanship so that they become the peers of the best white writers of our day. Mr. Ellison has achieved this difficult transcendence. 'Invisible Man' is not a great Negro novel; it is a work of art any contemporary writer could point to with pride." H. C. Webster

+ Sat R 35:22 Ap 12 '52 800w

"Invisible Man is a remarkable first novel that gives 38-year-old Ralph Ellison a claim to being the best of U.S. Negro writers. It makes him for that matter, an unusual writer by any standards."

+ Time 59:112 Ap 14 '52 850w

Reviewed by James Yaffe

Yale R n s 41:8 summer '52 120w

ELLSBERG, EDWARD. Passport for Jennifer. 224p $2.75 Dodd

818 U.S.—Emigration and immigration

52-9954

"How Admiral Ellsberg responded to the appeal of two subordinates in the second World War and provided little, motherless, English Jennifer with an American home is deftly related in an intense, occasionally humorous, human document." Bookmark

Booklist 49:1; 9 S 1 '52

Bookmark 12:5 O '52 20w

Reviewed by Betty Swords

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 N 23 '52 290w

"Recommended for general library use."

H. L. Roth

+ Library J 77:1396 S 1 '52 120w

Reviewed by Frances Witherspoon

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 S 28 '52 470w

"Admiral Ellsberg's account of his struggles is sometimes touching and sometimes wildly hilarious, but one thing is clear: With men like him on our side, it's no wonder we won the war." Jane Cobb

+ N Y Times p20 O 5 '52 280w

ELMQUIST, RUTH M., ed. See Christian herald (periodical). Fifty years of Christmas

ELTING, MRS MARY (BENJAMIN BREWSTER, pseud). First book of Eskimos; pictures by Ursula Koering. 44p $1.75 Watts, F. 998 [919.8] Eskimos—Juvenile literature

52-10892

Discusses the history and daily life of the Eskimos. For ages eight to nine.

Booklist 49:19 S 1 '52

"Children have an insatiable curiosity about Eskimos and I was not surprised that the teachers voted this the best book they have ever seen about 'the laughing people,' for it has information on every phase of Eskimo life." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 28:334 O '52 50w

Kirkus 20:191 Mr 15 '52 80w

"Recommended for school and public libraries." H. E. Walker

+ Library J 77:1310 Ag '52 40w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 O 5 '52 50w

"This is good preparation for those Arctic adventure stories which boys will read when they are a little older." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p18 Je 29 '52 60w

Wis Lib Bul 48:217 S '52

ELTING, MRS MARY (BENJAMIN BREWSTER, pseud). First book of firemen; pictures by Jeanne Bendick. [46p] $1.75 Watts, F. 614.84 Firemen—Juvenile literature 52-6212

Describes all kinds of fire fighting, gives facts and pictures about the history of fire protection in other countries, and describes new methods and techniques of fire fighting. For ages 8 to 11.

Booklist 48:174 Ja 15 '52

Bookmark 11:109 F '52

Kirkus 19:433 Ag 15 '51 90w

"This book should be very valuable to libraries. . . Recommended." N. L. Rathbun

+ Library J 77:66 Ja 1 '52 70w

"There have been many books, big and small, about the fascinating subject of firemen. For pure information, as complete as possible in a thin, easy-reading book, this is the best yet." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Ja 27 '52 70w

Wis Lib Bul 48:38 Ja '52

ELVILLE, E. M. English tableglass; il. with photographs. 274p $10 Scribner

748 Glassware. Collectors and collecting 52-6692

"This book is addressed primarily to the collector, or would-be collector, of specimens of English glass. . . The book is therefore planned to provide collectors with all the information they need to familiarize themselves with the characteristics of English tableglass. Form and decoration are, of course, fully discussed; but it is the author's belief that a wider knowledge of the material and the craftsmen who worked in it are equally necessary to the collector." (Publisher's note) Bibliography. Index.

"An impressive yet readable volume; many photographs and outline drawings further enhance the usefulness of this book for student, amateur, and research worker."

+ Library J 77:1305 Ag '52 50w

Reviewed by R. L. Howell

Sat R 35:34 My 3 '52 250w

"Unfortunately Mr. Elville seems a little embarrassed by the wealth of information and material he has collected, both technical and aesthetic, for the arrangement of the text is not easy to follow. This is the only blemish in a book which is learned, easy to read and a welcome addition to the literature of English craftsmanship."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p239 Ap 4 '52 500w

ELVIN, HAROLD. Story at Canons. 285p $3 Roy pubs. 52-6240

"Around 1715, one James Brydges, Duke of Chandos, Marquess and Earl of Carnarvon, and Paymaster of His Majesty's Forces, was accused but not convicted of stealing eighteen million pounds from the public treasury. . . The Duke proceeded to build himself, at Canons, what Daniel Defoe described as 'the Most Magnificent Palace in England.' . . This 'novel based on fact' tells the story of Canons' second duke, Henry, who not only reaped the fiscal whirlwind sown by his prodigal parent but won notoriety in his own right. In an age when intra-marital affection was out of fashion, Duke Henry married for love. Worse, he married an ostler's wife. Outraged, his high-born creditors literally pulled down and auctioned Canons, stone by stone." N Y Times

Kirkus 20:43 Ja 15 '52 180w

"Delicate as the story is, it deserves general purchase—and reading—for it is a perfect picture of a cruelly charming England." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 77:433 Mr 1 '52 90w

"Mr. Elvin tells the Canons story, which is based on fact, spiritedly and at an almost breathless tempo, skillfully interweaving bits from old letters and other papers in England's archives. His almost incredibly dazzling picture of eighteenth century magnificence (and also miseries) has gusto and reveals much of the spirit as well as the setting of the times. The book, like the fragment of history it chronicles, is a bibelot and as such, highly diverting." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Mr 30 '52 550w

"Anything but gloomy, Harold Elvin's account alternately bubbles with mildly Rabelaisian mirth, grotesque eighteenth-century puns, spins out startling similes, gushes girlishly about the low-born duchess, and scatters broadcast learned bits of quaint history. As historical novels go, Mr. Elvin's caviar is not for tastes that prefer the usual sliced bologna. It is, indeed, less a historical novel than a toast to a dead lady and a dead century." Richard Match

N Y Times p20 Mr 9 '52 290w

San Francisco Chronicle p25 Ap 6 '52 80w

"This is a re-creation—in spun sugar—of eighteenth-century England as every romantic lover of the charming would like to have had it. The ladies are lovely, the gallants are gallant, the decor is delightful, and the conversation skips like a pebble across sunlit waters. Also, love conquers all." E. J. Fitzgerald

Sat R 35:34 Ap 26 '52 210w

EMERICK, ROBERT HENDERSON. Heating design and practice. 453p il $8 McGraw 697 Heating 51-12548

"The recent practical development of such heating devices and systems as the heat pump, baseboard radiators and panel heating make a comprehensive book of this kind particularly welcome. . . The treatment is practical and mostly descriptive. Residential heating equipment is emphasized, but there is some discussion of larger equipment. The book should be useful to such readers as architects and contractors." N Y New Tech Bks

Booklist 48:180 F 1 '52

"Organized as a textbook with questions for students to answer, the book should be rather useful also to building contractors, architects, and others who want specific and practical information about either the principles or design of specific types of systems." R. R. Hawkins

Library J 77:60 Ja 1 '52 110w

N Y New Tech Bks 36:87 N '51

EMERY, MRS ANNE. Sorority girl; il. by Richard Horwitz. 191p $2.50 Westminster press 52-7049

Jean Burnaby, little sister of the heroine of Senior Year and Going Steady (Book Review Digest 1949, 1950) joined a sorority in her junior year in high school and for a time was bewildered by her new life. Finally she had to admit her friend Jeff was right: she did not like the sorority nor some of the people who came with it.

Booklist 48:234 Mr 15 '52

"Jean's inner struggles over her sorority and going steady problems are presented by the author in her usual intelligent and understanding fashion. I should think many a teen-ager might well absorb helpful ideas from Jean's courageous and independent handling of them in this lively story." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 Mr 30 '52 220w

Reviewed by E. C. Ince

Christian Science Monitor p9 My 15 '52 100w

+ Horn Bk 28:178 Je '52 100w

"Understanding, intelligent and a first-rate story."

+ Kirkus 20:32 Ja 15 '52 240w

EMERY, ANNE—Continued

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ap 13 '52
110w

"Jean's dilemma is one which few girls have either the character or the desire to face. Her solution makes a logical ending to a thoughtful story which high school girls will find extremely provocative." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p30 Mr 30 '52 180w

EMETT, ROWLAND. New World for Nellie.
[38p] col il $2 Harcourt

52-6903

Picture storybook about Nellie, the famous English railroad engine known to readers of Punch and to visitors at the Festival of Britain. Albert and Frederick, Nellie's drivers, get tired of being unappreciated, on their "once a day and twice a week" run. So they change Nellie into a flying machine and take a trip to the United States with happy results.

Reviewed by M. F. Kieran

Atlantic 190:101 D '52 20w

Booklist 49:51 O 1 '52

Bookmark 12:83 Ja '53

Reviewed by B. J. Thompson

Cath World 176:204 D '52 30w

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 D 21 '52
50w

Commonweal 57:170 N 21 '52 20w

"Extravaganza in beautiful wash drawings whose delicacy of line and inventive skill give rare impressions of nonsense set free." A. C. Moore

+ Horn Bk 28:311 O '52 20w

Horn Bk 28:319 O '52 110w

Reviewed by A. C. Moore

+ Horn Bk 28:394 D '52 80w

Kirkus 20:547 S 1 '52 90w

"The story will amuse children of almost any age, and the detailed drawings on every page, both in color and black and white, will give children hours of pleasure picking out the many little objects in the pictures." Phyllis Fenner

+ Library J 77:1520 S 15 '52 90w

"Like so many truly original creations, Nellie cannot be assigned to any age level. The beautiful, pale colors so cleverly put on and so well printed will appeal to many collectors of unusual books." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p4
N 16 '52 200w

"Britain's debt to the United States, such as it is, has been further reduced by an English alchemist, Rowland Emmet, who, working with spider webs and crochet needles, has fashioned a book of pure gold. . . It is no surprise to find the Emmet drawings full of tasseled chuckles but it is remarkable that the artist tells here an unusual story with extraordinary skill and complete plausibility." Walt Kelly

+ N Y Times p7 S 14 '52 470w

+ San Francisco Chronicle p2 N 16 '52
240w

"As one turns the pages there is seemingly no end to the delightful detail that Mr. Emmet draws with such ease and such utter harmony. It is heartening to have a fresh new talent like this come to the children from England just now. They owe so much to the English authors and artists. We heartily congratulate the publishers for adding to our debt in this particular year of our common history."

+ Sat R 35:46 N 15 '52 290w

Springf'd Republican p7C D 7 '52 140w

Time 60:109 D 8 '52 20w

ENCYCLOPAEDIA BRITANNICA. See Great books of the Western world

ENCYCLOPAEDIA BRITANNICA. World atlas; world distributions and world political geography, political-physical maps, geographical summaries, geographical comparisons, glossary of geographical terms, index to political-physical maps; G. Donald Hudson, geographical editor; Clarence B. Odell, chief of cartography dept. under the general editorial direction of Walter Yust. xii,[63],iii,iv, 378p $25 Encyclopaedia britannica

912 Atlases

Map 51-541

"The contents of the 1951 atlas is as follows: The World Scene, showing world distributions and world political geography (60 plates on 61 pages); Political-Physical Maps, by regions and by political units (111 pages); Geographical Summaries, statistics by regions and political units, with a special section of commodities (252 pages); Geographical Comparisons (8 pages); Glossary and Index (116 pages). Bibliographies appear at the end of The World Scene and each main section of the Geographical Summaries. . . There has been considerable revision in the space allotted to and treatment of individual countries, and a number of areas are not shown on as large a scale as previously." Subscription Bks Bul

"The maps are generally up to date, legible and pleasing in appearance, and noteworthy for the helpful indication of relief, usually by hachuring. . . In format, the 1951 printing is smaller and more convenient to handle than the 1942 edition. This reduction in size has been achieved by use of a less bulky, though strong and opaque, paper and by reducing the margins, a fact which will make rebinding impractical. Recommended." M. N. Barton

+ Library J 76:1226 Ag '51 300w

"The World Scene section is an informative and thought-provoking series of maps distinctive to this publication, to which important new plates have been added in the 1951 edition. The statistical section is also distinctive and shows considerable revision, but is still far from fully up to date owing to world conditions. The maps in the main series are attractive and well done, but librarians should bear in mind that they are very similar to those in the Rand McNally Cosmopolitan World Atlas. With this proviso, the Encyclopaedia Britannica World Atlas, 1951 subscription edition, is recommended."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 23:42 J1 '52 1100w

ENGEL, MONROE. Length of rope. 246p $3
Random house

52-5164

Psychological novel. Its chief characters are Sheila Braun, a nurse in a mental hospital; Alexander Forward, an orderly in the hospital; Ratcliff Pippin; and the latter's idiot son who lives in the hospital. The marriage of Sheila to Pippin brings them some happiness, but eventually leads to a murder and suicide.

— Kirkus 20:199 Mr 15 '52 210w

Reviewed by Mark Schorer

New Repub 126:19 My 12 '52 800w

"It would have all made a fascinating story if only Mr. Engel had treated it as such. Instead he has chosen to tell his tale through a heavily 'significant' approach, more appropriate to the essay than to fiction. He seems to have been less interested in making the narrative convincing than in rendering it intellectually ornate. Its scenes cannot move under their own power because they are overloaded with philosophical conceits and socio-psychological disquisitions." Frederic Morton

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 My 18
'52 500w

Reviewed by E. J. Fitzgerald

N Y Times p11 J1 6 '52 140w

"Mr. Engel develops his novel in an interesting but uneven fashion. His most disturbing weakness is an apparent inability to maintain a consistent tone of expression for his characters." Martin Levin

Sat R 35:21 J1 5 '52 250w

ENGELN, OSCAR DIEDRICH VON. See Von Engeln, O. D.

ENGLISH, OLIVER SPURGEON, and FOSTER, MRS CONSTANCE (JACKSON). Fathers are parents, too; a constructive guide to successful fatherhood. 304p $3.50 Putnam

649.1 [392.3] Fathers. Parent and child 51-13788

"Sound suggestions by a psychiatrist who shows how father can contribute to the mental health of the family." (Cleveland Open Shelf) The author is professor of psychiatry at Temple University in Philadelphia. Index.

Booklist 48:115 D 1 '51
Cleveland Open Shelf p25 N '51

"A brilliant achievement in focusing attention on the role of the American father." I. B. + San Francisco Chronicle p10 Ja 20 '52 130w

School & Society 74:351 D 1 '51 30w

ENGSTRAND, STUART DAVID. Husband in the house. 279p $3 Farrar, Straus

52-5796

This is the story of Laura Stream's marriage, and of the three men who loved her—her father, to blame for the accident that crippled Carl Hedman; Carl, the man she married out of pity and loyalty; Carl's brother Richard with whom she fell in love.

"The events of this novel would add up to sheer sensationalism if any attempt had been made to exploit their lurid aspects. But the writing is generally quiet, simple, and controlled." Richard Sullivan

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Mr 23 '52 340w

"The bald and mechanical effect of the novel suggests strongly that Mr. Engstrand constructed this story, like his others, as a portmanteau for a deliberately 'startling' theme. Since the characters never succeed in seeming consequential to the reader, however, the chills, spills and thrills offered therein have about the impact of a cream puff fired at long range." Jean Holzhauer

— Commonweal 56:124 My 9 '52 350w

Kirkus 19:685 D 1 '51 180w

"'A Husband in the House' is interesting rather than impressive. This is largely caused by Mr. Engstrand's failure to penetrate character deeply or to write with a style that rises often enough above the ordinary." H. C. Webster

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 My 25 '52 330w

"Mr. Engstrand's previous work showed real power, but I think he's been plowing his particular furrow of sexual repression and frustration a little too long." E. J. Fitzgerald

— Sat R 35:64 Ap 12 '52 240w

EPSTEIN, SAMUEL, and WILLIAMS, BERYL. Real book about Alaska; il. by Mary Stevens. 191p $1.25 Garden City bks.

979.8 Alaska—Juvenile literature 52-7618

An account of Alaska and the Alaskans past, present, and future, for grades 5 to 8.

Booklist 48:253 Ap 1 '52

"A must for schools as supplementary reading."

+ Kirkus 19:704 D 15 '51 160w

"Readable, informative, up-to-date book. . . Recommended for ages 10 and up." Sonja Wennerblad

+ Library J 77:602 Ap 1 '52 90w

Reviewed by M. E. Martignoni

N Y Times p18 Je 29 '52 30w

EPSTEIN, SAMUEL, and WILLIAMS, BERYL. Real book about Benjamin Franklin; il. by Herbert Danska. 192p $1.25 Garden City bks.

B or 92 Franklin, Benjamin—Juvenile literature 52-8114

"A straightforward, unfictionized presentation of the many-sided Franklin—printer, inventor, author, postmaster, and statesman—with a clear background of eighteenth-century colonial life, the Revolution, and international affairs in which he played so important a part." Library J

Booklist 48:284 My 1 '52

Kirkus 20:190 Mr 15 '52 120w

Reviewed by Virginia Haviland

Library J 77:727 Ap 15 '52 100w

"Extremely readable." M. E. Martignoni

+ N Y Times p18 Je 29 '52 20w

EPSTEIN, SAMUEL, and WILLIAMS, BERYL. Real book about inventions; il. by László Roth. 191p $1.25 Garden City bks

608 Inventions—Juvenile literature 51-12209

Authentic information on inventions for 8 to 12 year olds. Beginning with prehistoric man and his tools, the book covers electricity, transportation, printing, farming, and industrial inventions.

Booklist 48:107 N 15 '51

"Lots of fascinating answers to questions every child asks, done in very readable fashion."

+ Kirkus 19:321 Jl 1 '51 100w

"Useful and readable and remarkably inexpensive." M. C. Skinner

+ Library J 76:2122 D 15 '51 70w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 F 24 '52 30w

Wis Lib Bul 48:45 Ja '52

EPSTEIN, SAMUEL, and WILLIAMS, BERYL. Real book about pirates; il. by Deane Cate. 192p $1.25 Garden City bks.

910.4 Pirates—Juvenile literature 52-12311

Fictionized accounts of the lives of some of the world's famous pirates, buccaneers, and corsairs. For grades 6 to 8.

Booklist 49:111 N 15 '52

Kirkus 20:372 Jl 1 '52 160w

"This should prove useful in many areas. It is very readable and could be used from fourth grade through high school." O. R. Way

+ Library J 77:1821 O 15 '52 30w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 N 2 '52 20w

ERDMAN, LOULA GRACE. Wind blows free. 242p $2.50 Dodd

52-7603

Story of life on the plains of the Texas Panhandle in the 1890's. The heroine is fourteen-year-old Melinda who at first dislikes the life, but gradually is won over. For grades 7 to 9.

Booklist 49:51 O 1 '52

Bookmark 12:13 O '52 20w

"My more discriminating 6th graders have told me with faces aglow that 'This is so wonderful!'" A. B. McGuire

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 N 16 '52 160w

Commonweal 57:172 N 21 '52 30w

"Truly a contribution to the now much-talked-of 'American heritage,' and sure to be a favorite everywhere." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 28:410 D '52 80w

"Recommended." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 77:1826 O 15 '52 90w

Reviewed by N. B. Baker

+ N Y Times p54 N 23 '52 120w

ERICKSON, ARVEL BENJAMIN. Public career of Sir James Graham. 433p $4.50 Western Reserve Univ. press

B or 92 Graham, Sir James Robert George. Great Britain—Politics and government

52-10133

"In the history of nineteenth-century reform politics Sir James Graham has his place as Peel's chief lieutenant and Home Secretary in the great Ministry of 1841-6, and as the leader of the Peelites after Peel's death. His solid achievement as a political figure of the second rank and an enlightened administrator are fully dealt with by the Professor of History at Western Reserve University." (Spec) Bibliography. Index.

"Professor Erickson's biography is useful, but it suffers from a worthy desire to put everything in. Important and unimportant phases in Graham's life are given equal space. More or less equal weight is given to all the authorities, some of them dubious, which are cited in his massive footnotes. At the end of the book we realise why Graham never became Prime Minister, but we never get to the root of that profound pessimism, which made him as afraid of dreams as he was of nightmares. Yet it was his refusal to dream which was the foundation both of his strength and of his weakness." Asa Briggs

Manchester Guardian p4 Mr 21 '52 400w

Spec 188:528 Ap 18 '52 130w

"A capable and erudite book on Graham's public career. Though the general reader of this book might complain that his path is not made easy by any outstanding graces of style or by even occasional flashes of wit, it should certainly be read by all who cherish the political history of these islands. Here and there the author betrays a lack of understanding of English institutions."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p279 Ap 25 '52 700w

ERICSON, WALTER, pseud. See Fast, H. M.

ERNST, MORRIS LEOPOLD, and LOTH, DAVID GOLDSMITH. For better or worse; a new approach to marriage and divorce. 245p $3 Harper

301.428 [392.5] Divorce. Marriage 51-11907

"The authors have undertaken to examine the after effects of divorce, what happens to the children, the loneliness, the financial difficulties, the elements of success or failure in a second marriage. Morris Ernst, lawyer, and David Loth, publicist, have tried by means of case histories to shed light on the problems that arise after a divorce. Their survey leads them to propose a new 'positive program.'" (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) No index.

"As is usual with books of this kind, there is no index, no list of parallel readings, no documentation, and no listing of sources of further help. Within these limits, the book is a contribution to the field and to the men and women for whom it is intended." E. M. Duval

+ Ann Am Acad 281:225 My '52 480w
Booklist 48:178 F 1 '52

Reviewed by V. P. Hass

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ja 27 '52 400w

Reviewed by L. F. Wood

Churchman 166:17 O 15 '52 160w

"The many case histories here, on which the evidence is established, give this a clinical-confessional fascination, as well as the fellowship of mutual experience, for an audience involved in this problem."

+ Kirkus 19:653 N 1 '51 180w

"The case histories are indeed few and they leave one with the feeling that they are the stories of people who have been psycho-analyzed or else are extraordinarily articulate about their intimate lives. Though fragmentary the case histories do help to illumine a phase of the divorce problem which has still to be dealt with adequately. The authors' analysis of what is wrong with the present legalistic and hypocritical approach to divorce and their proposed remedies warrant consideration." Elinore Herrick

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Ja 13 '52 650w

"Extremely readable and challenging book." Lucy Freeman

+ N Y Times p14 Ja 6 '52 650w

"This book is meant for the layman and is especially useful to those who are contemplating divorce; but it is also aimed at judges and lawyers who need to be taught that social engineering is far more important than strict legalism." A. B. S.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p27 Mr 9 '52 370w

Reviewed by C. L. Chute

Survey 88:190 Ap '52 500w

ERNST, MORRIS LEOPOLD, and LOTH, DAVID GOLDSMITH. Report on the American communist. 240p $3 Holt

329.8 Communism—U.S. Communist party of the United States of America 52-11043

"The stated purpose of this book is to provide a better understanding of Communism in America and to prevent growth of party membership. The authors interviewed nearly three hundred former communists, asking why they joined and why they left the party." (Library J) No index.

Booklist 49:118 D 1 '52

Reviewed by Willard Edwards

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 D 28 '52 450w

Reviewed by Arnold Brickman

Christian Science Monitor p9 N 29 '52 430w

"The chief defect of the book is its failure to probe deeply enough—to focus the problem, a problem of ultimate allegiance." Will Herberg

+ Commonweal 57:310 D 26 '52 1100w

"This book should help people tempted by Communism to reevaluate their motives, and strengthen the hand of those engaged in preventive measures."

+ Kirkus 20:594 S 1 '52 180w

"The book is superficial and its program is not new. It gives the impression of being hurried and uneven, nor does it add to our knowledge of Communism in America. There is still much to be learned and the subject deserves more careful attention." Jerome Cushman

Library J 77:1647 O 1 '52 180w

"Three hundred cases are not very many on which to base such an elaborate superstructure of conclusions; it is good news that a leading American university is making a much more elaborate investigation in the same field. My guess is, however, that the findings of Ernst and Loth will be confirmed. Their conclusions seem to me important and sensible—probably too sensible for the present American mood." Bruce Bliven

+ New Repub 127:20 D 22 '52 550w

"This is all well enough, as far as it goes. Now what we need is a book on the hard core of American Communism." E. D. Canham

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 D 21 '52 550w

"This book, as a plea for understanding of Communists rather than hysterically searching for ghostly representatives of a stereotype, is a wise and useful, although necessarily imperfect, beginning." C. W. Mills

+ N Y Times p26 N 30 '52 470w

"This brisk and unpretentious study gives the public its first opportunity to stand off and view the rank-and-file Communist with detachment."

+ New Yorker 28:201 N 22 '52 200w

"It is a pity that Messrs. Ernst and Loth have written such a sloppy book, for theirs is one of the few attempts yet made to study why people become Communists and why they break." Daniel Bell

 Sat R 35:17 D 20 '52 1050w
 Springf'd Republican p6D D 28 '52 130w

ERNST, PAUL. Bronze mermaid. 246p $2.50
 Mill 52-9694
 Detective story.

Reviewed by Drexel Drake
 Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 S 7 '52 50w

Kirkus 20:386 J1 1 '52 50w

Reviewed by James Sandoe
 N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p19 S 21 '52 50w

"Lightweight, familiar, but all very pleasant and refreshing (though I'm still impressed by Sam's walking west from Sixth to Park.)" Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p26 S 21 '52 60w

"This pleasant, briskly written and nicely constructed item isn't far from the beaten track, but if you don't expect too much of a surprise solution, you may be entertained. C plus." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 S 7 '52 40w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff
 Sat R 35:38 S 20 '52 20w

ERVINE, ST JOHN GREER. Oscar Wilde; a present time appraisal. 336p $3.50 Morrow
 B or 92 Wilde, Oscar 52-9699

A reexamination of Wilde's life and works, chiefly in the tone of adverse criticism of both his morals and much of his literary achievement.

Reviewed by Edward Wagenknecht
 Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 D 21 '52 400w

Kirkus 20:698 O 15 '52 160w

"The brilliant Irish playwright and drama critic has done a splendid critique on his fellow Irish dramatist. . . . However, when it comes to appraising his morals and sexual deviations, he is about as knowledgeable as a backward postmistress in a whistle stop. For literary use, highly recommended for literature and theatre collections." George Freedley
 + Library J 77:1805 O 15 '52 60w

"Mr. Ervine is scrupulously fair to all Wilde's good qualities, citing many examples of the moral courage of one who was intended for farce and miscast in tragedy, and going out of his way to emphasise the brilliant gifts of a classical scholar chosen by the great Mahaffy to accompany him on a tour to Greece. With all this deliberate impartiality Mr Ervine is never for a moment dull." Lawrence Haward

+ Manchester Guardian p3 D 18 '51 400w

"If there are sensible things still to be said about Oscar Wilde, not many of them get into this garrulous and slap-dash book."
 — Nation 175:453 N 15 '52 140w

Reviewed by Paul Goodman
 — New Repub 127:20 D 29 '52 700w

Reviewed by Montagu Slater
 New Statesman & Nation 42:711 D 15 '51 1050w

"A violent, random and wooden-headed tract. For about the first seven pages it promises to be fun. There is some exhilaration in tangling with a man of strong opinions and an unembarrassed talent for invective. But you very shortly begin to notice that the adjectives are out of control, that the author cannot touch upon a point which interests him without touching off a sputtering verbal fuse." Walter Kerr

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 O 19 '52 700w

"An Intemperate, sometimes wrong-headed but always fascinating book is this new study of the perennially absorbing Irish writer." Frances Winwar

+ N Y Times p50 N 16 '52 300w

New Yorker 28:133 N 1 '52 150w

"Some readers will consider this 'Life' perhaps a bit too preoccupied with Wilde's personal aberrations, though in order to appraise a personality such things must be taken into account. The book is at its best when the author gets into Wilde's work, especially the plays; at its sharpest when he contrasts Wilde and Shaw; and at its most stimulating when he lets go with the heavy artillery of his own highly personal views." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p31 D 4 '52 600w

"Far from being an objective study of Wilde the dramatist, Mr. Ervine's book is the most sustained and belligerent diatribe against Wilde, the man, that I have yet read, rivalling, in some of its more bombastic passages, the epistolary frenzies of the 'Scarlet Marquess' himself. It seems extraordinary that poor Wilde, half a century after his death, should still be capable of provoking such hysterical fury." Jocelyn Brooke

— Spec 187:864 D 21 '51 650w

Reviewed by Joseph Carroll
 Theatre Arts 36:8 D '52 320w

"Mr. St. John Ervine warms to the task of levelling his man down with a vehemence that could have been seasonable just over half a century ago, and is saved from being ludicrous only by a worse fault, a want of justice. While adding nothing to what is known, he displays Wilde as generally inept. As a saving grace, a rare compliment is paid to Wilde's staunch physical courage, to his moral persistence, and the flecks of genius in his talent. And when Mr. St. John Ervine speaks of theatrical matters and their nuances, the voice of authority must be acknowledged; his destructive attention to the plays is among the more reasonably written parts of the study."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p10 Ja 4 '52 650w

ESHBACH, OVID WALLACE, ed. Handbook of engineering fundamentals; prepared by a staff of specialists. 2d ed $10 Wiley

620.2 Engineering—Handbooks, manuals, etc. 52-2356

"A good share of the book has been rewritten and brought up to date by a staff of specialists. Since the publication of the first edition in 1936 [Book Review Digest 1936], this has been an excellent general reference book in engineering." Booklist

Booklist 49:35 S 15 '52

"Because there is enough material not duplicated in any other individual handbook and because it is sufficiently well presented and organized, this book should prove useful to persons desiring a ready reference of theory and data in a single volume rather than relying on a number of sources. This should be particularly true for engineers engaged in design work." J. B. O'Hara

+ Chem & Eng N 30:3976 S 22 '52 200w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
 Library J 77:1815 O 15 '52 50w

"A comprehensive handbook designed for use by engineers in all branches of engineering. . . . In this edition some of the sections have been reorganized, and all of them revised to some extent. A fair number have been completely rewritten."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 37:55 J1 '52

"Largely rewritten, brought up to date, and expanded by about 250 pages, the present edition of Eshbach's Handbook will not disappoint those who are familiar with the excellent reputation of the first edition of 1936."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:334 S '52 200w

ETHRIDGE, WILLIE (SNOW) (MRS MARK FOSTER ETHRIDGE). Let's talk Turkey. 252p $3 Vanguard

956.1 Turkey—Social life and customs

52-6776

The freighter on which the Ethridges planned to return to America from the Near

ETHRIDGE, W. S.—Continued

East, was unexpectedly delayed and as a result the author, her husband, and twelve year old David spent a number of weeks learning about Turkey. This book is a record of their experiences set down in gay and informal fashion.

Booklist 48:319 Je 1 '52

Bookmark 11:206 Je '52 30w

"No matter how often the reader is annoyed by the gay and flippant style of Willie Snow Ethridge, he will finish her last chapter with a bit of longing for more of the same." Mason Warner

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 My 25 '52 350w

Reviewed by J. H. Hoagland

Christian Science Monitor p11 My 1 '52 550w

"Unsubdued, always observant, willing to listen and learn, this tireless tourist manages the human touches that make this a Turkish delight."

+ Kirkus 20:246 Ap 1 '52 170w

"The casualness is deceptive. Mrs. Ethridge is a more perceptive observer than she would have you believe. Recommended." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 77:715 Ap 15 '52 140w

Reviewed by T. J. Hamilton

Nation 174:585 Je 14 '52 600w

"There is not a statistic in the book and no analysis of Turkish politics or military strength, but there is a surprising amount of general information about the country, information which Mrs. Ethridge slips in so deftly as to make its absorption painless." Ralph Chapman

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p25 My 11 '52 450w

"Anyone harboring the notion that the wife of a newspaper publisher, when accompanying her husband to a foreign land, dutifully tags behind at impressive receptions, functions, and interviews is obviously not acquainted with Willie Snow Ethridge. Once again Mrs. Ethridge, writing a light and spirited memoir of travel, has given a humorous account of a man's enforced adjustment to his wife's tireless curiosity—a pastime sometimes known as sight-seeing." Robert Knittle

+ N Y Times p20 My 25 '52 370w

"Something to tell the girls back home is what Mrs. Ethridge keeps in mind on her trips, something that is informative but diverting as well. And, because she knows her audience, she can be coy and whimsical to her heart's desire." J. V.

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Jl 27 '52 260w

ETS, MRS MARIE (HALL). Beasts and nonsense [pictures by the author]. 64p $2 Viking 52-13290

Nonsense verse about animals in the zoo and out of it. Illustrated in black and white.

"Very funny pencil drawings of lumbering, leering animals in all states of activity and emotion go with sporadically rhyming verses, the humor of which hits peaks only intermittently and may well appeal to adults than children."

+ Kirkus 20:500 Ag 15 '52 110w

"Children will, no doubt, love it. Easy to read." Phyllis Fenner

+ Library J 77:1906 N 1 '52 50w

"An elegant book! We expect it to appeal even more widely than Mr. Belloc's nonsense books which are so much more neatly polished." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p6 N 16 '52 130w

"There are, to be sure, some limping lines, but the quick twists of absurdity, the unexpected rhymes more than redeem these." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p32 O 26 '52 110w

"All of Marie Ets's picture books bring satisfaction to a reviewer and infinite pleasure to the children. . . The end-papers, with all the animals riding on the back of a whale, is as choice a picture as Marie Ets has ever drawn. We can only hope that many many little boys and girls will find this book under their Christmas tree."

+ Sat R 35:46 N 15 '52 90w

EVANOFF, VLAD. Natural fresh water fishing baits; il. by the author. 98p $1.50 Barnes, A.S. 799.1 Fishing Agr 52-419

Practical advice on various types of bait: earthworms, minnows, land and water insects, and prepared bait; and how to obtain and use them. Contains a chapter on raising bait for profit. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 48:266 Ap 15 '52

Reviewed by Bob Becker

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ag 3 '52 60w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 77:796 My 1 '52 30w

EVANS, BENJAMIN IFOR. Language of Shakespeare's plays. 190p $3 Ind. univ. press 822.33 Shakespeare, William—Style [52-2948]

"[The author] examines the plays one by one, in approximate chronological order, and by copious illustration attempts to show the variety and flexibility within a given play, and its contribution to the ordered development of Shakespeare's powers. The book is not addressed to the specialist, but is rather an invitation to follow a course of reading through the plays. The sonnets and poems are not mentioned, nor is Professor Evans concerned with the Elizabethan background." New Statesman & Nation

"In a brief review one can only say that Mr Evans's survey is a distinctive and even an original contribution to criticism and then proceed merely to name some of its more prominent features. . . In general Mr Evans is aware that Shakespeare's language is seldom mechanical enough to be allegorical and not rigid enough to be a symbol. Hence his examination of Shakespeare's words is always alive to its varied capacities and to its ultimate purpose—namely, to serve one or other of the indispensable requirements of drama." H. B. Charlton

+ Manchester Guardian p4 F 15 '52 550w

Reviewed by Henry Popkin

New Repub 127:23 Jl 14 '52 230w

New Statesman & Nation 43:225 F 23 '52 200w

Reviewed by G. B. Harrison

Sat R 35:28 Je 14 '52 110w

Times [London] Lit Sup p206 Mr 21 '52 1000w

EVANS, DAVID OWEN. Social romanticism in France, 1830-1848; with a selective critical bibliography. 149p $3 Oxford

840.9 Romanticism. French literature—History and criticism. Social problems in literature [52-8672]

"Consists of an essay on the social doctrines of the leading French Romantic writers of the period 1830-48 and a forty-page selective bibliography of French socialism from Saint Simon to Proudhon. The author, an Oxford scholar, believes that the Romantics, though lacking the analytic tools to serve their idealism, demonstrated on the whole an 'extraordinary blend of social realism and prophetic genius.'" Am Pol Sci R

Am Pol Sci R 46:602 Je '52 40w

"This small volume, so rich in new perspectives, has a useful selective critical bibliography; for scholars and teachers it will prove a long-needed companion to E. M. Grant's French Poetry and Modern Industry; for any reader it provides continuous new light on the subject of romantic socialism." Robert Finch

+ Canadian Forum 32:71 Je '52 490w

"A great deal of this book is pioneer work, so it is the more of a pity that it is too short. Because it is too short Dr Evans is forced to describe complicated social philosophies in a few sentences and while he is not unjust his succinctness is sometimes misleading. Brevity in academic productions is rarely a fault, but it is one here. As they say in the Union: 'Dr Evans must speak again.'" D. W. Brogan
+ Manchester Guardian p4 F 19 '52 600w

"In this sound, well-documented survey of French social doctrines, Dr. Evans does much to destroy the popular conception of Romantic ideology." Joanna Richardson
+ Spec 188:758 Je 6 '52 380w

"Dr. Evans would have done better to distinguish more consistently than he does between the liberal romantics like Lamartine and Hugo (at least in his earlier days) and the socialist romantics like Blanc and Proudhon. . . By blurring significant differences the author misses many of the nuances of their thought. But his essay is scholarly and stimulating, and his detailed critical bibliography is extremely useful."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p123 F 15 '52 700w

EVANS, GEORGE WESLEY. Slash ranch hounds. 244p il $4.50 Univ. of N.Mex. press 739.2 Hunting, Hounds Agr51-554

"Dub Evans is a New Mexico rancher, from Texas. He tells of riding with hounds after wild cattle as well as game animals. He has guided many men, some of them with writing ability, on hunts after lions and bears, and the latter part of his book is a kind of anthology of hunting stories." N Y Times

Booklist 48:167 Ja 15 '52

"Recommended." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 77:441 Mr 1 '52 40w

"It is an honest book, just as everybody who knows Dub Evans knows that he is an honest man." J. F. Dobie

+ N Y Times p46 N 25 '51 380w

EVANS, MARY. Better clothes for your money. 224p il $2.95 Lippincott 646.3 Clothing and dress 52-5088

"This manual tells how to determine quality in clothes, and how to get better value dollar for dollar. The author has been Professor of Home Economics at Teachers College, Columbia University for thirty-five years. Part I gives general information about different kinds of stores, the best seasons to buy, factors determining prices, labels, characteristics of yarns, fibers, weaves, knitted fabrics, finishes, and what signs indicate well made clothes. Part II is an alphabetical guide to apparel and accessories, from bathing suits to vests." (Publisher's note) Index.

Booklist 48:276 My 1 '52

Bookmark 11:206 Je '52 20w

"This is one of the best 'guide' books you can buy. It is a 'must' for every household." Rea Seeger

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 Ap 27 '52 150w

"Information on sizes, materials, styles, cut and care is included all along the line. . . A steady item."

+ Kirkus 20:108 F 1 '52 100w

EVANS, MRS VIRGINIA (MICHAEL). Lovely season. 312p $3.50 Appleton
52-9805

Story of a young married couple whose happy life together is almost crushed when it is discovered that the wife has epilepsy. Eventually they win thru to a better understanding of themselves and their predicament.

"Affecting, absorbing, this is both a protest and a plea with a particularly likeable and recognizable young couple as the case in point."

+ Kirkus 20:201 Mr 15 '52 220w

"Perhaps because of its very weight, Miss Evans attacks this situation in a manner which is simple, occasionally naive and quite different from her earlier vein of writing. Psychological motivations are important to the novel, but one feels that her analysis of them is far too superficial. . . Nevertheless she is effective. She presents her problem in dialogue which is neither witty nor profound, but goes directly to the point. And in spite of all its obviousness, she has written what is a touching book that throws some light on a problem seldom discussed in literature." Anne Brooks

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 J1 6 '52 450w

"Miss Evans mingles horror with the distractions and preoccupations of everyday life in a convincing way. She shows us the cruelty and greed of the curious gaping crowd, drinking up the details of another's degradation, as she shows us the chit-chat in the office and the antics of the cat; and there is spiritual despair. Since every tenth person in the country is personally concerned with the subject of 'The Lovely Season,' it should appeal to a large number of readers. It is a thoughtful book." Evelyn Eaton

+ N Y Times p17 Je 15 '52 500w

Sat R 35:20 J1 5 '52 230w

EVERETT, T. H. Gardening handbook. (Fawcett bk) 144p il $2.50 Sterling 635.9 Gardening Agr51-43

"Deals with trees, shrubs, flowers and vegetables, including tips on pruning, transplanting etc. Numerous photographs, diagrams and charts. Garden calendar, index." Bookmark

Booklist 48:313 Je 1 '52

Bookmark 11:207 Je '52 20w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p26 Ap 6 '52 60w

EVERNDEN, MARGERY (MRS EARL GULBRANSEN). Golden trail; il. by Lynd Ward. 179p $2.50 Random house 52-5856

In 1775 and 1776 the boy Ramón Morales was a member of the expedition to the site of the present city of San Francisco. This chronicle of Ramón's troubled adventures is for ages nine to twelve.

Booklist 48:325 Je 1 '52

"Vividly told, the story moves swiftly from Mexico through desert and mountains to the new city—bringing the color of the old Spanish west along with it. Good supplementary reading."

+ Kirkus 20:156 Mr 1 '52 120w

"Recommended for upper elementary grades and junior high. American history classes should welcome it as supplementary reading." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 77:540 Mr 15 '52 80w

"Those in California will especially like the book for its local interest. But the author who gave us such charming tales from China has not really succeeded here in a style of easy appeal to younger readers. Her opening is too complicated, and her use of detail often holds up action and makes pages unnecessarily difficult. For 'good readers,' however, it is an interesting supplement to Spanish-American pioneer history." L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ap 27 '52 140w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell

N Y Times p26 Je 8 '52 40w

"A few instances in the story make experts wince—as when Ramon insists to a friend, when the emigrant train waits on the desert: 'We are bound for our new city of San Francisco,' thus anticipating the future by 70 some years. However, Miss Evernden gives an interesting picture of the expedition, its delays, confusions and hardships, its lowering morale. In her preface she acknowledges her

EVERNDEN, MARGERY—Continued
 debt to Bolton and his translations from the Anza and Frey Pedro diaries."
 San Francisco Chronicle p20 My 11 '52
 240w

EVERYMAN'S encyclopedia [ed. by Athelstan
 Ridgway]. 3d ed. 12v II maps $27.50 Macmillan
 032 Encyclopedias and dictionaries

"Now made available in the United States by Macmillan, this British work has been published in two earlier editions. The first, published in 1913-14, and a part of Everyman's Library, was discussed in the Subscription
 Books Bulletin for July 1930; the second edition (1931-32), in the July 1931 issue. . . A descriptive circular advises that Everyman's Encyclopaedia, third edition, is 'revised and reset throughout with a vast store of new material added and many new illustrations. In fact one fifth of the material is entirely new.' It is said to contain 'more than 50,000 articles' in which 'every conceivable subject is covered' and to be 'designed to meet the average person's needs —and budgets.' The aim of the set is suggested in the claims that it will help the reader toward 'a richer enjoyment of life' and toward social and business success; that 'children will especially appreciate having the opportunity to consult these easily handled volumes for help in their school work,' and that the illustrations, maps, and diagrams 'will stir their interest and lead them on to wider knowledge. . . Main entries are arranged alphabetically letter by letter. Their pronunciation is not indicated, but the Latin and Greek origins of some words are included. Cross references appear as main entries and within, and at the end of, articles.
 Selected bibliographies are provided for many subjects." Subscription Bks Bul

Reviewed by J. R. Newman
 New Repub 125:19 O 1 '51 400w

"It is easy to read, in that the information one seeks can be readily found, and, in so far as we have tested it, it is accurate and up to date. The whole thing being within its limits so well-produced, it is a pity to have to report that too high a proportion of its illustrations, however, are tasteless and ill-produced. Having said that, there is nothing but praise to add, and congratulations to the publishers for their courage, and to the editors and contributors for their intelligent labours in producing a work of such great potential value to a nation whose future depends not only on their courage but on their informed good sense."

+ — New Statesman & Nation 41:48 Ja 13
 '51 260w

Spec 184:744 D 22 '50 190w

"Because of its generally mediocre half-tone illustrations, small print, British emphasis of content, lack of index, and apparently numerous incomplete or inefficient see references, Everyman's cannot be considered a satisfactory substitute for larger standard encyclopedias.
 Because of these factors, and because its reading level is frequently unsuited to those of school age, it will not prove a satisfactory replacement for children's encyclopedias. Despite the limitations noted above, Everyman's Encyclopaedia, third edition, presents a large amount of useful and accurate information, in durable format, at a low price. In many subjects it is satisfactorily up to date and sufficiently complete for the needs of the general adult reader. It is therefore recommended as a good choice in its price field for adult use in the home and in those libraries that can afford to provide supplementary material obviously intended primarily for British consumption."

+ — Subscription Bks Bul 23:1 Ja '52 2250w

EWBANK, HENRY LEE, and LAWTON, SHERMAN PAXTON. Broadcasting; radio and television. 528p II $4.50 Harper

792.93 [791.4] Radio broadcasting. Television broadcasting 52-5432

Considers the preparation and production of broadcast television programs, and the evaluation of listener response. Contains photographs, exercises, glossary, bibliography and indexes.

Booklist 48:312 Je 1 '52

"Thorough, nontechnical volume."

+ Bookmark 11:231 JI '52 20w

Wis Lib Bul 48:167 JI '52

EWEN, DAVID. Complete book of 20th century music. 498p $7.50 Prentice-Hall

780.15 Music—Analysis, interpretation, appreciation. Musicians 52-9540

"The first book in any language to analyze today's musical compositions in all the major forms. . . The author has felt that a convenient volume embracing at once the leading composers of our time and their most important works—and the major trends, movements, and techniques that influenced these composers and works—would be welcome." (Pref) Arrangement is alphabetical by composer. Index.

Booklist 49:100 N 15 '52

Kirkus 20:532 Ag 15 '52 100w

"Once again the author provides libraries with needed reference material written in readable style—again gleaned from secondary sources such as reviews of performances and program notes as well as dictionaries and other books on contemporary music." C. K. Miller
 + Library J 77:1512 S 15 '52 110w

EWEN, DAVID, and SLONIMSKY, NICOLAS.
 Fun with musical games and quizzes. 168p II
 $2.95 Prentice-Hall

780.7 Music—Examinations, questions, etc.
 52-8589

"Seems to be particularly suited for use with young people, whether in groups or singly, although adults whose knowledge of things musical is not too extensive might well enjoy it, too. All manner of quizzes and games based on obvious models (cryptographical, mathematical, association, and recognition problems; cross-word puzzles, parlor games, char-ades, etc.). Answers are at the end." Library
 J

Booklist 48:355 JI 1 '52

Reviewed by Rod Nordell

Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 5 '52
 270w

"For the amateur not the professional."

Kirkus 20:274 Ap 15 '52 90w

"An accurate and lively compilation." C. K.
 Miller

+ Library J 77:1204 JI '52 70w

Springf'd Republican p5D JI 20 '52 130w

EWING, ALFRED CYRIL. Fundamental questions of philosophy. 260p $3.50 Macmillan

100 Philosophy 52-6296

"A comprehensible explanation of the fundamental concepts of philosophy, intended for university students who have just begun the study of philosophy, and others who wish to acquire by private reading some idea of what philosophy is and of the great topics with which it deals." Booklist

Booklist 48:309 Je 1 '52

"The book is an excellent introduction to the study of philosophical problems. It is written primarily for college students, but its usefulness is not confined to this group. Anyone who thinks seriously about the important issues in the life of man and the world can read it with profit." C. H. Patterson

+ Christian Century 69:1063 S 17 '52 900w

"The book is written in the author's well-known, painstaking manner, with many shrewd critical arguments. There is an avoidance of obscurity and an evident desire to be fair even to the most repugnant points of view. The book makes no concession to the demands of professional publicists that philosophical problems be closely tied to their preoccupations. Moreover, no student will put it down in the belief that any metaphysical question has been definitively answered by any metaphysical doctrine, or that any such question has been so answered to the satisfaction of all whose opinion need be considered. These are virtues; and yet, without being too perverse, it is possible to feel both that something is missing which ought to be present and that something is present which ought to be missing." J. M. Hinton

Hibbert J 50:409 J1 '52 1300w

"The book tends to fall between two stools. While it seeks to give a general survey of some of the main problems of philosophy, the place of reason in life . . . the treatment is not detailed enough to be of much value even to students. On the other hand, while the author praises the virtue of clarity and rightly blames many philosophers for making the subject unnecessarily obscure by their manner of presentation, some of the discussions are, in fact, difficult to follow."

Times [London] Lit Sup p841 D 28 '51
900w

EYRE, KATHERINE (WIGMORE) Song of a thurp; ill. by Stephani and Edward Godwin. 251p $3 Oxford
52-9430

A novel for older girls. It is the story of Margaret and Edward Plantagenet, who became outcasts when Richard III, their uncle, ascended to the throne. It is also the story of the little princes in the Tower, cousins of Margaret and Edward. Caxton, the printer, helps Margaret and Edward, but is unable to save the imprisoned princes.

Booklist 49:51 O 1 '52

"A well-written historical romance." B. J. Thompson
+ Cath World 176:207 D '52 20w

"Teen-age readers who responded to the moving tale of Lady Jane Grey in the author's 'Another Spring' will find equal appeal and an absorbing story in her new book." Polly Goodwin
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 O 12 '52 170w

"Written with perception and charm as well as from sound research, this can be confidently recommended to teen-age girls." V. H.
+ Horn Bk 28:328 O '52 160w

"Good period trappings for a romantic story, with enough of young love for the early and middle teens."

+ Kirkus 20:558 S 1 '52 120w

"The delightful style carries the reader back to the period. Recommended for older girls." C. W. Field
+ Library J 77:1668 O 1 '52 70w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p36
N 16 '52 140w

"The splendor and intrigue of palace life are beautifully drawn. Neddie, Peg and her suitor, Richard Pole, stand out as real human beings and even the subsidiary historical characters have life." L. R. Davis
+ N Y Times pt2, p 12 N 16 '52 150w

New Yorker 28:201 D 6 '52 50w

Reviewed by B. B. Thorpe

San Francisco Chronicle p3 N 16 '52
60w

F

FABBRO, MARIO DAL. How to build modern furniture; v. 1. Practical construction methods. 180p ill $6 F. W. Dodge Corp, 119 W. 40th St, N.Y. 18
684.1 Furniture (51-14782)

"The older furniture books do not include information on a number of special operations that are of interest in the construction of modern furniture. Examples are joints between wood and glass, metal and wood, and joints in plastic materials. These operations and a host of others are covered in this book. There is little discussion, but there are well over 1,000 drawings. . . The greater part of the volume is devoted to basic operations." N Y New Tech Bks

"A book of good principles and sound ideas. Contains many 'pointers' not found in books on conventional furniture." R. R. Hawkins
+ Library J 77:825 My 15 '52 10w

N Y New Tech Bks 37:6 Ja '52

FABELL, WALTER C. Nature was first! pictures by Flavia Gág. [32p] $2 McKay

590 Zoology—Juvenile literature. Animals, Habits and behavior of 52-7550

"With lively pen-and-ink sketches and brief paragraphs of explanation, each green page or pair of pages in this picture book shows how a bird, an animal, an insect or a plant came first in 'inventing' such everyday devices as showerbaths, snowshoes, fishhooks, saws, fly-traps and fans." (Horn Bk) For ages 7 to 10.

"An amusing book for children of wide age-range, who will appreciate the clever talents of these creatures." V. H.
+ Horn Bk 28:113 Ap '52 50w

Kirkus 20:154 Mr 1 '52 170w

"Entertaining to browse through, the book may also stimulate further investigation of the natural world." E. L. B.
+ N Y Times p22 Ap 13 '52 130w

FAHS, MRS SOPHIA BLANCHE (LYON). Today's children and yesterday's heritage; a philosophy of creative religious development; with an introd. by Angus H. MacLean. 224p $3 Beacon press

268 Religious education 52-5242

"This is a searching book on the religious education of children, born of more than thirty years' experience in the field. The author sets forth very clearly the differences between the natural approach to religious development and the traditional approach of authority and indoctrination. From the author's viewpoint, one's religious belief, or one's religion is the gestalt of all his smaller specific beliefs; one's faith is a philosophy of life that gathers up into one emotional whole—and sometimes, although rarely, into a reasonable whole—all the specific beliefs one holds about many kinds of things in the many areas of life." (Survey) No index.

Booklist 48:309 Je 1 '52

"Mrs. Fahs' experience as a teacher has been richly meaningful. Her experiences at Riverside Church, New York, make for fascinating reading. One applauds her zeal in seeking new and effective methodology. As to this book, it will be especially useful for unitarian churches which have doubtless desired a fully developed philosophical statement with regard to the teaching of their own highly cherished beliefs." K. B. Cully
+ Christian Century 69:781 J1 2 '52 750w

Reviewed by W. W. Brickman

School & Society 76:264 O 25 '52 110w

"The philosophy set forth is well documented by conclusions from the physical, biological, social, and psychological sciences. There is a convincing quality about it. The reader shares the author's challenge of a theology that sets dualism and conflict at the heart of things. And the fitness of the new view in a world which is striving to be democratic and to create a society of brotherhood cannot be disputed. Many readers will doubtless turn away from its truth because it is much easier to follow the old ways." L. E. Woodward
+ Survey 88:182 Ap '52 400w

"As the author puts it: 'A new religious era is emerging from the womb of yesterday, and our youth should be intelligently prepared to help in its birth.' This book is a contribution to just that. It can be commended to all who are concerned with the religious education of children."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:141 Je '52 180w

FAIR, A. A., pseud. See Gardner, E. S.

FAIRCHILD, FRED ROGERS, and SHELLY, THOMAS J. Understanding our free economy: an introduction to economics. 589p il $3.96 Van Nostrand

330 Economics 52-6377

"A textbook for beginners, giving the essential facts and principles of economics, with their application to our American environment and, more briefly, to other (foreign) economic systems. Questions, Problems, Readings at end of chapters." (Library J) Glossary. Index.

"This is a new high school textbook in economics. As such it should not even merit a review in general publications devoted to new books. This book, however, is historic. It sets a new pattern away from the socialist, communist, and Fair Deal propaganda formula in economics common to virtually every high school social science textbook published in the last 25 years." Frank Hughes

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 Ag 10 '52 450w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross

Library J 77:2000 N 15 '52 20w

FAIRCHILD, JOHNSON E., ed. Women, society and sex [a Cooper Union symposium, by Margaret Mead and others]. 255p $4 Sheridan

301.424 [396] Woman

"The chapters of this book were originally planned and delivered as lectures on the Cooper Union Forum series entitled Women." (Foreword) Partial contents: One aspect of male and female, by Margaret Mead; Women in the family, by Ralph Linton; Women's changing role in marriage, by Lena Levine; "Momism", by R. J. Wentworth-Rohr; Women in industry, by Mark Starr; Women in politics, by R. B. Morris; Women and fashion, by Bettina Ballard. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Olive Carruthers

Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 Je 15 '52 140w

"The book is of interest to both men and women, and parts of it may make the reader overhaul his thinking about women's place in the world." Lucy Freeman

+ N Y Times p11 J1 27 '52 170w

Springf'd Republican p6D Ag 24 '52 250w

FALLADA, HANS, pseud. See Ditzen, R.

FALLAW, WESNER. Toward spiritual security. 192p $3 Westminster press

261.8 Church and social problems. Family. Psychology, Pastoral 52-7117

"Dr. Fallaw, who is professor of religious education in Andover Newton Theological School, finds the bulwark of security in the individual's membership in 'groups.' Of all social groups, the church and the family are the most significant. The discussion turns largely upon bringing these two into more effective cooperation with each other and with the community, and utilizing their resources for the development of mature, stable and spiritually secure personalities." Christian Century

Christian Century 69:1410 D 3 '52 60w

"There are important suggestions and stimulating insights even for those who are not in a position to adopt the suggested techniques, and for pastors, religious educators and professional men interested in making the church a more vital force in American life."

+ Kirkus 20:634 S 15 '52 190w

"An intelligent and stimulating approach which should interest all social workers, especially those working in the Protestant religious field." G. W. Wakefield

+ Library J 77:1897 N 1 '52 70w

FANER, ROBERT DUNN. Walt Whitman and opera. 249p $6 Univ. of Pa. press

811 Whitman, Walt

51-7724

"Professor Faner undertakes to sound the depths of Whitman's inspiration in music, specifically opera. His debt to other sources, such as nature and oratory, is mentioned but most of the volume is given over to amplifying the thesis that the forms and content of opera directly influenced the forms and content of the poetry." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

"The style is graceful, and the volume should appeal to anyone with the slightest interest in Whitman—musician or non-musician." C. K. Miller

+ Library J 77:146 Ja 15 '52 140w

"Dr. Faner's version of the musical inspiration of Whitman's verse is well documented and carries conviction so far as it confines itself to the general, the suggestive, and the metaphorical. . . . But we still know far too little concerning Whitman's outward and inward life in the decade preceding 1855 to establish any dogmatic scheme of inspirational priorities. Faner's argument, however, must be considered by all serious students of Whitman's life and works, and should be of much interest to anyone concerned with the interrelations of music and poetry." D. H. Mugridge

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 9:403 Je '52 750w

"There is excitement even in Professor Faner's scholarship: the excitement of young Whitman as he went from opera to opera and from concert to concert, as he began to understand the full beauty, first of the human voice and, later, of the orchestra, and the excitement of observing how all this comes back into his poetry, as subject-matter, as words written with the capabilities of the voice always in mind, as construction. There is, too, much information on other things than Whitman's art in Walt Whitman and Opera, so that it is a source-book for the history of music in America during the middle years of the nineteenth century."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p152 F 29 '52 850w

"Many students of Whitman have noted casually his often-acknowledged indebtedness to music, and occasional papers have been written on special phases of this influence. Mr. Faner is, however, the first to make a systematic and exhaustive study of Whitman's familiarity with Italian opera, particularly in the eighteen-fifties, and of its effect on his poetry."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:24 Mr '52 240w

FANTASY AND SCIENCE FICTION, MAGAZINE OF. See Magazine of fantasy and science fiction. Best from Fantasy and science fiction

FANTE, JOHN. Full of life. 177p $2.75 Little 52-5518

The story of a first pregnancy which is full of wit and wisdom. The narrator, called by the author's name, has just bought a house in Los Angeles. One of the first things that happens is that the pregnant wife falls thru the kitchen floor, which has been weakened by termites. This calls for the presence of the narrator's father, "the best bricklayer in California." Complication follows complication, all told in gay fashion, until the arrival of the baby.

Bookmark 11:210 Je '52 30w

"It's a swell book for mothers and fathers, for writers and readers, for almost everybody on our great, big revolving stage of woe and laughter." Joe Dever

+ Commonweal 56:155 My 16 '52 550w

+ Kirkus 20:149 F 15 '52 200w

"Full of Life,' by John Fante, a young author who is currently writing for the movies, starts out to be a witty and charming account of a man's adjustment to his wife's pregnancy. The book ends with the birth of the child, leaving the reader touched, and, at the same time, somewhat surprised that the significant religious experience should have been coupled with such a lighthearted, charming account of pregnancy." Joanna Spencer

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Ap 27 '52 360w

"'Full of Life' is touching as well as funny, neither wise-cracking nor ponderous. Not everybody could live on that level of emotional velocity, but the Fantes seem built for it." Jane Cobb

+ N Y Times p15 Je 15 '52 230w

"Now and then a novel comes along which is in danger of being underestimated. When that happens it is a special pleasure to call attention to it. Such a novel is John Fante's 'Full of Life.'" J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 My 8 '52 700w

"The more you read, even if occasionally you laugh out loud, you realize this short novel is quite a serious book. . . Mr. Fante, as he avoids the horrors of cuteness in dealing with his comic effects, avoids pretentiousness in handling his serious theme; nor does he let himself be tempted by the images of his Italian background (the parents' archaic and picturesque beliefs) into building some pompous myth of motherhood. He is restrained and persuasive." P. M. Pasinetti

+ Sat R 35:17 Ap 26 '52 800w

Springf'd Republican p8D Je 29 '52 70w

FARBER, EDUARD. Evolution of chemistry; a history of its ideas, methods, and materials. 349p il $6 Ronald

540.9 Chemistry—History 52-9465

"The book is divided into three parts. The rather short first section covers the entire development of chemistry to the end of the eighteenth century. The second part is a more detailed consideration of the developments of the nineteenth century, and the last section describes the chief industrial and practical developments of the present day. The work is thus essentially a short history of modern chemistry." (Chem & Eng N) Index.

Booklist 49:99 N 15 '52

"Should be particularly valuable to graduate students for its explanation of what lies immediately behind the developments they are studying in their general courses. This, in turn, should stimulate many to look more deeply into the earlier concepts and ideas which, as Farber points out, are the fundamental bases of our modern theories." H. M. Leicester

+ Chem & Eng N 30:4984 N 24 '52 200w

FARIS, ROBERT E. LEE. Social psychology. 420p $5 Ronald

301.15 Social psychology 52-6203

"This has been written for use as a text in college courses in social psychology. The major purpose is to show the essential unity of the knowledge that has been acquired and to emphasize the areas of fundamental agreement in the field rather than one particular school of thought." (School & Society) Index.

Reviewed by G. J. Hinkle

Ann Am Acad 284:201 N '52 440w

School & Society 75:285 My 3 '52 30w

FARLEY, WALTER. Black Stallion's filly; il. by Milton Menasco. 309p $2 Random house

52-7216

The fifth in this series of stories for grades seven to ten features Black Minx, daughter of Black Stallion.

"Mr. Farley knows his field well and he tells a good, swift story." M. F. Kieran

+ Atlantic 190:102 D '52 50w

Booklist 49:19 S 1 '52

Kirkus 20:376 Jl 1 '52 70w

"The story is packed with suspense, filled with information about the Kentucky Derby and the life of horse and trainer in the months preceding that great sport classic. For junior-high-school boys and girls who love horses or those who have followed the Black Stallion through the series." E. H. Speer

+ Library J 77:1312 Ag '52 60w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p16 N 16 '52 50w

"Since the appearance in 1941 of Walter Farley's first book, 'The Black Stallion,' readers have been clamoring for more and more of his thrilling horse tales. His fifth and latest book is certain to run nose to nose in popularity with its predecessors." Marjorie Burger

+ N Y Times p12 Ag 31 '52 150w

FARQUHARSON, ARTHUR SPENSER LOAT. Marcus Aurelius: his life and his world; ed. by D. A. Rees. 154p il $2 Salloch

B or 92 Aurelius Antoninus, Marcus, emperor of Rome A51-7635

"Of the eight chapters the first ('The Age of the Antonines') is a brief general essay; the fourth ('The Rule of T. Antoninus Pius, and Marriage of his Daughter Annia Faustina, A.D. 145-61') deals with Antoninus Pius; the sixth and seventh treat 'Literature of the Age;' and the last comprises a sympathetic study of 'The Religion of Stoicism,' illustrated, to be sure, from the writings of Marcus Aurelius. The appendix, 'The Christian Churches under Marcus,' by Rees (chiefly documentation) and a simple index complete the volume." Am Hist R

"The essays are appreciative, written by a man upon whom the Antonines made a lasting impression and who reveals in his own character something of the Stoic at his best. Farquharson rates Pius on a level with Aurelius; nor is his admiration for Lucian moderate. There is nothing controversial and the result is a pleasant little volume by an attractive writer about attractive people. Rees is a competent editor." M. F. McGregor

+ Am Hist R 57:721 Ap '52 320w

Manchester Guardian p4 Je 19 '51 230w

"When a scholar of the late A. S. L. Farquharson's perception and learning writes a book about Marcus Aurelius, whose 'Meditations' he edited with such distinction, it is obvious that it will find its way into every serious library in the land. It was to be hoped too that it would also contain the kind of writing that would make it must reading for even the amateur lover of history. . . Yet whether because the manuscript was left uncompleted or he just did not have the knack, such a book did not result. 'Marcus Aurelius' is an invaluable collection of scholarly footnotes, but the life of the great pagan still remains to be written." T. C. Chubb

N Y Times p20 D 2 '51 280w

FARRELL, JAMES THOMAS. Yet other waters. 414p $3.75 Vanguard

52-11116

This is the third volume in the author's semi-autobiographical series of novels, relating the story of the Chicago-born writer Bernard Carr. The final pages of this deal with Carr's break with the Communist party. Earlier novels in the series were Bernard Clare and The Road Between (Book Review Digest 1046,1949.)

"In this book, as in all of Farrell's work, the writing is on the whole graceless. What comes thru, to give strength to the clumsy prose, is a feeling of complete, often artless sincerity." Richard Sullivan

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p22 N 16 '52 200w

"In a day when some writers are apt to run over with ornate prose, when the better at least try to employ deftness, Mr. Farrell plods. As if the word had not yet reached him,

FARRELL, J. T.—Continued
he wearies the reader with the most unadorned, unimaginative writing." J. A. Lynch
— Commonweal 57:239 D 5 '52 230w

Kirkus 20:569 S 1 '52 170w

Reviewed by E. F. Walbridge
Library J 77:1655 O 1 '52 70w
Nation 175:535 D 6 '52 80w

Reviewed by Malcolm Cowley
New Repub 127:17 D 1 '52 1600w

"What sets 'Yet Other Waters' apart from the other books is not its virtues as a personal chronicle so much as its honesty as an historical picture of radical intellectual life in New York in the 1930s, and the record of one writer's successful struggle against Communist intellectual tyranny." Herbert Kupferberg

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 N 23 '52 420w

"Here and there is a scene strong or moving. . . But the people with whom Farrell is mostly concerned are not worth his effort and he seems to have known this as he wrote." H. S.

— + N Y Times p49 N 16 '52 410w

"A good deal of the book is taken up with political discussion. . . Bernard is a petty, self-obsessed young man, but Mr. Farrell manages an interesting, if overlong, story about him."

— + New Yorker 28:130 N 1 '52 60w

"The period is past and dead, but this study of the extreme Leftist mind remains worthwhile in its own right. The novel is not, however, a mere fictionalized study of a political subject. It is equally a study of Bernard Carr. . . Mr. Farrell is a curious phenomenon. Often he writes badly. . . Except when he lugs the reader mercilessly through an endlessly detailed recital of the incidents in the short life of an ordinary man, his characters tend to be cardboard, two-dimensional. This last effect is due in part to his apparently not yet having mastered—or, perhaps, accepted—the techniques for working from inside, instead of from outside, expositively, of his characters. When he does get inside Carr, for instance, Carr comes to life." Oliver La Farge

— + Sat R 35:17 N 1 '52 500w

Reviewed by Paul Pickrel
Yale R n s 42:18 winter '53 100w

FARRER, AUSTIN. Study in St Mark. 398p $5.50 Oxford

226.3 Bible. New Testament—St Mark
52-12001

"In Dr Farrer's view St Mark tells a story without serious rival as a Gospel history, but he tells it in a peculiar manner that requires a special method of elucidation. Dr Farrer's book is an attempt to lay bare the configuration of the Gospel in all its subtle tones and undertones. The key to its proper understanding is, he maintains, that the evangelist's mind, working upon the historical traditions of the sayings and life of Christ, conveys that history in symbol and prefiguration. It was as natural for him to compose his Gospel in this way as it would be for a modern historian to write with due regard to cause and effect. Under the direct inspiration of the Holy Spirit, St Mark achieved a definite pattern into which the events of Christ's life have been woven with surprising appropriateness." (Hibbert J) Index.

"The skill with which St Mark has succeeded in arranging the evangelical tradition, making it echo and re-echo with theological meaning, is matched only by the skill with which our author unravels the evangelist's riddles. Occasionally, of course, even Dr Farrer is at a stand. . . From the wealth of argument and illustration with which Dr Farrer adorns his thesis it is difficult to withhold admiration. Here and there his correspondences 'click' with almost uncanny precision. Here and there they seem far-fetched." H. J. McLachlan

— + Hibbert J 50:412 J1 '52 900w

"This is certainly an important book, though many will be irritated by its ingenious juggling. I am not convinced that Farrer's pattern in the healing stories is not an imposition; it is very subtle and artificial. He properly insists that the form-critic must wait for the interpreter of St. Mark, but the unity of the Gospel can be demonstrated without his elaborate scheme. On the whole, a brilliant tour de force." George Johnston
+ J Religion 32:217 J1 '52 550w

"Recommended only for the largest public libraries and for theological libraries." E. H. Weeks

Library J 77:1498 S 15 '52 130w

Times [London] Lit Sup p9 Ap 11 '52 900w

FARRINGTON, GEORGE HOWARD. Fundamentals of automatic control. 285p il $5 Wiley

620.78 Control equipment [51-14734]

"A general introductory treatment addressed primarily to engineers who are interested in automatic control from the application standpoint. It is devoted mainly to the analysis of problems in automatic control and to the basic controlling operations. Although the emphasis is on mathematical analysis, the mathematics are not beyond the knowledge of the average mechanical or electrical engineers. Controlling mechanisms are described only incidentally and there are no descriptions of specific applications." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

"Readers who have read other introductions without getting a thorough grasp of the subject may find this one useful because of its somewhat different method of presentation." R. R. Hawkins

Library J 77:60 Ja 1 '52 100w

N Y New Tech Bks 37:1 Ja '52

FAST, HOWARD MELVIN. Fallen angel, by Walter Ericson [pseud]. 181p $2.50 Little 52-5001

"N. Y. cost accountant is involved in flurry of thuggery after boss's out-of-window demise." Sat R

"In the suspense field, satisfactory."

Kirkus 19:648 N 1 '51 80w

Reviewed by James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p19 Ja 27 '52 60w

"At times the decision of a 'serious' writer to invade the mystery field has been a cause for loud rejoicing, but the advent among murder-mongers of Howard Fast (under the pseudonym of Walter Ericson) is something short of sensational. [The book] has a few adroitly contrived pursuit scenes in the Hitchcock manner, but a limp, tired plot, an equally tired set of stock characters, rather heavy prose and unlikely dialogue, and a general air of never quite making sense." Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p16 Ja 20 '52 120w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p10 Ja 20 '52 80w

"Too cosmic." Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 35:31 Ja 26 '52 40w

FAST, HOWARD MELVIN. Spartacus. 363p $2.50 Citadel

"As material for his latest novel, Howard Fast has taken the slave revolts that troubled the Roman Empire just before the coming of Christ. His dramatic tale is of Spartacus, the Thracian slave, who led the gladiators and slaves of Capua into an almost successful overthrow of cruel and decadent Roman masters." Sat R

"The author's novel falters at the beginning from what appears to be a conscious attempt to parallel the past and the present, so that Rome does not at first emerge as a vivid scene, but as a tool. However, as the story develops the author's gift for story telling triumphs and the reader is carried away by the skilled handling of this dramatic moment in history."

C. J. Roth

+ Library J 77:437 Mr 1 '52 140w

Reviewed by Harvey Swados

Nation 174:331 Ap 5 '52 430w

"Occasionally (when he is describing the inferno of a slave bivouac in the desert, the torments of a crucified gladiator, the life-and-death struggle in the arena) Mr. Fast's pages take on a brilliance that recalls his earlier work. But the Q. E. D. he proposes simply does not square with the geometry of history."

Melville Heath

N Y Times p22 F 3 '52 410w

"As an historian Mr. Fast is, as usual, persuasive. He has supplied all the homely details and evidences of careful research which, a few years back, called forth the critical encomium 'one of America's finest writers of historical novels.' . . . The result is a good novel which may suffer from the fact that attention to Mr. Fast has shifted from the book page to the front page."

+ Sat R 35:17 Mr 8 '52 230w

Times [London] Lit Sup p271 N 7 '52 70w

FAULKNER, EDWARD HUBERT. Soil development. 232p $3 Univ. of Okla. press

631.45 Soils. Soil conservation Agr 52-414

"In his Plowman's Folly and A Second Look [Book Review Digest 1943, 1946] Faulkner described a system of ploughless farming aimed at increasing soil productivity by natural means. The present work expands upon the earlier volumes but now emphasizes underlying theories rather than actual techniques. From practical experience the author has found that his system reduces insect infestation and disease, and produces healthier crops. The book offers explanations of why this is so, explanations which may be criticized for their lack of scientific basis, but which make good sense and merit serious attention." Library J

Booklist 48:224 Mr 15 '52

Bookmark 11:154 Apr '52 40w

Reviewed by Richard Orr

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 My 18 '52 40w

"The book is written in easy, colloquial style, and for people who love the land is as fascinating as a novel." Roscoe Fleming

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Jl 30 '52 500w

Reviewed by J. E. Brown

Library J 77:525 Mr 15 '52 90w

"Ed Faulkner's writing is a functional blend of 'McGuffey's Reader' with 'Home and Farm,' and I for one would not have it otherwise. Whatever his critics may have to complain about, they cannot claim that he leaves any doubt as to what he thinks, or what he pretends to know. In this latter respect he is eminently reasonable, willing to listen to evidence, but rightly insisting that it be presented." P. B. Sears

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 Ap 27 '52 550w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ap 22 '52 140w

FAULKNER, NANCY. Rebel drums; ll. by Lee Ames. 218p $2.50 Doubleday

52-5751

The setting of this tale for grades five to eight is Colonial Virginia at the time of Bacon's Rebellion. The hero is twelve-year-old Hugh Irvin, who becomes a drummer with Bacon's volunteers, is captured by the British and later freed by his Indian friend, Chief Hawk Feather.

Booklist 48:325 Je 1 '52

"Both the period and the characters are convincing; and the chapters describing Hugh's life in the backwoods make an interesting contrast to those which tell of his days on the Hansford Plantation." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 28:239 Ag '52 120w

Kirkus 20:128 F 15 '52 120w

"Recommended for junior high." C. W. Field

+ Library J 77:910 My 15 '52 40w

"Social and political problems of the day, the antagonism between money-making 'governors' men' and freedom-loving native Virginians, are highlighted in a way to illuminate our early history for the junior high age, and give the book a value beyond the exciting story. The author, a descendant of one of the characters, makes the old days very much alive." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p23 My 11 '52 250w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell

N Y Times p26 Je 8 '52 80w

"When the Irvin farm in Colonial Virginia was raided by Indians and Hugh's father carried away captive, the boy plunged into a series of adventures that no young reader will want to miss." M. F. A.

+ Sat R 35:35 Jl 19 '52 150w

FEATHERINGILL, EVE STANTON. Primer for pregnancy; an informal and practical guide for the expectant mother; with a foreword by Louis Langman. 241p $2.95 Simon & Schuster

618 Pregnancy

51-7668

General information on pregnancy, written by the mother of three children. Gives instructions on physical and medical regimes, doctors, emotional aspects, and preparations generally for motherhood. Index.

Booklist 48:117 D 1 '51

"A refreshing change from stodgy medical 'manuals,' its breezy, humorous style reassures the reader." F. D. Heron

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Ja 6 '52 80w

Kirkus 19:429 Ag 1 '51 120w

"Mrs. Featheringill is the mother of three children herself, hence feels qualified to pass on information to women less experienced, and she has done an able job here with all sorts of practical advice written in a comradely style." D. H. T.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 F 10 '52 60w

FEHLING, HELMUT M. One great prison; the story behind Russia's unreleased POW's; tr. by Charles R. Joy; with a foreword by Konrad Adenauer and Josef cardinal Frings. 175p $2.50 Beacon press

940.547 World war, 1939-1945—Prisoners and prisons, Russian. Concentration camps

51-14395

The experiences of a German sergeant-major, who spent six years in captivity in Russia. The main part of the book consists of documents and official announcements concerning German and Japanese war prisoners in the Soviet Union. Index.

Reviewed by O. H. Radkey

Ann Am Acad 281:250 My '52 380w

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 F 10 '52 240w

Foreign Affairs 31:162 O '52 20w

Kirkus 19:515 S 1 '51 90w

Reviewed by W. B. Walsh

Nation 174:235 Mr 8 '52 350w

Reviewed by Mikhail Koriakov

N Y Times p20 D 2 '51 550w

FEIGENBAUM, ARMAND VALLIN. Quality control, principles, practice and administration; an industrial management tool for improving product quality and design and for reducing operating costs and losses. 443p il $7 McGraw

658.56 Industrial management. Sampling (statistics)

51-1311

"An over-all presentation of quality control from the management and administrative

FEIGENBAUM, A. V.—Continued
viewpoint. It is primarily a practical book, based not on the theory behind quality control, but on experience with quality control in numerous industrial firms during World War II and after. The necessity for keeping the quality control program within bounds so that it does not cost more in time or money than its results justify is emphasized. A wide variety of practical procedures, relating not only to inspection but to record-keeping and follow-through, is described. The author is secretary of the Quality Control Co-ordinating Committee of the General Electric Company. (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

"All in all, this book is a good practical treatise on quality control. It does not pretend to be deeply mathematical, but the numerous references to original sources should satisfy the most inquiring student, who insists on knowing the 'why' of each statistical statement made. The language is easily understood, and the author's examples illustrate the subject matter very adequately." J. Manuele

+ Management R 40:789 D '51 1200w
N Y New Tech Bks 36:25 Mr '51

FEIKEMA, FEIKE FREDERICK. The giant. 429p $3.95 Doubleday

51-14783

"The third volume of a trilogy [called World's Wanderer]. The two former volumes were The Primitive and The Brother [Book Review Digest 1949, 1950]. This novel brings to an end the life of the giant Thurs Wraldson; he is killed in an auto accident. . . The novel covers the years just before and during World War II, treats of his return to Minnesota, his marriage, his return to the composing of music, reunion with his father, and peace and contentment." Library J

Reviewed by Riley Hughes
— Cath World 174:470 Mr '52 230w

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 D 30 '51 450w

Kirkus 19:640 N 1 '51 180w

"A powerful novel by a literary giant. The almost unbelievable earthy tone, frank treatment of every phase of sex, delineation in painful detail of every bodily function would indicate that this novel would have limited circulation in a public library. Strongly recommend investigation before purchase." L. R. Etzkorn

Library J 76:2111 D 15 '51 150w

"Instead of building toward a convincing and powerful climax through the interplay of individual personalities, The Giant, wanders off into 'poetic' vaporizings and oratorical meeting-house 'witnessings' centering on the new Behemoth come upon the earth." Paul Corey

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 D 30 '51 600w

"Much of the book is literal reproduction of Mr. Feikema's experiences, and, as in the earlier books, many pages are given over to trivial incidents and banal conversations. The commonplace and the melodramatic, the banal and the would-be poetic, lie side by side, and to fuse these various elements Feikema has relied on the intenseness of his own feelings about his own experiences. . . The trouble is that Mr. Feikema has been unable to communicate his passion and seriousness, principally because he cannot command the necessary resources of style." Granville Hicks

N Y Times p5 D 30 '51 650w

New Yorker 27:65 D 29 '51 60w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Mr 16 '52 320w

"The Giant is the best of the three volumes, though it reveals all of the author's idiosyncrasies and his bewilderment at the astonishing brainchild he has conceived. He mingles burlesque and satire with portentous paragraphs in which Thurs's yearning for comprehension of the abstruse is mingled with a confusing elaboration of detail. Certainly, it can stand by itself as a picaresque novel." Harrison Smith

+ Sat R 35:14 Ja 12 '52 750w

FEININGER, ANDREAS. Advanced photography; methods and conclusions. 244p il $7.50 Prentice-Hall

770 Photography 52-8816

"This book is dedicated to those photographers who realize they could do better in their work but don't know exactly how to begin. Its purpose is to stimulate potentially creative photographers by showing them what photography is capable of doing when practiced with intelligence and imagination." Starting with these words, Andreas Feininger proceeds to fulfill his mission." San Francisco Chronicle

Booklist 48:316 Je 1 '52

Reviewed by R. V. Hamm
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Ap 20 '52 130w

"Very readable text with interesting illustrations." Ken McLaughlin

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 My 18 '52 450w

"'Advanced Photography' is a book neither for the pure artist nor the technical camera bug, but for the working photographer or amateur who is aware that he has to combine both. It presupposes a basic knowledge of technique and, having presupposed it, happily forgets it." D. E. Scherman

+ Sat R 35:42 Je 7 '52 480w

FEININGER, ANDREAS. On photography. 409p il $6.95 Crown

770 Photography

"Reduced price and new distributor for a practical, comprehensive book on photography originally priced at $15." (Booklist) For earlier issue see Book Review Digest 1950.

Booklist 49:71 O 15 '52

"An encyclopedic volume consisting of just about everything including the darkroom sink." R. V. Hamm

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 S 7 '52 120w

FEIRER, JOHN LOUIS. General metals. 257p il $3 McGraw

671 Metal work 51-12564

"The first book in a new series of texts for use in trade courses in high schools and vocational schools. A good deal of ground is covered for an introductory text. The material is organized as sixty-two units of instruction, and these are supplemented by dimensioned drawings for about fifty metal-working projects, such as the making of a modern lamp. The book will be useful to beginning home mechanics as well as to students." (N Y New Tech Bks) List of visual aids. Index.

Booklist 48:276 My 1 '52

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 77:1079 Je 15 '52 40w
N Y New Tech Bks 37:43 My '52

FELDMAN, JOSEPH, and FELDMAN, HARRY. Dynamics of the film. 255p il $3.50 Hermitage

792.93 [791.4] Moving pictures 52-8077

Discussion of the technique of moving pictures as distinguished from other forms of art. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 48:261 Ap 15 '52

Bookmark 11:206 Je '52 30w
+ Kirkus 20:57 Ja 15 '52 130w

"The book is very highly recommended for the photographer, amateur or professional, who finds that his movies lack impact or sustained interest. Careful reading of this book will enable him to discover any basic faults in his approach to movie-making." A. C. S.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 My 4 '52 120w

"Approaching films from the outside in, trying to analyze its structure without understanding the significance of the shot, the Feldmans have produced an interesting enough compendium of film techniques, but one that fails to grasp precisely the subject of their book, the dynamics of the film." Arthur Knight

+ — Sat R 35:37 My 24 '52 600w

Spring'd Republican p5D J1 20 '52 90w

FELLER, ABRAHAM HOWARD. United nations and world community. 153p $2.50 Little 341.13 United nations (organization) 52-5519

"The author, general counsel of the UN and formerly with OWI, UNRRA, San Francisco Conference, Bretton Woods, writes of what the United Nations has accomplished to date, the crises still to be met, the functions of the different agencies, and other interesting facts about the UN." Library J

Booklist 49:98 N 15 '52

"Reasoned, reliable, affirmative."

+ Kirkus 20:621 S 15 '52 160w

Library J 77:1761 O 15 '52 30w

"The United Nations remains, in spite of all that has been written about it, a somewhat cloudy enterprise; and a book like the present one—brief, thoughtful and authoritative—is to be heartily welcomed." August Heckscher

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 N 30 '52 290w

"Admirable survey of the first six years of the United Nations." T. J. Hamilton

+ N Y Times p54 N 9 '52 600w

Spring'd Republican p7C N 23 '52 250w

FELSEN, GREGOR. Two and the town. 275p $2.50 Scribner

52-9116

"A thoughtful junior novel that meets with honesty and courage the problems that face a high school boy and girl who in their senior year find that they are to have a child. Even a hasty marriage does not solve their problems; they have become outcasts from their own group and have to adjust to an entirely new way of thinking and living. The young people's own reactions to the situation, as well as those of their parents and various other people in the town, are convincingly portrayed." Horn Bk

Booklist 48:342 Je 15 '52

"High school readers will appreciate the sincerity of Mr. Felsen's writing and thinking." J. D. L.

Horn Bk 28:178 Je '52 60w

"Felsen has drawn his situations and his main characters sharply, with suspense; there is good healthy tension in the football game and the town's hysterical response, in the session Buff faces with his father, and so on. Only in the minor characters and the background does he fail to come alive. A book to watch."

+ Kirkus 20:5 Ja 1 '52 190w

"Many libraries will not buy this, and others will treat it with kid gloves, but we need it. . . If this book will help to warn, prepare, explain to, or prevent teen-agers from treating too lightly the problems of an unplanned or even planned marriage, it should invite quantity purchase in every library serving youth." L. T. Bulman

+ Library J 77:1216 J1 '52 150w

"Not recommended, not because of the theme which will not be news to high-school readers, but because the punishment seems all out of proportion to the crime in this case and because it is pointless, superficial, commonplace, and quite lacking in a constructive sense of values." Siri Andrews

— Library J 77:1217 J1 '52 190w

"Such a book probably will cause plenty of discussion. It is not a novel, but a junior novel for boys that is almost a tract on a subject many adolescents think about a great deal. One wide area in that thinking is omitted, purposely, though it is hinted at in the sophisticated girl whom Buff liked best before his accidental tragedy. In other words, Buff and Elaine are too naïve to appeal to those who need such a sermon most." L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 My 4 '52 250w

"The ending is a little fortuitous, the characters are none too subtly drawn, but Mr. Felsen writes with a sincerity and a seriousness of purpose which make this, in the final analysis, a convincing story." E. L. Buell

+ — N Y Times p22 My 11 '52 200w

"My recommendation is that it is a book that should be added to young people's collections."

+ Wis Lib Bul 48:178 J1 '52

FELSEN, HENRY GREGOR. See Felsen, G.

FENISONG, RUTH. Dead yesterday. 187p $2.50 Doubleday

51-14368

Detective story.

Reviewed by Drexel Drake

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ja 6 '52 110w

Kirkus 19:623 O 15 '51 40w

"Able and sure and especially welcome in a thin, chill fall." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 D 9 '51 200w

"The level of characterization is unusually high. . . And Acting Capt. Gridley Nelson, who grows more satisfactorily charming with each book, seems the likeliest candidate on the New York force for the position occupied at Scotland Yard by Ngalo Marsh's Inspector Roderick Alleyn." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p14 D 30 '51 120w

"Miss Fenisong's plot isn't especially novel, but she writes pleasantly and easily, and you will probably find her book more diverting than most."

New Yorker 27:87 Ja 12 '52 140w

"Acting Captain Gridley Nelson does some good detecting on this Manhattan mystery, dealing sympathetically with thoroughly believable characters and keeping a nice balance between science and intuition. Miss Fenisong's sensitive approach gives her stories unusual depth. B plus." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 D 23 '51 80w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R of Lit 34:38 D 22 '51 20w

FENISONG, RUTH. Deadlock. 189p $2.50 Doubleday

52-10051

Detective story.

Booklist 49:15 S 1 '52

"Despite some fine splashes of drama, the scramble of characters, synthetic clues, coincidences, and moods makes this a disappointment to readers of this author's creditable mystery novels." Drexel Drake

+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p21 N 9 '52 70w

Kirkus 20:387 J1 1 '52 60w

"It's an able job and, if not Miss Fenisong's best, will please nearly all of her readers." James Sandoe

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 S 7 '52 80w

"All of the characters are beautifully realized, on every level of Manhattan from café glitter to basement sordidness." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p11 Ag 31 '52 30w

FENISONG, RUTH—Continued

"Even if the solution seems unsatisfying, you'll admit that it's built solidly on character, and the suspects are wonderfully real." L. G. Offord

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p26 S 14 '52 60w

"Jerky and episodic at start, but jells quickly into sound performance; victim slightly incredible." Sergeant Cuff

+ — Sat R 35:38 S 20 '52 20w

FENLASON, MRS ANNE (FERGUSON). Essentials in interviewing; for the interviewer offering professional services; with condensations and editing of illustrative material by Helen R. Fish. 352p $4 Harper

361 Interviews

51-11909

Handbook for social workers. It explains the purpose of interviewing, and the principles and methods of procedure. Includes examples. Index.

Reviewed by P. V. Young

Am Soc R 17:392 Je '52 230w

Reviewed by R. C. Fletcher

Ann Am Acad 282:163 J1 '52 450w

Booklist 48:223 Mr 15 '52

Wis Lib Bul 48:86 Mr '52

FENNER, PHYLLIS REID, ed. Crack of the bat; stories of baseball [by John R. Tunis and others]. 160p $2.50 Knopf

51-13014

Collection of baseball stories with a few biographical sketches about well-known players.

"Some fact, some fiction, and in either case thoroughly readable." M. F. Kieran

+ Atlantic 189:86 Je '52 40w

Bookmark 11:211 Je '52

Reviewed by Robert Cromie

Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Je 22 '52 20w

Reviewed by J. C. Worley

Christian Science Monitor p11 My 15 '52 90w

Kirkus 20:31 Ja 15 '52 110w

"This is for younger boys but is also suggested for use with slow readers among the older teen-agers. As such, it is recommended for all children's rooms and teen-age collections." M. D. Read

+ Library J 77:909 My 15 '52 30w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p23 My 11 '52 30w

"A quick-reading collection of eight stories and two non-fiction items. . . The fiction in the volume is nicely assorted and not lacking in excitement." R. L. P.

+ N Y Times p18 J1 27 '52 70w

Sat R 35:59 My 10 '52 20w

FENNER, PHYLLIS REID, ed. First book of cartoons for kids, picked by several hundred boys and girls; designed and decorated by Ida Scheib. 69p $1.75; bds $1.25 Watts, F. 741.5 Caricatures and cartoons 52-6143

"This librarian's novel idea of letting several hundred boys and girls collect and choose the cartoons they thought funny for this 'First Book' has created fun the whole family will share and enjoy. The amusing two-color pencil sketches of Ida Scheib on every page gaily continue the humor of the cartoons and frequently invite the amateur cartoonist to complete the drawing or supply captions." Library J

Kirkus 20:155 Mr 1 '52 160w

"Recommended for all libraries, but advise stronger stitching in preparation for its expected popularity." M. M. Gantt

+ Library J 77:214 F 1 '52 110w

"What all this reveals to us grown-ups is not very clear. The book is inevitably depressing to us, both for type of humor and for art skill. The most amusing thing about it is the way it is designed." L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 F 3 '52 410w

"A good many are surprisingly mature in their humor. The kids had a keen eye for family jokes and exchanges between husband and wife. They don't miss much. Oddly enough, there is only one boy-and-girl joke in the lot. Small fry will have a wonderful time with this book." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p28 Ja 27 '52 180w

Wis Lib Bul 48:176 J1 '52

FENNER, PHYLLIS REID, comp. Ghosts, ghosts, ghosts; il. by Manning deV. Lee. 281p $2.50 Watts, F.

Ghosts—Juvenile literature

52-13331

Sixteen stories of spooks, haunts, and hobgoblins, werewolves and will-o'-the-wisps. For ages 10 to 14.

Booklist 49:145 D 15 '52

Reviewed by Al Chase

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 N 16 '52 140w

Kirkus 20:507 Ag 15 '52 80w

"There is a fine variety of thrills and plenty of good writing. . . The pictures are superb." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p4 N 16 '52 40w

"An unusual group of sixteen spooky stories." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p32 O 26 '52 120w

FENNER, PHYLLIS REID, comp. Yankee Doodle; stories of the brave and the free; il. by John Alan Maxwell. 214p $2.50 Knopf

51-11070

An anthology made up of eleven stories about high spots in American history, from the Revolution to the Civil war. For ages 11 to 13.

Booklist 48:174 Ja 15 '52

Bookmark 11:85 Ja '52

Reviewed by E. C. Ince

Christian Science Monitor p14 D 6 '51 70w

Kirkus 19:582 O 1 '51 120w

"Good for reading aloud and storytelling, they have proved to be of interest to readers from fourth to eighth grades." O. R. Way

+ Library J 77:149 Ja 15 '52 80w

"It is another book to help make history vital, and to lead into the fine books from which it was chosen." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p2 N 11 '51 170w

Wis Lib Bul 47:261 N '51

FENTON, CARROLL LANE. Wild folk in the woods; il. by the author. 127p $2.50 Day 591.5 Animals, Habits and behavior of 52-9610

Descriptive, simply-written material on the habits and behavior of some animals, birds, and insects of North America. For grades 4-6.

Booklist 49:74 O 15 '52

Commonweal 57:174 N 21 '52 20w

Kirkus 20:407 J1 15 '52 120w

"Information is extremely brief; the fifty-five black-and-white drawings add to the facts; sentences are simple; talking down is avoided. Can be read aloud to very young ages, and probably fourth-graders can read it themselves." V. K. Fitch

+ Library J 77:1661 O 1 '52 60w

"Young animal lovers will find it all interesting, the sort of book they will want to own in their nature libraries. It will quicken their observing eyes, and suggest many items for their nature note-books. The pictures are adequate and accurate." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 O 19 '52 130w

FENTON, CARROLL LANE, and FENTON, MRS MILDRED (ADAMS). Giants of geology. 333p il maps $3.50 Doubleday

550 Geologists. Geology—History 52-5125

"A revision of the authors' The story of the great geologists [Book Review Digest 1945] which traces the development of geology through a series of biographies of leading geologists. New material includes chapters on J. William Dawson, Hugh Miller, James Dwight Dana, and Archibald Geikie." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 48:199 F 15 '52

"Recommended for older young people with a very real interest in geology." M. D. Read
+ Library J 77:733 Ap 15 '52 60w

Reviewed by G. F. Whicher
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p33 My 11 '52 80w

"The Fentons have been studying and writing about the earth sciences for more than thirty years, and include a great deal of material that will interest amateur and professional geologists as well as laymen." John Pfeiffer

+ Sat R 35:52 Ap 12 '52 380w

FERBER, EDNA. Giant. 447p $3.95 Doubleday
52-10412

With Texas and the ways of the Texans as a background this spins the story of Bick Benedict, who manages the family two and a half million acre ranch, and of the Virginia girl he married. The time is the present.

"Miss Ferber makes no predictions about the future of Texas. She records her view of the state's present tartly, deftly, with a relish for bizarre detail." P. L. Adams

+ Atlantic 190:100 O '52 550w

Booklist 49:48 O 1 '52

Bookmark 12:34 N '52 30w

Reviewed by Riley Hughes
Cath World 176:313 Ja '53 250w

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 S 28 '52 600w

"To this reviewer, the whole picture seems lacking in perspective, like a candid camera shot taken much too close to the giant structure it is focused upon. There is entertainment in plenty, of course; but the discriminating reader may want to investigate further before deciding upon the book's over-all validity. Perhaps that is just what Miss Ferber is trying to do, after all." M. W. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p6 O 2 '52 600w

Reviewed by Joe Deyer
Commonweal 57:45 O 17 '52 330w

"It reads like broad caricature of new quick money; I can't imagine even Texans will like it. It has money-snob-appeal for the masses, but for this reader, it created frank distaste."

— Kirkus 20:419 J1 15 '52 180w

"Below-par Ferber which may not be popular except with fans. . . . Book loosely constructed; one-half would have been more effective. However, some fine flashes. Recommended, of course." Karl Brown

+ Library J 77:1659 O 1 '52 120w

Reviewed by F. H. Bullock
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 S 28 '52 750w

"Miss Ferber makes it very clear that she doesn't like the Texas she writes about, and it's a cinch that when Texans read what she has written about them they won't like Miss Ferber either. Almost everyone else is going to revel in these pages. . . . 'Giant' makes marvelous reading—wealth piled on wealth, wonder on wonder in a stunning, splendiferous pyramid of ostentation." John Barkham

+ N Y Times p4 S 28 '52 1000w
New Yorker 28:133 O 4 '52 40w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles
San Francisco Chronicle p20 O 12 '52 360w

"'Giant' will be joyfully received in forty-seven states and avidly though angrily read in Texas, for if Miss Ferber and her publishers think they are going to make Texans so dang mad that they will stage a book-burning and hang Miss Ferber in effigy, she and they just don't know the residents of the state whose flag floats a single star." William Kittrell

+ Sat R 35:15 S 27 '52 650w

Reviewed by Marghanita Laskj
Spec 189:710 N 21 '52 130w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn
Spring'd Republican p11D O 26 '52 500w

Time 60:94 S 29 '52 550w

Times [London] Lit Sup p789 D 5 '52 150w

FERM, VERGILIUS TURE ANSELM. Protestant dictionary. 283p $5 Philosophical lib.

203 Protestantism—Dictionaries. Theology—Dictionaries 51-1412

"[A tool] for all who have unanswered questions concerning Protestantism, presented by well-known teacher and writer in fields of philosophy and religions. While not supposed to be encyclopedic, work gives in summary, information needed at moment on some term, name, church, and movement of Protestantism. Protestant origins in Europe are included, but main emphasis is on origin and development of Protestant churches in the United States, with brief summaries of their leading doctrines and policy." Library J

"While details are not to be expected within such limits of brevity, a book like this can be immensely useful in at least starting one in the right direction and prevent some embarrassing errors." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 69:402 Ap 2 '52 110w

"The author, who is head of the department of philosophy in the College of Wooster, has done an excellent service in the writing of this dictionary. One of its values lies in the brevity of its entries, made possible by the care with which essential information concerning the origin and development of Protestant churches is presented along with needed definitions in the field of doctrines and politics. Church workers in any branch of service will find it a convenient handbook." Harrison Williams

+ Churchman 166:17 Ja 1 '52 90w

"Certain minor errors, inadvertently, crept into the text. . . . There may be other minor inaccuracies and omissions, but, by and large, the volume will serve a useful purpose, and all of us are indebted to the author for his indefatigable labors in providing us with a dictionary of such proportions pertaining to our Protestant tradition." C. B. Schaeffer

+ Crozer Q 29:237 Ap '52 420w

"The author has undertaken an ambitious work, and has endeavored to cover too much ground for one volume. One wonders why some persons, movements and doctrines are included and others not. There are other volumes more adequate."

Kirkus 19:564 S 15 '51 100w

"Very useful tool. . . . Librarians will find volume valuable in providing quick answers to questions in fields covered." O. G. Lawson

+ Library J 76:2113 D 15 '51 80w

FERMOR, PATRICK LEIGH-. See Leigh-Fermor, P.

FERNALD, MRS HELEN (CLARK). Plow the dew under. 301p $3 Longmans

52-9666

Novel for young readers about the settling of Kansas by a group of farmers from the Crimea, who brought with them the new winter wheat.

Booklist 49:72 O 15 '52

Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 N 16 '52 110w

FERNALD, H. C.—Continued

"A vigorous young novel, this is a good contribution to young people's literature about the settling of the Middle West." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 28:328 O '52 60w

"The book is wellmeaning, solid, and dull, its theme of the new immigrant in the unfriendly American atmosphere struggling to find his place painfully emphasized. The book would seem to be more suitable for teen age readers—its heroes are young, and its history valid."

+ Kirkus 20:383 J1 1 '52 250w

"Slight plot and slow action. Nevertheless, readable and a valuable addition to reading lists for units on democracy, westward expansion, immigration, in junior and senior high schools." M. K. Walraven

+ Library J 77:1413 S 1 '52 50w

"'Plow the Dew Under' is likely to please young people for whom it is primarily intended. But some others may be dubious concerning the thought and imagination shown in this vision of the American Dream." W. M. Teller

+ N Y Times p26 O 12 '52 230w

"Helen Clark Fernald has tried to construct a novel around this promising material, but it can't be said that she's been notably successful. Most of her story is as innocent of artistry as an old-fashioned text for a high-school civics course." E. J. F.

+ Sat R 35:37 O 11 '52 200w

School & Society 76:191 S 20 '52 20w

FERRARS, E. X. See Brown, M. D. M.

FERRE, NELS FREDERICK SOLOMON. Christian understanding of God. 277p $3.75 Harper

231 God 51-11910

"The author introduces himself as a philosophical theologian and defines his task in this volume as that of finding the deepest meaning of Christian events, and particularly the event of events, in relation to the doctrine of God. In a word, the author finds that meaning in the concept of love, and rarely has any theologian developed a theological treatise with as strict adherence to his fundamental conception as does Ferré in this volume. Structurally the work falls into two major sections. The first deals with the nature of God, the second with the activities of God." (Christian Century) Index.

"To this reviewer the second section of the volume is far superior to the first. Perhaps this is because the kinds of topics which constitute the second section are more dynamic, and hence feel more important to a contemporary mind—a mind such as Dr. Ferré's which has been largely fashioned by the dynamic and process philosophies of the last century. The first section often reads as if it were written simply to pay respect to certain traditional concepts of a more static kind rather than because of any ultimate importance." W. B. Blakemore

Christian Century 69:899 Ag 6 '52 900w

"Every reader will find this brilliant study stimulating and thought provoking, but probably none will agree with it in every detail. . . This is certainly a stimulating book, and it suggests intriguing prospects and possibilities which probably few of us have considered." W. K. Wright

+ Crozer Q 29:240 Ap '52 340w

Reviewed by E. E. Aubrey
J Religion 32:210 J1 '52 950w

Times [London] Lit Sup p553 Ag 22 '52 300w

FERRE, NELS FREDERICK SOLOMON. Strengthening the spiritual life. 63p $1 Harper

248 Spiritual life 51-10175

"About a year ago Prof. Ferré delivered a series of early-morning devotional lectures at the International Convention of Disciples of Christ. For the first time in this reviewer's rather extensive memories of such conventions, the large hall was well filled at the first session and jam-packed every time after that. What the speaker said is reproduced in this book." Christian Century

Bookmark 11:155 Ap '52 20w

+ Christian Century 69:45 Ja 9 '52 110w

Reviewed by R. E. Keighton
Crozer Q 28:281 J1 '51 200w

"Warmly recommended."

+ Kirkus 19:270 Je 1 '51 160w

"Nels Ferré is best known as one of the most brilliant of the younger Protestant theologians. In this book, however, he reveals himself as a deeply spiritual person with a message about personal religious life which is fully as important as his learned treatment of theological subjects." K. D. Miller

+ Sat R 35:39 Mr 1 '52 100w

FERRELL, ROBERT H. Peace in their time; the origins of the Kellogg-Briand pact. 293p $4 Yale univ. press

341.6 Pact of Paris, 1928 52-5361

"One of the important landmarks in the 'peace fever' which swept the world after World War I was the Kellogg-Briand Pact which sought to outlaw war as an instrument of national policy. The history of this treaty, of its sincere supporters, and of those who sought to ride into public favor on its popularity, of the sophisticated politicians seeking their own interests and of the naive public seeking peace, is told in this volume." (Current Hist) Index.

"Throughout the book one finds a well-documented and well-written account of the reaction of our State Department and the ultimate emergence of the Pact." W. L. Godshall

+ Ann Am Acad 284:169 N '52 160w

Current Hist 23:63 J1 '52 50w

"Throughout this witty and disenchanting narrative Mr. Ferrell's sympathy, when he reveals any, is with the diplomats, especially William R. Castle, of the Department of State, and the French Ambassador in Washington, Paul Claudel. He enjoys their diplomatic fencing and indulges in some sharp thrusts himself. The fact that his satire is sometimes superfluous is a minor defect in a work distinguished by exceptional verve, penetration and scholarship." Geoffrey Bruun

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 J1 13 '52 950w

"This is a very readable doctoral dissertation produced under the auspices of the Yale Historical Publications. The author has written the best comprehensive study to date of the forces which produced the treaty to 'outlaw war.'" Herbert Maza

+ Pol Sci Q 67:618 D '52 800w

"Although the study will appeal chiefly to specialists in its field, it is presented in a style well above the average monograph in readability. The critical bibliography is full and valuable."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:296 S '52 210w

FERRIL, THOMAS HORNSBY. New and selected poems. 169p $3 Harper

811 52-8470

Selections from the works of this Denver poet, covering a period of thirty years.

Bookmark 12:5 O '52 20w

"Basically regional in tone, this has a wide, human appeal."

+ Kirkus 20:334 Je 1 '52 160w

"He belongs in the company of Whitman, Sandburg and Benet, as one who sings of America, its people and its place-names, but he has his own, original outlook and manner. Of all the books of poems of 1952, his has given me most pleasure." G. D. McDonald

+ Library J 77:1513 S 15 '52 140w

Reviewed by M. L. Rosenthal

New Repub 128:28 Ja 5 '53 110w

"These poems read aloud with great impact. Mr. Ferril is balladist, dramatist, and lyricist. This book is clearly one of the rich rewards, and should be marked as such, for prizes, and for pleasure." John Holmes

+ N Y Times p6 Ag 3 '52 120w

"There is a wholeness and consistency about Ferril's poetry, which makes a chronology of the poems irrelevant, and none is given." L. F.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ag 3 '52 140w

"These poems were written to be read aloud, the foreword tells us, and undoubtedly the vigor and the color and the sweep of their language and imagery would contribute to the effectiveness of such a medium. But these qualities are not lost to the silent reader, and some of the briefer and more subjective lyrics, with their concision and restraint, are better taken in quiet, I think. I found Mr. Ferril's poems not only stimulating at first reading, but good to return to, surely a valid test of a poet's real worth." S. H. Hay

+ Sat R 35:30 S 6 '52 260w

FERRIS, HELEN JOSEPHINE (MRS ALBERT B. TIBBETS), ed. Writing books for boys and girls. 320p $2.98 Doubleday

028.5 Children's literature—History and criticism. Authorship 52-8058

"A Young Wings anthology of essays by two hundred sixteen authors who tell how they came to write their special kinds of books for young readers." (Subtitle) Author index.

Booklist 48:384 J1 15 '52

Bookmark 11:236 J1 '52

"Adults writing, or aspiring to write, for young people should find it provocative and challenging, setting as it does a high standard of quality, suggesting approaches, points of view, and recurrent insistence on children's spontaneously honest critical approach. Place in young people's rooms, for biographical reference plus advice on writing; but don't overlook value among books on writing for the adult section as well."

+ Kirkus 20:376 J1 1 '52 150w

"Recommended where needed." Mary Strang Library J 77:1310 Ag '52 30w

"Probably the audience will be chiefly other writers or would-be young writers. Librarians will be glad of some of the details, to introduce those of the books that are still outstanding. The pages by authors such as Elizabeth Gray Vining, Margery Bianco, Bemelmans, McCloskey, Tom Robinson, are charming." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 J1 27 '52 480w

"The parent, teacher or librarian will find this volume indispensable in passing on to the child stories of his favorite author and in introducing to him those writers with whom he has not yet become acquainted." C. E. Van Norman

+ N Y Times p18 Ag 24 '52 160w

Sat R 35:69 N 15 '52 50w

FFRENCH, YVONNE, ed. Transatlantic exchanges; cross-currents of Anglo-American opinion in the nineteenth century. 255p il $3.75 Lib. pubs.

973 [917.3] National characteristics, American, National characteristics, English, U.S.—Civilization. Great Britain—Civilization 52-10242

Excerpts from the writings of representative men and women on both sides of Atlantic, showing the trend of Anglo-American friendship—or the lack of it—during the nineteenth century. Index of authors.

Reviewed by Preston Slosson

Ann Am Acad 283:189 S '52 220w

"This kind of thing may or may not affect the feeling one country has for the other. At least it is entertaining. And if some of the blows land a trifle beneath the belt—well there are fouls on both sides. What could be fairer than that?" J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Je 25 '52 550w

School & Society 76:112 Ag 16 '52 20w

Reviewed by D. W. Brogan

Spec 188:52 Ja 11 '52 450w

Times [London] Lit Sup p742 N 23 '51 1050w

FIDLER, WILLIAM PERRY. Augusta Evans Wilson, 1835-1909. 251p il $3.50 Univ. of Ala. press

B or 92 Wilson, Augusta Jane (Evans) 52-102

A biography of the author of St Elmo, a sentimental novel of the eighteen-sixties, and other Victorian novels. The author is a professor of English at the University of Alabama. Index.

"In lesser hands, this biography would have been either a panegyric or a burlesque. Instead, the author has added an illuminating chapter to the history of popular taste." Herbert Brown

+ N Y Times p4 Je 22 '52 490w

"Mr. Fidler has approached his subject with insight and respect, and has produced a biography which is sensitively written and sound in scholarship."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:116 Je '52 340w

FIEDLER, JEAN. Green thumb story; pictures by Barbara Latham. 38p $1.75 Holiday

52-9564

Story of a small boy who wanted a garden so much that a neighbor who possessed a "green thumb" helped him. And so it was discovered that Peter had a green thumb too. Ages 5 to 8.

Booklist 48:363 J1 1 '52

Bookmark 11:211 Je '52

"A well-designed book with clear large type and many illustrations to attract beginning readers to a garden story just right for this time of year." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 28:171 Je '52 60w

Kirkus 20:188 Mr 15 '52 60w

"Recommended for ages 5-8." E. T. Dobbins + Library J 77:907 My 15 '52 80w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 My 11 '52 50w

"This is a fine spring story for any child who pokes around for the first snowdrop; and for earnest young gardeners it should be pleasing at any time in the year." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p30 Ap 20 '52 120w

FIELD, MRS ALICE EVANS. Hollywood, U. S. A. from script to screen; introd. by Will Hays. 256p il $3.50 Vantage

792.93 [791.4] Moving pictures 52-629

"After an introductory historical briefing she describes what actually goes into the making of a picture, first the producer's part in drawing and following through on the blueprint, then his relation to the departments of writing, research, casting, sets and props, costuming, and make-up. The technical factors of color, sound recording, film editing, music scoring, and the making of animated films are traced. Useful as a reference tool for its lists of pictures made from novels and plays, and pictures which received Academy Awards." Booklist

Booklist 48:210 Mr 1 '52

"Mrs. Field handles her material concisely and, without ever resorting to the personal pronoun, presents a vast industry competently. Not a book for the film student, rather a general reference book."

+ Kirkus 20:56 Ja 15 '52 160w

"Recommended for general collections and for those specializing in the cinema." George Freedley

+ Library J 77:533 Mr 15 '52 20w

"Even as merely a general over-view of how Hollywood makes a movie, the work is marred by imprecision, by factual errors and important

FIELD, A. E.—Continued
omissions, of which perhaps the most serious is the question of how a motion picture is financed. An abundance of typographical errors frequently irritates." Arthur Knight
— Sat R 35:37 My 24 '52 220w

FIGGIS, MICHAEL W. Diana Wakefield. 271p
$3 Macmillan

52-11203

"That incredible obstinacy and stupidity" of Colonel Wakefield, Diana's husband—is responsible for the action in this novel which deals with the tradition of early 20th century against post-war discontent in England." Library J

"Mr. Figgis tries to make a trite story topical by working in the theme of the current passing of the great English estates, but little comes of it." Riley Hughes
Cath World 176:73 O '52 190w

Kirkus 20:288 My 1 '52 160w

"Mr. Figgis is a young novelist but old enough to have been in the British army, and to have observed people keenly enough to write a novel that will appeal to those who are interested in trends, and also to those who want a sympathetic love story. For general purchase—and for readers who have some respect for the past as well as a consciousness of the restlessness in the social world today." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 77:1011 Je 1 '52 110w

"Mr. Figgis's story of the working out of the conflicts of loyalties within a group of people is civilized and intelligent, but it doesn't quite get off the ground. The people he pictures may well have lived and loved and suffered as these do, but in 'Diana Wakefield' they do not come alive." Mary Ross

— + N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 J1 6 '52 320w

"There is little wrong with this first novel that imagination and passion wouldn't cure. The book does not, certainly, sustain the publisher's offhand statement that Michael Figgis is 'a great new discovery in the literary world.' Mr. Figgis is not responsible, however, for the publisher's nonsense. What he has given us is a novel that is impeccably written, sensitively portrayed, and, on the whole, unbelievably dull." John Rehren

+ — N Y Times p17 Je 29 '52 290w

"In his first novel Michael Figgis attempts to elevate a fairly conventional love story with some rather wordy speculations on the problems of integrity and spiritual responsibility. It cannot be said that he has been altogether successful."

Sat R 35:50 J1 5 '52 210w

"Genteel, stilted and literary in style, this also is a rather trying book." R. D. Charques
+ — Spec 188:654 My 16 '52 40w

FINDLEY, FERGUSON, pseud. See Frey, C. F.

FINEGAN, JACK. Archeology of world religions: the background of primitivism, Zoroastrianism, Hinduism, Jainism, Buddhism, Confucianism, Taoism, Shinto, Islam, and Sikhism. 599p il maps $10 Princeton univ. press

290.9 Religions 52-5839

"The earliest evidences of prehistoric religions are treated in The Archeology of World Religions, as well as nine designated living religions beginning with Zoroastrianism and ending with Sikhism. Since the author's Light from the Ancient Past has treated Judaism and Christianity, those two beliefs are not included here." Library J

Booklist 49:3 S 1 '52

"The well selected illustrations with which the book abounds, to the extent of 260 listed and numbered items, put before the reader as many pictures of ancient artifacts, sculptures and buildings, all of which are so pertinent as to be almost indispensable to an understanding of religions so strongly disposed, as most of these were, to translate their ideas into visible form." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 69:1380 N 26 '52 850w

"A handsome book, it is full of beautiful photographic reproductions, and carefully documented and indexed. An important contribution to the understanding of not only religious history, but also man's artistic and philosophic development." L. R. Miller
+ Library J 77:1403 S 1 '52 80w

"It makes few generalizations and draws no conclusions, but it is an excellent account, of a textbookish sort, on an interesting subject." D. T.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 Ag 24 '52 50w

FINEGAN, JACK. Rediscovering Jesus. 176p
$2.50 Assn. press

232 Jesus Christ

52-11606

"To clarify modern doubts about the authenticity of Jesus' life and the value of his teachings for our complicated twentieth century, Professor Finegan in Rediscovering Jesus writes a short series of sermon-essays based on talks already given to college groups." (Library J) No index.

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 69:973 Ag 27 '52 60w

"Utilizing the findings of scholarly research, Professor Finegan writes for the average reader with a special interest in young people of college age. . . A book to be recommended especially for college age Protestant youth."

+ Kirkus 20:463 Ag 1 '52 120w

"Out of a life-time combining scholarly research with consecration to Christian evangelism, the author presents in fresh and attractive perspective Jesus' meaning for today. . . A dynamic apologia—highly recommended." L. R. Miller

+ Library J 77:1403 S 1 '52 60w

FINKELSTEIN, SIDNEY WALTER. How music expresses ideas. 128p $1.50 Int. pubs.

780.4 Music—Analysis, interpretation, appreciation 52-7579

"This would seem to be the most easily accessible statement of the Party line in the field of music. Here amidst the clatter of familiar words—revolt, persecution, working class, reactionary critics, cultural spies, clerical-political censorship—one reads of how Bach 'had to appear' to be the 'honest servant' of a 'moribund feudalism'; of how Beethoven 'expressed deeply sorrowful and tragic feelings, recognizing the casualties of the struggle for progress.' . . Bibliography includes the expected names: Lenin, Marx, Engels, Zhdanov." Library J

Reviewed by C. K. Miller

Library J 77:531 Mr 15 '52 150w

"Mr. Finkelstein stimulates not the mind but certain facial muscles—not so much by his opinions as by his 'facts.' . . All good Marxists, of course, admit that Tchaikovsky was 'never pessimistic or morbid,' but we really must ask Mr. Finkelstein his authority for the assertion that 'both Beethoven and his audiences looked upon the symphony as a popularization of music, and in fact the more refined critics thought of it as vulgar.' . . The 'Glossary of Musical Terms' is in every way worthy of the rest of the book." Gerald Abraham

— Sat R 35:21 Mr 29 '52 550w

Times [London] Lit Sup p403 Je 20 '52 320w

FIORNTINO, DANTE DEL. Immortal Bohemian. 232p il $3.50 Prentice-Hall

B or 92 Puccini, Giacomo

52-9190

The one-time curate of Torre del Lago, the town in which Puccini lived for many years, writes this intimate biography of the great man, who was his friend. Index.

Booklist 48:320 Je 1 '52

"Just as unconscious in its poetry, this book, so full of charm and Tuscany, is generous in humor." E. V. R. Wyatt

+ Commonweal 56:349 J1 11 '52 430w

"The book makes very good reading."

+ Kirkus 20:111 F1 '52 310w

"Absorbing reading." C. K. Miller

+ Library J 77:720 Ap 15 '52 140w

"The picture he draws is an engaging and novel one, though at times somewhat blurred and disorganized. It forms a small but important unit in the sum total of our knowledge of genius." Marianne Singard

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 9:615 S '52 190w

Reviewed by Desmond Shawe-Taylor
New Statesman & Nation 44:690 D 6 '52 350w

Reviewed by Herbert Kupferberg
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Je 1 '52 650w

"Since Father Dante first met Puccini when the latter was about 50, one wonders occasionally whether a good deal of his intimate gossip about the great man's early years is not hearsay or imagination. . . But perhaps it is unkind to quibble over points like these in such an unpretentious book. Father Dante's portrait adds little to the sum of factual knowledge about its subject, or to the understanding of Puccini's genius as an operatic composer. It does provide an entertaining picture of the gifted, charming, irresponsible and rather rakish individual who was the man Puccini." Winthrop Sargeant

+ N Y Times p6 Ap 20 '52 800w

New Yorker 28:140 Je 7 '52 160w

"What distinguishes 'Immortal Bohemian' is the author's warm-heartedness, his complete frankness in confessing admiration for Puccini, a certain liveliness of style, and the absence of any pretense to scholarship sublime. This is a friend's-eye view. Fiorentino, who is a priest, has a priest's understanding. He brings to the book a good amount of humor and more than the expected amount of tolerance. . . The padre's book is a mixture of personal encounters and experiences with the composer and a retelling of anecdotes previously told. Its early chapters suffer from heartell through hearsay." G. R. Marek

+ Sat R 35:21 Ap 26 '52 550w

Reviewed by Martin Cooper

Spec 189:706 N 21 '52 380w

"A sympathetic, friendly biography of the opera composer, Giacomo Puccini. As the title implies, the book expresses the lighter, more carefree side of the composer's life, and does not leave the bitter taste of George Marek's longer and more factual biography published last year. But neither does the present author evade the facts." Victor Frahl

+ Springfd Republican p6D Ag 3 '52 410w

Times [London] Lit Sup p745 N 14 '52 150w

FIRTH, RAYMOND WILLIAM. Elements of social organization. 257p il $5.75 Philosophical lib.

572 Society, Primitive [51-32440]

"This book represents a re-working of the initial series of Josiah Mason Lectures, delivered by Professor Firth at the University of Birmingham in the spring of 1947. The first three chapters consider the nature of social organization, the relationships between structure and organization as illustrated in Tikopia, where Firth conducted fieldwork, and the character of social change in peasant communities. These are followed by discussions of the social functioning of economics, art, morals and religion." Am Soc R

"Professor Firth's treatment of basic anthropological phenomena is largely concerned with social relations as they grow out of economic activities, art, religion, and moral standards. Undoubtedly this book will prove useful in advanced courses on anthropological theory." Emilio Williams

+ Am J Soc 58:208 S '52 700w

"It is to be hoped that Professor Firth will pursue further, and at greater length, the many suggestive leads he provides in this book. There is little doubt that if the present direction of his thinking continues, and if he will avail himself of the conceptual apparatus of the cultural anthropologists, he will make a major contribution to the analysis of the total range of human behavior." M. J. Herskovits

+ Am Soc R 16:877 D '51 1000w

"It is not easy to imagine a book that would better meet [the] need for a non-technical exposition of what social anthropologists are doing than this book by Professor Raymond Firth, based on the Mason Lectures which he delivered in Birmingham in 1947." A. R. R.-B.

+ Manchester Guardian p4 J1 6 '51 300w

"The book is better in some parts than in others, but in general it can be recommended to those interested in social anthropology."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p665 O 19 '51 600w

FISCHER, GEORGE. Soviet opposition to Stalin; a case study in World war II. 230p $4 Harvard univ. press

947.084 World war, 1939-1945—Russia. Vlasov, Andrei Andreevich 52-9387

"Only organized opposition of any importance that ever existed was Soviet General Vlasov's movement during World War II in Germany. In exemplary fashion it is analyzed in latest study of Harvard Russian Research Center. Author discusses how far opposition exists nowadays and what its role is in the great conflict of the free world with Bolshevism." (Library J) Index.

"As a pioneer work in an important field, by an author with excellent qualifications, this is an important book, in spite of some defects in style and organization." W. H. Chamberlin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p21 N 23 '52 300w

"Highly recommended for larger public and educational libraries." H. H. Bernt

+ Library J 77:1805 O 15 '52 100w

"In interpreting the political significance of his findings, the author goes rather far beyond the central subject of his research, but even here his conclusions deserve serious attention, for they rest on a first-hand knowledge of Soviet life, on intensive study of strengths and tensions in Soviet society, and on personal interviews with many ex-Soviet people." P. E. Mosely

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 N 16 '52 950w

"Mr. Fischer's detailed study is the first book in English to be published in America on the Vlasov movement. Its primary merit lies in the wealth of material amassed by its author from all possible sources. . . Mr. Fischer is Junior Fellow in Russian History of the Society of Fellows at Harvard University, and originally his book was written as a doctoral dissertation. The young historian set out to amass as many facts as possible, but he failed to sift them with authority and skill. . . Nor was the author's vast amount of research very well digested." Mikhail Koriakov

+ N Y Times p3 N 30 '52 850w

"There is room for debate on many facets of Mr. Fischer's presentation. But his facts are solid and his reasoning bold. If the people of the Soviet Union are to be our allies, in cold war or hot, the recognition of their aspirations is a prerequisite for the avoidance of those pitfalls which, organically, the Nazi state was unable to escape." Alexander Dallin

+ Sat R 35:20 D 20 '52 750w

FISCHER, JOHN. Master plan U.S.A.; an informal report on America's foreign policy and the men who make it [Eng title: America's master plan.] 253p $3 Harper

327.73 U.S.—Foreign policy. U.S. National security council 51-13525

For descriptive note see Annual for 1951.

Am Pol Sci R 46:594 Je '52 20w

Foreign Affairs 30:673 J1 '52 20w

FISCHER, JOHN—Continued

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
Horn Bk 28:125 Ap '52 250w

"The title is poor but the book is good."
W. V. Shannon

+ New Repub 126:20 Ja 28 '52 650w

"John Fischer's 'Master Plan U.S.A.,' is an example of the service an intelligent, well-informed journalist can render his fellow citizens. This book is a quick survey of the way in which American foreign policy is made, the men who make it, how it is being applied in different parts of the world and the prospects before us. It is mainly a reporter's job, seeking to describe and explain, but it contains also a good deal of criticism and some constructive suggestions. . . . Almost everyone will enjoy reading this book for its interesting style, its characterizations of men, and its masterly skill in tracing the pattern of affairs. Above all, the dubious and faint-hearted should read it and strengthen their faith in America." T. P. Pearson

+ Survey 88:92 F '52 320w

"An American who is not a specialist in international relations could profit greatly from a reading of this candid and vital study. But there are others who could also profit—all those men of good will in other lands who honestly wonder whether this nation has a strategy adequate to the exigencies of these times. From this trustworthy account of what the United States is trying to do they should be able to get some of the assurance they want and need."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:72 Mr '52 280w
Wis Lib Bul 48:29 Ja '52

Reviewed by C. J. Friedrich
Yale R n s 41:277 winter '52 500w

FISCHER, LOUIS. Life and death of Stalin. 272p il $3.50 Harper

B or 92 Stalin, Iosif. Russia—History 52-5433

"Well-known journalist, prolific writer on Soviet Russia, where he was for many years resident, has written a life of Stalin. Giving very little 'personal' history, he sees Stalin as the absolute center and ruler of country and party. Last chapter, 'Death of Stalin,' speculates on successor (Beria? Molotov? Malenkov?)." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 48:349; 49:11 Jl 1 '52; S 1 '52

"The book gains in interest from the fact that during his long stay in the U.S.S.R. Mr. Fischer was in close contact with ruling circles. His journalistic ability to describe political situations in a few words comes to the fore when he deals with the present international crisis and its causes." N. D. Roodkowsky

+ Cath World 176:316 Ja '53 260w

"Stalin emerges from these pages as a shadowy figure, hardly more vivid than the one we had known before. . . . Mr. Fischer's attempts at a psychoanalytical interpretation of Stalin's personality only tend to emphasize the paucity of real information. . . . The real value of the book lies in two things. It reflects the unrivaled opportunity for personal observation which Fischer had during his stay in the soviet union in the '20s and '30s. The book contains a great number of vivid side-lights on life in the soviet union, the psychology of officials, and the techniques of government. The other virtue of the book lies in the analysis of Russian and western attitudes at the Tehran and Yalta conferences." H. J. Morgenthau

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ag 31 '52 380w

"One of the most informative and the most readable studies of the Soviet Union published in recent years. It is brilliant and solid at the same time and can be expected to hold the undivided attention even of readers who usually give political books a wide berth." E. S. Fisko

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Ag 25 '52 500w

Reviewed by M. A. Fitzsimons
Commonweal 56:588 S 19 '52 420w

"Fischer presents the case; he offers no cure. But his book is provocative, revealing and absorbing reading."

+ Kirkus 20:353 Je 15 '52 350w

"While a gifted writer such as Fischer actually knows how to present his material in a readable, often interesting way, this book actually contains very little that is new, rather it makes the impression that author has written himself out on Soviet Russia. It will have only ephemeral appeal, if any." H. H. Bernt

Library J 77:1187 Jl '52 80w

"Mr. Fischer lived in Russia for fourteen years, but he is no better off than the rest of us. He has rubbed up a few old memories, picked out the leading passages from Churchill and others, added a good deal of general invective, and then hoped for the best. Anyone who wishes to be convinced that Stalin is a wicked man with no redeeming features will read this book with pleasure; and the verdict is just as likely to be correct as the Soviet presentation of Stalin the demi-god. They both set up a wooden image. One worships it; the other knocks it down. Stalin the man is not to be seen, and for a simple reason: so far as the record goes he does not exist."

A. J. P. Taylor
Nation 175:175 Ag 30 '52 850w

"Mr. Fischer has written a lively picture of Stalin as dictator and of life in his dictatorship. If this is still not the living human being born Joseph Vissarionovich Jugashvili, it is an excellent picture of Joseph Stalin, the Man in the Kremlin, and a first rate introduction to the nature of life in present day Soviet society and the problems arising for our own country from Stalin's domestic system and the foreign policy that springs from it." B. D. Wolfe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Ag 24 '52 850w

"What Louis Fischer has written is a vivid, well documented, quite objective close-up of 72-year-old Joseph Stalin's career and a logical discussion of the Kremlin succession. The author has drawn to good effect on his fourteen years in the U.S.S.R. and his intimate acquaintance with many Soviet leaders." H. C. Wolfe

+ N Y Times p3 Ag 24 '52 500w

New Yorker 28:71 Ag 30 '52 120w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 S 14 '52 170w

"Every student of Russia—and who is not a student, even an expert, today?—will find shrewd observations and keen insights in Mr. Fischer's new book, his first on Russia in some ten years." P. E. Mosely

+ Sat R 35:8 Ag 23 '52 800w

Springf'd Republican p9D S 28 '52 390w

Wis Lib Bul 48:213 S '52

FISHEL, WESLEY R. End of extraterritoriality in China. 318p $4.50 Univ. of Calif. press

341.7 Extraterritoriality. China—Foreign relations 52-6592

"This work traces the development and decline of extraterritoriality from the beginning of the twentieth century, with emphasis on the events of the years 1919-1943. Since this study is based in large measure on research in the unpublished files of the Department of State to 1933, American policy with respect to extraterritoriality is the primary concern. The policies and actions of the other interested Powers are also discussed, however, particularly as they related to or affected American policies and actions. The approach is both topical and chronological, and an effort has been made throughout to deal with the problem qualitatively." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

"The merits and weaknesses of this book seem to stem from the author's desire to limit, rather severely, the scope of his study to extraterritoriality and to American policy with respect to it. Dr. Fishel's researches have produced a valuable and interesting record of the evolution and execution of American policy toward China. . . . Historians of Sino-American relations will value this book for the materials the author has found in the unpublished files of the Department of State and in the private papers of the late Silas H. Strawn who was the American delegate to the Tariff Conference and the American commissioner and chairman of the Extraterritoriality Commission in 1925-1926." Hu Shih

+ — Am Hist R 58:121 O '52 1350w

Reviewed by Franz Michael

Ann Am Acad 282:124 J1 '52 240w

"The sole apparent weaknesses of this book are in keying times past with those of the present and future. Within its range, it will be a good source for years to come." Randall Gould

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Mr 12 '52 600w

Foreign Affairs 31:166 O '52 20w

"Recommended as a text and reference to a subject which has provided fine fodder for the Communists' propaganda against 'imperialist' nations." H. P. Linton

+ Library J 77:531 Mr 15 '52 140w

San Francisco Chronicle p24 Mr 23 '52 130w

"The documentation of American sources is good, but the study is handicapped by failure to use Chinese sources."

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:169 Je '52 200w

FISHER, MRS DOROTHEA FRANCES (CANFIELD). Fair world for all; the meaning of the declaration of human rights; with a foreword by Eleanor Roosevelt; il. by Jeanne Bendick. (Whittlesey House publication) 159p $2.75 McGraw

323.4 Civil rights—Juvenile literature

52-9451

"Inquiring older children, and their teachers, will find helpful these interpretations of the thirty articles of the Declaration of Human Rights. Using simple illustrations from everyday incidents and situations, Mrs. Fisher explains each article and its concepts separately. A foreword by Eleanor Roosevelt and opening selections of the main text explain the importance of the Declaration and how it came into being." Horn Bk

Reviewed by M. F. Kieran

Atlantic 190:102 D '52 30w

Booklist 49:92 N 1 '52

Bookmark 12:57 D '52

"The book will have added value if it is used as a basis for discussion or debates." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 28:333 O '52 90w

"There are generalities and specific references to foreign customs are lacking, but the ideals are there. Nicely illustrated."

+ Kirkus 20:454 Ag 1 '52 200w

"Although intended for those in their teens, adults, too, will find this interpretation worthy of reading and study." Eleanora Alexander

+ Library J 77:1910 N 1 '52 80w

"Many teachers will find reading aloud Chapter One, 'Ideas We All Agree on,' a stimulating experience for their classes, and a fine way to introduce this book and those by Mr. Galt." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p32 N 16 '52 110w

"The greatest document for human service is here interpreted at a young level, with the apparently effortless human quality which is characteristic of this distinguished author." Nora Kramer

+ N Y Times pt2, p32 N 16 '52 120w

"Young people will get from it a wealth of background material for discussion or debate." B. W. S.

+ Sat R 35:74 N 15 '52 160w

FISHER, ERNEST MCKINLEY. Urban real estate markets; characteristics and financing. 186p $3 Nat. bur. of economic res.

333.33 Real estate business

"Based on accumulations of data by large housing and financing agencies, and hailed as filling many of the gaps in our knowledge of the real estate market. It summarizes economic characteristics of the general real estate market, and its financing, then analyzes the special fragmented markets for home owning, residential leaseholds, acreage and industrial space, distinguishes buyers' behavior in buyers' and sellers' markets, under varying conditions of credit, income levels, and other variables." Library J

"In this volume Fisher has performed a useful service in bringing together scattered data on various aspects of different types of real estate markets. His work suggests the importance of searching the files of real estate offices and the records of building departments and recorders' offices for records of sales, rents, incomes, new construction, and deeds recorded, so that the interaction of all these factors can be shown in one or a number of real estate markets." Homer Hoyt

+ J Pol Econ 60:271 Je '52 800w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross

Library J 77:832 My 15 '52 50w

U S Quarterly Bk R 7:369 D '51 230w

FISHER, MRS LOUISE BANG. Eighteenth-century garland; the flower and fruit arrangements of colonial Williamsburg. 91p il col il $3.75 Colonial Williamsburg

635.96 Floral decoration

Agr51-29

"A potpourri of information about botanists, artists, plantsmen of the 18th century together with informal chat about the way the author's hobby and love of growing things led to a highly skilled performance. Practical hints and illustrations of bouquets and their foundations. The calendar year in Virginia is followed in account of spring bouquets, summery profusion, autumn splendor, 'winter's pleasant ornaments.'" Library J

"Particularly valuable for those who want to follow Mrs. Fisher's expert guidance there is how-to-do-it information on dried materials for winter bouquets."

+ Kirkus 19:96 F 1 '51 110w

"A handsome volume indispensable for garden clubs and flower arrangers, and of interest to the layman." A. S. Plaut

+ Library J 76:599 Ap 1 '51 130w

"This is a lovely book. Mrs. Fisher is an artist in her field, and the photographer, Thomas L. Williams, and the printer, have collaborated with her with complete effectiveness. Of the thirty-two page plates, eight are in breathtaking color, and the rest in striking and handsome gravure. The text, which is well able to stand on its own feet, is a season-by-season narrative, with clear and concise directions, of how Mrs. Fisher goes about her devoted and skilled activities." J. T. Winterich

+ Sat R of Lit 34:48 N 3 '51 140w

FISHER, VARDIS. Island of the Innocent; a novel of Greek and Jew in the time of the Maccabees. 448p $3.50 Abelard

52-8909

The seventh volume of the author's projected twelve volume Testament of Man series. It presents the story of Philemon, a Greek physician, and Judith, sister of Hosah, a most pious Hebrew. The time is about 200 B.C. when the Jews and Greeks were involved in the wars of the Maccabees.

"'The Island of the Innocent' is a colorful novel. The religious frenzies of the devout Jews marching temple-ward on the Day of Atonement are presented with vividness, as are the triumphant battles fought by religious fanatics, untrained and vastly outnumbered, armed mostly with clubs and knives, against the multitudes of Syrians with their chariots, their cavalry, their masses of foot soldiers carrying sword, spear and shield. . . . Despite all this 'The Island of the Innocent' is by no means a satisfactory entry into 'The Testament of Man.' Chock full of quotations from the Torah—oft repeated—and from the Greek philosophers, repetitious and slow in its progress, the novel is a literary Sargasso Sea, with no very strong current moving through it." F. H. Bullock

FISHER, VARDIS—Continued

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Je 22 '52 650w

"Mr. Fisher tells this story of the One God and the many gods, of Philemon and Judith, with a tender and poetic sensitivity that is far from common in the literary climate of our time. This novel is a richly informed addition to the author's 'Testament of Man' series, sensitively created by the fusion of art and scholarship." Wendell Johnson

+ N Y Times p17 Ap 13 '52 400w

"Those who look, in a novel, for a well-told historical tale, for crisp, vigorous prose, and above all for fresh ideas upon a subject of universal interest, will find all of these here." George Snell

+ San Francisco Chronicle p25 Ap 20 '52 750w

"Mr. Fisher approaches this difficult task with what seems to be an unbiased and scholarly attitude. To the novel he brings a large amount of factual material, accumulated as the result of wide research, which will give many readers a new outlook on an important period in mankind's development." H. H.

+ Springfield Republican p19A Je 1 '52 270w

FITE, GILBERT COURTLAND. Mount Rushmore. 272p il $3.75 Univ. of Okla. press

978.3 Mount Rushmore national memorial. Borglum, John Gutzon de la Mothe 52-7919

"Mr. Fite (who was born in Dakota and now teaches history at the University of Oklahoma) has written a readable history of Mount Rushmore, a step-by-step recreation of how it all came about—from the first groundbreaking in the summer of 1927, to the completion of the Roosevelt head fourteen years later. . . Groups of photographs illustrating the work in progress, and a detailed bibliography round out a definitive study." N Y Times

Booklist 48:226 Mr 15 '52

Bookmark 11:155 Ap '52 40w

"Mr. Fite's step-by-step history of the 14 years required to complete the Theodore Roosevelt head is good reading. After all, 14 years is a very small period of time to accomplish such a stupendous program—the portraits in stone of Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln and Roosevelt, from 1776 to 1906. It took a man with an egotistical drive and a genius of great scope to produce this man-made sculpture which will last with the mountain. It emerged, a monument to democracy." R. E. Donlon

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Ag 14 '52 340w

Library J 77:1305 Ag '52 100w

"Inevitably, since this is also the story of the sculptor who executed the stupendous undertaking, the book offers a full-dress, fascinating portrait of Gutzon Borglum." William Du Bois

N Y Times p33 Mr 23 '52 450w

Reviewed by R. H. Dillon

San Francisco Chronicle p11 Je 29 '52 440w

Sat R 35:41 Ap 5 '52 200w

FITT, MARY, pseud. See Freeman, K.

FITZGERALD, ARTHUR EUGENE, and KINGSLEY, CHARLES. Electric machinery; an integrated treatment of A-C and D-C machines. 702p $8.50 McGraw

621.313 Electric machinery 51-12939

"A new textbook designed for use by advanced undergraduate students of electrical engineering. In it is presented an analytical study of rotating machines based on the concept of interaction between the magnetic fields of stator and rotor. Steady-state conditions in the machine and its system are assumed in most of the book, but in the final chapter the reader is introduced to electro-mechanical transients such as arise in the starting of motors, the oscillations of synchronous machines, etc. The authors are members of the faculty of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology." N Y New Tech Bks

"From the standpoint of library use it has the advantages over older texts of being more up to date—especially in its inclusion of such currently interesting devices as Selsyns—and of covering both A-C and D-C machinery in one book." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 77:2008 N 15 '52 40w

N Y New Tech Bks 37:54 Jl '52

FITZGERALD, CHARLES PATRICK. Revolution in China. 289p $4.50 Praeger

951.04 China—History—Civil war, 1945-. China—Politics and government. Communism—China [52-8621]

"Canberra University's Professor Fitzgerald discusses why China could not import Western concepts wholesale-manner and did not arrive at our form of democracy; and the logic behind the success of the new regime and its likely development. He presents his thesis, throughout, from a Chinese—as opposed to Western—viewpoint (and probably nobody is better fitted to do this job)." (Library J) Index.

"C. P. Fitzgerald, as a British scholar of commanding stature, stands with a certain Olympian serenity above the heats of battle. His 'China: A Short Cultural History,' which is the standard introductory work for western students, is a guarantee of his rich understanding of the Chinese background. But his cool insights into the contemporary scene in the present book show him to have a political shrewdness not always to be found in students of ancient cultures." Robert Peel

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Ag 18 '52 450w

"Highly recommended as one of the most persuasive interpretations so far published." H. P. Linton

+ Library J 77:1403 S 1 '52 70w

"It is packed full of thought, nearly all of which is instructive." Guy Wint 1000w

"A brilliantly written and provocative analysis." C. M. Wilbur

+ Nation 175:154 Ag 23 '52 1350w

Reviewed by D. P. Richards

New Statesman & Nation 44:164 Ag 9 '52 1200w

"An account enlivened in parts by firsthand reporting and studded with stimulating, if not always convincing, interpretations. . . The wary reader will first want to know Mr. Fitzgerald's bias. In short, is he pro-Chinese Communist? Many will feel that he is. A fairer appraisal, which he, himself, might endorse, is that he is strongly sympathetic toward the Chinese people and believes that the Chinese revolution should be looked at essentially from their point of view, for it is primarily the Chinese 'who suffer, or benefit, from its results.' Herein lies the chief value of this book to the average reader." E. O. Reischauer

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ag 24 '52 850w

"Although it is thought-provoking throughout, several sections of 'Revolution in China' are worth special note. Among them should be mentioned an analysis of the objectives and the failure of the Marshall mission, and a chapter on the origins of the Chinese Revolution. At the same time, some of the author's efforts to explain the Chinese viewpoint—on Peiping's intervention in Korea, for example—struck this reviewer, at least as being rather more ingenious than convincing." Stuart Lillico

+ N Y Times p12 Ag 17 '52 400w

"The author combines scholarship, time perspective, and first-hand observation as he seeks to interpret recent events. . . In spite of [some] questions on which honest and informed opinions differ, the book is one of the best which has been written on the Communist stage of the Chinese Revolution." K. S. La-tourette

+ — Sat R 35:16 S 6 '52 950w

"Some may think that Professor Fitzgerald has underrated the economic problems facing China and particularly the problem of surplus population which the Communists have so far ignored. Others may complain that he has glossed over some of the more obvious vices of the régime, such as its liking for mass trials and executions. Yet this is a book which should be read and pondered by everyone concerned with political developments in the Far East today. It has the stamp of a clear, logical and penetrating mind." J. M. D. Pringle

+ Spec 189:221 Ag 15 '52 750w

"It is rare to find a book on so complex a subject in which theory is so clearly related to practice. For some time it is bound to remain the standard work on the Chinese Communist Revolution."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p591 S 12 '52 800w

FITZGERALD, EDWARD E. Yankee rookie. 192p $2.50 Barnes, A.S.

52-8980

Baseball story for older boys.

Booklist 49:91 N 1 '52

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 73:64 Ja 1 '53 20w

"This young rookie, with his love for his parents, his over-eagerness at bat, his desire not to be thought high-hat, acts and talks like a real person. Swift action, tense situations and personal crises combine to make this an exciting story." R. A. B.

+ N Y Times pt2, p26 N 16 '52 120w

"Filled with baseball lore, the book also paints a vivid picture of a young man's struggles to reach the top in the sport he loves." W. H. Baker

+ San Francisco Chronicle. p5 N 16 '52 30w

FITZ GIBBON, CONSTANTINE. Dear Emily [Eng title: Cousin Emily]. 215p $3 Simon & Schuster

52-12424

